Wallet of the Week

THE MISSIONARY AND MAINTENANCE FUND of the United Church of Canada shows a seemingly healthy condition. For the three weeks preceding December 11, the remittances were in advance of the previous year, and while the total, $877,483.14, was about five per cent below the 1933 total, it is believed that there will be no falling off in Canadian missionary liberality. The amount contributed seems to us to be a very creditable showing for the United Church.

THE DEATH OF MR. EUGENE R. BLACK, in Atlanta last week, removes from public life a genial high-minded and worthy citizen. For four years he was governor of the Sixth Federal Reserve District, with headquarters in Atlanta, and for the two years immediately preceding his death he had been governor of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington. He is said to have been sound and conservative in his banking views; but thoroughly co-operative as a factor in shaping recovery legislation and policy. We regret his going, and we are sorry to lose men of his moral cast from public life.

THE BURNING OF THE BEDFORD COUNTY COURT HOUSE at Shelbyville, Tenn., by an infuriated mob, is an act for which no apology can be offered; and for which right-minded citizens must feel a sense of sorrow and shame. Denunciation, however much deserved, would probably do little good; and would be unjust to good citizens who were victims of circumstances beyond their control. Whatever may be the facts in the case of the Negro involved, the deed of that day must be written in history as being without defence. No outlaw performance which results in two men dead; two mortally wounded; and five others seriously wounded; and the wanton destruction of public property valued at $150,000.00 can be justified at the bar of either righteousness or reason.

THE ASSAULT UPON PUBLIC MORALS through corrupt and indecent publications seems to have assumed world-wide proportions. Early in December a protest was made to the member of the British Cabinet having the matter in charge, and the deputation was composed of nine members of Parliament. They charged that a tide of undesirable magazines, photographs, and so on, was flooding the towns and even spreading through the country villages; and they emphasized the special danger of many advertisements contained in these magazines for items even more indecent and of even graver consequences than the magazines themselves. Many in America will sympathize with this protest against a tacit licensing of a wilful debauchery of public thought and morals, and will be hopeful that it may have an immediate echo in our own land.

MR. K. OKAZAKI, A MILLIONAIRE BICYCLE MANUFACTURER of Japan, according to the New Outlook (Canada), has decided to devote his ten-million-yen-fortune to the cause of social service. One million yen has been set aside for immediate application to social service projects; and the remaining nine million yen will be made available later. Mr. Okazaki's interest in social work came about through his son who had become deeply interested in the work of Nishida Tenko, a noted Buddhist social worker. The personnel of the committee named by Mr. Okazaki is not less interesting than his decision to devote his vast fortune to this work. It is composed of Nishida Tenko, Buddhist social worker; Col. Yamamuro, of the Salvation Army; Mr. Tokutomi, a Christian newspaper editor in Tokyo; and Dr. Kagawa, a well-known Christian social evangelist. We are persuaded that the planning for the administration was as wise and discriminating as the leadership which built the fortune.

IN THE PASSING OF SIR ROBERT W. PERKS, BART., English Methodism suffers the loss of a golden link in the succession from Fletcher of Madeley. It was his great-grandfather who took over from Fletcher the leadership of the Madeley Society-class. His own father, a Wesleyan minister, was for ten years Secretary of Foreign Missions; was secretary of the Wesleyan Conference; and then became the president. But Sir Robert was a man who was in no sense dependent upon the fame of his ancestors for recognition. He was truly a man in his own right: An eminent lawyer, a great financier, largely interested in engineering and construction enterprises, and a distinguished member of Parliament; but withal a great Methodist, and faithful to his church throughout his long and distinguished career. He was a member of the Conference of 1878, the first to which laymen were admitted, and he was a member of every succeeding Conference; he was a circuit steward for twenty-four years; and by unanimous vote of the Conference, he was made the first lay Vice-President of the Methodist Church. In 1908 he was made a baronet in recognition of his public services, and he is said to have declined a peerage. World-wide Methodism sorrows with our brethren of the English Methodist Church for the loss of such a great and devoted leader.

SETTING THE SAILS

The hoildays are over and the new Conference year is already being translated into history. Under the new financial plan of the church, the opening weeks of a new year are made tests of leadership and consecration, such as they have never been before. Every charge is required to begin its year's work with an every-member canvass, or the adoption of some other plan better suited to its needs. The purpose of this is to place the support of the church upon an absolutely voluntary basis; and to create in the whole membership a sense of personal responsibility for the program which they have underwritten. But that is only half of the plan; for this will be followed by the action of the quarterly conference in accepting or modifying the amounts proposed by the district stewards for the benevolent causes of the church. The effect of all this will be to develop a feeling of personal responsibility on the part of the members, and to inspire a feeling of confidence in the program which the church as a whole has undertaken.

But a no less important feature of the plan follows immediately in the program of missionary cultivation and evangelistic effort provided for the early months of the year. During this period the church will be brought face to face with the underlying spiritual reasons for the work which the church has undertaken. This period of cultivation will offer a more searching test for church leadership and will make more telling disclosures in the realm of personal consecration than the every-member solicitation—it will be the second mile of testing. In these days we go forth as sowers in our wide and varied fields of work, and the harvest is being determined by our sowing and cultivation. Every pastor should be oppressed with a sense of his responsibility in these days of opportunity and hope; and every church should seek to marshal the loyalties of our Methodist people that we may undertake and carry through a program worthy of our church in these three great Conferences.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL IN THE BUILDING OF FAITH AND CHARACTER

In the Christian Century for December 26, is an interesting discussion of the modern Church School in the program of Christian religion. Mrs. Margueritte Harmon Bro, once a missionary of the Disciples Church in China, but now a writer and lecturer of Chicago, has some plain and courageous things to say about this institution which is the most popular and has the widest appeal of all the agencies of Christian work. The writer discusses the ideal of Robert Raikes, the founder, and after giving full credit for what the Church School has accomplished, she says that it is failing as a character-forming agency; that it bisects the spiritual influence of the church, of which effect large men's classes are frequently examples; that it turns the younger generation from the church and robs them of a spiritual undergirding not to be had anywhere else; and that it is insufficient and inadequate in its interpretation of religious experience.

As is needless to say, this is a very severe and sweeping indictment of the Church School in its practical operation; and there will be many who will dissent from the opinion as a whole; and there will be even more who will hesitate to approve such a sweeping charge. But no serious-minded and thoughtful person can escape the feeling that there is a vast deal of truth in the contention which the writer makes. The Church School is no clinic in spiritual realities, but is too much a conventional-gesture through which the mass lends its approval to the general practice of religion. There are, of course, monumental exceptions, but it tends too much to become the interpreter of the message of God to the human soul, and without the conscious call and direction out of which the divine prophet speaks to the people. And a church let down to a lay interpretation of religion often develops a chamber of commerce slant upon the social issues and the spiritual responsibilities of the Christian task. Religion can easily become a matter of graphs, censuses, and organizations rather than the propagation of the character-forming experience out of which the Church arose. At least, there is food for thought in the brave and courageous words of Mrs. Bro; and no matter what our disagreement may be, our Church School leadership can well afford to take this warning to its heart.

CHURCH-WIDE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN

The General Commission on Evangelism has asked Bishop Darlington, chairman of the Commission, Bishop Arthur J. Moore, and Bishop A. Frank Smith to lead a church-wide evangelistic movement in March and April. The bishops concerned have accepted and Bishop Moore will reach America in time to participate. The movement will be in the nature of a preaching mission similar to that proposed by the Federal Council of Churches. A mass meeting and conference of preachers and laymen in each annual conference is contemplated, which it is hoped will be followed by evangelistic campaigns in many of the cities and districts of our territory. Details are now being worked out and will be announced as soon as possible. The Commission will ask the assistance and co-operation of all the bishops and a large number of preachers, singers, evangelists and educators.

THE LIQUOR BUSINESS

The problem created by the sale of liquor is no less an issue today than at any other period of our national history. It is a question in which every good citizen should have a vital interest, and every right-thinking person has a right to know all the details of horror and wretchedness chargeable to its authorship. It is said that the nation's drink bill for the first year of repeal reached the staggering total of $3,000,000,000.00, and that other hundreds of millions were spent for bootleg products. This is off-set by an estimate of $2,848,000,000.00 for bootleg under prohibition—the figures of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment. No one would accuse that organization of being unfriendly to anything that would tend to discredit prohibition. But the wildest partisan of liquor will hardly dare to claim that repeal has contributed to temperance, after these disclosures.

For our part, we say frankly that we are not entertained by a comparison of these figures with other unrelated subjects; nor by the assertion that liquor has had a great part in national recovery. We believe in putting liquor and the liquor business on the spot for what they are. Its consumption of earnings which should go for the maintenance of homes and families, and the toll of human life in traffic accidents are social and moral factors which must be met. According to local papers, there were five arrests for drunken driving in New Orleans on the Sunday before Christmas, there was another accident in which liquor had a part; and the streets are marked with crosses indicating the location and date of 85 fatal traffic accidents during the year—an increase over last year. As for liquor's contribution to economic recovery, we frankly do not believe a word of it. The state that seems to be making real progress toward recovery is Mississippi. Press reports on Christmas Day show an increase in the income of the people of one hundred and fifty per cent; a large increase in bank deposits; and acceleration in debt payments; and a clear surplus of $2,000,000.00 in the state treasury. And, what is more, liquor and the liquor business had small part in swelling that balance, for both are outlaws in Mississippi. We are against liquor.

HELPING THE EDITOR

Among the Christmas presents which the editor received, and they were not numerous, are two which are rather suggestive. One is an enormous blue pencil, and the other a brass foot rule. They seem to imply that with plenty of blue pencil and brass all articles may be cut to dimension. If such be the intention, it is doubtless an optimistic view of the problem; and it is certainly a process which no editor would wish to invoke. But, turning from the pleasant suggestion of a Christmas gift to the real facts, may we suggest to all our friends the need for writing briefly and pointedly on all matters? The insertion of the departments makes the space of the Advocate much more limited than the mention of sixteen pages indicates. We are undertaking to enlarge and dignify the different phases of our work, such as the Church School, the Woman's work, and the Laymen's activities; and we are adding a page for the family, along with other special features for the promotion of our church life. Our friends can do us a real service by keeping in mind the limitations of space, and remembering that we must give variety to the contents of the paper and fair representation to every interest of the church. No one has complained, and we are saying this now that no personal element may enter into our plea later. With this issue, the Advocate is fully organized and we hope to make it interesting and profitable for every Methodist in our three Conferences. One other matter to which we would call attention is that some of our brethren occasionally send in subscriptions at one dollar. On December 1, that price was discontinued by the Publishing Committee and neither the editor nor the manager have the right to change the subscription rate. We can only enter the subscription for eight months where only one dollar is sent. Please take note of this.

THE REVOLUTION IN THE MORAL SPHERE

"A revolution in thinking is in progress," writes Professor D. Lamont in "Christ and the World of Thought," "and it does not yet appear what the issue is to be. Probably most people are only vaguely aware of its existence, for revolutions in thought are not clearly discerned until they stand out in the perspective of history. . . ."

"It is in the moral sphere that the revolution in thought makes itself most immediately and powerfully felt. Few people have a taste for speculative thought, but everyone must live somehow. Thomas Carlyle's 'you needn't' can be met by the qualification that everyone must live somehow if he is to live at all. And what culture says today is echoed in the life of the multitude tomorrow, especially when it chimes with the impulses of the natural man. In this way popular modern culture has persuaded its camp-followers that they have intellectual justification for dispensing with what has hitherto been called morality. There are more people in the world who are proud of their moral laxity than ever there were. The sense of shame is quickly disappearing for the time. A 'new morality' is in vogue, which at the best is playing with fire and at the worst a wallowing in the mire. The revolution in moral ideas has thus its source in the notion that morality has no eternal sanction, which means that there is no God who cares how men live. It has become as plain as reason and facts can make it that if morality has not its sanction in the Living God it has no adequate sanction at all. There are still many people who would fain preserve morality while dispensing with a belief in God, but both theory and practice prove it to be a vain wish. Morality may linger on for a while when faith has ceased, but it is the lingering of the evening twilight, 'and after that the dark.' It is, however, the hopeful side of the moral revolution that it has brought out into clear relief the essential condition of the preservation and enhancement of morality in the world. That condition is belief in a God who rules and cures. We are cast upon God for our ultimate sanction of morality. It is well that we should be driven from our false refuges, and that is what is happening on all sides today."

"The revolution in religious thought," continues Dr. Lamont, "is the most momentous aspect of the thought-revolution, though to many it may not appear so. The supreme question of human life is that concerning God. If it is true that there is a God who reigns and cares, human life must have a definite and weighty meaning. If there is no such God, life's meaning must be very different if in that case it has a meaning at all. When it is maintained that we have no way of telling whether or not God lives and cares, it is implied that we have no way of knowing the meaning of life. That would be indeed a desperate plight. For then a race would be condemned to occupy itself with meaning without having the chance of finding out the meaning of its own existence. In any case, it is incontestable that the question which lies behind all other questions is that concerning God. Alike for the life of thought and the life of action no question can rival this in importance."

"For the first time in the human story, God has been removed from the unique place which He held in the mind of the race, and has been relegated to a place in matters of opinion. That belief in God was often or even generally crammed with superstition is beside the present point. A portentous revolution appears in the identification of God with an idea which may or may not be entertained according to the way in which a man's mind happens to work. Man, as never before, has constituted himself the measure of God, and that at the very time when he thinks Christianity too anthropomorphic."

"I am increasingly convinced," continues Dr. Lamont, in one of his closing chapters, "that the weakness of the modern Church is due to indecision towards Christ. It is intended to give Him the pre-eminence in all things, and, except here and there, it is not doing that."

"The Word of God to man is not taken seriously, and therefore it is heard but faintly where it is heard at all. For the Cross will not tolerate the observer attitude towards itself. It demands the great decision. It calls the proud man from his pride, the learned from his learning, the rich man from his gold. It calls us all to discover that we are poor and ignorant sinners in the sight of God. We all needed Christ to die for us. I had rather be a shepherd on the moor or a charwoman at her wash-tub, if their hearts, as I have known them, are rejoicing in the light and love of their Lord, than be the most learned person on earth, if his mind be filled with a spiritual fog which he persistently emits to the darkening of souls around him. The spiritual air today is thick with smoke."—The Christian World (London).

PRAYER

How slowly we outgrow our childish idea of prayer! Constantly we try to make God a lackey to do our bidding. Constantly we ask some boon unfair to our fellows. God's other children—and the whole curse of nationalism and economic greed is in that asking. Constantly we treat God in prayer as if we knew what is best for us and our world, and as if He were ignorant.

If a nation prays for success in arms, it prays in effect that another nation may be in subjection—that a sword shall be laid across the face of the earth. If even half the world prayed honestly, war would be ended; for an honest prayer can ask only for the joy of the whole family of God. If we pray for economic truce, we are in effect asking that a condition shall persist in which a few are comfortable and hosts are under threat of poverty. Isn't it a thing appalling that we should, by prayer, so often try to use God for our selfishness?

"Ask anything in My name"—enough food, enough daily joy, enough sunshine, enough human friendship, anything needed for the perfection of the soul; and it is yours! But a wise man does not ask freedom from sickness; these humbling times teach too much to be surrendered. He asks instead for power through sickness. A wise man does not ask to escape death; he asks instead courage to greet death as a finer adventure even than life. "Ask in My name"—and keep asking! Friendships grow by frequent meetings. Thus it shall be given unto you.

A SERIOUS QUESTION

A few Sundays ago, the teacher of the men's Bible class of one of the leading pastoral charges in the Mississippi Conference, in discussing the lesson for that day, emphasized that feature of the lesson that pertained to the spiritual side of the church, in contrast to the material side, said: "The type of preaching that is being done in our pulpits now is responsible for the type of professed Christians we find in the church today. Our only hope of ever being tied back to the type of consecration and zeal of our fathers, is to be found in the evangelical fervor of Bishop Arthur J. Moore." He asked this question, "Do you know of a church in our Conference that has had recognition for its activities, other than finances?"

This is a startling question. A question that involves momentous issues. It was not asked by a foolish man; nor by a man seeking to satisfy idle curiosity. But by one of the sanest and safest laymen in the Mississippi Conference.

Let some one who knows, answer.

B. F. JONES.

THE PULPIT FOR TODAY

What is the special need of the moment in the pulpit? We are told by one that the first and supreme duty of any pastor is to become conscious of sin—conscious of the sins of the people in his community. The laying of the finger, even a healing finger, upon any plague-spot calls for both grace and grit. Courage as well as culture is needed in the pulpit today if a man would preach all of the facts, commands and implications of the eternal Gospel of the grace of God. All about us men and women are consciously or unconsciously signalling for help. As God's priests we are to give men new strength and courage to endure. But we are not anywhere called upon to give men strength to endure that which had better not be endured but abolished. To speak the truth as it is in Jesus is the supreme need of the pulpit in any day.—The New Outlook (Canada).

PRESIDENT MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE

Announcement of Founder's week at Moody Bible Institute has just reached the Advocate desk. The announcement carries the statement: "The new president, Rev. Will H. Houghton, D.D., will make substantial contributions to the program." The editor of the Advocate was associated with Dr. Houghton in Atlanta, Georgia; and he is prepared to believe that the new president will make distinct contribution to the historic school of religion founded by Mr. Moody. We regard Dr. Houghton as a man of real ability, a pleasing personality, and a man of courage and conviction.

WOODROW WILSON'S IDEALISM

Perhaps there is no better testimony to the Christian idealism of Woodrow Wilson than that of his daughter, Margaret: "Mother and father shared every great aim, were working to sacrifice all the things of this world for the things of the spirit. In fact, they were not conscious of sacrificing them, just letting them go because of a greater love."—Forward.

Chapter I

JOHN WESLEY

The plan of this work does not include a detailed biography of John Wesley; but a fair understanding of his career is necessary both for the satisfaction of Methodist people and as an approach to the history of the church which he founded. Louis XIV of France is said to have interrupted a judge with the haughty declaration: "I am the state"—a boast as untrue as it was lacking in royal grace and refinement. John Wesley might, however, have made such a claim respecting his own relation to the first fifty years of the Methodist movement without subjecting truth to a very severe strain. As we shall see, his authority was practically absolute; he was without anyone to dispute his leadership; and his will was a law not open to question in Methodist circles. One may not be able to agree with all that Green, the English historian, says of Mr. Wesley's influence upon the eighteenth century; but there will be little disposition to question the statement regarding Mr. Wesley and the Revival: "He embodied in himself not this or that side of the great movement, but the very movement itself."

A glance at the long list of books dealing with Mr. Wesley and the Methodists will suffice to convey an idea of the importance and distinction of the man whose work has held captive the imagination of the world for nearly two hundred years—a story which is still one of the most inspiring chapters in the record of personal achievement. We can do no more here than give an outline which may help to recreate the age in which he lived and relate him to the movement which he originated. In undertaking this, we do not overlook the fact that a miniature, whether of painting or of biography, must be a work of art or it is apt to be a crude betrayal of its subject. We shall endeavor to make clear and understandable the outline of Mr. Wesley's character and work, and sources will be indicated for the benefit of those who care to make investigation for themselves.

John Wesley, the fifteenth of a family of nineteen children, was born in Epworth rectory, Lincolnshire, England, June 28, 1703. His father was Samuel Wesley and his mother Susanna Annesley Wesley. On the side of both father and mother, he was descended from a long line of distinguished Dissenters, English gentry and clergymen, some of whom suffered cruel persecution following the restoration of Charles II. Samuel Wesley, the father, was first sent to the free school of Dorchester, and when he was fifteen years of age he went to London at the expense of Dissenter friends to prepare for the Nonconformist ministry. During his stay in London his mind underwent a change, and he transferred to Oxford to prepare himself for orders in the Church of England. This was the first break in the Nonconformist connection of the family. On the side of Mr. Wesley's mother, the inheritance of Nonconformity was more direct and substantial, and it was from her that he received a spirit of independence which played an important part in his life. To his inherited strain of religious attitude must be added, of course, his individual response to the spiritual needs of the age.

The first ten years of John Wesley's educational and spiritual training was presided over by his mother; and, regardless of her breaches of modern educational psychology, no decade of his life was made to serve higher or holier ends. On January 28, 1714, he was admitted to Charterhouse—a foundation upon which forty boys were educated without charge. Although he was less than eleven years of age, his entrance at Charterhouse was really the end of his connection with Epworth, except for correspondence with the family and the time that he served as his father's curate, from April to September, 1726, and again for a longer period in 1729. After a little more than six years at Charterhouse, he entered Christ Church, Oxford, July 13, 1720. At this College made famous by Cardinal Wolsey, he had an annual allowance, as a Charterhouse student, of forty pounds, and he remained there until elected Fellow of Lincoln College, March 28, 1726. The next nine years, with the exception of the time spent as curate at Wroote, he spent in residence at Lincoln College, and he maintained a connection with the College for more than a quarter of a century.

No careful person has claimed that John Wesley was a great scholar. He was physically frail and he may not have had the talent for profound scholarship; but there can be no denying the fact that he was a great student, and he came to be a man of great versatility. It is said of Abraham Lincoln that he formed the habit of reading a book and then clothing its thought in his own words. Mr. Wesley did not do that, but he always made a synopsis of the books which he read—he "collected," as he said. In that way, he made himself master of vast and varied fields of thought.

He was ordained deacon in the Church of England, September 29, 1725; and priest, September 22, 1728. Just prior to the time of his return to Lincoln College from his curacy at Wroote, October, 1729, Charles Wesley, William Morgan and Robert Kirkham organized what has since become famous as the "Holy Club."

Upon his return to Oxford, John Wesley immediately became its guiding spirit and was known as the Curator or Father of the Holy Club. This club had as one of its aims, spiritual culture—a feature common to many such groups throughout England. It had also a literary feature; but its chief distinction lay in the ability and the intense earnestness of those who composed it. Under the lead of William Morgan, the club began a ministry to those who were in jail and then to the poor, activities which were an eloquent prophecy of what was to be the mission of John Wesley and the Methodists. William Morgan left Oxford, June 5, 1732, and soon after died of tuberculosis; Robert Kirkham left to become his uncle's curate; but others were added and the club continued its activity for a number of years. In 1735, John and Charles Wesley left for the ill-starred mission to Georgia. The Holy Club did not cease to exist on that account, but its influence and importance were greatly diminished. It had, however, served its purpose in the discovery of a leadership that was destined to wield a mighty influence in shaping the life of the world.

It was while John Wesley was a Fellow of Lincoln College that he came under the influence of the writings and the personality of William Law and the German mystics. He read Law's Christian Perfection, and A Serious Call to a Holy Life; and he paid visits to Putney to counsel with Law, who later became one of the German theosophists. Fortunately for Mr. Wesley and the Methodist Church, he was too well established in his own theological beliefs to be swept away by the pietistic casuistry and asceticism of his new teacher; but there can be no doubt that for a time he was greatly affected by his mystical theories of salvation and a holy life. In a letter written to his brother, Samuel, under date of November 23, 1736, he said: "I think the rock upon which I had the nearest made shipwreck of the faith was the mystics." Later, as he neared the English coast on his return from Georgia, he wrote a review of some of his religious convictions; the paper was dated January 25, 1738, and he says of the mystics: "Only my present sense is this—all other enemies of Christianity are triflers; the Mystics are the most dangerous; they stab it in the vitals, and its serious professors are likely to fall by them." These two statements, separated by nearly two years, are clear indications of the peril which he experienced in such teachings.

On October 14, 1735, John and Charles Wesley, Benjamin Ingram and Charles Delamotte left London for Gravesend to embark with General Oglethorpe for Georgia. John Wesley went as a missionary under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and Charles went as private secretary to General Oglethorpe. John Wesley's letter, dated October 10, 1735, shows that he went out with an exalted conception of his mission and in a mood of high spiritual adventure. He was evidently little prepared for the rude disillusioning which awaited him. His thoughts of spiritual conquest related to himself, however, as well as to the savages of the tribe of Tomo-chachi.

Wesley's Journal shows that the time at sea was filled with activity and with such public and private ministries as a crowded ship and a stormy voyage made possible. After a voyage of three and a half months, the ship came to anchor near Tybee Island in the mouth of the Savannah River, February 5, 1736. The one incident connected with the voyage, which was destined to exercise a permanent influence upon the life and thought of Mr. Wesley, was his contact with the twenty-six Moravian Christians, among whom was Bishop David Nitschmann. These Moravians were fleeing from persecutions in their home land and were on the way to join their expatriated brethren in Georgia. We have already noticed Mr. Wesley's susceptibility to mysticism; and he now came under the spell of a more direct and practical phase of it in the behavior of these fellow passengers. Their songs and their composure in the midst of the storm caused him to distrust his own quaking heart, and the result was a disquieting of his soul which continued until the latter part of May, 1738, when he entered into that exalted Christian experience which marked the birth-hour of Methodism.

No venture of John Wesley's life was more disappointing to him than was the mission to Georgia. His dream of converting the Indians was not realized, for he spent his time in a conventional ministry to the white settlers in Savannah. This was not to his liking and he made vigorous protest to General Oglethorpe, but all to no purpose. Charles Wesley was assigned to the headquarters of General Oglethorpe at Frederica, where he soon became embroiled in difficulty to such an extent that his life was in peril. He returned to Savannah on May 16, 1736, and in July he left for Charleston whence he sailed for England, August 11. John Wesley had no serious trouble in Savannah until after the end of the first year. The story of his unhappy romance with Miss Sophy Hopkey and her subsequent marriage to a Mr. Williamson is so well known as to require only passing notice.

Mr. Wesley appears to have taken literally Paul's admonition to Timothy: "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine." He was a staunch adherent of rule, and he was merciless and indiscriminate in his attack upon every form of wrong doing. He refused to baptize the baby of bailiff Parker except by dipping, unless the parents would certify that it was "weak;" he rebuked an officer of a man-of-war for swearing; and he made the mistake of telling Mrs. Williamson, Miss Sophy Hopkey, what he "thought reprovable in her conduct;" and a month later he repelled her from the holy communion. For this last affront,

Mississippi and Louisiana

The friends of Rev. C. C. Miller throughout Louisiana will rejoice to learn that he is improving and that hopes are entertained for his early recovery.

Rev. E. P. Craddock of Potts Camp, Miss., sends greetings to the Advocate, which we acknowledge with thanks. We wish for him and his people a great year in every respect.

Judge R. E. Bennett, Meadville, Miss., was an Advocate visitor a few days ago. Judge Bennett and his family were on a visit to the editor's family, Mrs. Duren being the Judge's sister.

Rev. S. A. Seegers of Rayne, La., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office a few days ago. As usual, he was seeking to magnify the work committed to him by the Conference, by setting up a program for the Golden Cross in the Conference.

The editor acknowledges the reception of attractive Christmas Bulletins from Dr. Henry F. Brooks, Tupelo, Miss., and Rev. E. H. Cunningham, Corinth, Miss. Both of these calendars are well arranged and creditable examples of pastoral enterprise.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, recently transferred to the North Mississippi Conference from Mississippi, has had a gracious reception at the hands of the good people of Itta Bena. He does not forget the Advocate in his plans, and we know that he will have a happy year in that charge.

Rev. T. E. Gregory, who was recently assigned to the Kosciusko, Miss., church, reports 18 accessions already. Kosciusko is fortunate to have the leadership of Brother Gregory and his capable wife. The editor has personal knowledge of the man and his work, and he commends both without reserve.

Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall Teague, who have been subscribers to the Advocate for nearly fifty years, honor us with an invitation to their fiftieth wedding anniversary, which event was celebrated at Belzoni, Miss., December 25. We wish for them many added years and joys that richer grow as the shadows lengthen.

Rev. K. W. Dodson held a meeting with his pastors and a group of laymen on December 18, at Hammond, La. They discussed their problems, and particularly the Advocate. We feel sure that there will be a fine response to the program of the church throughout the district under the leadership of Brother Dodson.

Dr. Countiss is very happy on the Greenville District. It is a homeland to him. The greater part of his ministry has been in that section of Mississippi, and he has many friends there. We regret to know that Mrs. Countiss has been somewhat indisposed, but we are glad to be assured that her condition is not serious.

Bishop Dobbs, according to notice given elsewhere in this issue, is calling the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference to meet at First Church, Shreveport, at 10 a. m., January 3. We are sorry that the notice did not reach us in time for last week's issue, but the paper was already on the press when the notice came to hand.

Copies of the Journals of the three patronizing Conferences of the Advocate reached the desk of the editor during the past week within three or four days of each other. The secretaries of our Conferences who labored night and day to compile the proceedings, statistics, etc., for the printers are to be commended for the speed and accuracy with which this work was done.

Rev. B. M. Hunt began last week a series of devotional meditations for the home page, which he has graciously agreed to furnish for the entire year. The editor appreciates this splendid loyalty to the Advocate, and this contribution toward the deepening of the devotional spirit of our homes. Read the home page; we are sure that you will be profited by this meditation.

Mr. Chauncey French and his family of New Orleans will have the profound sympathy of many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi in the sorrow which befell them in the tragic death of eleven-year-old Chauncey, son of Louis French, who was struck by a locomotive in Binghamton, New York, a few days ago. The little fellow lost his life in an effort to save his dog from a speeding train. The Advocate joins with a host of friends in prayer for these broken hearts.

Noel Memorial Church, under the leadership of Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen, is moving forward in a great way. Fifty-two members have been received since Conference, nine of them by profession—that is a record for twenty-two days of service. Dr. and Mrs. Cowen have been granted leave of absence to visit their new grandson, Harry Lavell Thomas, born December 5, in Houston, Texas. Dr. Cowen will resume work with an informal New Year's reception for the entire church.

Galloway Memorial Church tops the list in the Advocate campaign, and we acknowledge with sincere gratitude a check for a subscription representing every year since the Christmas Conference of 1784. In the campaign these were called "Methodist Honor Advocates." We appreciate the splendid work of Dr. Decell and Mr. Forrest B. Jackson of the Lay Activities Committee, and we sincerely hope that this may be the beginning of 150 fast friendships for the Advocate.

Dr. J. R. Countiss begins with this issue his study of the lesson for the Church School, which he will continue throughout the year. Dr. Countiss needs no introduction to people of this section, as he has been long and favorably known in connection with Mississippi education. The editor appreciates profoundly this service, and the more so since he is rendering it without compensation. We shall be glad to have you write him about any specially helpful suggestion that you find in these lessons.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, was the speaker at the Temple Sinai Christmas service on the evening of December 28. This interesting custom of inviting a Christian minister to bring the Christmas message was introduced by Rabbi Louis Binstock several years ago. It is said to have become one of the happiest and the most popular features of the Temple services; and it is a real factor in laying the foundation for a better understanding between Jew and Christian.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. H. McMullan

Now thirty-four has become thirty-five,
A new date, a new day, a new year!
Together may we work, together may we strive

If the skies be cloudy or if they be clear.
Strive to be faithful and strive to be true
Strive to understand one another Strive to make His commandments our law

His love, our portion, forever and ever.

As our new presidents enter upon their duties may it not be with fear and trembling but with courage and assurance. We heard a last year president say that her only duties were to think and pray and when her plans were given to her auxiliary there was always perfect co-operation. However this is not always true and the new president may need a sense of humor so that she may not think the skies are falling through when a few acorns hit her on the head; in other words some of her plans may fail but she must not become discouraged. It has been said that our W. M. S. is a great school in which we are taught about our home field and its needs, the foreign field and its urge, it also makes us conscious of our minister's needs and should arouse our interest in the youth of our church.

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAINS

It takes more than "just a salve" to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the pain and congestion when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application, relief usually follows.

Even better results than the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength; Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau, No. 4867.

The president is the dean of this school and should know enough parliamentary law to conduct an orderly meeting. We believe in this school women grow in grace and knowledge. Its real nature is spiritual, and first of all the dean should be spiritual and must have the Silent Partner who will help her through difficulties she may encounter. "I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isa. 41:10.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Christmas at St. Mark's

The Christmas festivities at St. Mark's started a week in advance of Christmas day. Each day of that week was brim full of activities—Christmas bazaars by various clubs, club parties, a Christmas eve celebration, and a beautiful Christmas pageant made up the week's program.

After an open house on Christmas eve, forty-five folks divided into several groups left the Center about four a. m. and wound their way throughout that section of the city serenading church members and friends of St. Mark's with the beautiful Christmas carols. These groups were headed by Deaconesses Stroup, Lundy, and Hodkins.

On Sunday night a most impressive pageant "Those That Sit in Darkness" was presented to an audience which filled the chapel. The personnel of the cast was most interesting, consisting of Italian, Spanish, French, Syrian, Greek, Indian, and American peoples. All of these nationalities with a number of others made up a most attentive congregation. The pageant was directed by Deaconess Stroup.

Deaconess Verna Webster of St. Mark's Community Center spent the holiday season with her family at Oxford, La., and incidentally attended the wedding of her brother.

Deaconesses Nettie Stroup and Georgia Bates, Miss Lydia Mickal and Mrs. Lewis, all of St. Mark's Center, spent a six-day vacation at Tampa, Fla., during the holidays.

Miss Clara Chalmers, Louisiana Conference's own missionary daughter, has spent the greater part of the winter months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Chalmers, 413 Hillary St., in New Orleans. She will leave early in January to take up some special work at Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Clara has spent thirteen years in Cuba, under appointment of the Woman's Missionary Council. She spent two years in the normal department of Buena Vista School of Havana and later was transferred to the Irene Toland School, Matanzas, where she has served as its principal since the death of Miss Toland.

Miss Julia Reid, another Louisiana Conference Missionary daughter is supplying for Miss Chalmers at Matanzas while she is on her furlough.

The Methodist Layman

LET US START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT

By W. B. Clarke, Monroe District Lay Leader

The last General Conference authorized the Board of Lay Activities to promote stewardship in men's work, and a sound financial system in every church, with an adequate support of the ministry, full payment of all benevolences, and the proper provision for all church obligations, for personal evangelism, lay speaking, training of official boards, and co-operation with all the general activities of the church, and the responsibility for devising methods of securing among the laymen an increasing loyalty and interest, with the ultimate end in view of having an active, working force in every organization.

For the accomplishment of these results, a greater responsibility has been placed upon the Board of Stewards, whose chairman will now be a member of the District Board of Stewards, who, together with the presiding elder of the district, the district lay leader and the associate lay leaders, is charged with the responsibility of carrying into execution the things herein above stated.

The last General Conference also provided what is commonly referred to as "A New Financial Plan" in every church, which largely means an abandonment of the old assessment or apportionment plan for the raising of our benevolences, and for the support of the ministry and the other church agencies.

I would like to see the district lay leaders and their associates, the presiding elders and our preachers, together with their respective boards of stewards, take a very active interest in the accomplishment of the things outlined above. I hope that our leaders will lay before every congregation in the Louisiana Conference the needs of our Church, and show our people that we are members of a great institution, functioning in a world-wide way, and that each church is one of the many units of this great organization, and the success of the whole institution is weakened by the failure of one unit to that extent. I want to see the great Methodist Church, of which I am a member, as an active, vigorous, energetic and militant force for right in every community.

I would urge that the district lay leaders of our church, together with their associates, join hands with the presiding elders, and they in turn with the pastors, and the pastors in turn with their boards of stewards, to make each church an active force for righteousness; to make each church unit an outstanding influence in the community, operating in the interests of humanity, and placing spiritual values where they properly belong.

I would urge that we start the New Year right, by seeing that in every church there is a sound financial plan, to support the ministry in an adequate way, and to support the institutions of the church. It does seem strange that our great Church should have to struggle as it does, for means to carry on, and that we find it each and every year a difficult task to even finance the ministry.

If a movement could be launched which could really interest our people in the plan of the church, and let them see and understand thoroughly what our great Church, as an institution, is doing, it would seem that a sufficient sum of money could be raised in order to accomplish these things in a reasonable way. We have heard much about the new plan, and I will say that the plan is perfect; but no system or plan has ever been devised which will work itself, and unless we, as members of our great Church, become interested and are willing to give of our time, energy and effort to see that the plan works, the plan will not succeed; but on the other hand, if we, as members of the church, will work the plan, and follow it up after it has been adopted by the church, I believe that we will find that we will adequately finance the ministry and will raise the amount of money which will be pledged for benevolences, and if we do, this will be a new thing in our church life. So I urge our people to become interested in our church; to give of their energy and their time; to advance spiritual values among our people; to work in the interests of humanity, and to properly finance the institutions of our church.

For Bad Cough, Mix This Better Remedy, at Home

Needs No Cooking! Big Saving!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made gives you four times as much cough remedy for your money, yet it is far more effective than ready-made medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous as a healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

PRAYER FOR THE NEW YEAR

By F. Robina Monkman

God of the years that lie behind us,
Lord of the years that stretch before,
Weaver of all the ties that bind us,
Keeper and King of the Open Door:

Grant us peace in the year now breaking,
Peace, Thy dove with the soft white wings.

Spread above us, asleep or waking,
Wise in love and the trust it brings.

Grant us hope, and a courage glowing
White and pure as the stars above;
Grant us faith in a full stream flowing
Down from the heights of Thy changeless love.

Out of the ruins of doubt and sorrow,
Out of the ashes of pain and tears,
Help us to fashion a new to-morrow,
Free from the anguish of blighting fears.

Build with us, lest our great walls crumble,
Broken stone upon useless clay;
Walk with us, lest our slow feet stumble,
Grove, and falter, and lose the way.

All through the seasons of sowing and reaping,
All through the harvest of song and tears,
Hold us close in Thy tender keeping,
O Maker of all New Years!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JANUARY 6

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

WINNING MEN TO CHRIST

The subject of the lessons for the quarter is knowing Peter; the object is knowing Christ. Both should be kept in focus. The time given to Peter is justified because he was "the prince of the apostles;" because he was the object of so much solicitude by the Master; and because he was perhaps the most human of the apostles—most like the rest of us. As a difficult child discovers to us the love, patience, forbearance and forgiveness of the mother, so this difficult disciple discloses to us the heart of the Christ. The indirect method of learning is of large value. He best knows and serves God who best knows and serves men. The men of Galilee were not the last to stand gazing into the heavens for him who is found on the crowded ways of earth, as Peter was not the last to linger upon the mountain of glory and vision while duty called to the shadowed valley of human need. Jesus was himself criticized for going about telling stories of merchantmen, fishermen, bread-makers and playing children while the pious ones tithed condiments, measured the law by the yardstick of tradition and weighed justice in the scales of caste prejudice. Let us study Peter, but let us find the Messiah.

"Behold the Lamb of God" is the first and only message of the church and its ministry. The disciples heard John and followed Jesus; heard the "Voice" and found "the Truth." The star of John was setting; the Sun of Righteousness was rising. Woe unto that church whose minister is more popular than its Master, and to that minister whose friends and followers do not become the friends and followers of Jesus.

Jesus' inquiry as to the object of search on the part of the two disciples was not for information, but for confirmation—to clarify and fix their purpose and to encourage its pursuit. It started conversation and elicited invitation. The Master's word to every hungry soul is ever, "Come." "They abode with him that day." What a day it must have been! Fare simple, but fellowship divine. Jesus, so often a guest, was ever a host, giving more than he received and leaving hearts and homes the richer for his visits—witness the marriage feast, Zacchaeus, Mary and Martha, and every blessed home where he abides.

Andrew, acquainted with Christ, hastens to find his brother and report the good news. Once a Christian, at once a missionary—swift of foot and confident of the message. A sure test. "We have found the Messiah"—not an afterthought, nor a post-humous tradition. They recognized the King from the first; like others, they learned the manner and methods of the kingdom all too slowly.

"Thou art—thou shalt be"—the alchemy of the soul. Men would transmute metals; Jesus transforms manhood. Simon, the fickle, the impulsive, the self-willed was to become Peter, the steadfast, the obedient. That Jesus could use and glorify the talent, tact, patience and perseverance acquired on a fishing boat was demonstrated at Pentecost when Peter drew into the gospel net three thousand souls. Called, they did not tarry, but forsook their nets and followed—followed him "who had not where to lay his head." Captivated by the power of his great personality, their admiration became adoration; their wonder merged into worship. The day they signed off the register of fishermen on Galilee, they were enrolled among the world's immortals and set sail on the vast ocean of time under the command of One who ever gave to the least more than the greatest ever forsook. Do we dare "for-sake and follow?" Do we strive to bring others, even those of our own kin, to Him!

NOTES

By Rev. A. K. McLellan

The program committee for the 1935 Young People's Assembly will meet in Alexandria, January 4-5. Rev. J. H. Bowdon, dean of the assembly, is chairman of the program committee. At this time plans for the summer assembly program will be perfected, dates selected, and other items with which this program will be concerned. Full information regarding the program, dates, etc., will be available after this meeting. The theme for the 1935 assembly is "Follow Me."

The Conference Young People's Council, together with the union presidents, will convene in Alexandria, January 5 and 6. Lydell Sims, president of the Young People's Conference, will preside over this meeting. At this time the work of the young people of the Conference will be reviewed and plans made for the time between now and the assembly.

The Church School Day program for 1935 is "The Church Teachers." These programs are available and may be had from the Conference Executive-Extension Secretary, Box 750, Alexandria, La. A program will be given free on application to every Church School in the Conference.

Sunday School Day, with which we have been so familiar in the past, was designated CHURCH SCHOOL DAY by the 1934 General Conference in session in Jackson, Miss. The offerings given on this day will be dedicated as has been in the past, to the support of the work of the Conference Board of Christian Education in the conference and in the districts. One-half of the amount received will be assigned for the use of the district workers for institutes, training schools, etc. Church School Day is April 7, 1935.

Young People's Day is to be observed March 10, 1935. This is the outstanding day for the recognition of the young people and their part in the work of Christian Education in the local church. In the past an offering has been asked for this special observance, but in line with the 1934 General Conference legislation, no offering will be asked on Young People's Day during this quadrennium. The young people will be asked to give their offering on Church School Day. This is in keeping with the spirit of the legislature to reduce the number of special offerings taken in the local church.

The Conference Board of Christian Education at the Annual Conference in Shreveport, set aside March 3-10 as Centenary College Week. Plans for this occasion will include such speakers as our own Bishop Dobbs; Dr. Pierce Cline, president of Centenary College, and Dr. W. M. Alexander, secretary of the department of schools and colleges, General Board of Christian Education. Meetings will be held in each of the districts.

The Methodist Home

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Exodus 8:8—Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Intreat the Lord, that he may take away the frogs from me, and my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the Lord.

Meditation

We can see the fatal defects of this prayer of Pharaoh.

The prayer was selfish. His sole concern was self-comfort and immunity from pain. He wanted relief from the plague of frogs. He did not even include the Israelites in this request. Did he not care if they were victims of this same plague?

There is no moral element in this prayer. There is no confession of sin. There is no evidence of repentance. There is no sign of godly sorrow. He grieved that frogs plagued him, but he was not grieved that he had sinned. He was subdued by the retribution of his misdeeds, but there was no desire for moral amendment. Dread of the penalty moved him, but his hardened heart revealed no inclination to carry out the promises he made. The sequel proves the futility of selfish prayer.

Prayer

Our Heavenly Father, we know our need of Thy mercy, for Thou art holy, holy, holy. We entreat Thee for forgiveness for every sin; for deliverance from all evil.

We would not wait until some hour of despair or an experience of painful discipline crushes us. We seek light that we may know Thy way. We would live with an eye single to Thy glory. May Thy will be done in our lives, and may Thy kingdom come among all men. Our petition we offer in the name of Jesus.

THE THOUGHTS OF JUSTUS TIMBERLINE

INFLUENCE; OR PULL?

We have a man in our town who has all kinds of pull. He can fix a traffic violation; get people jobs at election time; work a city official for special favors, and that sort of thing.

And we have another man who has all kinds of influence. He hardly knows the inside of the City Hall, and, so far from getting jobs for other people, he has been hard put to it lately to keep his own business going.

But he has influence. He has done more to change the moral climate of our town than all its police and half of its civic clubs.

He's the town's most cheerful citizen. His word is no good as a ten-page contract with penalties. He's a friend to people you don't see often at church—yes, the Sunday golfers as well as the people in the shanties across the track.

He loves children and dogs and old people. He's a friend in a thousand; loyal till it hurts and then some. He never gets mad, but he gets indignant at bad things, and contrives sooner or later to make his indignation contagious.

Now and then this man loses his popularity, because he never hesitates to line up with unpopular causes if he believes in them.

At least three times in twenty years one group or another has talked of tar and feathers, and a ride on a rail.

But that talk will never happen again. We know by this time that we can't spare Henry Baslow, and that he's worth most to us when we least appreciate him.

The other man—never mind his name—could disappear tomorrow, and it would bother me some to think of anybody who could care.—Christian Advocate (Northwestern).

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Purely Vegetable

Laxative Medicine

It is just as natural for the digestive system to respond to the laxative action of Thedford's Black-Draught as it is for the body to pick up energy from foods from the garden. Both are vegetable products of Nature. Black-Draught is composed of laxative herbs, selected in the course of long medical experience. And in Black-Draught they are prepared by simply drying and finely grinding them so that the human digestive system can most easily absorb the medicine needed to relieve constipation. When you need a laxative, get acquainted with Thedford's Black-Draught.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

HAIL COLUMBIA!

Dear Dr. Duren: Just a line from a grateful country preacher. I have a new conception of heaven since coming to Columbia. The people, the church, the parsonage, the town are all just "what the doctor ordered." Brother Hoffpaur did a good and substantial work here and we are ready to go on with it. Congregations have been excellent, the stewards report a good financial prospect for the year. I have had several additions, have several more prospects, am planning a religious survey, and am enjoying the fellowship very much. The people seem to have "taken us to raise" from the pounding and Christmas gifts we received and to top it all off Santa Claus drove up in a new Ford V8 and went off without it.

FROM PURVIS, MISS.

We arrived here Wednesday evening, November 28, 1934, and found a company of the Purvis Church to extend to us a most cordial welcome. They had a supply of things for the comfort and convenience of the new pastor and his family, that gave a strong evidence of the reception extended.

Both morning and evening of the first day we occupied the pulpit, the congregations were good. The whole board of stewards, nine in number, were present at these services.

Heard A Lot About Cardui and Used It With Good Results

For over fifty years thousands of women have taken Cardui for pain, cramps and nervousness at monthly periods. A great many learned from their mothers to take Cardui, or heard of it from reports of its good use by others. . . . "I take Cardui for pains in my side and headache," writes Mrs. H. R. Hartson, of Nevada, Mo. "At times I felt like something was pressing on the top of my head. This made me very nervous. I had heard a lot about Cardui and decided to use it. I did, with good results. It certainly helped me in every way." . . . Try Cardui in your case. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

shape and well organized for the new year, and joined with the people in making it very pleasant to follow in his steps.

Santa Claus was in a hurry to bring good tidings and evidence of his good will to the parsonage home and appeared Saturday evening of last week with a large basket filled with many good things to make Christmas a happy occasion for the pastor and his family, as we will have the feast of the family on the birthday of the King. With these evidences of good will and surrounded by the whole family Mrs. Saunders and myself will have a happy day.

The outlook for a happy year is very encouraging and the membership is giving increasing evidence of a royal and loyal support of the program of the church for the year 1935.

LYNCHING STATISTICS FOR 1934

Compiled by R. R. Moton, President
Tuskegee Institute

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1934. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 15 persons lynched in 1934. This is 13 less than the number of 28 for 1933; 7 more than the number 8 for 1932; 2 more than the number 13 for 1931; and 6 less than the number 21 for 1930. Eight of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails.

There were 51 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Seven of these were in northern and western states and 44 in southern states. In 46 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force were used to repel the would-be lynchings. A total of 74 persons, 14 White men; 57 Negro men and 3 Negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 15 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: attempted rape, 4; rape, 2; murder, 2; wounding man in altercation, 1; associating with White woman, 1; striking man, 1; writing insulting letter, 1; talking disrespectfully, 1; insulting women, 1; implicating others in a charge of stealing turpentine and bootlegging it, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 2; Georgia, 1; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 2; Mississippi, 6; Tennessee, 1; and Texas, 1.

Stop a COLD The First Day!

Drive It Out of Your System —Roots and All!

A COLD once rooted is a cold of danger! Trust to no makeshift methods.

A cold, being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment.

A cold also calls for a COLD remedy and not a preparation good for a number of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is internal and direct—and it does the four things necessary.

Four Effects

It opens the bowels. It combats the cold germs and fever in the system. It relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones the entire system.

Only Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine supplies these four effects and anything less than that is inviting trouble.

Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any druggist. Ask for it by the full name and accept no substitute on any pretext.

Mountain Meadows

By Rachel Day

“ . . . Who could tell
The freshness of the space of heaven above,
Edg'd round with dark treetops?”

—Keats in Endymion, Bk. I.

To what far uplands leads this mountain trail?
Deep-forested and gloomy seems the way,
Dark canopies of leaves shut out the day,
Steep slopes compel the panting breath to fail.

Climber, put on Hope's silver-shining mail,
Let thoughts of sunlit prospects be your stay;
For soon will meadows, flower-enamelled as May,
Delight your spirits, fainting now and pale!

As mountain trails Life's paths are often dark
With grievous cares and hopes long unfulfilled;
But these lead up to meadows lying sweet
Beneath gold suns, where lush green grasses mark
Waters of Love, essence divine, distilled, Bringing to bloom Life's flowers about tired feet.

—New Outlook.

The course consists of five lectures and is a feature of the first annual Ministers' Week, which the school is promoting. AN ORGY OF SPORTS and sport events seems to be developing more and more into an American passion. Only a few years ago the suggestion of professional football was almost an offence in sport circles, but the broadcasting of professional games over radio networks can not be considered as other than a response to an existing demand for these events. And colleges and universities are not averse to post season games, euphemistically called "classics," as an apology magnificent for the march of the commercial spirit in popular sports. Perhaps academic "derbes" would not be wide of the mark.

A REFERENDUM ON LIQUOR which was held in Claiborne Parish, Louisiana, a short time ago resulted in a vote of 1014 against liquor to 455 for it, according to official returns promulgated a few days ago. This news notice was hidden away in the middle of the first column of page four of the want-ad section of a New Orleans paper for December 30. Sports promoters may present a bottle of liquor with their trophies; but the rising death-toll on public thoroughfares, and the rising tide of crime and out-lawry throughout the nation, point unerringly to the door of the grog-shop. Our one word to booze is: sober thought will have its inning. Mark that!

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS and other news executives come forward this week with their diagnosis of the American mind, in "The ten biggest news stories of 1934." In the list, crime comes in for exactly one-half, politics for one-fifth, and nature freaks, marine disasters, and labor troubles for one-tenth each. In other words, the menu of our thinking for a year has had for its staples Hauptmann, Dillinger, royal assassins, and other forms of criminality, and for dessert we have had such things as Hitler's "blood purge" and the 160 corpses of the Morro Castle disaster. And we think we are trying to get "out of the depression."

THE GERMAN PUBLIC, according to a New York trade bulletin, has adopted what amounts to a boycott of tax-yielding institutions. Listed among these institutions are State railroads, the tobacco monopoly and amusements. The movement does not seem to be the result of organization, but is rather popular resistance of tax burdens. It is stated that there has been a decline of internal revenues, as a result; and that the program of the Hitler government has been embarrassed by the crusade.

THE RIGHT HONORABLE ARTHUR HENDERSON, a British statesman and labor leader, has been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for 1934. It will be of interest to Methodists to know that he is a Wesleyan local preacher; and it will be of interest to all to know that he worked his way up from the ranks. He began as an iron worker in Newcastle; he became a labor leader; he was a cabinet minister under two governments; he has been chairman of the Disarmament Conference for the past two years; and he is a devoted Christian.

THE DRUM CALL, the official quarterly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., tells a touching story of how Salamatu, a Mohammedan woman from the Hausa village in Africa was won to Christianity. She presented herself and said: "Yes, I am a Mohammedan, but I have come this morning to ask to be written as a confessor to your faith and I want to learn the way of Life. My two small sons have been in your school for a term. They have begged and teased that I come to your church for instruction and to hear the words of God. I have refused because my husband and I do not believe as you do. But this morning I have slipped away from my husband and have come to be written, because for three days now my two small sons have refused to eat the food I have cooked for them unless I come to you to learn the things of God!" Thus even in darkest Africa the words of the Prophet are fulfilled, "A little child shall lead them."

MR. GEORGE H. McNEAL, M. A., minister of Wesley's Chapel, London, was taken suddenly ill on December 14, and died early Sunday morning following. He had just finished correcting the proofs of the magazine which the church issues periodically when he was stricken. An operation was performed, but in vain. The Cathedral of World Methodism has lost a valuable leader in the passing of this faithful servant of the Church, and we share the sorrow of our English brethren in the great loss which they have sustained.

THE MINISTRY

In the drift of religious thinking, the sharp distinctions which once marked off the vocation of the minister seem to have been almost lost. But we venture to say that three factors enter into the making of that ministry for which the world is seeking; and in just the proportion that any of these is lacking, a ministry is robbed of effectiveness and power. There is a sense in which the Christian ministry is a priesthood—the minister has certain priestly functions which he must perform at the sacred altar and among his people. But necessary as these may be, they do not complete the measure of ministerial requirement. The second factor is that of being a teacher. Every implication of a ministry, separated unto its task by whatever process, involves the idea of instruction. It is true of mystery religions, and it can not be less so of one which bears the responsibility for helping to fashion the lives of men and women after the will and purpose of God. But the third element, which is the very life-blood of any worth-while ministry, is what is ordinarily called the prophetic element. And it is the prophetic responsibility which gives the ministry its place and authority among men. And in just the proportion that the utterances represent a personal witnessing will a ministry have power and effectiveness.

One may think of the office as being a Divine call or a separation unto a spiritual task; but no theory of its origin can authenticate an individual ministry—it is the consciousness of having a message from God that makes a ministry virile and helpful. On the other hand, much as we believe in a correct approach to the sacred task, we do not believe that mere theological terminology can rob a ministry of power when it is a conscious response to the urge of God. We do not mean to apologize for a loose conception of the ministerial mandate; on the contrary, we believe that nothing can take the place of being able to say with St. Paul: "Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is me, if I preach not the gospel." The thing that we would insist upon is that the consciousness of being the bearer of a message from Jehovah is vital to the Christian ministry; and it is not less important today than it was to Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, or to any others of those to whom we have assigned a place in the sacred canon. We do not insist upon a vocal call, we rather prefer it otherwise; but we insist that this three-fold ministry, according to all religious history, represents the true psychological approach to the human heart; and that the power and effect of the Christian ministry are bound up with the conviction that its utterances are made under a divine mandate.

JURISDICTION AND JUSTICE

The National Student Federation, meeting in Boston last week, went on record as endorsing the recognition of freedom of speech and of the press for college administration and students; but it declined to recommend the reinstatement of those under discipline in two recent and widely discussed cases. We know nothing whatever of the facts in the New York City instance, and we do not know the facts connected with the incident occurring in Louisiana well enough to warrant the expression of a judgment. But underlying the action of the Federation in these cases are some things concerning which we have very positive convictions. First of all, we doubt if a popular forum a thousand miles removed from a scene of disturbance is a proper place for the adjudication of questions which are apt to be as much local as they are academic. We believe, too, that an atmosphere of agitation and passion is calculated to promote findings that would have a tendency to encourage disagreements and eruptions in the future, rather than to settle great issues. On the question of the freedom of speech and of the press, surely there can be but one position in a democracy. But having said that, we dare to express the opinion that this sacred right is too often abused—sometimes even turned into a shield for attacks that should never be made. It is easy to lose ones intellectual and moral balance under a strain of personal or popular feeling, and to presume upon immunities which do not legitimately belong to the doctrine. In this particular, we think there is opportunity in the larger field of practical journalism for a leadership in reforms that might be helpful.

COVENANT SUNDAY

Reports reaching the Advocate office indicate a wide observance of Covenant Sunday throughout Mississippi and Louisiana. The Commission on Evangelism made the plan for the observance so flexible that there could be little reason for not observing it. The Commission simply made an insistent appeal to our Methodist people to make Sunday, January 5, a day of personal rededication of themselves to Christ. This act of reconsecration is designed to be the prelude of a great evangelistic movement throughout the Church, and for the quadrennium ending in 1938. In May of that year, we will celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the heart warming experience of the greatest evangelist of modern times—John Wesley. Surely we must come to the point of a full and complete rededication of our own lives, if we expect God to use us as evangelists to others, or if we would fulfill our obligation to these critical and revolutionary times.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME

The report of the campaign for the relief of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home reflects great credit upon the loyalty and devotion of the Church in that state, and no less upon the splendid leadership of Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs. The total Orphanage debt listed under four classifications amounted to a little more than one hundred and seventy thousand dollars. Of this amount $111,982.00 was a bonded debt. The bondholders made a reduction of $13,200.00, and of the balance, the church paid $40,080.00 in cash; and refunded the remainder of the debt with $58,600.00 in new bonds, payable serially over a period of twelve years. In addition to the payment on the bonded debt, $19,870.00 was paid on the unsecured notes held by the banks, the banks voluntarily reduced the notes $5,746.01, and new notes were made for $22,267.53. This means that the campaign resulted in a reduction of the debt in the sum of $78,998.01, of which $60,050.00 was paid in actual cash. Thus the credit of the Orphanage and the Church was re-established, and a worthy and a necessary institution has been saved for the Methodists in the two Conferences.

SON OF METHODIST MINISTER HONORED

Thomas F. Neblett, graduate student of Louisiana State University, who was elected president of the National Student Federation of America, at the meeting held in Boston last week, is a product of a Methodist parsonage in Mississippi. He is a son of Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett of Brooksville, Miss.;

THOMAS F. NEBLETT

was born at Houston, Miss., November 25, 1911; was graduated from Millsaps College in 1933; and since that time he has been assistant to dean Charles W. Pipkin of Louisiana State University, at Baton Rouge, La. Last summer Mr. Neblett was granted a fellowship in social sciences including a trip to Japan, where he attended the Japan-American Student Conference at Toyko. After the conclusion of the Conference, he made a study trip through Japan, China and Manchuko, returning to Baton Rouge in time for the fall term of work in the University. The Advocate congratulates this splendid young man; and no less sincerely the father and mother who made the humble Methodist minister's home from which he comes.

CAN YOUR CHURCH BE EVANGELISTIC?

Yes; or it should quit playing at being a church of Jesus Christ.

It can be evangelistic at the start of the year and all the way through to New Year's Eve again.

It has to be evangelistic, being a church of Jesus Christ, because what it is in the world to say is not to tell men how they should behave, nor to call them to flee from the wrath to come, but to tell a story.

The first business of a Christian Church is the evangel: the good news: A church begins by telling the Story, easily and beyond all challenge the greatest story ever heard.

After that it can talk about repentance and faith and good conduct and citizenship and brotherhood and all the rest.

Look at the old-fashioned phrases: "O, thou that tellest." "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings." "I bring you good tidings of great joy." "Tell it out among the nations." "I love to tell the story."

This is a generation wise in many of its conceits. But it knows precious little of the Good News of God.

There are millions of people in this country who have not really been told the real news of salvation; it has never found its way to their attention, and yet the allure and grip of the Story is still real and powerful.

During the next dozen weeks, thousands of churches should be churches of the Good News. They should be finding ways of capturing the interest of their communities for a piece of news that was never more interesting or more up-to-date than it is at this hour.

Your pastor may be hesitating. He may wonder whether you and the other members really want him to plan for this sort of thing. Why not tell him? Tell him you don't want a mechanical "meeting," or a perfunctory series of special services; that you don't care about stunts, specialties or showmanship.

Say to him, if you believe it, that you think your church needs to demonstrate its possession of the Good News by telling it—really telling it—to others.

Assure him that you believe there is more magnetism in the gospel of Christ—when rightly and fully told—than in all of the old and outworn revivalist devices put together.

They are "dated;" their day is over. But the Good News of God in Jesus Christ—with all which that can bring with it—is more timely today than the latest radio bulletin. So your church can be evangelistic. Will it be?—Christian Advocate (Northwestern).

WAR MUST BE ABOLISHED

From an address by Carrie Chapman Catt, delivered at the annual meeting of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, New York, November 14, 1934:

"If you do not approve the excitements of war, the lowered morality, the coarsened thinking; if you are shocked by the increase of crime, both adult and juvenile, of insanity and divorce; if you note with pain that civilization seems back-sliding instead of evolving; if you worry because business is at a standstill, millions of men and women unemployed and on relief; taxes rising and everyone you know depressed in mind and spirit; let the dead past bury the dead past and devote all energies to the protection of future generations by putting the aim of complete and speedy abolition of war in the lead of all plans."

"... War will never be abolished until all who believe in perpetual peace keep saying: 'War must be abolished.' " ... "If friends and neighbors laugh at you, never mind; if they pronounce you idiotic, be patient and keep on talking. One by one, others will take up the call, cautiously, guardedly, but each week, each month, each year, the call will rise higher and spread farther until, by and by, perhaps afar off, from ocean to ocean, our millions in unison, will shout: 'War, war, destroy it.' "

"... War, abolish it! There is no other way to cure it. Abolish it. Be done with it."—Christian Advocate (New York).

SEASHORE DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING

The district stewards of the Seashore District, Mississippi Annual Conference, met in the Long Beach Church at 10 a. m., December 20, 1934. Rev. L. J. Power conducted the devotionals after which Rev. H. W. F. Vaughan was elected secretary of the general meeting. The secretary called the roll and thirteen district stewards and nineteen pastors answered present. Several chairmen of boards of stewards and other visitors were present.

The presiding elder asked that the district stewards meet with him in the Abarr Memorial Sunday School Building and during their absence Rev. G. H. Thompson presided over the general meeting. Several matters were discussed by the ministers and other laymen present including New Orleans Christian Advocate, Memorial Mercy Home and Superannuate Fund.

We had the presence of Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader; Rev. I. H. Sells, Executive-Extension Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education, and Rev. W. M. Williams, chaplain, Mississippi State Sanatorium. Each of these brethren spoke in the interest of their work.

L. T. Fickling, district lay leader and the two associates C. J. Parks and J. P. Drake were presented and L. T. Fickling spoke briefly of his work. The pamphlet "The Board of Stewards," gotten out by the General Board of Lay Activities, was distributed.

During the afternoon session E. T. Reimann, chairman of the board of stewards of the First Methodist Church of Gulfport, spoke on the "Laymen and the New Financial Plan." Rev. H. A. Gatlin spoke on the "Pastor and the New Financial Plan."

A. E. Bradley, district director of adult work, spoke in the interest of his work and outlined some goals for the year.

Brother Power outlined some goals for the year and made some important announcements.

The ladies of the Long Beach and Pass Christian Churches served luncheon to all present. A rising vote of thanks was extended.

ROY WOLFE, Reporter.

CHILDREN AND CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

Every pastor in the Church will be interested in the new material published for use in preparing children for church membership. A booklet has just come from the press giving suggestions as to how meetings with candidates for church membership may be effectively conducted and how the service of reception into the Church may be made most impressive. This booklet has been written out of the experience of pastors and other church school workers who have been especially effective in helping children to understand what it means to join the Church.

An attractive folder to be used by the child and his parents, entitled "Your Church and You," has also been prepared for use as an integral part of the plans outlined in the booklet. An attractive certificate of reception into the Church is also available for presentation by the pastor to the child who has joined the Church.

Each of these three items are now ready for use by pastors and church school workers during the weeks leading up to the Easter Season. This material will meet a deeply-felt need throughout Southern Methodism. Samples can be supplied by the Methodist Publishing House in Nashville, Tenn., Richmond, Va., and Dallas, Tex.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

he was indicted for defamation of Mrs. Williamson's character, and he was sued for one thousand pounds—the customary American $5,000. Mr. Causton, the magistrate and an uncle of Mrs. Williamson, said: "Mr. Wesley did this merely out of revenge because Sophy would not have him." Mr. Wesley repelled Mrs. Williamson from the communion table because she had not given him notice of her intention to commune—the very rule which the Bishop of London invoked against the Methodists in 1744.

John Wesley appeared six or seven times to answer the suit and indictment, but he failed to secure a hearing of the case, and when the web of slander and persecution grew more and more troublesome and offensive he resolved to return to England. He notified Mr. Causton, the Magistrate, of his purpose; posted an advertisement of his intention in the Great Square and made ready to leave. That afternoon orders were given to the officers to prevent his departure; but he left about eight o'clock in the evening and after a perilous journey of four days, he reached Charleston and he embarked for England, December 22, 1737.

Mr. Wesley left Georgia disappointed in hope, humiliated in mind and disquieted in soul. It is not unlikely, however, that his stay in America was one of the most valuable experiences of his life. He seems to have been at the parting of the ways, and the freedom and unconventionality of the New World made it possible for him to strip off the traditions, the restraints and the customs of religion, and to discover the values of Christianity for himself. It was here also that his thought received direction toward some of the distinctive features of the organization which he was to set up later. But the greatest of all the factors in his mission to Georgia was his contact with the Moravians. He often remarked upon their simplicity, brotherly love, cheerfulness and the absence of all evil speaking—things which fitted well into the scheme of his own intensely spiritual nature. A few days after he landed in England he met Peter Bohler, and his appreciation of the Moravians was greatly strengthened. There was a ring of sincerity and earnestness about Bohler which gripped his very heart, and it was largely through the influence of this consecrated man that he came into the conscious experience of salvation, or as he expressed it, his "heart was strangely warmed," in Aldersgate Street, May 24, 1738. Following that experience, his thoughts turned to Herrnhut, the Moravian settlement in Germany, and three weeks later found him at Gravesend again, this time he was embarking for a three months' visit to the home of these devout people.

It was in this Bohemian retreat of Moravian religion that the splendid poise of John Wesley was first discovered. There he appraised their faults as well as their virtues. He loved them for their loyalty to the fundamental facts of vital Christian experience, and for the rigid discipline of their lives. But he was a man of initiative and action, and he was quick to perceive the lack of militancy in their faith. He could not look with favor upon what he felt to be their lack of doctrinal consistency, particularly their attitude respecting the ordinances of the church. He was offended by their ecclesiastical conceits and he could not accept their exaggeration of the terms of the gospel. These things, together with their accommodation of Scripture to theory, seemed to him to offer hospitality to all kinds of fanaticism. The record shows that he kept his emotional impulses under control throughout his stay.

On November 11, 1739, Mr. Wesley opened the Foundery which was the headquarters of the United Societies until the building of Wesley's Chapel in City Road in 1778. The Fetter Lane Society was torn with dissensions; he attended its meeting, July 20, 1740; at the conclusion of the service, he read a paper stating his disagreements with the organization; and he withdrew from the Society. Eighteen or nineteen members went with him; but the issue with the Fetter Lane Society resulted in an unhappy contest which cost him some of his most loyal friends—John Cennick, Benjamin Ingham, Charles Delamotte and, for a time, even Charles Wesley wavered. The separation from the Moravians was, nevertheless, as plainly providential as any other step connected with the origin of Methodism. On the experimental and practical side, Mr. Wesley had much in common with them; but their doctrinal inconsistency and their orderless and unconstructive policy had nothing to offer his methodical mind. Although Mr. Wesley regarded the Fetter Lane Society as an incoherent group, he did not lose interest in it; and he did all that he could to help them to compose their differences; but he was never directly connected with it after his withdrawal.

Once John Wesley's organization had been freed from the incumbrance of Moravian mysticism and inaction, "the spawn of mystic divinity" he called it, the new movement began to press toward the achievement of world conquest—the radiant vision of the Founder.

Mr. Wesley's development of the policy of Methodism was not in any sense the setting up of a mechanical framework of control. It was instead a series of adaptations and adjustments which sought to secure effective relation to the task, but without the subordination of the evangelistic passion in which the movement originated. He had a clear conception of his "World Parish," but he never proposed a regulation until it became a necessity of the work itself, and sometimes it appeared to his helpers to have been a tardy yielding to an inevitable course.

The first organic development of Methodism was the society, not an innovation, but the adoption of a group organization well known in the religious life of England. The society had long been resorted to by deeply pious people as a means of spiritual instruction and culture; and the Holy Club reflected Wesleyan acquaintance with such groups. Mr. Wesley organized the pious people of Savannah into a society; and the Aldersgate Street society was a miscellaneous group under Moravian control. Mr. Wesley soon came to know that there was no place for Methodist passion and fervor in the Established Church; he turned, therefore, to the only existing form of organization which offered hospitality to the movement nearest his heart. His contribution was the introduction of the element of federation, through which a time-honored means of spiritual culture was made effective and powerful; and his ecclesiastical genius was revealed when he made the Foundery the first unit of the "United Societies." The independent societies have vanished and their influence has been forgotten; but the United Societies became an irresistible force which carried the passion and the ideals of John Wesley to the very ends of the earth.

When Whitefield broke away from the conventions of church worship and began to preach in the open, Mr. Wesley says: "I could scarcely reconcile myself at first to this strange way of preaching in the fields, of which he set me an example on Sunday; having been all my life (till very lately), so tenacious of every point relating to decency and order, that I should have thought the saving of souls almost a sin if it had not been in a church." This statement shows his resistance of innovation. But when the doors of the Establishment were closed in his face he refused to admit that the chief end of church organization is to preserve decency and order in the forms of worship, and he would not abandon his mission to unsaved souls. On Monday, April 2, 1739, he spoke to three thousand people "from a little eminence" of ground adjoining the city of Bristol.

His next step after adopting field preaching was the employment of unordained men as helpers. The growth of the Revival and the unwillingness of the clergy to give countenance to the movement made such an expedient imperative. He sanctioned the preaching of John Cennick to the Kingswood colliers in June, 1739, but when Thomas Maxfield began to preach at the Foundery it was without his authorization. When Mr. Wesley heard of it he hastened to London to put an end to it; but he was stopped by the discreet counsel of his mother: "John, take care what you do with respect to that young man, for he is as surely called of God to preach as you are. Examine what have been the fruits of his preaching, and hear him for yourself." Maxfield's breach of ecclesiastical order was simply a yielding to the irresistible urge of the Spirit within him; and when Mr. Wesley thought the matter through he realized that he must employ lay preachers or lose his opportunity to save the people. He wrote Charles Wesley, April 21, 1741, saying: "I am not clear that brother Maxfield should not expound at Greyhound Lane; nor can I yet do without him. Our clergymen have miscarried full as much as the laymen; and that the Moravians are other than laymen I know not." Here again we see the ecclesiastical statesman being hammered out on the anvil of ruthless necessity. He was not choosing a method, but was accepting the inevitable. It is common among students of the Methodist Revival to ascribe special distinction to the little handful of clergymen who loyally and sympathetically supported Mr. Wesley; and we would not take anything from the honor that is due them; but of infinitely greater importance was the support of his lay preachers. They made it possible for Mr. Wesley to cover England with an intensive cultivation which saved the Revival from the collapse in which such movements often terminate.

Next in order was the class-meeting. Its origin was somewhat different from the other practices, since necessity was only incidentally the occasion for its introduction, and it originated in connection with Mr. Wesley's work. On February 15, 1742, the society at Bristol organized itself into groups of twelve for collecting a penny a week from the entire membership, the sum to be applied on the chapel debt. A leader was placed over each group and his report to the stewards related to the lives of the people as well as to the offering. Mr. Wesley was quick to sense the value of such an approach to the membership of the societies; and on March 25, following the class-meeting was introduced in London, and it immediately became a part of the economy of Methodism. In this step, Mr. Wesley was an eloquent example of his own doctrine: "We are always open to instruction, willing to be wiser every day than we were the day before, and to change whatever we can change for the better."

The last feature of Wesleyan economy to be evolved was the Conference. The quarterly conference originated as a quarterly visitation of Mr. Wesley to inquire into the spiritual progress and brotherly love of members of the societies—a kind of enlarged class-

Mississippi and Louisiana

On a recent Sunday, Rev. Shed Hill Caffey received thirteen new members into the church at West Point, Miss.

Rev. J. E. Lawhon who is the pastor of the Nettleton charge is in the midst of building a new church at Shiloh, Miss.

Rev. and Mrs. Floyd O'Dom of Jackson, Miss., are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a fine son, Floyd Jr., born December 5.

The parsonage at Derma, Miss., has been re-roofed and other plans have been set on foot for the year. Rev. Grover Meaders is the pastor.

A note from Rev. J. M. Boykin, Delhi, La., informs us that he and his good wife spent the holidays with their daughter, Mrs. W. R. Bell, Jr., and her family in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Rev. W. R. Hammontree, Rural Extension Secretary for Monroe and Itawamba Counties, Miss., is planning his work for a full schedule of classes and institutes for the entire year.

Watch night services were held at Epworth and First Methodist Churches, New Orleans, on Monday night, and we understand that both were largely attended and helpful services.

According to the Crowley Signal, the Methodists of that little city have a monthly men's fellowship supper, and a fellowship program is made a part of the hour. Brother G. W. Dameron is the pastor.

Rev. Roy Wolfe, pastor of Saucier charge, reports a fine quarterly conference for the beginning of his fourth year. Twenty-one of the twenty-nine officials were present, and every church was represented.

Mrs. Barney Lewis sends cheering words to the editor, for which we are duly grateful. Since her husband's translation she makes her home in Marion, Ark., where she is at home to the Advocate.

The Aberdeen, Miss., parsonage has been made attractive and comfortable by the ladies of that church. It has been painted and papered, new light and gas fixtures have been installed, and the premises have been made beautiful with shrubs and flowers.

The dean of Louisiana Church School superintendents, Brother A. M. Mayo, sends us hearty New Year's greetings, to which we respond in kind. Brother Mayo was planning for 501 present at the Church School on January 6, when Bishop Dobbs was to be present.

From Town-Talk, Alexandria, La., we learn that the church at Elizabeth, La., gave the pastor, Rev. Alonzo Early, a beautiful watch for a Christmas present. Brother Early undertook to respond, and when his words failed, they all sang, "Blest be the tie that binds."

Rev. E. A. King, of Centerville, Miss., sends us an account of the death of Mrs. Mary E. Reagan, a life long member of Rocky Springs Church in Claiborne County, Miss. She was a little more than 102 years old, and retained her interest in church affairs to the end.

Rev. Floyd Lewis, who is serving his first pastoral charge, has the distinction of being the only resident white pastor in the county of Issaquena, Miss. The population of the county is 5,734, largely Negro. He has made a splendid start, finds friends, and is making more.

At Hamilton, Miss., Rev. W. M. Jones has had a good beginning. At the first service, every official was present, both morning and evening and at the meeting of the officials in the afternoon. Both churches on the charge have adopted the monthly envelope plan of payment.

Rev. J. T. Abney, who took the superannuate relation at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, takes this method of thanking his brethren for the generous check which he received. He is now living one mile south of McComb on highway 24, and his address is Box 123, McComb, Miss.

It will be of interest to the friends of Rev. Wm. B. Van Valkenburgh, of the M. E. Church to know that he was recently transferred from Kansas and was stationed at Lutchter, La. Brother Van Valkenburgh's wife was a daughter of Brother Blaney Thompson, of sainted memory in this city.

Rev. W. S. Shipman of Lambert, North Mississippi Conference, has contributed $100 to the Lewis Memorial Fund for a hospital in the Belgian Congo. "Mr. Shipman," as he styles himself, gave his life to the Methodist ministry and is now a superannuate; this last sacrificial act is typical of his entire service as a minister.

Miss Margaret Camp, publicity superintendent of the Louisiana Young People's Conference, sends us a notice of the Council and Union Presidents' Meeting, in Alexandria, January 5 and 6. We regret that the notice came too late for insertion in the Advocate of last week. Matter for publication should reach the office on Thursday and at latest on Friday before the date of the paper for which it is intended.

Rev. Warren C. Black, son of Rev. and Mrs. M. M. Black, during the recent holiday season visited his parents in Vicksburg, Miss., preaching in his father's pulpit Sunday evening, December 30. While in Vicksburg he also aroused interest in the direction of reorganizing the Boy Scout troop of Gibson Memorial congregation. He is a graduate of college, and has taught several sessions in the public schools of Clarksdale, Miss., but is now taking a theology course at Emory University.

The service at Edwards, Miss., on the evening of December 30, was made historical, in celebration of the 106th year of Methodism in Edwards and of the 150th year of episcopal Methodism in America. The first Methodist church building in Edwards was within the present cemetery. The building in use today was erected during the pastorate of Rev. J. G. Galloway. A paper prepared by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Daniels, on the "History of the Edwards Church" was read by one of the stewards, G. W. Luster. The address on "The Origin of Episcopal Methodism," was made by the presiding elder, Rev. H. G. Hawkins. Special music was furnished by the choir of Learned, Miss.

COUNCIL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in Centenary Methodist Church, St. Louis, March 12-18, 1935. This meeting will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Council organization. The home and foreign boards of the Woman's Missionary Society were united in the Council just a quarter of a century ago, and the meeting in St. Louis will be of special interest on that account.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Wade Gaston

The Ackerman Woman's Missionary Society met with Mrs. W. E. Adams on December 17. Mrs. Banks Weaver was hostess and arranged a beautiful harvest day program, including a play entitled, "Gather Us In." Every member of the Society made a sacrificial offering, with the result that the pledge for the year was over-paid by ten dollars. The society had a very successful year under the leadership of Mrs. Beeman, and there was fullest co-operation upon the part of all the officers. In addition to the good report of the Society, the children's work made the Honor Roll for the eighth year in succession, and the pledge was more than paid.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Christmas at MacDonell School begins when we begin to rehearse for the pageant which is our annual contribution to the community. How the boys and girls love it! We have a big electric star which is set up early in December and then the singing of carols begin. The children gather out in the yard under the stars and sing each evening at dusk.

The pageant this year was given out in front of Keener Hall, the new dormitory. The wide old colonial porch makes an ideal setting, with the manger just inside the door. The weather was good and a large number of folks from Houma and the surrounding territory assembled to witness this beautiful portrayal of the ever new story of the birth of the Savior.

The boys and girls World Clubs and junior and primary departments of Sunday schools all over the southland are studying about the "Children of MacDonell School" and "Our Church at Work in Acadia," this last quarter of the year. Since the beginning of the quarter we have been receiving letters and cards asking for information of our boys and girls, and more recently boxes of gifts have been coming in. Friday morning, the day after the pageant, we gathered in the beautiful living room of the new dormitory and had the school Christmas tree. There were two or more gifts for every boy and girl in the school, gifts from the children all over the country. To some were given extra packages of little things to take home to the little ones who might not otherwise have a very good visit from old Santa. There was great gladness as a result.

One of the outstanding phases of Christmas at MacDonell School has come to be the receiving of the gifts from Rayne Memorial Sunday School in New Orleans. It is impossible to even mention all the outstanding events: a letter from First Church, Shreveport, saying they will take a scholarship, four beautiful charts for the living room from Rayne Memorial Missionary Society, furniture for a bedroom by Mr. Julius Dupont, a local merchant, a check from Noel Memorial for their room, and others too numerous to mention in a brief article. It would take the whole Advocate to relate all the fine things that have come our way and all the special efforts we have made to make the season one of gladness and of eternal spiritual value to the folks of this section.

THE NEED OF AN ORGANIZED AND TRAINED BOARD OF STEWARDS

By Judge E. L. Walker,
District Lay Leader, Ruston District

Report No. 3 of the Board of Lay Activities of the Louisiana Annual Conference, session of 1934, calls attention to the necessity for the organization and training of official boards in our local churches. See New Orleans Christian Advocate, issue of December 20, 1934, page 11, for said report. The purpose of this article is to emphasize that necessity.

Our Church Discipline contemplates that the board of stewards in every local church shall organize immediately after the session of the Annual Conference. The necessity for the early organization of this board in each church is obvious to everyone.

Section 223 of the 1934 Discipline requires that: "The stewards shall organize by electing a chairman, secretary, and treasurer." This is the minimum organization legal requirement. Having so organized, the board of stewards should name and set such committees as it finds necessary in the efficient conduct of its business. Mr. G. L. Morelock, Secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, in his most valuable pamphlet entitled, "THE BOARD OF STEWARDS," suggests the following committees: Executive, Finance, Property and Grounds, Music, Social Welfare, Evangelism, Stewardship, Fellowship, Lay Speaking, and Courses of Study. This list is suggestive only. More or fewer committees may be needed. The point is that each board should have such committees as it finds necessary to properly and effectively carry on its work.

A trained board of stewards is as necessary as an organized board. A board whose members are ignorant of their duties cannot function to any degree of success. Some plan to train the stewards should be worked out and executed in every local church. We must look to the local pastor for leadership in such a plan. He is the church official to whom the stewards look, and rightly so, for guidance and instruction. It is the duty of the presiding elders and lay leaders to assist in the formulation and execution of such plans. A training class for stewards, under competent leadership, should be held in every local church at the earliest possible date. Dr. J. E. Crawford, Associate General Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, will conduct a training class for stewards, lay leaders, pastors, and others who are interested for the Ruston District, at a point yet to be selected, on the 28th and 29th of March, 1935. It is hoped that all the stewards, lay leaders and pastors of the district will attend. This school should produce adequate leadership and inspiration for such a school in every local church in the Ruston District.

May we hope and pray for an awakened leadership and a wholehearted co-operation with this plan by said leadership in the Ruston District.

INTERESTING REFERENCES TO CENTENARY COLLEGE AND CENTENARY PEOPLE

By A. M. Shaw, Jr.

Stark Young's popular novel, "So Red the Rose," probably does not deserve the superlative tributes which have been paid it by friendly reviewers, but it is a story which will have some appeal for all Southerners. For at least two reasons it should have a special appeal to all Centenary College people.

First, the author, in a single sentence, strengthens two important traditions connected with the Civil War period of Centenary's existence. On page 393, he causes Hugh McGehee, one of the prominent Natchez people with whom the novel is chiefly concerned, to address this question to his daughter:

"Lucy, don't you know that from Centenary College, where Jefferson Davis went, the entire graduating class was killed to a man?"

Although there seems to be no documentary evidence to support it, the tradition that Jefferson Davis was a student at Centenary in its early years has persisted with considerable strength.

There is documentary testimony that not only every member of the senior class, but practically every student in the College, enlisted in the Confederate army in 1861. However, the tradition that every member of the senior class was killed in battle has been disputed by at least one Centenary alumnus of the class of 1888, who offered convincing testimony in support of his contention.

The second item of interest to Centenary people is the part played in the story of Judge Edward McGehee, an aristocratic planter and jurist of Woodville, Miss., a small town lying some miles south of Natchez. This Edward McGehee, during the years preceding the War Between the States, was one of the prominent citizens of the nation and a personal friend of President Zachary Taylor, who offered to make him Secretary of the Treasury. Judge McGehee declined this honor, however; and throughout his life he was a powerful force in the Methodism of Mississippi and Louisiana, devoting a large portion of his resources and gifted energies to Centenary College. He was a member of the committee which in 1845 arranged for the transfer of the plant and buildings at Jackson, La., from the state to the Methodist Church, paying from his own pocket the sum of money involved in the transfer; and he was a member of the College Board of Trustees from this time forward until his death in 1881, during which time he made a number of contributions to Centenary, the chief of which was a single gift of $70,000.

BROADCASTING FROM THE BELGIAN CONGO, TUNDA STATION

Yes, a goodly number of our pastors and people and churches have already tuned in on Tunda Station where we hope to have a little brick hospital for our noble missionaries, Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, not many months hence. It was truly a happy Christmas for us, because many of you said "Merry Christmas" with your offerings for this most worthy cause. Evidencing the rare spirit of that grateful woman who poured out her precious nard upon her Lord and our Christ, and thus immortalized her character and influence, a few of our choice souls have helped to perpetuate the beauty and fragrance of Mary's noble deed by sending gifts of love and sacrifice. Brother S. V. Wall of Cleveland made an early start with his gifts; then came a love offering from Mrs. W. B. Taylor of Como of $40.00. Dear Brother Shipman, one of our beloved and honored superannuate preachers, said: "Merry Christmas with his gift of $100.00. Mrs. Annie C. Ingle of New Albany, who is always helping somebody, sent her gift of $100.00, which bore this inscription: "In Memory of My Precious Boy." Now Brother Pastor, Brother Layman, if you forgot to say "Merry Christmas" to Tunda Station, let me tell you that it's not too late to say, "Happy New Year." So don't forget. We are counting on you. ## SOME MISSISSIPPI CONFER- ENCE STATISTICS

By Rev. H. G. Hawkins

Perusal of the Journal of the one hundred twenty-second session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, recently from the press, reveals many items of interest, of which we mention here a few:

Notwithstanding 4180 additions by profession of faith, there is a decrease of 773 in total membership. This must be due to removing from the rolls many that have been lost sight of. We have never learned well enough to hold and train for service those we gain.

The largest number of infant baptisms was in the Coalville charge, 33. The following had 15 or more: Capitol St., Central, Americus, Gulfport, Galloway Memorial, Philadelphia Ct., Prentiss, Ocean Springs.

Those receiving the largest number on profession of faith were: Galloway Memorial, 79; Natchez, 56; Canton, 53; Central, 48; Philadelphia Ct., 43; Saucier, 42; Mendenhall, 41; Gulfport, 40. Of course, we all know that in some charges to gain ten converts requires as much human skill and divine power also, as to achieve fifty in other places.

The largest amounts raised for churches and parsonages (including pay-

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JANUARY 13

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

PETER'S GREAT CONFESSION

Since Peter's call to discipleship he had followed Jesus for perhaps more than a year, listening to his teaching, watching his work, and studying his personality. Growing hostility on the part of religious leaders had driven Jesus far north among the Gentiles. Men everywhere were discussing the strange new Teacher, and the disciples could scarcely have failed to talk among themselves as to the Man and his mission. As so often before great events in his life, the Master was at prayer. Was he invoking the Father that the revelation of his Messiahship might that day break on the hearts of the disciples? Most likely, for he appears at once to have inquired what men thought of him. Always men evaluated him in superlatives. Those who honored him, classed him as the greatest of the prophets, risen from the dead; those who hated him could not think of him as less than Beelzebub, the very prince of devils. He was best beloved or most despised; there was no middle ground.

It was not enough that the disciples should embrace general opinion, or follow vague notions of his person. The question was put point blank, with startling suddenness—"Who say ye that I am?" Perhaps the morning prayer was answered as Peter declared: "The Christ of God," for it came as a revelation from God, and the Christian Church began its history. There has been much profitless debate upon the meaning of the words of Jesus as in joy he blessed Peter. Perhaps there is some truth in all interpretations. There can be no church without the Foundation—"the Christ of God."

Help Kidneys

Don't Take Drastic Drugs.

Your Kidneys contain 9 million tiny tubes or filters which may be endangered by neglect or drastic, irritating drugs. Be careful. If functional Kidney or Bladder disorders make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Loss of Pep, Leg Pains, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes, Neuralgia, Acidity, Burning, Smarting or Itching, you don't need to take chances. All druggists now have the most modern advanced treatment for these troubles—a Doctor's prescription called Cystex (Siss-Tex). Works fast—safe and is guaranteed to make you feel 10 years younger in one week or money back on return of empty package. Cystex costs only 3c a dose at druggists and the guarantee protects you.

There can be none without personal relation with the Father in heaven. There can be none without faith and confession. There can be none without Peter and other "bricks" like him, living and life-sharing stones built into a kingdom of glorious and redeemed personalities.

The joy of Jesus at this great confession seems immediately to have given place to fear lest they begin at once to spread the news and to attempt to interpret him to the world. For this, they were not ready, as others were not ready to hear. They saw in him the Messiah they expected, not the Messiah the Father had sent. They were ambitious for place and power, for thrones and scepters. Their hearts must have sunk within them as he talked of suffering and service, of rejection and death. Peter was so amazed at this turn of affairs that he began to rebuke Jesus, letting his human desires and traditions get the ascendance over his divine revelation. For them to have attempted at that time to interpret Jesus would have been to state the evidence before the facts were all in. To preach Christ before the cross would have been as writing the biography of Washington before Yorktown, or that of Wellington before Waterloo. His story could not be told till he had enacted the miracle of a suffering God, distressed with an infinite heartache over the sin of the world, and giving himself in humble service and humiliating sacrifice for the people he loved. A God who loved enough to become incarnate, but not enough to share to the uttermost the lot of the people he created leaves us cold and unresponsive. The world has forgotten a thousand religious leaders who called themselves great and wrought wonders. It can never forget that suffering Messiah whom Peter came to know, and who enabled him to drink of the same cup and be baptized with the same baptism.

The history of the three active years of the Man of Galilee lies far behind us. The lips of the first confessor have long since turned to dust. But there are still "living stones, built into a spiritual house" where spiritual sacrifices are offered, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ, visible proof that we have followed no cunningly devised fable.

The largest church building debts carried over are: Centenary, $68,698.00; Crawford St., $58,000.00; Laurel, $44,500.00; Fifth St., $29,000.00; Millsaps Memorial, $15,900.00; Carthage, $15,500.00; Main St., $14,000.00; Glendale, $13,500.00; Canton, $13,000.00; Pearl River Ave., $12,400.00; Hazlehurst, $12,000.00; Natchez, $12,000.00; Broad St., $11,000.00.

Of the 154 charges in the conference 48 paid in full salaries of presiding elder and preacher. Of these 48, the following 11 also paid in full their assessment for General and Conference work: Brookhaven, Centenary, Pearl River Ave., Magee, Galloway Memorial, Millsaps Memorial, Glendale, Philadelphia Ct., Columbia, Gulfport, Port Gibson. This is a considerable improvement over 1933, when only three charges in the whole Conference paid General and Conference work in full, and only 25 paid salaries in full.

The congregation of Centenary, McComb, elicits admiration, in that, notwithstanding heaviest building debt, they have, in addition to respectable payments on the debt, right along answered in full the call for General and Conference work.

Scripture Lesson

Mat. 12:46-50—While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him. Then said one unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold, my mother and my brethren. For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

Meditation

Cain and Abel were brothers in the physical sense. Yet Cain slew his brother. Cain repudiated the obligation of kinship, "Am I my brother's keeper?" There was no spiritual basis.

Jacob and Esau were both the sons of Isaac. Yet Jacob tricked his brother out of his birthright and deceived his father Isaac. Only after the angel of God wrestled with Jacob at Jabbok was there a spiritual basis for fraternal relations with his brother.

Joseph had earthly brethren. Yet they sold him into bondage and told falsehoods to the aged Jacob, their Father. Later in Egypt, forgiving love established a spiritual basis for brotherly relations. The Jews said to Jesus, "Abraham is our father.' Jesus insisted, "If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham."

Jesus asked, "Who is my brother?" Study his answer: "Whosoever doeth the will of my Father which art in heaven." The spirit of brotherhood rests upon a common filial relationship to God. A spirit of fraternity rests upon a common paternity.

Dillinger was betrayed by a "friend." But partnership in sin can never build genuine friendship. Only fellowship in the service of God can build abiding friendship. It is based on unselfish love.

Prayer

May we love one another even as Christ loved us. May a common devotion to Christ spiritualize all of our affections. Then shall we have a sure basis for abiding friendship. Then shall we do more than recognize the rights of all mankind, we shall practice the principles of brotherhood.

TO THOSE . . .

To those who suffer, and have lain
Throughout the weary night in pain,
With parched lips and fevered brow
Place Thy cool hand upon them now.

To those who meet the day with dread,
Fearful of what may lay ahead,
Who anxious wait, with trembling heart,
We pray Thy grace and strength impart.

To those who, ere the shadows fall,
Shall hear their Father's homeward call,
Grant them that rest and holy peace
Where every pain and sorrow cease.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH OF MONROE OBSERVES CHRISTMAS SEASON

Our church was filled with the spirit of Christmas throughout every department and every organization. Beginning two months before Christmas the children brought their discarded toys and contributed them to the Wholesale Toy Shop conducted by the City Council of Social Agencies. Plans were made for Christmas baskets; Christmas trees for shut-ins; bulbs were planted in bowls so that they had flowers in the junior department to send to friends; many classes had their own Christmas parties and

"everywhere, everywhere—Christmas."

On Sunday morning, December 23, the pastor delivered a special sermon on "The Christmas Mind," with the choir rendering special music. Sunday evening at the evening hour of worship the play, "The Other Shepherd," a drama of that first Christmas, was presented to a large congregation. The attendance was so large that chairs were placed in the aisles and many stood in the doorways. The scene was a hill-side near Bethlehem and the story that of a shepherd boy who longed to leave the simple life of a shepherd and study in the Holy City to be a servant of God. His many duties of service, and ministries of love at home, cause him to postpone his journey many times, and at last the vision comes to him in his simple life as a shepherd boy. With the splendid assistance of the choir the play was most impressively presented as each character seemed to live "that night" anew.

Following the program at the church the young people of the senior department sang Christmas carols beneath the windows of several of our shut-ins and sick persons. As they visited each home a package of mints and a Christmas wish was left each shut-in.

So, all in all, Monroe First Church feels that it helped to make our little part of the world happier because of His birth and the joyous Christmas time.

In Memoriam

"While with ceaseless course the sun
Hasted through the circling year,
Many souls their race have run,
Nevermore to meet us here.
Fixed in an eternal state,
They have done with all below:
We a little longer wait,
But how little—none can know."

REV. C. C. WIER

AN APPRECIATION

In the passing of Rev. C. C. Wier, Louisiana Methodism has lost one of its most consecrated and effective leaders; the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage its devoted and inspiring founder; and the writer one of his closest personal friends. While no man could number the many deeds of kindness and mercy performed by this good man of God, the most notable achievement of his useful life was the founding and fostering of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. In the early years of the present century, years of great financial stress and hardship, Brother Wier begun the agitation for an orphanage owned and operated by the Methodist Church in Louisiana. Amidst great difficulties, almost heartless indifference, and many discouragements, with undaunted faith and persistent effort, he traveled over the state, preaching, pleading, persuading and begging, until he aroused enough interest, and secured enough funds to justify the erection of the first building, the incorporation of the Board of Directors, and the launching of the great work of the Orphanage. For personal reasons he was compelled to give up the work after spending four years in the field, laying deep and permanent the foundations of the institution. In accepting his resignation, the Louisiana Annual Conference, in its session held at Leesville, in December, 1908, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Resolved that in accepting the resignation of Rev. C. C. Wier as financial agent of the Orphan's Home, we express our very great appreciation of his earnest and successful service in behalf of this important enterprise. That we recognize him as the original projector of the Orphanage idea in the Louisiana Conference and its faithful promoter and champion during a number of years. That we rejoice with him in the prospect of the speedy fulfillment of his long cherished dream of providing a comfortable home for motherless and fatherless children." His interest in, and devotion to the Orphanage never waned to the day of his death. In every way he sought its best interest and was always ready to confer and co-operate in any and every plan for the betterment and advancement of the Orphanage work in Louisiana. For many years he was chairman of the Conference Orphanage Board, and an active member of the Board of Directors. It is most gratifying that during the last years of his life he was associated as pastor with one of the finished products of the great work he promoted. One of the graduate girls of the Orphanage, after teaching in a neighboring community, married a young man of Franklin, and established her home in his community. Brother Wier immediately became interested in her, and her fine Christian character was a source of very great joy to him.

While the work of the Orphanage was very dear to his heart, the Church and its work was never neglected at his hands. In every pastorate of his ministry the Church grew and the cause of Christ prospered. Quiet, unobtrusive, gentle and kindly of heart and nature, he quickly won his way into the hearts and affections of every congregation he served. His consecration to Christ, his high ideals of honor and integrity, his spotless personal habits, his unselfish consideration for others, gained and held the confidence and esteem of the people of all denominations and creeds. The presence of the Catholic Priest, the Episcopal Rector and the Presbyterian Minister at his funeral services was a high tribute to his fine Christian character. When the writer sent a telegram of condolence to the bereft widow, on learning of his death, the telegraph operator, a Frenchman and a Catholic, covered his face with his hands as the tears streamed down, and said in characteristic French brogue, "My God! He was a good man."

Like the Master he served well, "He went about doing good." No need to ask in song or prose "Will there be any stars" in his crown? The stars will be innumerable—the gems that bedeck his brow will glitter and sparkle throughout eternity. Great in heart, noble in spirit, generous in disposition, loyal and true to all the higher interests of life, enthusiastic and joyful, he inspired all he came in contact with, to the finer and better things of life. We will greatly miss him. Since his going, there is a feeling of loneliness that creeps over us. He understood as few could. He sympathized and inspired where others failed. We thank God for his great life.

SAMMY JACKSON

Miss Sammy Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Travis Jackson, of the Davis Springs community, Red River Parish, was suddenly killed in an automobile accident en route to Natchitoches, November 15. Accompanying Sammy was a friend, Mr. Jimmey Phillips, who was seriously injured.

Sammy was one of the sweetest girls we have ever known. She was a member of the Methodist church at Davis Springs, a fine leader among the young people, and a teacher in the Fairview Alpha high school.

Her death was a great shock to the entire community. She will be sadly missed. Besides her bereaved parents left to mourn her loss are four brothers and one sister.

Gone but not forgotten.

Her friend,

MRS. MARY E. REAGAN

On the evening of December 15, 1934, the spirit of one of Mississippi's most beloved daughters went home to God in the passing of Mrs. Mary E. Reagan, at the ripe age of 102 years, 2 months and 9 days. She is survived by one daughter, two sons, eleven grand-children, thirty-two great-grand-children and five great-grandchildren.

Sister Reagan was a life long member of the old Rocky Springs Methodist church of Claiborne County, Miss. She loved the church and never lost interest in the church and her ministry. Possibly she was the oldest reader of the Advocate in our Southland.

I hope some worthy and capable writer will presently furnish the Advocate with a memoir in keeping with the noble and beautiful life of this saint of God.

E. A. KING.

THE SCOTTISH RITE NEWS BUREAU reports that Mr. E. A. Tucker, who passed away recently at Clearwater, Fla., left by will $50,000 to the Educational Fund of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana. Also that Col. E. P. Bradley of Lexington, Ky., has provided the Christmas dinner for the Masonic Home of that State for fifteen years, and has given substantially to the Christmas fund in addition. This year his check was for $1,481.40. The interesting thing about these men is that neither of them is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

"A CAMPAIGN OF TERRORISM against teachers in American colleges, universities, schools and even private schools," is a charge which the McCormick-Dickstein Congressional Committee has been asked to investigate. It appears that the complaint grew out of recent happenings in Syracuse and Columbia Universities of New York State. It seems a little difficult to determine whether it is primarily a publicity stunt of the Hearst papers, or the beginning of a nation-wide Fascist campaign against freedom in American education. The request was signed by twenty-one educators, and among them was Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of Riverside Church, and a member of the faculty of Union Theological Seminary.

FASCISM NEXT? is the caption of a vigorous and outspoken editorial in Zion's Herald for January 2. It quotes the New York Times summary of the survey made by the Methodist Federation for Social Service, to the effect that the New Deal has decreased democracy in government and business by promoting a Fascist-like control of government over business. George Terborgh, former adviser of the Federal Reserve Board, is quoted as saying that the New Deal had actually retarded recovery; and the American Federation of Labor is given as authority for the statement that on October 1, there had been an increase of more than half a million in the number of unemployed, and that by February there would be approximately 22,000,000 persons in that classification. The Social Questions Bulletin is quoted as saying that corporation dividends have soared above those of any pre-depression year except 1929, and that they are three times as great as in 1913. Twenty-six more million dollar incomes were listed in 1933 than in 1932; but there was a shrinkage in the number of incomes in all brackets up to $25,000. If the facts are correctly stated, these are figures calculated to give pause to the boldest heart.

PRESS REPORTS FORECAST POSSIBLE DEFEAT of the monetary policy of the Administration by an adverse decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. One does not have to be expert on monetary matters to understand that such an eventuality would be a serious matter no less for the country at large than for the present Government. The plea of Attorney General Cummings against a decision that would mean a move toward "chaos," and the question raised concerning the change of contractual obligations by Congress, all have an ominous sound to un instructed ears. Let us hope that there may be such conclusion as shall do justice and at the same time protect the rights and interests of the millions not represented in other contract stipulations than those of patriotic loyalty.

"IRREDERMABLE HUMAN WRECKAGE" is the graphic term which the Christian Century applies to the list of unemployables presently to be turned back to state governments and local charities for permanent support. This very suggestive classification is made all the more ominous by the vast number of those who form this political and social liability. It is estimated that four million of those now on relief are unemployables and that one out of every thirty of the population of the United States must be accepted as the social wards of the nation and as a permanent responsibility. One wonders if this suggestion may not be a commentary upon the mendicancy created by the program of relief which has been pursued.

WESLEY'S CHAPEL AND THE TOMB OF MR. WESLEY have come to be shrines of widest interest and veneration. Not long ago Rev. Kugimiya, of the Toyomaka Methodist Church of Japan, paid a visit to these scenes of historic interest; and upon his return, he wrote to a Japanese newspaper: "I was greatly impressed by its simplicity and yet grandeur." He commented upon the difference of the interior of the Chapel from Church of England arrangement. He says: "I was struck by the arrangement of the altar for receiving the Sacrament. I would very much like to have similar arrangements for our churches in Japan. Going into the Chapel I noticed two young men kneeling in prayer. The sight greatly impressed me." He then visited the tomb of Mr. Wesley of which he says: "I was deeply moved at the remembrance of that devoted man. The following Sunday, attending the services, was one of the most memorable of my life."

EDITORIAL

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

One of the popular and easy American pastimes is the criticism of public servants and their official pronouncements. It is not the purpose of the editor to indulge that spirit; but the President's Message to Congress is a document in which every citizen of the nation has a vital personal interest; and we discuss it rather from that angle. The Message is too lacking in details to warrant a critical estimate of its full significance. It is a kind of flare of trumpets which will be interpreted by the special messages to follow. Aside from the social theories which have been stated before, there is implied a rather surprising admission that the relief measures of the last two years have not contributed to economic recovery, but have been rather of a disintegrating tendency. The relief is described as "narcotic" and "a subtle destroyer of the human spirit." Of the five million people now on the relief roll, the President proposes to return one and one-half million to state and private agencies for permanent support as unemployables. The remaining three and one-half million "employables" he accepts courageously and optimistically as a national responsibility, and for whom he gives a seven-point program of Federal employment. The chief factors in the scheme are rural housing, rural electrification, reforestation and national highways, through which he hopes to find means of employment until such a time as these may be reabsorbed into private industries. He proposes a wage more substantial than the relief provision, but still not enough to militate against an earnest quest for private employment. If we were asked to name the most impressive declaration in the entire message, we would say that it is, "The morale of the nation has been restored." For how good a reason this may be so, we are not able to say; but we feel absolutely certain that it is true, and that is at least progress. The Message closes with a confession of faith in the primacy and permanence of spiritual values. We would not call it a great document, and it probably lacks a note of certainty, but it has the ring of courage and hope.

CHURCH NUDISM

Some time ago a popular magazine carried an article on the very suggestive title of "Literary Nudism." The writer of that article makes a timely attack upon the ruthless and shameless disregard of the conventions of thought and speech which had so large a part in the making of our civilization. Much as we believe the attack to be justified by the inane and unwholesome fiction sent out from the presses of mercenary publishers, it is not our purpose to discuss the literary phase of that issue. We are thinking rather of the tendency to break down the appeal of religion and the church by a tone of irreverence and even disrespect. There has arisen an unconfessed belligerence, indicated in the use of offensive figures with a more offensive suggestion, which invites reproach for the church. There is a disposition to drag the church through the back alleys of thought and speech rather than bear it up in faith and prayer. The diluted good grudgingly acknowledged is neutralized by evil suggestion; and a professed benevolence of purpose is defeated by the very opposition and suspicion which is raised. No considerate and devoted parent would strip his child and reveal its deformities to the public gaze. He takes it lovingly and in the secrecy of his sorrow and hope to the threshold of the best scientific and medical help that he knows. Regardless of its fault, the hope of the world is associated with the life of the church. Through its life and evangel the light and appeal of the gospel is known. Shall we not, therefore, emphasize its virtues and support it with our daily intercession? We can lengthen its arm of service and increase the volume of its message of hope.

FORWARD MARCH!

A certain popular magazine describes a reactionary as "One who keeps his eyes fixed on the glorious past and backs into the future." Whatever fault one may find with this humorous characterization, it at least has the virtue of being descriptive. We are wondering if this humorous sentence might not be offered as a description of the attitude of many who seek earnestly to be devout, and if there is not an urge toward the monastic in the very meditations through which we seek to make real and personal the presence of God. To be sure, no one can afford to neglect the cultivation of his inner life; but, to use a phrase of the late Dr. J. H. Jowett, there is a "practice of the presence of God" which must be the objective side of our spiritual communion. Mr. Wesley's criticism of the Moravians, to whom he was sincerely devoted for the intense spiritual discipline of their lives, was their deadly inaction. This attitude he called the "spawn of mystic divinity." Mr. Wesley himself was a man of great spiritual intensity; but it never subtracted from his interest and activity for the social and material betterment of the people. Indeed his own quickened spirit constantly urged him onward in the work of sharing his experience with others. Surely the followers of Mr. Wesley today are living in a no less exacting age. We must keep the flame of spiritual fervor and devotion lighted upon the altar of our own hearts; we can not afford to lose interest in our glorious past; but the light of Christian experience is potential and blessed only as it shines ahead. "The field is white unto the harvest" is ever the call of the redeemed heart.

THE TRAIL OF THE CIRCUIT RIDER

The Trail of the Circuit Rider, now appearing in the Advocate, is a connected story of the origin and history of the Methodist Church. A better understanding of the work can be had, perhaps, by keeping the papers and reading each chapter as a whole. Chapter I is devoted entirely to John Wesley as the founder of the movement. The author expects to publish the work in book form, and he invites criticism of a helpful and constructive type. He can not undertake correspondence, but he would like to know your opinions and the reasons for them, authorities, whether he is able to agree with them or not. The primary purpose is to write history, and if you know facts that he has missed, you are invited to bring them to his attention.

NOTICE

The editor of the Advocate would like to secure a picture of the General Conference of 1844, held in New York; and of the General Conference of 1866 of the Southern Church, which was held in New Orleans, if such are in existence. Anyone having such a picture, please communicate with the editor, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ADJOURNED SESSION

Pursuant to the action of the Mississippi Conference at its recent session in Hattiesburg, the Conference is called to meet in adjourned session in Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., at 10 a. m., Thursday, January 31, 1935.

MR. C. O. CHALMERS ILL

Friends of Mr. C. O. Chalmers throughout Mississippi and Louisiana will regret to learn that he is in the hospital following a heart attack on last Saturday. His condition, at the time of our going to press, is reported as unchanged. Friends of the Advocate will remember this faithful and honored servant of the Church in earnest prayer for his recovery.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURE

Secretary Wallace, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, according to the Information Service of the Federal Council, in a recent address presented statistics showing that in 1850 sixty-three per cent of the population were engaged in agriculture, agriculturists received only a thirty-five per cent share in the total national income. In 1900 the agricultural population had fallen to thirty-six per cent, with a twenty per cent share in the income. In 1920 a twenty-six per cent agricultural population received fourteen per cent of the income. In 1923 a twenty-three per cent agricultural population shared to the extent of only eight per cent in the national income. Whatever else may be deduced from these figures, they certainly imply that agriculture has never had an equitable share of the national income; and the descending scale of its participation is not calculated to promote the "back to the farm" movement.

LET METHODISM BE TRUE TO HER HERITAGE

"I am not afraid that the people called Methodists should ever cease to exist either in Europe or America. But I am afraid lest they should exist only as a dead sect, having the form of religion without the power. And this undoubtedly will be the case unless they hold fast the doctrine, spirit, and discipline with which they first set out."

JOHN WESLEY,

OUR BONDS AND BENEVOLENCES

By T. W. Holloman,
Chairman Conference Board of Christian Education

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate will be found the minutes of a joint meeting of the Bishop and his Cabinet and the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Christian Education.

I would like to express the hope that every minister of our Conference will read this document, then read it to his congregations and then make it a matter of discussion with his quarterly conference.

The committee representing the bondholders met us in a fair, open-minded and helpful manner. A very great concession has been made. The Conference authorized this bond issue and the interest rate was  $6\frac{1}{2}\%$ . In remitting  $3\frac{1}{2}\%$  interest over the period involved, the bondholders are relieving the Conference of some \$23,000.00 of this obligation.

That every effort should be made to liquidate these bonds is evident when it is known that $20,000 of the Conference $60,000 apportionment for Conference work is devoted to the Conference debts. To give impetus to the start made a year ago, we have agreed to pay $5,000 on the principal this year. To do this, the $20,000 apportionment must yield more than $12,000 or 60c on the dollar.

Our Methodist benevolent dollar in Louisiana was worth about 40c last year. Is there any reason why it should not be worth 100c this year and henceforth? The total apportionment for all benevolences, $100,000, is less than $2.00 per member; that is less than 4c per week per member. I am convinced that if every preacher and one layman in every church had the matter on his conscience, the benevolences would be paid in full.

Our General Conference has taken the ministry and laity into its confidence. It has put the benevolences on a voluntary basis. It has expressed its faith that the Church will voluntarily assume what is needed for the ongoing program and then will pay it. Have we the devotion to do it?

I could make a much better argument for the payment of the apportionment for other causes, missions, superannuates, etc., but after all, if we are not absolutely honest in our efforts to pay our debts, are we going to make much headway with these other great objectives? All of the $299,000.00 of these bonds is due.

If we are to succeed, some things are necessary.

1. The Biblical injunction for the strong to help the weak must be practiced. Able churches should increase the suggested apportionments in order to assist the weak. But the apportionments should be submitted by the District Stewards on as equitable a basis as possible, in the beginning, as the law contemplates.

2. Presiding elders, preachers in charge and informed laymen should get to the people more information about our benevolent causes and about our voluntary plan.

3. A thorough canvass of the Church membership must be made. Without this the apportionment will not be subscribed or paid. The law of the Church makes it the duty of every Woman's Missionary Society, every Church school, every Bible class and every other organization to aid the Stewards in doing this and to put the securing and paying of these pledges together with the salary of the minister and the other local church budget items in the very first place in their efforts.

4. Offerings must be paid weekly, or at worst monthly. There is no other way to succeed. I know a church in this Conference which paid its budget expenses monthly last year. On the first of each month, on the order of its Board, a percentage was set aside for its debt, a percentage was set aside and remitted at once for its benevolences, a percentage was set aside and used to pay salaries and other local expenses. It was done by the simple expedient of getting subscribed a budget to cover and of getting the people to pay weekly.

Let's stop the payment of interest at Nashville. Let's pay our benevolences monthly just as we do or should do our preachers. And let's pay our preachers monthly and give them a fair chance to live. Both of these things can be done. With a recognition by both ministers and laymen of the stewardship of income, of time and of energy, it can be done this year, and we can go to Conference and hold up our heads and say a Methodist dollar in Louisiana is worth 100c.

PASTORS, ATTENTION!

Any pastor knowing of veterans who might be coming to the Base Hospital in Pineville, at any time, if they will let me know and give the name of the one coming, I will give them special attention.

THE JOINT MEETING

A joint meeting of the Bishop and his Cabinet and the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Christian Education was held in the Methodist Church, Shreveport, Louisiana, on January 3, 1935, at 2 p. m.

Present: Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, all of the presiding elders, and six of the seven members of said Executive Committee. Bishop Dobbs presided.

The object of the joint session was to give consideration to the Conference Bond Issues and to the resolution of the last Annual Conference, suggesting that steps be taken looking toward the liquidation of this indebtedness.

It was the view of all present that a payment should be made this year on the principal of the obligation, and that if the bondholders would make a concession in the interest rate, such principal payment could be made out of the proceeds of the apportionment on the Conference for these bonds. It was also believed that such action would stimulate the ministers and laymen throughout the Conference to renewed efforts to bring up all accepted Conference apportionments in full, and would make possible a larger effort next year.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

The Executive Committee of the Board of Christian Education is authorized to submit to the bankers representing the holders of $205,000.00 of said bonds (being all of said bonds except $94,000.00 owned by Centenary College), the following proposition:

If such bondholders will remit the interest in excess of 3% that is now past due and will accept 3% interest for the year 1935, the Church agrees:

1st. To pay such bondholders at once 3% interest from January 1, 1934, to January 1, 1935.

2nd. By February 1, 1935, to pay said bondholders the sum of $2,500.00 to be applied to principal.

3rd. To pay such bondholders 3% interest for the year 1935, and to pay $5,000.00 additional on principal by the end of the year 1935.

4th. If the apportionment laid on the Annual Conference for 1935 for the Conference indebtedness brings in a sum in excess of the interest and principal mentioned in No. 3, plus the interest on the Mansfield College mortgage at 3%, and plus the contract interest on outstanding annuity bonds, then such excess will also be paid such bondholders on principal.

5th. To make an earnest effort to make a more substantial payment on principal during 1936, striving to bring such payment to at least $10,000.00.

Thereupon the members of the Executive Committee were excused and called upon said bankers.

After a conference, they returned and stated that the bankers, speaking through Messrs. Querbes and Harmon, accepted this proposition, but, in doing so, expressed their belief that the Church should arrange for a five-year liquidation of this indebtedness, and to that end they desired that prior to the 1935 Annual Conference session, another meeting should be called by Bishop Dobbs, at which such matter might be discussed and planned.

The report of the said Executive Committee was thereupon adopted and approved by the joint session.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Every Christian needs balance. There are so many daily happenings to throw them off the track. A steadfast belief that God has power to help them and give victory is the best of all possessions. None of us know when we are going to feel a jolt which will test every thing in us! Too, the idea that one is working with the Lord and not for Him, gives added confidence. The Lord is not a task master driving us to our limit, but He is working with us to make possible the victory of right. All too many have seen the Giant and are afraid or they have fallen and are now creeping along afraid to stand again. Multitudes have fallen away from prayer meetings, church attendance, public prayer and regular gifts, all because they did not have a balancing force in times of stress.

There is a fine distinction between injured pride and hurt feelings. A betrayed confidence really hurts sincere people. To have some one take up a reproach against you and peddle it free bruises the sensitive soul. All people are not alike except in mass; there is infinite variety in persons of different views, inheritance, environment, mental fiber and spiritual life. One may be as tender as a little child and another as tough as an alligator. It behooves us to be careful lest we offend in many ways. On the other hand there is a "Balm in Gilead" for every wounded soul. Injured pride is hard to endure, either seeing it or possessing it. It comes from an imaginary self-importance. "Thinking of himself more highly than he ought to think, thus not being sober." Just here the devil finds multitudes of victims. A person with injured pride is almost a fatal case except a season of repentance be found.

meeting. He continued this form of personal supervision of the membership at least to 1787, when he describes it as an "unpleasing work" and says that he still continues the visitation in London, Bristol, Dublin and Cork. The first annual conference convened at the Foundry in London, June 25, 1744, and it was entertained at the home of Lady Huntingdon where John Wesley preached from, "What hath God wrought?" Six clergymen were present: John and Charles Wesley, John Hodges, Henry Piers, John Meriton and Samuel Taylor. The first day, after the Conference had convened, Thomas Richards, Thomas Maxfield, John Bennet and John Downes, lay preachers, were invited and sat with the clergymen, and that seems to be the most that is known of its membership. The discussions of the Conference revolved about their spiritual quest, and the very week that followed we find them purging the society of those who were not living according to the Gospel. With the organization of the annual Conference, the frame work of Methodist organization was practically complete and the church was definitely on the highroad to ecclesiastical independence. For, in the end, the completeness and the self-sufficiency of Methodist polity, not the Deed of Declaration, was responsible for the separation of the Societies from the Church of England.

While Mr. Wesley was adapting his polity to the emergencies that arose, he was not unmindful of the preparation necessary to equip his people for the larger field into which they would certainly come. He, therefore, set himself to the task of developing educational agencies to serve the Methodist people. Kingswood school for the children of the colliers was established in 1739, and in 1748 it was enlarged to include a school for the training of preachers. The regulations prescribed allowed of no relaxation whatever. One writer says that the students were put through a course of learning that would not have disgraced the Sorbonne, and, as a relaxation, they were sometimes permitted to see a corpse. The administration of the school was one of the difficult tasks of Mr. Wesley's life, but there can be no doubt that its influence was a distinct factor in the building of Methodism.

One of the most valuable aids to Mr. Wesley and his work was the printing press. No man ever made greater or more effective use of it as a means for disseminating knowledge than he did. His publishing activities were as remarkable as the man himself. His own works occupied fourteen large octavo volumes; he published one hundred and seventeen revisions and abridgements of other works; and in collaboration with Charles Wesley, he published forty-seven poetical tracts and volumes. It would not be extravagant to say that the publishing work carried on by Mr. Wesley would have filled the measure of an ordinary life, but with him it appeared to have been almost a recreation.

One of the most remarkable features of the Methodist establishment is the itinerant system of ministerial supply. Like other Wesleyan practices, it was simply a means for meeting the ever increasing need of the work; and it was copied after Mr. Wesley's activity in the field. While the founder of the church lived, he was the absolute director of the army of itinerants; but at his death that power passed by the Deed of Declaration to the Conference and there it remains.

No more beautiful tribute was ever paid to the administrative genius, or to the justness of a great leader than was paid by an eminent lawyer to John Wesley. He said: "The only government, so far as it was a government, that the Methodists recognized, rested in his will, and reposed, and confidently and safely reposed, upon his virtue and piety. He appointed the preachers. In him was vested the property of the Church. He controlled it in everything; and the members who devotedly followed him were too happy to live under the government of such a man." This statement does not mean that there were no dissensions in the ranks of Methodism under Mr. Wesley; but it does mean that when the doings of his life were examined a half-century after his death, the integrity of his heart was unquestioned.

Following the completion of the framework of Methodist government, the societies moved on in ever widening circles and with unabated passion for the salvation of the people. But the success achieved did not secure for Mr. Wesley and his preachers either respect or protection. There was not a corner of Britain where they were free from insults. For the first ten or fifteen years, Mr. Wesley was subjected to every variety of rudeness and indignity, from being hooted at and cried down to that of physical violence. Rowland Hill called him "A venal profligate," "a wicked slanderer," "an apostate miscreant," and "a grey-headed enemy of all righteousness." And Augustus Toplady, the author of "Rock of Ages," was not less violent in his abuse. Gradually, however, Mayors, Magistrates, Judges, and even King George II came to the rescue of the Methodists. King George said in the Council: "I tell you, while I sit on the throne, no man shall be persecuted for conscience sake."

When mob violence failed to suppress the Wesleyan Revival the clergy, except a few staunch friends of Mr. Wesley, refused him the use of their churches, although he was a fully ordained man whose life was above reproach. When the church at Epworth was denied him he stood on the corner of his father's grave-stone and preached; and when others were refused him he took to the fields and preached to the people by thousands. It is a very simple matter to close a church, but to close the hungry hearts of the people is not so easily done. The Revival swept over England like a prairie fire on the Western plains; and Mr. Wesley, opposed as he was, soon came to have the greatest personal following of any preacher in England, not excepting George Whitefield. The spread of the Methodist movement did not incline the clergy to give up the fight, and it became the consistent practice of nearly all of them to refuse the holy communion to the Methodists. Even Mr. Wesley himself was repelled. In refusing the communion to the Methodists, they denied both the ministry of Mr. Wesley and the experience of the people. But the flame of revival passion burned undiminished despite the unseemly exclusion of Methodist communicants from the altars of the Church.

As a last weapon of offense, the bishops refused to ordain any of Mr. Wesley's preachers. It would be unjust not to recognize the canonical restrictions in episcopal ordinations; but it is not a sufficient apology for the bishops to say that the lay preachers were uneducated. Many of the lower clergy in the Church were paid less than twenty pounds per year, and they were not better educated than their poorest parishioners. It is foolish to bow to the conceits based upon the fiction of a divinely imparted authority when that authority is being misused for the suppression of a manifest work of God. The whole attitude of the Establishment was such as to lose to it the sympathy of the world. High ecclesiastics indulged in anonymous diatribes against the Methodists; and a great historic Church deliberately thrust away its opportunity for the religious leadership of the world. So, hand in hand with Francis of Assisi and Ignatius Loyola, John Wesley marched to fame.

Methodist preaching and practice were less readily accepted by the Presbyterian bred Scotch, and the progress of the Revival encountered a different but no less determined resistance. Nevertheless, Mr. Wesley laid a foundation in Scotland which the changes of the years have not been sufficient to destroy. He spent a part of the last summer of his life in Scotland; one of his last pictures was made in Edinburgh; and he preached in Aberdeen, June 25, 1790, just eight months before his death.

The Irish were more responsive to Wesleyan evangelism than were the Scotch, but resistance was not less positive and certainly not of a more dignified type. The Methodists gained a solid footing among the volatile Irish, and Mr. Wesley was very strongly attached to them. From Ireland came some of the most devout and able leaders of the Wesleyan movement; and from the early days, the people across the channel formed a staunch and dependable factor in the mighty revival which developed its message and power in the middle of the eighteenth century. American Methodists are indebted to Ireland for Philip Embury, Robert Strawbridge, Edward Drumgoole, Richard Boardman and others who were the pioneers in bringing the Revival to this side of the Atlantic.

The property and control of the United Societies were held and directed as the personal business of Mr. Wesley. This policy had distinct values at the beginning; for Methodism had neither legal nor ecclesiastical standing. At an early period, Mr. Wesley developed what he called "Model deeds for chapels," by which he settled each parcel of ground or property upon trustees to hold for the use of "THE CONFERENCE OF THE PEOPLE CALLED METHODISTS." These Deeds stipulated that he should hold the power to make appointments for the chapels as long as he lived, and that power to pass to Charles Wesley and to William Grimshaw in the order named, should they survive him. This was but another device of his for solidifying his work and harmonizing its administration. The peril of the scheme lay in the fact that the deeds provided no permanent succession; and if he should die without making a transfer of his rights, the entire movement would disintegrate.

The danger of this situation became more acute and alarming as Mr. Wesley grew older. It was first brought to the attention of the Conference in connection with a controversy over Birstal chapel, where for some unknown reason the deed provided that after the death of John and Charles Wesley and William Grimshaw, the trustees were to elect their preachers monthly and such preachers were to have the sole occupancy of the chapel. This controversy continued through a period of two years, and it had a very disquieting effect upon the Conference. Mr. Wesley's health brought further alarm in 1783. In March of that year, he was seriously ill at Stroud for four days; and at the Conference in Bristol, beginning July 29, he was stricken again, and for eighteen days he was in a very precarious condition. At this juncture, Dr. Coke secured the opinion of legal counsel regarding the necessity for a succession; and the Conference took action calling upon Mr. Wesley to interpret the phrase: "The Conference of the People Called Methodists," contained in the "Model Deeds," so as to secure a succession for the three hundred and fifty-nine chapels then held under those deeds.

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. C. A. Northington of Pickens and Goodman charge is much encouraged over the prospect in that field. He says that people are very responsive to his efforts.

Rev. Ivan O. Donaldson is very happy at Montrose, La. He is looking forward to a happy year and a year of service in carrying forward the entire program of the Church.

Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Columbus District, will have the sympathy of friends throughout Mississippi, in the loss of his sister. She died at Cleveland, Miss., on January 5.

The Christmas pageant given by the Morgan City, La., church was a great success, according to an extended account in the Morgan City Review. Rev. David Tarver is the pastor of the congregation.

Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth of Tutwiler charge sends us a schedule for the charge for the year. Preaching services, revivals, the budget and membership statistics are included—everything except, We did it, Bishop.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles is reported to be beginning enthusiastically and effectively at First Church, Columbus, Miss. Dr. Broyles will have a great opportunity in that splendid church—one of the outstanding churches of Mississippi.

The Prairie Methodist Church, according to Rev. W. M. Jones, the pastor, shipped a carload of hay to the Methodist Orphanage for a Christmas present. The reindeers must be fed, and the alfalfa hay of that section is of the best.

Rev. W. F. Roberts, who was recently appointed to Franklin charge, Louisiana Conference, reached his new field on Thursday of last week. This information comes in a letter to the editor just prior to Brother Roberts' leaving Dubach.

Hon. Felder Cook of Denver, Colorado, spent the holidays with homefolk in Mississippi. His visit was saddened, however, by the recent death of his only single sister, Miss Cora Cook, an accomplished contralto singer of Brooklyn, New York.

Dr. A. M. Serex of Minden, La., says that his Board "warmed up" to the support of the Advocate quite readily, and that its apportionment was adopted enthusiastically. Dr. Serex is doing a splendid work there as he has done in all the fields where he has labored.

Dr. Michael T. Maretta and Miss Agnes Inez Eubanks, of Algiers, were married on January 4, at the parsonage, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Eubanks, both of whom are valued members of the Algiers Methodist Church.

We regret to learn of the continued illness of Mrs. J. R. Countiss. Dr. Countiss reports that she is just now clear of fever and that she is making headway toward recovery. Dr. Countiss says that the preachers of the district are making a serious business of organizing for the work of the year.

Rev. B. C. Taylor reports that his fourth year is beginning in a very fine way and that he expects this to be the best of the four. Miss Mathilde Killingsworth has been employed as a student worker at the Normal College, and that work is being made a primary feature of the work for the year.

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis reports the budgeting of the Advocate at Brookhaven where he is pastor. He also reports the observance of College Day a week in advance of the times designated. The church bulletin for last Sunday carries a very interesting appreciation of the work being done at Millsaps College.

Rev. Jesse F. Watkins, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but now of Melrose, New Mexico, writes the editor that he has gone without the New Orleans Advocate as long as he can stand it. He speaks beautifully of the faces that he misses and of the voices that are hushed since he left Mississippi.

Mrs. B. P. Brooks of Belzoni, Miss., president of the Woman's Missionary Society of North Mississippi, informs the editor of her own illness and of the serious and extended illness of her daughter. We regret that it has been so, but join with their many friends in the prayer that better days may soon arrive for both.

Rev. Albert A. Collins writes that Bernice and Farmerville charge has held its first quarterly conference and that the amount assumed for General and Conference work was in excess of the amount paid last year. But best of all, he announces the arrival on January 4, of a little daughter, Grace Lynette. The Advocate extends congratulations and all good wishes.

At the first quarterly conference, Mantachie charge, North Mississippi Conference, where Rev. L. P. Jumper is in his fifth year, reports showed the charge to be in the best condition of any previous year. The financial report was especially good. A system of church finances has been introduced. This shows that rural churches can have a workable financial plan as well as town churches.

The statistical reports from the North Mississippi Conference show that the following charges paid their apportionments for conference collections in full: Amory, Tupelo, Columbus First Church, Louisville, High Point, Corinth First Church, Iuka Station, New Albany, Ripley, Clarksdale, Cleveland, Tunica, Greenwood First Church, and Como. All praise is due these churches for their determination to carry on the benevolent work of the church in spite of all hindrances.

Charges in North Mississippi Conference where fifty or more members were received are: Tupelo, 260; Salem, 81; Fulton, 54; Greenwood Springs, 54; Columbus First Church, 73; Chester, 51; Louisville, 113; Booneville Circuit, 156; Mantachie, 59; Clarksdale, 86; Greenwood First Church, 109; Winona, 59. The six churches having the largest number of members are: Greenwood, 1,254; Tupelo, 1,190; Columbus First Church, 1,141; Clarksdale, 1,100; Starkville, 920; Corinth First Church, 907.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Mrs. H. McMullan

It was our privilege to attend the regular business meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of McComb Centenary. It was indeed a pleasure to hear the reports of this wide-awake auxiliary, also the announcement that they would be on the honor roll. The theme for the opening devotional was "Stewardship." Our attention being called to the fact that we are to present our bodies a living sacrifice and holy, then the fact that we possess according to the grace that is given us. We were admonished not to be slothful in the business of the Woman's Missionary Society, though we may grow tired in the way let us not grow tired of the way and press forward.

We thought this a very fitting precedence of the installation of the officer for the new year. After singing the Doxology the benediction was given by forming a circle with clasped hands while we numbered and repeated Gal. 6:2. There was 48 present.

Mrs. J. W. Perry in her letter to the auxiliary presidents, says: "A book could be filled with achievements of the past year. A larger one could be written on the opportunities and the calls for service that await us with the coming of the New Year. A whole world of problems confront us. It is needless for me to recount the perplexing conditions in the world today. You are quite familiar with the distress and suffering everywhere, the wrongs that must be righted, the doubts and fears to be banished, the heart hunger of men and women for some power that will save. The thought of it all brings a feeling of impotence and helplessness, and if undertaken in our strength would bring failure and dismay. But we have the resources of an almighty Father upon which to rely. These resources are waiting for channels through which to be released in a triumphant flood of justice and mercy and good will. May each member of our Woman's Missionary Society respond by saying, "Here am I, use me."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

So many inquiries have reached us regarding the continued use of the Blessing Boxes for Houma Scholarships, that we think it advisable to make the following statement:

The Woman's Missionary Council at its session in Birmingham passed a resolution asking the auxiliaries to assist in promoting a family missionary project through the use of Blessing Boxes, not as a Missionary Society enterprise, but as a church-wide co-operative effort for missionary education and support.

This word from Mrs. Bourne's folder: "As each member of the family is to participate in the project, the Council felt that it should be promoted by the General Department of the Board of Missions, and we promised to lend ourselves to its promotion with the understanding that the funds gathered should be used for the General Department and not for supporting the work of the Council."

While waiting for plans to be perfected for this church-wide campaign our Louisiana Conference used Blessing Boxes for promoting Houma Scholarships. That we may give our fullest co-operation to this plan of the General Board of Missions, and avoid any confusion that may result from the use of other Blessing Boxes, we ask that you discontinue the use of Blessing Boxes for Houma Scholarships as a Conference project.

Perhaps some emphasis upon "Houma Day Offering will provide a fund equal to that given through the Blessing Boxes.

Your pastor or district secretary will supply the Blessing Boxes, free of charge and with full details of their purpose and use.

What Better Background

Could a Laxative Have!

Civilized man has tried thousands of remedies for constipation, but comparatively few have held their place in reputable medical use and retained approval in medical literature. From among these few highly favored laxatives—favor established by many years of successful use in this and other countries—are selected the ingredients which are combined in Thedford's Black-Draught. Such a scientific, dependable background should encourage any one needing a laxative to try purely vegetable Thedford's Black-Draught. It is popular because it brings such refreshing relief without being expensive.

MOTHERS...watch CHILD'S COLD

COMMON colds often settle in throat and chest where they may become dangerous. Don't take chances—at the first snuffle rub on Children's Musterole.

Children's Musterole is just good old Musterole, only in milder form. It penetrates the skin with a warming tingle and goes to the seat of trouble.

It gets such marvelous results because it's NOT just a salve, but a "counter-irritant"—quick and helpful in drawing out pain and congestion.

Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Tested and approved by Good House-keeping Bureau, No. 4867.

THE "NEW PLAN" FOR LAYMEN

There can be little reasonable doubt as to the correctness of the theory implied in the increased responsibility recently placed upon the laymen of our Church. The real business of the ministry is to make itself as unnecessary as possible by helping to make the laity as efficient as possible. There has been in recent years a noticeably growing belief among the more thoughtful members of our connection that the techniques employed by the church should give greater recognition to the potential leadership among church laymen. Part of the response to this growing conviction is seen in the recent adoption of the "new financial plan" of our Church.

Any plan that is "correct in theory" is destined to become "correct in practice" if such a plan is really practiced religiously. It remains to be seen whether or not all of the groups whose co-operation is essential to the successful operation of the "new plan" are religious enough to make a good plan successful. Time and patience will be required for this. Furthermore, it will be necessary for those who pass accurate judgment upon the merits of the plan to take and to keep a rather long-time view of the whole program of the Church. In this connection it should be kept in mind that the statement often heard in church circles, "The most important thing now is for the church to get the money," represents a false and a subtly dangerous view of church finance.

In addition to the respective general and conference agencies which are specifically instructed to give all possible assistance to the promotion of the laymen's work of our Church, the presiding elder, the pastor, the district lay leader and his associates, and the chairman of the local church board of stewards are all related to the work in such a way that the failure of any one of these practically entails the failure of all of them so far as making the plan of work operate successfully is concerned.

Since the presiding elder has general oversight of the work of his district and since he is specifically charged with the responsibility of giving counsel and leadership to his district board of lay activities, it seems correct to say that there can hardly be a worthwhile district-wide lay movement that does not get its initial momentum from the presiding elder.

It should be needless to say that the pastor's hearty approval of the plan and his earnest co-operation therein are indispensable to even a fairly successful operation of it. Let each pastor first make sure that he has studied his copy of the Church Discipline with sufficient thoroughness to understand the various features of the laymen's work himself and then let him lead in the effort to have all of his really interested stewards and other church officials become familiar with these features.

It should likewise be evident that every lay leader, whether he be district, associate, or charge lay leader, must develop a "district consciousness" if he is to make a worthwhile contribution to the lay work of his district.

If every link in the chain is strong the chain will not break, but will pull the load, which in the case of lay activities should prove to be a load delightful and strengthening to pull.

A. C. MADDOX,

Alexandria District Lay Leader.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CONFERENCE LAY LEADER OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: It appears that we have entered upon the present Conference year with a more serious determination, a fuller appreciation of our great opportunities, and a more hopeful attitude toward the affairs of the Church. As officials and leaders we must keep this up. Something more is needed than mere approval of programs or passing resolutions. If we are to participate in redeeming the times and strengthening the power of the Church in the world, there must be manifest a genuinely prayerful, consistent, studious, and co-operative attitude and habit.

A larger proportion of our membership should be awakened to such a vital interest in the affairs of the Church that they will find pleasure in reading its literature and attendance on those gatherings where its plans and work are discussed. Certainly every member of a board of stewards should appreciate the honor of his position sufficiently to plan attendance on its meetings when possible, and find some satisfaction in consideration of the matters concerning which it has responsibility. Too often inadequate time is given to the study of matters of the most vital importance because of haste to adjourn after the least possible business has been transacted, the reports of committees and the treasurer have been heard and it is learned how far the monthly collections are short.

Where pastors and lay leaders feel and express to the stewards their appreciation of the value of the pamphlet, "The Board of Stewards," by G. L. Morelock, the individual members of the boards will be more likely to give it a careful reading, which will certainly be helpful. Lay leaders have been provided with sufficient number of these pamphlets to supply every steward and other official in the Conference. With each has been supplied "Southern Methodism Serving the World," by J. E. Crawford. We should make an effort to get some fruits from this distribution of valuable literature. "Financial Recovery in the Local Church" is a book that should be studied at this time in every church. It could be read at the board meetings by giving thirty minutes to one chapter or portions of several chapters at each meeting. It requires too much effort, repeated year after year, to induce even a small proportion of our membership to subscribe (Continued on page 15)

ATTENTION—MISSISSIPPI METHODISTS

At the recent meeting of the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference, plans were made for the Missionary Institutes and the dates were set for the Education Institutes and for the district conferences. I am giving below a complete schedule of these meetings with the place where each is to be held so far as that could be determined at this time.

It was decided that each district missionary institute would be planned as a combined missionary institute and stewards' institute. All members of the church are invited to these meetings and the following official members are urged to be present: pastors, Church school superintendents, chairmen and members of missionary committees, presidents and members of the Woman's Missionary Society, and all stewards and lay leaders.

The Board of Missions has informed us that Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis will be the guest speakers at these meetings. The chief emphasis at each institute will be upon Missions and Evangelism. We are hoping and expecting a large attendance of our people, and inspiration that will be of great value to all of us.

VICTOR G. CLIFFORD, Secretary.

LIGHT DRINKER DRIVING MENACE

Even the moderate drinker is a menace on the highways, according to Dr. H. Evert Kendig, of the School of Pharmacy of Temple University.

Dr. Kendig offers scientific proof that his contention is right.

"Laboratory experiments show," Dr. Kendig asserts, "that from the time the eye begins to record the object until the impulse is transferred to the brain and thence to the nerves and muscles—such as applying the brakes, or turning an automobile—one-fifth of a second, under normal conditions, has elapsed."

A drink of liquor or beer, according to Dr. Kendig, will increase the lapse of time. "which means the driver, who has had a drink, is much more likely to have an accident than is the non-drinker."

Citing statistics, Dr. Kendig said during the first nine months of 1934 in Pennsylvania, there has been an increase of 93 per cent in automobile accidents in which liquor was a contributing factor.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON— JANUARY 20

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

PETER'S LESSON IN HUMBLE SERVICE

The Scene—The upper room was secured and made ready for the use of the Master and his disciples. Supper was prepared, but no menial servant to attend the guests and wash their feet. The disciples waited and disputed which of them should be greatest in the kingdom which they felt sure was about to be inaugurated. For one of them to have engaged in the needed attention to tired, dusty feet would have been, as they saw it, an admission of inferiority, an admission each was too proud to make. They had not learned that the God who rules is the God who serves, nor that his followers are not primarily called to be rulers, officers, orators, nor preachers, but servers—servants.

The Acted Parable—When Jesus rose, the disciples probably thought the hour had at last come when he would designate his chief courtiers, inviting some one—Peter, John, or James to sit on his right hand. The moment was tense; the silence oppressive. Imagine their amazement when with towel and basin, he set about that necessary service which they were too proud to perform. Hitherto, Jesus had shown the goodness and mercy of God by relieving suffering, henceforth, he demonstrated the love and nearness of God by sharing suffering. There be many who are willing to relieve who refuse to share. When he came to Peter, there was protest. "Thou shalt never wash my feet." "I am too humble for that." "If I wash thee not—thou hast no part." Those whom Christ has not served cannot serve Christ. Had the lesson been one of cleansing, Peter was right in asking that it be applied to hands and head. Humility was amply demonstrated by the washing of feet.

The Parable Explained—Jesus is our example in lowly service, not in lordly dominion. "If the Master serves" much more the servant! He demonstrated that greatness and humility, Godhood and service are not incompatibles, but co-ordinates, joined together in him, never to be divided. Jesus was not instituting a sacrament to be observed annually among the saints, but setting an example of useful service to be rendered daily to those in need without regard to creed or character—Judas' feet were washed, too! The literal service of foot-washing is necessary only for the sick and helpless. Lowly tasks are fundamental. The abdication of kings and the resignation of bishops might not create a ripple, but a strike by all cooks and washerwomen would work havoc in our living, cause wailing and gnashing of teeth from Dan to Beersheba. "Whatsoever thy hands find to do." The greatest thing for me today is my nearest duty. Humility is not formal, but spontaneous. It is not self-depreciative, but self-forgetful, utterly unconscious. He who boasts of his humility is consumed with pride.

The Lesson Applied—Peter learned slowly, but he learned. In his First Epistle, his mind seems to revert to the incident discussed in the lesson, and he exhorts all to gird themselves with humility and to serve one another. Young Christians are not to esteem themselves omniscient, but to defer to those of longer and larger experience. The proud find in God a resistance they cannot overcome; the humble find grace sufficient for all their needs. To desire greatness is a laudable ambition, provided the laudable way of service be followed.

Meditation

Mark 7:24—He could not be hid.

Jesus was born in an unpretentious manger. But he could not be hid. Shepherds came from the fields. Wise men came from the East.

Jesus drew men like a magnet. When he would lead his disciples apart to rest for awhile, still the multitude found their way to him. He could not be hid.

Jesus died the death of a criminal. Yet the centurion was so impressed by the difference of his spirit to that of the others that he exclaimed, "Surely this is the Son of God." He classified Jesus in a separate category. He could not be hid.

The body of Jesus was buried in a sepulcher. On the third day he arose. He could not be hid.

The world would oftentimes ignore him. But when a Christlike person reveals the Christian attitudes then the world takes note "that he has been with Jesus." He cannot be hid. He is still confirming with signs the work of his disciples.

Prayer

We are constantly confronted with the amazing Figure of Jesus. He is pre-eminent. We cannot escape His towering personality. We thank Thee for an all-sufficient Savior that emerges even in unexpected places, on unlooked for occasions.

May our light not be hid. May our works be such that men may glorify our Father in heaven. May we so love one another that the world may know we are His disciples. Christ cannot be hid when He rules our lives.

MY NEW YEAR PRAYER

God of the New Year, grant to me
An understanding heart,
A Christlike faith, a courage strong;
Dear God, help me impart
The joy Thy love can give.
Help me to share another's cross,
Help me to live—
So close to Thee, dear God,
That all I do and all I say,
Each little deed of kindness, may
Some sorrow lift, some heart make glad
God of the New Year, grant to me
A year that may be spent for Thee!

M. H.

Jackson, Miss.

CALLING THE TUNE

They were giving me "hot rhythm" over the wireless. I did not seize a hatchet and smash the set; I turned a key and found the air filled with the glorious harmonies of Beethoven.

Supposing I had said: "This jazz stuff is so terrible that I can no longer believe in music. They told me that music was a heavenly thing, purifying the soul and uplifting the heart and mind to the contemplation of divine things. Just listen to it. It is a whining of wild beasts, a potent proof that man is but a step removed from the vilest barbarism. I can no longer believe in Beethoven and Bach and Mozart."

It would have been just as reasonable as to say: "I hear and see so much evil in the world that I no longer believe in goodness. I thought there was something divine in man—but see how vilely I have been treated by So-and-So. I can no longer believe in the saints and the prophets and the martyrs and the poets."

We are not indulging in self-deception when we shut out the voices of evil and doubt, and listen, for our souls' uplifting, to the voices of faith and goodness. We are free to "call the tune;" and we are wise to call the tune that assures us of the reality of all beauty and harmony in God's Universe. Because some amongst us cannot sing true, are we to believe that music is dead? There is only one true music. We need not worry about the noises.

JOHN ROADMENDER.

End Bad Cough Quickly, at One Fourth the Cost

Home-Mixed! No Cooking! Easy!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs only one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

The Committee on Evangelism has a great and sacred field for service, and present opportunities are challenging it to activity. The importance of the Committee on Stewardship will be discussed at another time. The spiritual recovery of the local church will lead to its financial recovery. Along with the local budget the regular benevolences should be our immediate concern, not merely because it is the plan of the Church, but because of a vital faith in the Church and a sense of our related responsibility in its work. We must be prompt and liberal in looking after the claims for all the benevolences.

Emphasis on the voluntary principle as expressed in our adopted plan should not be used by any congregation or quarterly conference as a smoke screen for an attack on the moderate askings of the

FROM TUTWILER, MISS.

When a good man dies his works live after him. "If there be any evil let it be interred with his bones." I am not thinking of Caesar so much as I am thinking of the late Mr. Gilmore of Amory, Miss.

I am glad that the good work planned by Mr. Gilmore has been resumed and that W. R. Hammontree is back at his old job. It is my belief that there is no work being done in the Conference that is quite so effective for good as that which is being done by Mr. Hammontree. During my two years' work with him on the Nettleton charge I was led into a deeper appreciation of the educational program of our Church. And also into a fuller appreciation of the art of worship. May the time come when similar work to that being done by Brother Hammontree in Monroe and Itawamba Counties can be done in every county.

Now Brother Editor, a word or two from the Tutwiler charge:

I have learned thus far in the ministry that a charge has personality—that leads me to speak of the genuine high type of personality which is observed in the people here. It is our desire to work hard enough to merit the kind of treatment we are receiving on the Tutwiler charge. "We really like 'em."

Plans have been made for the year's work, as you will see, Mr. Editor, from the enclosed church letter, which had the approval of the presiding elder. I think he is a good man—he impresses me as a man who has religion seasoned with judgment. Thank the Lord that the one does not preclude the other.

Now, Mr. Editor, don't think we have forgotten your very worthy claim upon us. We shall strive to transfer our names from the roll of the "Gonna Do Club" to the roll of the "Have Done Club" and send some subscriptions soon. May the Lord bless you in your great work.

REV. R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH.

CONSTIPATION Can be Helped!

(Use what Doctors do)

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?

Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

THE CHILDREN'S DIVISION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Doris A. Branton

January, 1935, marks the beginning of a new era in the work for children in the Southern Methodist Church. Quoting from the pamphlet, "Missionary Education in the Children's Division;" the action of the General Conference of May, 1934, now makes it possible for every person, every organization, and the two General Boards interested in the missionary education of children to co-operate in a plan which has unlimited possibilities. The plan sets up no new machinery in the church, in the district, or in the Annual Conference. By a slight modification it makes use of existing channels in providing a more effective plan of missionary education for all the children of the Church. This co-operative plan for missionary education takes into account the following:

1. The church school, with the missionary emphasis in the regular sessions.
2. Regular lesson material, with helps for additional sessions, and two World Friendship Units annually for primary and for junior children.
3. Workers elected annually by the Board of Christian Education, and a secretary of children's work elected by the Woman's Missionary Society.
4. Regular monthly missionary offerings, with every opportunity to help children give intelligently and to have a sense of responsibility for helping support missionary enterprises of the Church that are within their understanding.

Every pastor, general superintendent, and superintendent of a children's division should secure a copy of the pamphlet from which this quotation is taken in order that the full details of the plan may be understood. It is the sincere desire of the Woman's Missionary Council and the General Board of Christian Education that the best interests of childhood be kept dominant in all our thinking and planning. In our own Conference I have found Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, who is superintendent of children's work for the Woman's Missionary Conference, eager to do more than her share in unifying our programs for children. We are sure that the spirit of devotion to the task of guiding children in the Christian way of life, will so permeate our work that no difficulty will arise in making whatever adjustments may be necessary to make

A new book for mothers and teachers of nursery children called "The Nursery Years" and written by Susan Isaacs has been brought to our attention. This book, though small and inexpensive, is rich in content. It may be had from Whitmore & Smith for the sum of 50 cents.

Dr. Fosdick's new book, "The Secret of Victorious Living," contains the kind of reading that will make one's soul grow. If you cannot buy it, borrow a copy. Every teacher will find that reading of this kind will give a deeper understanding of life and a better ability to help pupils to know God.

ATTENTION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

To the Pastors and Official Boards in Louisiana.

Will you permit me to say to you: In my judgment, every congregation should give special attention to our temperance and social service work this year.

We have the old saloon and the new grog shop in cafe and drug store. History will show these rat holes do not cure themselves. You have all the help you need, then please go ahead and start the fight in your field. You need outside help, then get it from any source that appeals to you as being what you need.

But don't wait. We have waited long enough. Will you write me a card or a letter, telling me what you think about the situation? At the same time please state what you intend to do.

On with the battle.

Faithfully yours,

A. W. TURNER.

O teach us, when the mount of prayer we leave,
Like to the pattern there our lives to weave,
That this alone Thou dost true service count,
To fashion all as shown us on the mount.

Going On Is a Secret of Victory

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, President of the Board of Foreign Missions, made this statement at the close of the annual meeting of the Board:

“NO PESSIMISM has appeared in this meeting though the conditions have been hard. We carry away the impression of a great work. We rejoice that the church, while open to some just criticisms, is paying less and less attention to criticism by those who have no right to speak. The victory of foreign missions speaks for itself. It should be remembered that nothing holds the church together for these great undertakings but a voluntary willingness. One critic some time ago stated in my hearing that Methodism had made no contribution to world thought. I answered, ‘But Methodism has given the world something to think about.’ God would prevent us from thinking so much about present great problems unless He knew there was a way through them. I have been impressed by the fact that few missionaries are pessimistic though they work in the hardest fields in the world. The real danger to Christianity is in slowing down. Going on is a secret of victory. It was the late Dr. A. C. McGiffert who said, ‘Vision of God comes from activity.’ We go away from this annual meeting not shouting, but with a solid conviction.”

MISSIONARIES FROM THE COLONY OF GAM-BIA in Africa have been ordered to leave the area on account of a serious epidemic of yellow fever. The order of the British Government affects a considerable population of business people and a few missionaries. The missionaries have been instructed to go to the mission station at Freetown, Sierra Leone, as a temporary asylum; and later it may be found necessary to remove them to England.

AMELIA EARHART PUTNAM, FAMED AVIATRIX, landed in Oakland, California, at the end of her solo flight from Honolulu. She was in the air on a continuous flight for eighteen hours and sixteen minutes and traveled a distance of 2408 miles. It is described by the press as a death-defying feat, but it was vastly more than that. She added new laurels to the fame of the daring pilots of the air; and her splendid achievement is another step in the conquest of the vast ocean wastes which have yielded slowly but surely to the march of science.

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIVE will be the occasion for the celebration of the centennial of many important and interesting events. Among them the founding of the London City Mission; the disruption of the Wesleyan Church over a lawsuit; the establishment of the first Mission Hospital in Canton; the founding of the New York Herald; and the birth of Marshall Field, Andrew Carnegie, Samuel L. COMMANDER EVANGELINE BOOTH OF THE SALVATION ARMY has issued a ringing challenge to the whole world. As the head of the Salvation Army legions of the world, she calls for an immediate embarking upon a great Peace Crusade that will drive war from the face of the earth. Surely that is an enterprise worthy of the great Christian leader that she is; and a task worthy of the Christian hosts of all lands. It is not an impossible ideal; but it will certainly require a concert of the Christian forces of the world to bring it to pass.

PHILADELPHIA'S BIG AUTOMOBILE SHOW, like others of its kind, is primarily a sales promotion enterprise, staged annually by the makers of the cars which have made America famous. A preliminary feature of the show is a prize contest between antique models which are driven under their own power. The end of that wheezing and comical procession is the vast array of stream-lined cars representing the last word in the genius of the automobile industry. The prize-winner this year was a "Winton Six" of 1908. Back of the humorous sight presented by that procession of impossible looking vehicles is the fact that they were the foundation of the engineering and the aesthetic perfection—the glamour of the big show. In those very cars, their proud possessors rode in state over roads abandoned in character and abandoned in fact.

THE GOOD NAME OF LOUISIANA and the cause of justice have been made to suffer in the lamentable incident which occurred in the early morning hours of January 11, when Jerome Wilson, a Negro prisoner, was slain in his prison cell by a mob. It appears that the Negro had been sentenced to hang for the murder of an officer; but, on account of irregular procedure in the trial, the Supreme Court remanded the case for a new trial. Neither the certainty of guilt nor the heinousness of a crime should take from any man the right of a proper trial under the law, and the assumption of the prerogatives of the courts, under whatever pretext, is an affront to civilization.

ERNEST H. JEFFS, AN ENGLISH LAYMAN, pays high tribute to the ministry in his front-page article of the Christian World for December 27, 1934. He says: "Uncheered by the presence of crowded congregations, fully conscious of the apparent running of the tide against Christian observances and institutions, oppressed by the endless small duties and anxieties incident to the Church's institutional life—there is something not far from heroic in the figure of the obscure pastor who, in these conditions, can still plod and keep the passion fresh." This high appraisal of ministerial fidelity should humble every preacher's heart, but in a no less degree it should inspire him to a fuller self-giving.

THE NATIONALISTIC MOVEMENT IN JAPAN was discussed recently by an observer with "an inside" view. He says that such a spirit of nationalism is abroad in the Island Kingdom, and that it is in a large measure due to rebuffs and exclusion acts of other nations. On account of these, he says Japan feels herself alone in a hostile world. The Japanese feel that their mission is to bring peace, prosperity and culture to the Far East. Touching the oft heralded activities of the militaristic party, he says that they have not had things their own way by any means, and that eighty per cent of the intelligentsia of Japan are opposed to the whole militaristic movement.

C. O. CHALMERS GRAVELY ILL

The forms of the Advocate have been held open in the hope that some better report might be made of the condition of Brother Chalmer's; but we are profoundly sorry to have to report that he is gravely ill. For a time, he appeared to be making slight gain and hope was entertained for his recovery; but on Sunday his condition grew worse and the hours have but worn with pain his already exhausted body. The physician in attendance holds out no hope for his improvement; and as we go to press we are pained to report his condition as extremely grave. The end of his useful life seems to be a matter of hours, for the skill of the physician has not been able to stem the tide of disease.

FOUR ANCHORS

In the current issue of Opportunity, a Journal of Negro Life, is an article on the Negro Transient, written by an official of the Transient Bureau of the FERA. The migratory movements of that race are studied from four angles: Age, Education, Marital status, and Occupation. The writer says that Relief statistics show that 60 per cent of the migratory Negroes are between the ages of 17 and 30 years; 71 per cent are below the tenth grade in school work, and less than 1 per cent have attended college at all; 66 per cent are "single," "separated," "widowed," or "divorced;" practically all of them are men; and nearly all of them looking for work. These very impressive statistics lead us to remark upon factors which tend to stabilize and establish life, to anchor men to the soil as builders and independent citizens. The facts recited probably apply with some unimportant variations to all races. As we see it, the one outstanding message of these figures is that, culture, a home, a job, and the experience which comes with age do more than all else to establish and satisfy a man. Whatever contributes to the promotion of these interests of mankind, we classify as a priceless blessing. These figures regarding transient Negroes simply picture a cross-section tion of life, without any reference to a religion or a social philosophy. To this vast army of unanchored Negroes, the lure of the road is a job. To the great unanchored and restless mass of the human race it is a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. While we look wistfully for the coming of the dawn, we should not forget to cast out the four anchors to prevent a perilous drift toward the rocks.

RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM

The constantly shifting emphasis and problem of life tend to confuse and to make uncertain the boundaries of the field of religious journalism. But, whatever the variation of the problem, the field is unquestionably determined by the spirit and the aim of the Christianity which it seeks to interpret and apply. It must at all times and in all things seek to set Christianity in its rightful place in the thinking of men and women. It must exert itself to deepen and exalt the conception of God; for, left alone, men tend to adapt themselves to the thinking and the conduct of those about them—to become secular, national, pagan. Upon religious journalism, we think, rests a large share of responsibility for helping to quicken the conscience toward the vital necessity for spiritual growth and progress toward that perfection of the nature which is the crown of all living. Its message will be less direct than that of the pulpit; but it should be charged, none the less, with the fervor, the force, and the spirit of the Gospel. In the effort to meet this obligation to individuals and to the church, there will be a cordial support on the part of those who truly appreciate the task of Christian leadership. It has been truthfully said: "Nothing that the churches may do to serve God and man, nothing that Christian thinkers may put forth to deepen and elevate the churches' thought about God and man, can ever be alien to a Christian newspaper." In the social, cultural and spiritual edification of believers, in promoting the ministry of soul-saving, and in the interpretation and support of administrative measures, the journalism of the church has a positive and a vital place.

A MISSING LINK

The theory of the evolutionist concerning the missing link between man and his simian ancestors has long been the occasion of controversy between scientists and theologians. Probably no single issue raised by modern science has drawn such a terrific fire from the batteries of the theologians as has the scientific hypothesis which challenges the accuracy of the Genesis account of the origin of man. But there is a disparity between the unchallenged teachings of Jesus and the all too common practices of men, which is not less vital, but has occasioned far less agitation among those who profess to be followers of the Nazarene. To be sure, everyone should be concerned about the foundation of his faith; but he should certainly not be less concerned about building his life according to the specifications of the Divine Architect. There is a link in the chain of God's plan which every person must supply for himself and that link is life—Christian life. We boast of our Christian civilization, but our age has produced a high-powered and remorseless criminality sickening to contemplate. Our educational progress is something of which we are justly proud, but culture has not saved the honor built upon conscience, and the integrity of the race must be supplemented by cash registers and indemnity bonds. Statistics are given showing that in Austria for 1928 one of every four children born was illegitimate and in the United States for 1932, one of every twenty-five was illegitimate. If these figures bear even an approximate relation to truth, then we are faced with a discrepancy between our Christian code of morals and our behavior which should give every right-thinking person pause. We need our theological convictions, but such can not take the place of a Christianity expressed in righteousness, purity and love.

AN ADDRESS TO THE CHURCH FROM THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS

One Hundred and fifty years have passed since the Christmas Conference in Lovely Lane Chapel and the organization of American Methodism. They have been eventful decades in the life of the nation and the Church. From a few scattered colonies on the Atlantic seaboard, America has become a compact nation stretching from ocean to ocean. From a little band of young men dedicating themselves by a superb act of faith to the spread of scriptural holiness over these lands and the conversion of a continent, this church has grown into a strong position of commanding leadership in American Protestantism.

It has been a happy experience for us to recall this significant past. In the common gratitude that stirs our hearts we have been more graciously conscious of our essential unity. The past, made resplendent with glorious and devoted achievements, belongs to every branch of American Methodism. The Sesquicentennial has also given us a new appreciation of the cost in sacrificial toil and heroic devotion paid by our fathers for this faith which comes to us so often unaccompanied by any conflict. Our Methodism has been bought with a price and today we are increasingly aware that this heritage cannot be preserved inviolate without sacrifice upon the part of the sons of the fathers.

This historical emphasis, however, has left with us an even more significant deposit. We are recapturing the spiritual emphasis. This secret of original Methodism has been imperilled by the materialistic drift of our age. Naturalism and humanism tend to undermine the primacy of the spiritual. But today we are being brought back to our ancient altars that we may once more light our torches from flames that burned in hearts that were afire with a holy enthusiasm for God. In these days we have not been building monuments to the dead past; we have been drinking from old springs the life giving waters that shall refresh our souls as we enter new and more difficult battles for God and righteousness.

We enter upon this new day with confidence but also with deep concern. It is an hour of widespread bewilderment. The normal securities of life have been shaken. Everywhere there is a large measure of confusion and uncertainty. Economic prostration has not been accompanied, as is so often lightly believed, by spiritual progress. Our people brought out of the depression largely what they carried into it. What through the years they had sown, that also did they reap. Spiritual preparedness led to personal victories; indifference and selfishness in earlier days only hurried men on to despair and moral bankruptcy.

Never was the church so indispensable to the social order. The failure of trusted institutions and accepted theories of economic and social action has served only to reinforce the claims of the Christian ideal. Our breakdown has had all the marks of moral collapse. In temperance, lust, pride, economic selfishness, racial antagonisms, the superficial pursuit of pleasure have all sapped the moral resources and contributed to the moral flabbiness of our national character. We need above all else a return to God and to the simple elemental Christian virtues.

As members of the Christian church we rejoice to confess in word and deed our faith in the living God; to reassert our confidence in the transforming power of a living experience of Christ and, with the confession of our sins, to declare our unwavering

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

The Honorable H. H. White has served this church as chairman of its Board of Stewards for more than forty years. During this time the church has grown from a handful of members to a membership of more than thirteen hundred. It has built and paid for its present beautiful house of worship. It has erected its commodious building for Christian education. During these years this church has been in the van of religious and moral movements in this community and has exercised a deep and wide influence for good.

Mr. White has been a faithful and courageous leader. He has never asked any other man to go where he was not willing to lead the way. His leadership has been wise and tolerant. His guiding hand has been firm and sure. This Board and this church have been honored in the fact that through these years he has been one of the leaders of Southern Methodism and has been a Nestor in its councils. In character and in integrity no man has been or is his superior. As a citizen and a servant of the public welfare, he stands second to none. Indeed he is a man sans peur et sans reproche.

Mr. White has asked to be released from the arduous duties of Chairman of this Board and his request has been granted, although with regret and a deep sense of loss. We adopt these resolutions as a simple tribute to his merit.

Be it, therefore, resolved, that this statement be spread upon the minutes of this Board, that copies be furnished to the Church and secular press, and that Mr. White be elected President emeritus of this Board.

W. D. WADLEY,
J. L. PITTS, Sr.

The above resolution was adopted at a meeting of the Board of Stewards of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Alexandria, La., held on December 17, 1934.

The following officers of the Board of Stewards were elected for the current year: Chairman, W. D. Wadley; 1st Vice-Chairman, J. L. Pitts, Sr; 2nd Vice-Chairman, J. M. Eicher; Secretary, Charles White; Treasurer, Frank T. Brame.

RELIGION AND LIFE

Probably the task of all tasks with the majority of us is how we are to take our religion into all the walks and ways of our life and give it something like a reasonable right of way in the things that we do and say and think from day to day. Not that we are always tremendously concerned that this should be done, and set ourselves heroically to the doing of it, but somewhere in the inner recesses of our being there is a rather persistent conviction that it should be done, and a resultant feeling of dissatisfaction that we are not doing it better. The most of us who are committed to being Christians at all have a feeling that we should make a real effort to be somewhat consistent in the matter and live in some such way as to come near to deserving the name we bear. And our intelligence tells us that we cannot do this so long as our religion remains a formal kind of thing, a profession that we make, a mere allegiance to form or custom or habit or philosophy. We know perfectly well that a religion that doesn't influence and direct and guide and inspire the whole of our life is unworthy of us.

It is, in the first place, something of a problem to know just how we are to make our religion thus a real and vital and shaping influence in all our life, but, after all, that is not our greatest problem and difficulty. It will not be an impossible task to discover how we are to do it, if only we have come to the place where we are willing to do it as we discover the way. To set our whole mind and soul and will to the task of living an every-day Christian life makes a demand upon the courage and persistent idealism such as no other task could possibly do.

We can see in several of the incidents recorded in the life of Jesus that He was very anxious to get into the minds of those who were thinking of entering into His discipleship a real conviction that the task they were about to take on themselves was a demanding one. Following Him was to be no sine-cure, no part-time job at all, but one that they could never hope to accomplish save through complete commitment and utter devotion and loyalty. And the reason that it was so was plain enough: discipleship meant complete following, it meant taking religion into all of life.—The New Outlook.

AN ADDRESS TO THE CHURCH FROM THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS

faith in the adequacy of Christ and his way of love to build here upon earth the Kingdom of Heaven. To bring men into personal fellowship with God in Christ; to guide them, especially through the Scriptures, into ways of personal living which conform to Christ's law of life and love; to help them envision a society in which that law shall be the governing principle and finally to encourage and empower them to work for a far more complete realization of such a society on earth—this seems to us to be the task of the Church for today.

In the light of our history and the present moral and religious condition of American society the call upon us today is for an aggressive and unyielding spiritual advance. No difficulty must be allowed to deter us, no marginal necessities shall divert us. We are called today to such a movement of the Spirit in our membership as we have not witnessed in this generation of our Church's life. Such an experience must begin with the leadership of the Church itself. We must repair our own altars first. If we have unconsciously drifted into the exaltation of minor issues, we must get back to center once more. Our preaching must be delivered from the tyranny of the trivial, our energies must not be mortgaged by the material interests of a congregation, our personal devotional life must no longer be sacrificed to the exactions of a heedless time schedule which makes no place for quietude and communion. We need to stop, to look and to listen.

Will the revival of which we have spoken and for which we have prayed ever come? As surely as the laws of the spiritual world operate it will follow when the soil is prepared and the seed is planted. Our people must yearn for a revival, must pray unceasingly; must pay a price in spiritual concern before God can open the windows of heaven upon us. We call upon our people everywhere to major upon this one imperative need of our church life today. With the spirit of expectancy and a great faith that will not be refused let every pastor and every church look to this our first and foremost need. A real revival of religion will solve every other important issue before our church today. We do not insist upon the form it shall take in each congregation. There will be diversities of the Spirit but one desired goal. The outpouring of the Holy Spirit may come through an evangelist, through the urgency of the pastor's own message, through the careful planning and execution of a program of personal evangelism, but let us not quench the Spirit by giving no opportunity for His effectual work upon the hearts of our people. Let our pulpits ring again with the declaration of a salvation from sin in the saving power of Christ; of the witness of the Spirit with our spirits that we are the children of God; of the possibility of a holy life; of the Kingdom of God on earth as the ultimate and attainable goal of our community life. We must return to God before we can go forward. Methodism is called to action in a day like this with a message of complete personal salvation and social redemption through the transforming power of the grace of Christ freely offered to all men. It is a great gospel; let us not withhold it lest the very stones cry out.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Rev. W. R. Lott.

We speak of the advantages of town and city churches. There are advantages in equipment and better interest in some phases of church work, but the country church has the advantage in that more of the children hear the sermons of the pastor. That is something to make us think. The town and city church has more meetings for children for entertainment and the like (that is good in its place); but I am thinking of the benefit to children who hear sermons by men called to God to proclaim the truth. There is a Divine element in preaching and hearing as to responsibility and truth. Parents are robbing their children of their rightful heritage when they fail to see to it that they have a chance to hear and learn to appreciate good helpful sermons on the teaching of the Bible. They love their children and give their bodies every advantage to grow. The whole nation has become alive with the thought of the protection of the child from being down-trodden; that is a by-product of the Christian religion. We must see to it that the children also have this spiritual advantage.

Dr. G. F. Winfield, of Whitworth College, calls attention to a young man who is representing himself as preparing for the Methodist ministry, and as having attended Emory and Henry College last year. Dr. Winfield wrote for information concerning the young man, and Dr. Hillman replies that no man of that name was registered there last year, and that no man of that same name has been a student there since his connection with the College.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

It is evident that he hesitated to take the final step which was clearly indicated by his age and physical condition, and upon which the Conference insisted. The time had come, however, when the failure to do so might mean the surrender of the achievements of his life. In addition to the situation in England, the outcome of the Revolution in America made a change of control there an absolute necessity. So, out of all this mass of incident and argument, he was brought to realize the imperativeness of the situation. Accordingly, on February 28, 1784, he executed his "Deed of Declaration" upon which is the endorsement: "The Rev. John Wesley's Declaration and Establishment of the Conference of the People Called Methodists. Enrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery." By this document he transferred the property and control of the Wesleyan Societies to one hundred preachers whom he named, a body since known as the "Legal Hundred." The validity of that deed has been tested again and again in the highest courts of law, and it remains as solid and immovable as the Church to which it relates. The Deed of Declaration created some unrest upon the part of those whose names were not included in the governing body; eight of the preachers withdrew from the connection; the Conference approved Mr. Wesley's recommendation that no preacher's rights and privileges should be abridged because he was not included in the "Legal Hundred;" and soon the readjusted Societies were under way for the realization of the Founder's dream of world conquest for Christ.

The last innovation of Mr. Wesley, he had probably contemplated for a long time. It was a step made necessary in order to obviate the difficulty occasioned by the refusal of the bishops to ordain persons for the care of the Societies. The refusal had the appearance of an attempt to thwart the Revival by a process of ecclesiastical starvation. The great universities were not opened to Dissenters until long after the close of the eighteenth century; in their refusal of ordination, therefore, the Bishops were in line with well established public policy. After long hesitation and meditation, Mr. Wesley decided upon the bold course of providing a ministry of his own ordination. On September 2, 1784, he set apart Dr. Thomas Coke for the work of a Superintendent in America; and, assisted by Dr. Coke and Rev. James Creighton, clergymen of the Church of England, he ordained Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey for the work in America. Afterwards Rev. James Creighton said that Mr. Wesley repented with tears for his ordination of any of his preachers. That statement was made after Mr. Wesley's death, and it does not seem to be supported by any documentary evidence. Certainly the continuous list of ordinations do not give support to the claim. In 1784 three were ordained for America; in 1785 three for Scotland; in 1786 four were ordained; in 1787 five, in 1788 nine; and in 1789 two were ordained. This made a total of twenty-six persons whom he ordained for work in various fields. There was much criticism of Dr. Coke for assuming the title, "Bishop;" and it has been held that Mr. Wesley never intended such a thing. It is true that Mr. Wesley himself took offense at the action of the American Superintendents in this matter; but, since he authorized and instructed Dr. Coke to consecrate Francis Asbury for the work of a Superintendent and later sought the convening of a Conference to elevate Richard Whatcoat to the same position, the charge is made somewhat doubtful. And when he set apart Alexander Mather for exactly the same relation in England, the defence of Mr. Wesley against his own acts is not quite as strong as it might have been had the facts been otherwise.

The resentment against Mr. Wesley for his invasion of episcopal prerogatives and his overriding the canonical fiction associated with ecclesiastical ordination was probably much intensified by the realization that it was the final step that would complete the break with Anglicanism. In the disappointment over the failure to subjugate the Methodists, they probably thought little of what might be the supreme purpose of all ordinations. The Establishment had so far failed in the holy ends of church existence that a new organization was evolved out of itself, for meeting the spiritual needs of vast multitudes in that decadent age. So, Mr. Wesley approached the end of his journey in a storm of reprobation, different from that in which his public life began and different from that which he had faced throughout his militant career but rooted in the same soil and certainly no less sparing in censure of the man who was destined to live on when his critics had been forgotten. The Founder of Methodism died, Wednesday, March 2, 1791, and the spot where he rests has been the end of a well-beaten pilgrim path for nearly a century and a half.

A summary of the life and labors of the man who bequeathed Methodism to the world would tend to dwarf rather than to reveal his real proportions. But there are some observations which should be made as a kind of silhouette of his character and attitudes. Tyerman said of him: "He was a clergyman of the episcopal Church of England with the views of a Dissenter, and acting accordingly, there was, of course, in his future proceedings, much that was incongruous and perplexing." That observation might be considerably expanded without doing violence to truth. He rediscovered the fundamentals of Christianity in an age which was thoroughly skeptical and morally corrupt; and his approach to the task was through a Church more interested in class distinctions and ecclesiastical mechanics than in the salvation of the world. He literally groped his way to the experience which was the inspiration of his life and the power for his evangelistic enterprise—his crown of immortality.

He came forth from a Church of England rectory, a "brand plucked from the burning;" he was educated for the priesthood of the Establishment and ordained by its bishops; he held allegiance to its forms and teachings; but his spirit refused to be bound by its limited outlook, or to be satisfied with less than the world-parish comprehended in the Great Commission. He brought to his task conviction, faith, courage—nothing less could have sustained him in the face of the opposition, mobs, poverty, and the other discouragements which he encountered in the building of the Methodist Church.

An unusual characteristic was the apparent understanding of himself. He seems to have had a clear apprehension of his powers, his tastes and his peculiarities. A factor, no doubt, in the break with Count Zinzendorf and the Moravians was that he felt that the continuance of the relation would mean a disastrous clash of wills; and much the same influence seems to have been responsible for the separation from Whitefield and the Countess of Huntingdon. There was in each instance a doctrinal and philosophical difference; but John Wesley realized that he had a nature incapable of being subordinated to the will of another. It was not a conceit, but an endowment for which he was responsible to the world and to God. Strange as it may seem, that fact in his make-up did not minister to arrogance, but rather contributed to a spirit of humility and forbearance. He was bitterly attacked by Whitefield, but he refused to reply to the aspersions, saying: "You may read Whitefield against Wesley, but you will never read Wesley against Whitefield." This was less a regard for propriety than it was an indication of the self-mastery which made his work effective. His perfect poise came out in many ways: He kept his course against the relentless opposition of the Church from which he held orders; he resisted the perils of Moravian mysticism and the seductive philosophy of William Law; and he did not surrender to the unconstructive and aimless enthusiasm of Herrnhut. Indeed, he took something from them all without losing his footing on that which is vital and true and everywhere he demonstrated the qualities of mind and heart which gave an infectiousness to his preaching that is still a marvel to men.

Another distinction was his abiding devotion to the field which he first discovered. The ordinary man has a disposition to grow away from the humble beginnings of his life. Methodism had its generative impulse in John Wesley's passion for the souls of the poor; and in the mad rush of his career, he never lost that interest. His chapels were not built with reference to the beauties of architecture, but to suit the tastes and to serve the needs of the humble folk to whom he had been the minister of God unto salvation. One of his most touching and heart-revealing utterances was made in 1785. He said: "I am become, I know not how, an honorable man. The scandal of the cross is ceased." His soul had lived in conflict so long that calm was to him an intimation of spiritual danger, and public favor carried the implication of treason to his holy task.

As an organizer, it will be readily admitted that Mr. Wesley was a consummate master, and the Methodist Church will be accepted as sufficient proof of the claim. The admission is apt, however, to carry an impression which can not be sustained by the facts. As we have pointed out, he was less a genius in originating machinery than in adapting that which was already in use and was well understood. Besides, every innovation he introduced with great caution. His expansion was not that of an adventurer, but rather that of a defender fortifying the priceless treasure of conquest and achievement. He introduced no practice in advance of its necessity. It can not be said that he followed the line of least resistance; but, perhaps, that he moved in the direction of plainest need; and he never found it necessary to reverse his course on any important measure of his polity. Each succeeding change was but the lengthening of the radius with which he drew ever larger circles from a common center. Consequently Methodism, like Jerusalem, is built "compact together."

John Wesley's place as a preacher is not easily defined. The literature through which he is introduced to Methodist itinerants is severely logical and dry. James Laver says, "The University system of Wesley's day has been described as one long debauch of syllogisms." After reading Mr. Wesley's printed sermons, it is easy to believe that such might have been true. But the literary style and impressiveness of his published sermons give little real clue to his power and quality as a preacher. Despite the omnipresent syllogism, he was ruggedly original in an age that was painfully artificial. His personal appearance was neat and plain; and when he preached, even in the open air, he always wore the conventional robes of a Church of England clergyman. In the pulpit, he was natural, calm, graceful and easy; and his bearing was manly; and he spoke with clear voice and in simple, under-

Mississippi and Louisiana

The editor has received a brotherly note from Rev. S. A. Seegers, of Rayne, La. Bulletins which were enclosed show a thorough support of the entire program of the Church.

Rev. J. E. Stephens is having great congregations at Oxford, Miss. There were two hundred people present at the night service, Jan. 3, and sixteen persons have been received into the church since Conference.

Mr. J. D. Rumph, of Rayne Memorial Church, had quite a serious heart attack a few days ago. At last account he was responding to the treatment and we trust he may soon be well on the way to complete recovery.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn writes that the recent visit of Bishop and Mrs. Dobbs was greatly appreciated by his people, and indications are that Bishop Dobbs' splendid services on Sunday will mean much to the church at Lake Charles.

A letter from Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of First Church, Monroe, La., brings encouragement, but no news of his work. We know from other sources, however, that his work is moving forward with order and aggressiveness.

Mrs. D. F. Burnett, Bay Springs, Miss., sends $3 to be applied on subscriptions to superannuates of that section. Mrs. Burnett is Publicity Chairman of the Bay Springs Church, and the subscriptions will be placed as she directs.

The fine spirit of Miss Margaret Camp, publicity superintendent of the Young People in Louisiana, is splendidly complemented by her desire to promote the work committed to her care. She begins well and her enthusiasm speaks for itself.

The group meeting for the Greenville District of the North Mississippi Conference, held at Leland, is reported to have been a very satisfactory gathering. The interest in the organization and pressing of church work in the early part of the year is said to be greater than ever before.

Dr. Dana Dawson is receiving fine co-operation at First Church, Shreveport, La. He and Mrs. Dawson will be honored at a reception given by the church on January 30. A fine indication of the development of the devotional spirit is the wide distribution of "God's Minute," through the appeal of the pastor.

Mrs. W. D. Klemschmidt, of Algiers, La., has the sympathy of many friends throughout Louisiana in the loss of her mother, Mrs. Fred Mackay. She was 83 years old and her home was in Baton Rouge. She was stricken with pneumonia on Monday, January 14, and the end came Thursday following.

Rev. J. S. Henley writes in high praise of the splendid work done by Dr. D. L. Coale, one of our general evangelists. Brother Coale is now at Dadeville, Ala., where he can be reached by those who may need his assistance. Brother Coale's work is highly commended wherever he goes. His home address is 411 N. Flores St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Dr. L. L. Cowen, pastor of Noel Memorial, Shreveport, La., is giving to that church an administration characteristic of the man. Many improvements are being made, a campaign of visitation evangelism is being planned, a full-time church secretary has been employed, a quartet and choir have been provided for, and 83 new members have been added since Conference.

A note from Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, says that the State Commission appointed to erect a monument on the site of the Methodist Church in which the Mississippi state government was organized, has appointed a Program Committee of Natchez and Washington citizens for the unveiling ceremonies. The unveiling will take place some time in the spring, date to be fixed later.

Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, La., sends us an account of a banquet given by the official board of First Church, in honor of J. Ed. Eaves, who has been transferred to Albuquerque, New Mexico. In addition to being a steward of the church, Brother Eaves had been secretary of the Church school for fifteen years, was District Lay Leader for several years, and was secretary-treasurer of the Conference Board of Lay Activities.

First Methodist Church, Tupelo, Miss., is putting on a five-course Standard Training School, March 24 to 29. The Church Calendar gives the names of 7 new members received on January 13. Rev. Henry Felgar Brooks is the pastor.

Rev. C. B. White, who is beginning his fifth year at Wisner, La., reports a debt of $750 on the parsonage paid since Conference, eight members have been received, and all things point to a year of progress.

THAT "SERIOUS QUESTION"

By Rev. J. A. Wells

I wonder if I shouldn't say, for the glory of God, that there is a church in the Mississippi Conference, under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, that is being recognized for its activities other than finances. I want to say, first, though, that God gets all the glory and credit for what's being done at this church—Glendale, Jackson.

The first week I was here I was confronted with financial circumstances so overwhelming that I saw God must directly undertake, and after a wakeful night, there came to me a most blessed assurance of Divine intervention. From that night on, God, spiritual things, and souls have come first in every movement. In the business offices, in the homes, across the table from the business man, every where I went, I gave my experience of that night, letting all know that I was relying on the same God that Asa did. Listen: "And Asa cried unto the Lord his God, and said, Lord it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power; help us, O Lord, my God, for we rest on Thee, and in Thy name we go against this multitude. O Lord, Thou art our God; let not man prevail against Thee." Oh! how God would bless my soul as I

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

It has indeed been most interesting to hear of the various methods which have been used in presenting our latest mission study book, "Suzuki Looks at Japan," by different auxiliaries throughout the Conference.

The Gleaners Auxiliary of First Church, Shreveport, had an interesting all-day study. About thirty-five drove out to Bolinger Camp and, sitting around an American "hibachi," discussed Suzuki and his problems and had a most helpful day.

Monroe society made a special study of this book in their circle meetings and were fortunate in having Mrs. Ruth Trousdale Miller, of California, who has had a close touch with Japanese life in her state, give helpful talks concerning Japanese people.

The Missionary Society, Gleaners and Young Women's Circles of Alexandria each presented the book in a different way. A devotional from the writings of Kagawa, the Japanese national anthem, and dialogues were used. One society dramatized a chapter, calling it "Around the Hibachi."

Rayne Memorial Church was most fortunate in having as their guests for this study Mr. and Mrs. Sato, the Japanese Consul and his wife, who are living in New Orleans. They were greatly surprised and deeply impressed with the thought that the Christian women of America were studying their country and people. On the week following this auxiliary was entertained at tea in the Consulate, the imposing New Orleans residence of Mr. and Mrs. Sato.

All of this leads us to believe that interest in mission study is growing by leaps and bounds in the Louisiana Conference. We are indeed realizing as never before that we cannot be intelligent, right-thinking missionary women without being well informed concerning world conditions and world problems.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Galloway Memorial Church gave a warm greeting to the members of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Society as they assembled on January 18. Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Conference President, presided, and Mrs. Gordon Patton, Vice President, conducted the devotional. She announced that we would read the hymn but that indefatigable worker, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, suggested that we sing, and in her own worshipful way led the singing of a prayer hymn which opened the meeting. Plans for 1934 were reviewed and plans for 1935 discussed. There are no changes except in Children's department. Eight per cent of missionary offering taken in church School will go to Woman's Missionary Council. A committee was appointed to prepare programs for zone meetings, and Miss Ormand, Conference Corresponding Secretary, was made chairman of this committee. It was voted to co-operate in a Mission Study course in the Pastors' School at Methodist Assembly Ground, June 17-23. All Mission Study leaders are urged to make plans to attend. Every member of the committee was present except Mrs. Johnson, Seashore District Secretary, who was unavoidably detained.

We of the Mississippi Conference are honored in having with us Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, our own missionaries to Africa. They spoke at the Missionary Conference, Fifth Street Church, in Meridian, January 15, and their talks were the outstanding features of the Conference. We were impressed by the sincere spirituality back of the program and the talks made by Dr. Lewis in the forenoon made the accomplishments and needs of our work in Africa very real. Mrs. Lewis spoke in the afternoon, and among those of other denominations who came to pay homage to her presence was Bishop Green of the Episcopal Church. He spoke of his appreciation of her wonderful life and service to God's cause. As Mrs. Lewis told of the five months' trip which brought them to their station and their life there, we realized the faith and sense of humor which had taken her through many trying experiences. Dr. and Mrs. Lewis have spent eleven years in Africa and will return soon to this field.

On Tuesday afternoon, January 15, the Woman's Missionary Society of Bay Springs Church was hostess to the zone meeting with the leader, Mrs. J. W. Abney, presiding. The meeting was opened with prayer, led by Mrs. Abney, and a count of representatives taken. Sylvarena, Montrose and Bay Springs were represented. Louin and Garlandville were absent. Suggestive goals for the year were discussed as: beautification

FROM A LAYMAN

Dear Editor: I have been giving some thought to the new plan the church is putting on this year, and I think that if the laity and the ministry would use the Conference organ more freely in asking and answering questions as to the welfare of the home and church, there might be greater interest taken. I have been an active member of the Methodist Church for more than 45 years, and have filled at least five official places. I have seen the Church move under great spiritual power, and I have seen it when there was spiritual coldness. I would like, therefore, to ask some questions.

What effect has the teaching of God's Word to children had upon the home and social life? Isn't it a fact that to make a little rascal one needs only to leave a boy ignorant, or to make a big rascal to educate him and leave his heart and mind empty of God? Is it true that the looseness of family ties and the exchange of homes for social clubs is the fruit of a life empty of God? What is the Church, ministry and laity, most concerned about today? Is it the salvation of the people, or a large membership and a financial budget well met? Is the real emphasis of our Conferences on material or spiritual wealth? Is it not true that money-giving can be so stressed as to make it sin-consoling instead of soul-saving? Can a church member live a life of practical rebellion against God and yet be accepted of God; and does not the church encourage such belief by placing inconsistent people in the leadership of the church? Isn't there danger that the church may have a form of godliness while denying the power of it? Is the ministry in danger of seeking the favor of the flock more than its salvation? Is church worship ever more holy than the people who offer it; and can worship be true which is self-indulgent rather than a submission to God? Is there not a need for a fear of sin and a seeking of the new birth, if we are to be soul-savers? If we are to go forward, we must keep the spiritual wrinkles out.

R. C. PURCELL.

CHURCH-GOING

Mr. Editor: In your paper of the 3rd instant you refer to the fact that Sunday school children as a rule do not attend preaching services, intimating that what they get from their teachers does not furnish an equivalent to the sermons they might hear from the pulpit.

Seeing nothing more upon the subject in the last issue, I feel constrained to offer a few thoughts, as it seems to me it is a matter of such grave importance as to justify a united effort to change the custom similar to our being put forth to restore prohibition to our suffering country. Few people realize the importance of forming good rather than bad habits during youth.

Soon after the Civil War, when I was seven years of age, my hard working father started me to doing regular field work six days in the week, with no time for fishing Saturday evenings. Whether that suited me or not I had to keep it up until the habit of work was formed, which remains till this good day.

About the same time my pious mother took me to church with her and encouraged me to read the Bible so that habits were formed to be kept up till now, and I am very grateful for them all.

Is there not some connection between the small congregations at the Sunday night services and prayer meetings now and the fact that two or three decades ago children were allowed to return home from Sunday school instead of staying for the preaching of the gospel?

Even if all Sunday school teachers were Christians and fully consecrated to their task of leading their pupils to Christ it would be much better for them to stay to church for the sake of forming the church-going habit, though we know that most sermons are much better than the average teacher's instructions.

However, it is a sad fact that many Sunday school teachers are incapable of leading others to Christ because they do not know Him themselves. I have listened to a number of Bible class teachers deliver lectures to large classes in such a way as one could not tell whether they are Christians or not. In fact, they give so much time and attention to the geography and history of the lesson and so little to the vital truths concerning Christ and His salvation that one is inclined to think that he is not prepared to introduce strangers to his Lord so that about all the spiritual benefit the class derives from the service is from the songs and prayers offered.

Won't you, Mr. Editor, or some one else undertake to do this subject justice?

"A LONGTIME READER."

EUNICE CHARGE

Dear Editor: Just a word saying that Eunice church received us in the good old fashioned way. I do not see how people could give anybody a more cordial welcoming than these good people gave us.

We have just moved in this week, and Tuesday night forty or more people of the church came, to our surprise, making us a visit for our acquaintance, each family leaving a small token as an appreciation of our coming to serve them in their ecclesiastical needs.

The church surely put the parsonage in fine shape for our moving in. They painted and papered the house throughout, and put in some new furnishings. Also installed gas for a better heating system. And we are most thankful to them for all this and say God's richest blessings be upon them.

T. JEFFERSON HOLLADAY.

QUALIFICATIONS OF A GOOD STEWARD

By. R. H. Nelson, Shreveport District Lay Leader.

It is becoming increasingly evident that church leaders and Christians in general, need to re-study the fundamentals involved in the carrying out and financing of the new Church program. In the past a disproportionate amount of time and energy has been devoted to the struggle to raise money. In fact, many stewards yet feel that their sole function on the board is to assist in "raising the assessments."

However, a new day has dawned in the conception of the work of the stewards, a new standard of giving is being set up, whereby we are no longer "assessed" but are asked for voluntary contributions to the work of the Church. Every Christian will find the true expression of his religion in giving, giving in an intelligent, systematic and proportionate manner.

The Christian program in this day of complexity of modern conditions demands, as never before, not only the liberal giving of money, but also the consecration, loyalty and business ability of the laymen, and their intelligent appreciation of all the factors involved in the spread of Christ's Kingdom.

Men have been made stewards in some churches in the past with no other qualification for stewardship other than being able to make substantial contributions to the finances. This resulted in many such stewards becoming increasingly conscious, even embarrassed over the fact that they were not, and could not be, cited as examples of life and activity in their congregation, knowing that they should exert an influence for good in the entire program of the church and the community as well.

We, as members of the boards of stewards, need to study and even repeat as a creed the qualifications for stewards as set forth in our Discipline: "Let the stewards be persons of solid piety, who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline, and of good natural and acquired abilities to transact the temporal business of the Church." In this light, then, we may state that the steward of desired qualifications will be henceforth a man of genuine Christian character in all places and relations of life, both business and social; will have both natural and acquired qualities of leadership; a devout spirit of brotherhood and co-operation, faith, vision, courage, energy, loyalty to the pastor, the church and its program and willingness to give of his time to study the program of the church and of the tasks at hand.

A church with its board of stewards all living up to these standards of serving as examples, not only in liberal, systematic and proportionate giving of money, but also of time, talent, influence and business ability could hardly fail in carrying out any program, however difficult, it might undertake. Our supreme need is proper education of what is expected of us under the new program of the Church.

A better informed laity, better understanding of the true value, place, and function of the church, will lead to better financial support, but, better still, will lead to an ever increasing growth of the spiritual life of the church.

May we as laymen pray, both publicly and privately, that the Holy Spirit may throughout this new year keep each member alive to his responsibility to his fellow man, his Church and to his God.

of church grounds, organization of circles in churches where there are no societies and seeking an every woman in the church membership.

The Blessing Box plan was explained by Brother Jones of Montrose. An invitation for the April meeting was accepted from Louin. A splendid program on prayer was given by Montrose. "Has Every One a Right to Pray?"—Brother Jones. He presented a very touching poem with Mrs. Abney softly playing "Sweet Hour of Prayer." His explanation of prayer as practicing the presence of God was very inspirational, showing that prayer is not a right but a privilege and surely every one can practice the presence of God. "Story of a Prayer Hymn," "I Love to Steal Awhile Away," Mrs. E. E. Carlton. "Recognition of God as Father," Mrs. L. D. McLaurin. She very pointedly showed that we have to recognize Him as our Father and not my Father. "Are We to Pray for Temporal Blessings," Mrs. W. H. Lightsey. The program was concluded with the Lord's Prayer, after which Brother Thompson led in a special prayer for the sick of our town.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON— JANUARY 27

By Dr. J. R. Countiss.

DENYING THE CHRIST

Sparks—"Offended"—caused to stumble—fall the test. Shepherdless sheep—always a tragedy. "Raised up"—a promise so soon forgotten. "Thou shalt deny"—forewarned. "Not I"—cocksureness. "Before the cock crowing"—daybreak will tell the story. "Vehemently"—Peter-like, and like all positive, aggressive characters. "If I must die, I will not deny"—probably true, had he kept close to Jesus. "Nazarene"—with the hiss of scorn. "Warmed himself"—cold fire! "I know him not"—one lie, two lies, three! So easy. "Curse"—a practice excused by the rabbis so long as the name of God was not used. "The cock crew"—stirred Peter's memory and waked his conscience. "He wept"—he saw the Master; he saw himself, and his tears so mixed with the elements within him that henceforth he deserved his name—the rock.

Peter's Denial—Peter had courage. He trusted in self and sword. He was ready at a moment's notice to cleave heads. If some one had only started a fight! If only the Master would fight! But he had bidden the sword sheathed. Peter was disappointed, nonplussed. Non-resistance was beyond him. The atmosphere was tense, thick with scorn and opposition. The company was not conducive to loyalty nor piety. In a swift skirmish, Peter would have been the hero. He lacked the patience and perseverance for a campaign. Here he was, probably unarmed, with a teasing maid and jeering soldiers, facing a subtle ecclesiasticism and honestly desiring to follow a submissive Master. Submissive, of all attitudes! He simply could not understand till he saw a face and felt a look. Then he understood—and wept.

Our Denial—yours and mine. If this lesson is taught next Sunday there will be X-ray pictures of nearly two million Southern Methodist hearts, and strong men will weep. Poor Peter is but a type. Of course, few have put into words his bitter denial and open repudiation, but many have enacted in conduct what they would not have dared fashion in speech. Too many of us comfortably and complacently "stand among sinners" (Ps. 1:1), and congratulate ourselves that we "stand well," that we are not obtrusive, obnoxious Christians, who must needs declare their stand and standards on all occasions. We need not "cast our pearls before swine," but we do need to "confess Him before men." Who has not avowed by silence what he would not for the greatest price declare in speech? Peter merely denied; he did not betray. Do not some of our unspoken denials come perilously near to betrayals? Let us today look briefly at Peter and long at ourselves. If he is to be stoned, who would not slink away rather than hurl a missile? Remember the mote and the beam. Twenty centuries have brought us light and privilege. Wherein are we justified in judging this humble fisherman who was trying to follow One whom he did not yet understand, but for whom he finally paid the forfeit of his life? Who with preachers and good women votes dry and with convivial company drinks wet? Not Peter. Who preaches purity of speech at day school and church school, and talks smut in the market place? Who keeps silence while the cause of righteousness is attacked? Who delights to draw dividends with a profit-mad world of economic injustice? Who would like to make millions out of war that he might endow a college, or establish a foundation? Who sits in an exclusive social circle, open to the rich in purse and prominent in position, but closed to the poor and obscure, regardless of wealth of personality and character? Who denounces the petty thief while stuffing his treasury with the proceeds of worthless bonds sold to the gullible? "Art thou one of His disciples?"

Leftovers—Tight places test character. Old habits cling long. The strongest is not safe far from Jesus. Peter followed afar, but he followed. Where were the others? May the Father help us to know when to keep silent and when to cry aloud; when to be discreet and when to be daring.

Greenville, Miss.

Lady Felt Stronger and Not So Restless After She Took Cardui

"Before I took Cardui," writes Mrs. G. W. Akin, of Somerset, Ky., "I would be weak and nervous and could not rest at night. My back would ache so much. As soon as I began taking Cardui, I would rest better and feel so much stronger, and my back would stop hurting. I highly recommend Cardui to other ladies." . . . Thousands of women testify that Cardui relieved their pains at menstruation time, and that by continued use of it for a reasonable length of time, their strength has been renewed and general health improved. Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. Sold at drug stores.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Genesis 28:19—He called the name of that place Bethel.

Bethel means "the house of God."

Jacob was resting out in the rocky, barren wastes. But the soul need not be fettered by unpretentious surroundings. Men of plenty have found God; men in penury have also discovered Him. We may find Him in humble cottages as easily as in stately mansions.

We need many Bethels. Our life today is packed with a full measure of problems; many encounter great trials; all face temptations, for there are many forms of evil. Sorrows come to one and all. Unless there are counteracting influences, the weeds will choke out the good seed.

But do we fully realize that we largely make our own Bethels? How can God reveal Himself to those who have eyes that see not, and ears that hear not? If we approach God with humble and contrite hearts, the Lord will dwell with us.

Prayer

We realize that "every flaming bush is afire with God" when we come with worshipful hearts.

Men and women in every walk of life are engaged in the supreme quest of life, and the glorious adventure of living with God. May our attitude of expectancy so quicken our spiritual perception that we may discern Thy nearness always. May our homes become Bethels. May our social relationships be sanctified by a Divine Friend. May our occupations become opportunities to work for the Kingdom of God. We offer our prayer in Jesus' name.

Jackson, Miss.

"MOIST-THROAT" METHOD stopped cough in 1 DAY

"My cough was so bad," writes Marjorie Sheerin, Brooklyn, "I called a doctor. He said to take Pertussin. Next morning my cough was gone!"

Extract of a famous Medicinal-Herb relieves Coughs Quicker

YOUR THROAT and bronchial tubes are lined with thousands of tiny moisture glands to lubricate your tissues. When you catch cold, these glands clog and their secretion dries, becomes infected. Sticky mucus collects. You feel a tickling in your throat . . . you cough!

To stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture, use PERTUSSIN. Just a spoonful or two increase the flow of your throat's moisture. Germ-laden phlegm loosens, is easily expelled. Soon—relief!

Safe even for babies. Tastes good. Get a bottle at your drug-gist's—now!

GLANDS HERE CLOG—

● DOCTORS have prescribed Pertussin for over 30 years because it is so safe and effective.

A SERIOUS ANSWER TO A SERIOUS QUESTION

By Rev. W. H. Saunders

In today's issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Dr. B. F. Jones asks the above question, and the qualifying word, "Serious," gives added force to the query and refers to a leading layman in a leading church of our Conference.

In the last few issues of the Nashville Christian Advocate the question is asked by a leading minister of our Church, "Can we have a revival?"

At least these two questions indicate the direction of thought on the part of some of our leaders.

Jesus Christ came to seek and to save the lost, the church was founded and given

Surely the failure, if it is a failure, is not on God's side of the question. the commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.

God is as willing now as He was at the time the command was given; the need for a revival was never greater than it is now, the church was never as well equipped on the human side as it is now, and surely the means of grace at the disposal of the Church were never more abundant and as free as the air we breathe. Why, where is the trouble?

If one attempts to give answer to the question it will not be a new or novel one.

Some one said, "we have been majoring in the minor," and that may be true. "Seek ye first the Kingdom," put the kingdom first, in your thoughts, in your prayers, and be sure and serve the kingdom's highest interests.

It's not leaders we need as much as we need servants. Servants from the top to the bottom.

There is a vast difference in seeking the kingdom of God and seeking positions and places that carry with them the largest social privileges, ease, comforts of this old world.

Take the situation as it is and ask yourself what places are the most attractive and considered the best and most sought after.

Now I am not singling out one branch of the church or any one section of the country. Nor am I just including the other fellow, but as one of our great bishops said a few years since, "It's me, O Lord, standing in need of prayer!"

In fact, I am the least, "not worthy to be called an apostle." Go if you will to the conventions, conferences, assemblies and give strict attention to the amount of time given to measures for raising money.

I am perfectly sensible of the fact that Jesus said much about money and gave it a high place in the economy of the Kingdom, but he did not predicate the success of the Kingdom on money.

No one should try to ignore the power of money, but to make it supreme, "the acid test," is the mistake.

Love to God and love to man is the acid test. The new commandment, the eleventh commandment, is that you love one another. This is our badge, and by this "shall men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another."

During the last several months, and especially before the last General Conference, we heard much about "Back to Calvary, back to the sermon on the mount, back to Pentecost." The direction indicated is wrong. It should be up to Calvary, up to Pentecost, etc. We need to look upward and not backward.

I have been looking through many reviews lately, and of the new books coming from the press—books of sermons—and in but one book have I seen a single sermon preached on the Golden Rule. This book is by Dr. B. H. Bruner, "Great Questions of the Last Week." He refers in this address to remarks made by Dr. Jefferson, the famous, and for a long time the greatest preacher in New York. Dr. Jefferson says: "I have recently looked through two hundred volumes of modern

RESOLUTIONS RESPECTING MRS. SALLIE McKEY

Whereas, it has pleased God in His wisdom to call this lovable Christian woman to the beyond, and her spirit is at rest in Heaven; and,

Whereas, as a Missionary Society, we mourn her departure, but bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well; now therefore,

Be it resolved, that our society does feel a great loss in the departure of this beloved member, who has met and worked with us for many long years, always striving to serve the cause of God; and be it further

Resolved, That we cherish her memory, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, and a copy sent the bereaved family.

Be it resolved further, that by these we extend to the grieved loved ones our deepest sympathy and say, "Look to God for comfort," who promises never to forget his own.

MRS. JOHN LEACH,
Social Service Relations Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE BOARD OF STEWARDS AND BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, JONESBORO, LA., JAN. 3, 1935.

At our last meeting in an official capacity, as a matter of form, the pastor presided till the election of a chairman. All knew, of course, that S. J. Hammon would be the unanimous choice of the body, but as an order of procedure, Bro. Hammon was elected and occupied the chair.

We took forward steps and faced the future with happy hearts and high hopes for the work of the new Conference year, as he reassumed or assumed the duties of chairman.

Since the adjournment of that happy meeting, we have been called upon to mourn in a way the Jonesboro Methodist church has never known. The angel of death has visited our body and taken away our highly appreciated, fully trusted, and dearly beloved chairman, and the suddenness of it, together with the realization that his place can never be filled, has made grief and tears our portion.

God, who is too good to hurt beyond His power to heal, and too wise to err, has permitted this providence to come upon us; therefore be it resolved by the Board of stewards and the Board of Christian Education:

First, That we give thanks to Him for the life and consecration and worthy example of Brother Hammon.

Second, We bow our hearts in sorrow, but in submission to His holy and Divine will.

Third, We will follow his advice in death as we did in life; we will not be discouraged nor doubt the Father's love and care for His Church, but we will bravely carry on in the face of loss.

Fourth, We come before Him for guidance in the selection of his successor, and we will accept it as our lot to serve as chairman and members, and we pledge each other our sympathy, our co-operation and our prayers, as we carry on the work of God committed to our hands. We will strive to emulate his example and his virtues and be as faithful as we think he would have us be, and thereby erect the greatest memorial to his memory.

Fifth, That we spread a copy of these resolutions upon our minutes, that we send a copy to The Jackson Independent, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy to his family, assuring them of our prayers and sympathy in this hour of grief, assuring them that their loss is our loss also.

Signed by Nineteen Signatures.

A TRIBUTE TO MRS. B. F. WHITE

Our Heavenly Father called to his eternal home, December 13, 1934, one of his loving and most faithful servants in the person of Mrs. B. F. White, wife of the late Rev. B. F. White. Her absence from our midst will always cause sadness, yet we bow in humble submission to His holy will, knowing that He doeth all things well. She was ready to join those whom she loved.

Every phase of the Church received her cordial interest and support. Not only did she love her Church but she exemplified her profession by her life. Her beautiful Christian life was a benediction to humanity, a blessing to the community in which she lived, and an inspiration to all who knew her. We feel that our lives have been enriched by her sincere consecration and that we will live on a higher plane because of our associations with her.

We miss her. No longer can we see her face or hear her voice, but the memory of her life is forever stamped upon the canvass of our memories.

FRIENDS,
Pioneer Methodist Church.

Doctors Know!

... and they use
liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.

SERIOUS ANSWER TO A SERIOUS QUESTION

sermons and found only one sermon on the new commandment, and that preacher has been dead seventy years."

Theologians have not been interested in this commandment. The Christian scholars most revered have not taken time to explore the meaning of it. The theologians have busied themselves with the historic creeds, and the historic creeds knew nothing about the new commandment.

The congregations of the land have never been trained to recite Sunday after Sunday, "I believe in the new commandment; I believe in loving my Christian fellows, even as Christ loved me."

We must change the word, Credo, to Amo.

With this mind that was in Jesus Christ, the mind of the Good Samaritan, fewer than one hundred and twenty men and women started on the mission given them by the Founder of the Church, and blasted the walls of the Roman Empire, lived in the catacombs, and tore to shreds the most towering system of pagan religion the world knows anything about.

Along this line the argument could be extended indefinitely, but I must stop, because I know the good editor knows a good thing when he sees it, and the waste basket may be the place for this.

Purvis, Miss.

THAT "SERIOUS QUESTION"

made this prayer mine in the work of Glendale.

The spiritual tide began to rise, God touched the hearts of men in the business world, hungry souls came to the church services; they began to find their way to the altar, "by little and little." God enabled us to move on and adjust financial matters, and after about six months a young man was converted, who is doing more with the Intermediates of our church than I've ever seen done with this age before. He talks of his experience and others were brought closer to the Lord. Later an outstanding man of the community was converted from a life of awful sin. His business takes him all over Jackson and he is telling the "good news" wherever he goes. The last Sunday before Annual Conference, another real "booze-fighter" was converted and he asked to assist in paying for the church, and he's telling others about his wonderful "find." More people are praying for the spiritual and financial salvation of the church than I have ever seen anywhere in my life, and there is a general appreciation of the spiritual and soul-saving activities of this church. To God be all the glory!

At our Christmas pageant, one of the shepherds, a man who has been a member of the church for years, though seldom attended, as he bowed at the cradle representing the cradle that the baby Jesus lay in, gave his heart to God and how happy he seems to be since that night! He is asking for something to do for the Lord and the Church in appreciation of what God has done for him! The God of Jacob is with us and the spiritual tide is rolling on. Oh! that God will so direct, bless, and uphold that at the next Annual Conference Glendale will be recognized for its spiritual and soul-saving activities and that its finances may be coming God's way. And may I ask, seriously and sincerely, that you pray for me; for the officials of the church; and for Glendale in general, that Asa's God will gloriously save us spiritually, educationally, and financially? It will be highly appreciated, for "Prayer Changes Things!"

Jackson, Miss.

My Church And I

I THOUGHT my Church was narrow; that in her Service I was denied the joy of life. I thought that other folk more fully entered into Time's rich gain and found great happiness that I know not of. But then I stopped to think! Not Narrow was My Church, but my own Selfish heart craved things of fleshly ease. It was Not My Church; It was I!

I thought My Church lacked Sociability; that folk Came and Went and no one seemed to Care in either case. I thought that Other Places offered so much more Joy to Strangers. But then I stopped to Think! There was No Unsociability about My Church; it came to Me that I had hurried Home, without a Thought of the Strange Face. It was Not My Church; It Was I!

I thought My Church was Dead. I Wept at that Grave, thought that she no longer faced a Moving Generation with a vital Message. My face was wet with Weeping! If we could have a Preacher come to raise the dead to life and fill my Church, how gracious that would be! But I was startled as I stopped to Think that I was Weeping all alone and for Myself! I found that I had never lost the grave-clothes and the napkin still did tightly bind my lips; that no Word to lift the Lost had ever issued from my Heart. I found that I Was Dead! It was Not My Church; It Was I!—Rev. G. A. Lichlieter, in the Expositor Magazine.

Wallet of the Week

THE BRITISH WEEKLY suggests that the much used phrase, "state of mind," from which the world is supposed to be suffering, may be just our "fumbling" way of describing what our fathers would have called bluntly, "the Devil." At any rate, the facts and conditions faced by a large part of the population of the world are vastly more substantial than a "state of mind." No matter what the cause may be, hunger, cold and want are not things of the imagination.

THE TIMES-PICAYUNE, NEIGHBOR ACROSS THE STREET from the Advocate, begins the ninety-ninth year of its history, having been founded in 1837. It has absorbed various other papers and has had a history no less honorable than its years have been long. We hope that, as it rounds out its century of progress and achievement, it may find its field of service widened and that it may enter upon its second century with a full sense of its responsibility to the Crescent City and to the Southland.

GOVERNOR B. M. MILLER, in his last message to the Legislature of Alabama, delivered himself in statesman-like manner upon the great issues before the people of that state. According to the Alabama Christian Advocate, he made an earnest and courageous appeal for the retention of the prohibition laws now on the statute books, and charged that the Near Beer Bill had been a smoke-screen for blind tigers and a colossal failure as a producer of revenue. Dr. Lazenby, the editor of the Advocate, paid the retiring executive the high tribute of saying that not once had he compromised with wrong, and that Alabamians had reason to thank God for such a Governor.

THE HEAVIEST SNOW STORM OF THE CENTURY visited New Orleans the past week. Ordinarily snow would be a commonplace event; but in New Orleans there are grown men and women who never saw a snow storm until the past week. The cold occasioned much suffering and brought heavy loss in the bursting of water pipes and in the destruction of extensive vegetable crops in this section. The semi-tropical vegetation which adds so much to the individuality of the city has suffered great damage. Poinsettias, oleanders, rubber plants and the like are dead, and the flowers that were already in bloom are in sad plight.

COLDWATER RIVER IN MISSISSIPPI is on a rampage again, and reports are to the effect that hundreds are homeless and many are marooned, some on housetops and some in trees; and in many instances there is great suffering from cold and lack of food. There is no more treacherous and uncontrollable river in that section, on account of its quick response to freshets and its narrow channel and low banks. The Red Cross is giving immediate relief, but the great loss sustained by those who have been driven from their homes will probably mean a need greater than temporary agencies can give.

THE OXFORD GROUP MOVEMENT is creating quite an impression in Norway, according to the English press. It has excellent press support and is said to be having the widest hearing of any religious movement of recent years. The movement has also had enthusiastic hearing in Ireland. The Group Movement emphasizes "the witness in the heart," some claim to the exclusion of the witness of the Word. A writer says that the charge is in reality a revival of the controversy raised against Wesley and the revival of the eighteenth century; but he claims that the Word furnishes a background for the interpretation of the experience, "the witness in the heart," which is a necessary factor of Christian guidance. That was unquestionably the position of Mr. Wesley.

THE AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN'S FOUNDATION recently said some straight things about the "developments of repeal and the steadily growing economic and social menace of the traffic" in beverage alcohol. Two paragraphs follow:

"The most serious development of the liquor problem in recent months has been the plainly evident plan of the makers, distributors and apologists for re-legalized beverage alcohol, to cover the trail of increasing disorder, traffic accidents, crime and tragedy due to liquor, with smooth camouflage and suppression of actual developments.

"The complete breakdown and ignoring of every promise made by the supporters of repeal, during the first year just ended, and the disbanding and dissolution of their organizations, despite their advertised purpose to promote 'temperance' and aid in reducing liquor consumption, has created a critical situation in the progress of social reform."

SENTIMENT vs. COMMONSENSE

There are many people who appear to be perfectly content with a mere opinion, even when it relates to things which are vital in life. They seem to make little effort to justify their opinions; nor do they seem much concerned as to the impact of their thought upon others. Such persons may not achieve fame, but they can certainly swell the ranks of trouble makers. In some cases, immature and unsound opinions are served with a witchery of fine speech and noble sentiments; mere commonplaces of thought are clothed with the majesty of gospel authority; and utterly untenable theories are made to appear so plausible as to deceive the very elect. Not long ago we heard a plea for the denizens of social vice and shame, on the ground that it is not Christian to thrust out those soiled characters without some scheme for their rehabilitation. The plea against their ejection sounds well enough so long as we think of them only as human figures. But what about the domestic tragedies incubated in those dens of shame? What about the propagation of diseases which wreck lives and pollute the blood of the race? What about the debasing effect of such characters upon social life and popular literature? Certainly we would not close the door of hope to any Magdalen on earth; but neither can we consent to even an emotional toleration for her wretched trade. Did you ever hear a plea for allowing a leper full liberty until some plan might be worked out for restoring his economic and social status? Oh, you say, he is a bearer of deadly infection and life must be protected! So is the courtesan, and we do not want tragedy in broken doses. It is not tenderness for the denizens of vice and shame that should absorb our thought; but the protection of our homes and the defence of our young people against social disqualification and wretchedness. We mean no discourtesy when we say that, here we need fewer specialists in charity and a greater exhibition of sober and righteous thought. Vice and crime need to be dealt with as the malignancies that they are; and as diseases of the moral and social life which lie at the very foundation of civilization. The divine recovery act of Calvary opened a door of hope for all and it is perpetually open. The church dare not offer social expedients instead.

A GOOD MINISTER OF CHRIST

One of the most thoughtful and appreciative deliverances that we have read in a long while, was an address by Joseph W. Turner, a laymen, of Duluth, Minn. It was an address upon the ministry. The speaker paid beautiful tribute to the minister at the altar of the church: "How endearing and how unique is the feeling that we have toward the one through whom, in youth, baptismal vows are made, who brings us through the open portals of the church, who seals the sacred covenants of each to other by man and maiden as new homes are founded, who dedicates to God in turn the children of that union, and who comes to bring the consolations of the gospel in that hour when dark and stubborn death impends."

From the beautiful description of an almost accidental relation, he turned to speak of the personal qualities which enter into the making of a ministry. Wisdom, oratory, polish, orthodoxy and ecclesiastical, he declared, enhance a ministry and add to its popularity; but that many deficiencies in these things would be endured, if a minister has love, sympathy, the Spirit of God and lives a holy life. He valued the ministry not for its use of historic formulas nor for its obsession for novelty; but as the messenger of God, the final touch of whose message came through prayer—communion with God. The address then concluded with a plea for a ministry that meets the issues of life as the prophet of God; without compromising or swerving from the line in deference to any man; but delivering his message as the mandate of God to his own soul. These are the thoughts of a layman, but one would go far without finding the equal of this address as an appraisal of true ministerial character. It has the ring of spiritual appreciation and understanding.

MR. CHAS. O. CHALMERS BETTER

Despite every indication of a week ago, the condition of Mr. Chalmers is decidedly improved. This news will bring great joy to his many friends throughout our territory. This does not mean that he is on the way to immediate recovery, for he is still seriously ill; but the very fact of his reaction from his desperate condition a week ago brings great encouragement to his family and others. His friends will continue to make intercession for his recovery.

REV. L. M. BURTON TRANSLATED

Report of the death of Rev. M. L. Burton at Gulfport, Miss., January 17, did not reach us until almost the hour of going to press. We learn that the funeral was held at Gulfport Friday and interment was at Hazlehurst on Saturday, January 19. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family, and we sincerely regret that a fuller and more accurate account has not reached us; for we esteemed Brother Burton as a friend and as a capable and conscientious minister of the church.

BY WAY OF EXPLANATION

The editor and the business manager regret the errors which occurred in the make-up of last week's issue of the Advocate; but they were occasioned by incidents beyond our control. One of the linotype men was sick at home and the business manager was at the bedside of his father who was desperately ill. So the entire responsibility fell upon the editor and one linotype man, and we did the best we could. We will try to do better next time.

ARSON?

The news dispatches for Sunday, January 20, carry the story of the burning of the home of Rev. W. O. Largen, a Methodist minister of Shelbyville, Tenn. The implication seems to be that it was another chapter in the crime which destroyed the court house and records of that town a few weeks before. The dispatches report threatening letters received by the pastor; but no direct connection of any party with the fire. We sincerely hope that no incendiarism was responsible for the catastrophe; but if the fire was of criminal origin, no community or state can afford to treat it with indifference. Such an act of violence is more than a matter of local concern, and to temporize with such outbursts is to invite moral chaos. The officers of the law are entitled to the support of all good citizens in the effort to place the blame for this crime, if crime it be.

MEMORIAL MERCY HOME

By action of the three Conferences in Mississippi and Louisiana, the second Sunday in February was designated as Memorial Home Day. It is expected that every Methodist church in these Conferences will give a faithful representation of the work being done in that Home, and then take an offering for its maintenance. Some may feel inclined to postpone it for a more convenient time, but that would only mean a congestion later and would tend to defeat the simultaneous movement on behalf of this worthy Institution. On account of the nature of it, the work being done in this Home can not be appraised at its real value. After nine years of personal knowledge of the work, the editor of the Advocate commends, without reserve, both the Home and Dr. Snelling; and he urges that no church shall fail to present this work and to be represented by its contribution whether it be great or small. A statement on behalf of the Home will be found elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

REV. J. G. SNELLING
Superintendent of Memorial Mercy Home

DEATH OF MRS. A. W. TURNER

As we go to press, we receive a telegram from Rev. A. W. Turner, as follows: "Mrs. A. W. Turner of Shreveport, La., died at eleven-thirty p.m. Sunday, January 27." Both were faithful servants of the church, and Brother Turner's sorrow is our sorrow.

"THE QUALITY OF MERCY"

The Church in its corporate life is the body of Christ. In its inner life and spirit it is the conscience of society and of the world. In its work it is and ever has been an organization for the rendering of helpful kindnesses to individuals and to groups of individuals whose needs have appealed to the hearts of men and women.

It has institutionalized its affections and sympathies and thereby strengthened the influence of its individual members and lengthened the arms of its service to all those in need. Through these ways and means it has succeeded in guiding both the State and society in their duties to vast multitudes of unhappy and unfortunate men and women, and has enjoyed the satisfaction of seeing the state and national governments, in a number of instances, take over the tasks, first assumed by the Church, and later placed upon the whole people. This has been true in the realm of education, in the fields of hospitalization, and in the care of the delinquent and the dependent both young and old. The Church has been glad to lead in such matters and to function as the body of Christ animated by His spirit and purpose until the citizenship has become aware of its collective obligations to those who have been bruised or broken on the wheel of life.

Pursuant to this consistent aim and work of the people of God, the three Conferences of Louisiana and Mississippi have for more than fifteen years maintained the Memorial Mercy Home in the city of New Orleans where one of the unique social services of our generations has been carried on through the voluntary contributions of many and through the sacrificial toil of a little company of men and women who have given their labors in scientific and Christian spirit and manner to the end that the doors of hope might be opened for some who otherwise would have been cast out and trodden under the feet of a thoughtless and sometimes unforgiving world.

We own there a splendid piece of property on Washington Avenue and after these fifteen years have succeeded in drawing the attention of an increasingly large number of people to the character of service rendered, and in saving to society hundreds of human beings most of whom have lived to bless and serve those whom they touch, and most of whom have become living witnesses to the saving grace and power of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

While this work is not limited to denominational lines, it has yet been done by and in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and through the modest contributions of congregations and individuals who have discerned the significance of its unusual character.

The three Conferences have officially affirmed their purpose to continue their support of this institution, and as their servant and their chairman I write these lines to call attention to the action of the Conferences and to state that this worthy work rightly has claim upon us for increased remembrance and support.

Dr. and Mrs. John G. Snelling and their co-laborers among Physicians, Nurses, Teachers, and others, both lay and clerical, are doing a work which most highly commends itself to all who know the facts, and are lifting loads through their daily sacrifices which would otherwise crush the lives of many. In this work of mercy they represent the Church of the living God, and we need to make practical and substantial response to the appeals which come to us through them in behalf of the tragic lives thrust upon their hands and entrusted to their care.

With the co-operation of presiding elders and pastors and people the Home may continue to be supported without burdening our budgets or taxing our congregations. The Sunday asked for is one which will yield large voluntary returns and will not come between any other cause and congregation. We draw very nigh unto God Himself when we relieve the sufferings and distress of those less fortunate than ourselves.

MEMORIAL MERCY HOME DAY

By Rev. W. W. Holmes, D.D.

Dr. J. G. Snelling, Superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home at 815 Washington Ave., New Orleans, gave a full report of the splendid work being done in this Home to our Annual Conferences which met in November. His report was received with applause by preachers and laymen, and a resolution was enthusiastically adopted setting aside the second Sunday in February to be observed in interest of the Home and for the taking of an offering in all of our churches in Louisiana and Mississippi. In charges other than stations, preachers were asked to take the collections as near the second Sunday as possible. Whether in stations or circuits, all of our churches, through the pastors and laymen present at the Annual Conferences, agreed to take the offering and remit to Dr. Snelling not later than March 1.

I do not believe there is a more truly Christian work done anywhere than is done in the Memorial Mercy Home. We did not found this Home nor begin the work. It had its beginning in the hearts of some noble Christian women who, in the spirit of Jesus, wanted to say to the unfortunate fallen girl: "Go and sin no more." Surely it must have been in the plan of God when these good women came to our church in 1918 and said: "This is the work of the church and the church, as such, should own this Home and direct its policies. We want to give it to you outright." This gift the church accepted as a gracious privilege and yet as a grave responsibility. The Home is now under the care of the two Mississippi and the Louisiana Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is jointly operated by them.

It is a home with a wholesome Christian influence where young girls, the pathetic victims of misplaced confidence, and disobedience, may find a place to repent of their sins and have another chance to live a good life. It is very heartening and gratifying that so many of these girls, in fact the majority of them, go out from the home to fill useful occupations, and, better still, to grace the Christian home as "wife and mother." More than twelve hundred girls have been given another chance through the ministries of the Home. More than twelve hundred babies have been rocked in a cradle of sympathy and welcome, and have been placed in good homes—or have gone out from the Home with their own mothers, into whose hearts a new hope had dawned. Certainly the little innocent babies are not responsible for the condition into which they are born. They are not "illegitimates." Their parents should bear this stigma and not the babies. And even the sin of the parents may be more a sin of society in which we all share a responsibility. What a haven the Memorial Mercy Home has been for babies born out of wedlock, and for unfortunate girls led astray from virtue, and for the parents of these girls whose hearts were pierced with a "sorrow greater than death."

Dr. and Mrs. Snelling make this a real home—a Christian home. Girls of all creeds are taken, but none are asked to change their church relations. All are urged to accept Christ as Saviour and live the Christian life. The girls are appreciative and responsive. To many it means a new life indeed—a new life of Christian ideals and Christian service.

Home Greatly In Need

We care for about one hundred mothers and their babies every year. The cost is from $175 to $200 to see each mother and her baby through completely. The receipts have not been sufficient to meet these expenses. The most rigid economy is practiced. No such home anywhere is conducted on a more economical basis. Somebody is paying the bills, and that somebody is Dr. Snelling. It is not fair to him and Mrs. Snelling that they should be called on for so great a sacrifice. The Home does not belong to them any more than it belongs to any other Methodist in Louisiana or Mississippi. If we would share in this Christlike work how better can we do it than by helping to meet the expenses of operation?

The Need Can Be Met

I honestly believe if all our preachers throughout the three Conferences keep faith with Dr. Snelling in the resolutions adopted and the promise made "to present the Home and take an offering on the second Sunday in February, or as near thereto as possible" that our church folks will give a liberal and willing response and that the offering will be sufficient to enable the Home to continue its good work. The heart that would not respond to the needs of an orphan child is void of sympathy. How much more urgent and distressing are the needs of these little babies and their shame-faced and broken-hearted mothers at the Memorial Mercy Home at 815 Washington Avenue in New Orleans?

Don't forget them on second Sunday in February.

EMORY CONDUCTS EXPERIMENT

An experiment in service to the church at large will be conducted during the next five months by the Candler School of Theology of Emory University, it was recently announced by Dean Franklin N. Parker.

On demand from the church, four professors of the theology school faculty will be granted leave of absence from their regular work for five weeks at a time to go out in the church and co-operate with the General Board of Christian Education in holding Preachers' Institutes, Bible Conferences, or Standard Training Schools, usually on a district basis.

These professors are: Dr. W. T. Watkins, professor of church history; Dr. Lavens M. Thomas, professor of religious education; Hugh H. Harris, professor of sociology; and Dr. H. B. Trimble, professor of homiletics.

The professors will wish to give popular lectures, teach classes, and meet with ministers and other Christian workers. No credit will be given for Bible Conference work, but regular credit will be offered for Standard Training School work.

standable language. He presented the fundamental doctrines of salvation in argumentative style, and with clearness and force, he applied them to the fundamental needs of the soul. He preached the law to the careless, the love of God to the sinful, and the demands of righteousness to everybody. His sermons were not dry essays—they were made vivid and living by a personality a-thrill with a great experience of salvation. His preaching was always a personal testimony and he moved great multitudes, not by tricks of the pulpit or the genius of the preacher, but by the might of the Spirit. Whitefield was an impassioned orator and was popularly ranked as a great preacher; and Charles Wesley's discourses were suffused with the emotions of his poet-soul; but neither of them was comparable to John Wesley in moving an audience or molding the lives of men. He preached an average of eight hundred sermons annually for more than fifty years. He was a keen observer of his audiences, and his discourses were in no small degree responses to the interest of his congregations. His vast store of knowledge and the wide variety of his interests gave him entree to all classes and conditions of men; and he was by every token a prophet of divine realities. "Great is the mystery of godliness," said St. Paul, and another said with striking felicity and aptness of thought, "Great is the mystery of preaching."

Few men ever lived who had such genius for work. For fifty years, he covered England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales with a thoroughness and a regularity that is the wonder of the world. All the while he was revising works for publication; publishing his own works and the hymns of his brother, Charles; writing controversial letters; carrying on a voluminous correspondence with a great variety of people; and compiling biographical sketches of all his preachers. Much of all this material is uninteresting today, but it is nevertheless, a monument to the industry and the patience of John Wesley.

In a conversation with John Pool, George Whitefield paid high tribute to the foresight and generalship of Mr. Wesley. Whitefield, the most popular and magnetic preacher of his day, asked Pool if he were still a Wesleyan. In response to his affirmative answer, he said: "John, thou art in thy right place: my brother Wesley acted wisely. The souls that were awakened under his ministry he joined in class, and thus preserved the fruits of his labor. This I neglected, and my people are a rope of sand."

There has developed in recent years a morbid interest in Mr. Wesley's relation to women; not all of it, we think, a credit to the historical fidelity of the authors. However, one thing can be said with confidence: No exaggeration of details has robbed his relations of honor and of a deep undercurrent of spiritual purpose. He fought his own heart for the sake of his work, and he never acquired an understanding of feminine character. In an ill-advised moment he married; it was an utterly uncongenial union, and its only compensation was the liberation of Mr. Wesley for the work to which God had manifestly set him apart.

John Calvin was a great theologian and by the iron of his logic he built formidable defences for the doctrine of the sovereignty of God. John Wesley was a man with the passion and fervor of a great experience of salvation and he founded a Church which has preached the love of God to the ends of the earth. Inscribed upon the coat of arms of the family into which he was born was the Scripture phrase, "God is love," and those words were prophetic of the life that was destined to lend a deathless fame to that heraldic symbol. In Aldersgate Street, he experienced the transforming power of the Spirit of God and he says, "I felt my heart strangely warmed." Into that simple and artless phrase was gathered the power and the inspiration that was destined to affect the ecclesiastical history of the whole world for centuries to come. He followed the gleam of his great experience; his soul was cramped by the mechanical regimentation of his passion; and he startled the Church with a declaration of ecclesiastical liberty, "The world is my parish." And in the glorious ecstasies of his death, his good-bye to the world was a bugle-blast of spiritual triumph, "The best of all is God is with us."

He was one of the most highly esteemed men in all England and, in many respects, the best loved man of his day. In the course of the years, he received recognition in West Minster Abbey, that national shrine of English heroes; but better far, he lives and reigns in the affections of a great international Church. When his heart ceased to beat and there was no more heave of his bosom, sorrowing and grief-stricken friends stood about his couch and lifted their voices in a valedictory hymn. It was the spontaneous tribute of their aching hearts to the most militant, self-sacrificing, and effective evangel since the days of St. Paul. And in that hymn they sobbed out their devotion of one of the most apostolic men of all history.

Chapter II

THE EXPANDING HORIZON

American history seems to fall into two distinct segments. We think of colonial America as the period in which the New World was being stocked with European importations; and of national America as completely divorced from contact with the Old World. There has not been a period since our fathers invaded the primal simplicity of the savage Indian when we were free from European entanglements, nor a time when American life was destitute of originality. The processes of American development, while they have been distinct in character, have always been influenced by the life and problem of the older civilizations. The colonial impulse was not due to the glamour and romance of the New World so much, perhaps, as to the drab reality of the persecution and terror which afflicted the old. Those complicating factors are reflected in every phase of our history and development; and to speak of transporting a movement to us is apt to be somewhat misleading. It does not follow that a great social and religious enterprise is permanently typed in every detail by the land of its origin, nor that in the land of its adoption it may not receive direction and form as original as the mold in which it was first cast.

The introduction of Methodism into the Colonies is a story as thrilling and as full of human interest and invention as that of the rise of the great Revival in England under the immediate leadership and direction of Mr. Wesley. While it is simple enough to locate the points of beginning, it is throughout an intricate and involved record. We can only give here an interpretation of the movement as a whole; and students desiring more detailed information are referred to the sources. A Short History of the Methodists in the United States of America, by Lee; Lost Chapters Recovered from the Early History of American Methodism, by Wakeley; and The Rise of Methodism in America, by Lednum are among the oldest and the most detailed records of the period. The last two give opposing views of the "priority" controversy between New York and Maryland, or between Embury and Strawbridge. The controversy is probably of less real importance to the history of Methodism than to the supporters of rival locations and favorite sons—a support more ardent now than it was one hundred and seventy years ago.

The incident of the visit of the Wesleys to Georgia is not properly a part of the history of American Methodism; and the ministry of Whitefield, on account of his complete separation from Mr. Wesley, was an independent and collateral movement. When Methodism was planted in America there was already a well established cultural life—a projection of eighteenth century England, modified by the primitive conditions and necessities of the New World. It was by no means a uniform culture; for the process of assimilating the various elements of the population into a distinct American type was far from being complete. This statement is true also of the religious stratification of the country—New England was Calvinistic in faith, Pennsylvania was Quaker, and Virginia was Church of England. The introduction of Methodism, however, did not depend so much upon a hospitable theological atmosphere, as upon finding a place where spiritual want or ecclesiastical dissatisfaction created a need for its peculiar message. The enthusiasms and the emotional excesses of the Methodists were not so disturbing to the American pioneer as to the more staid and sedate Englishman; but its rigorous exactions as to personal conduct were not more acceptable to the dissolute and licentious colonist than to his brother in sin across the ocean. So the problem in the transference of the Wesleyan movement to the New World was not that of finding tolerance for it, but of creating a hunger for the holiness of life and the purity of spirit which were the goal and emphasis of its message.

Before we begin the study of the actual details of the story, we must devote some attention to a few incidental questions. A surprising fact is that the introduction of Methodism should have been so long deferred. One can scarcely conceive of a great religious movement stirring all England and raising a commotion among all classes and churches; and, yet, remaining unknown in America for approximately twenty-seven years. But such was the case. It would seem that some acquaintance with it must have been had through the Church of England, of which Mr. Wesley was a clergyman. The answer is that the Establishment never accepted the Revival and it would certainly not be disposed to propagate it. But why was it not brought over as an incident of trade? At least some who came as tradesmen would retain their religious allegiance in the New World. But it must be remembered that the converts of Mr. Wesley were neither men of travel nor of trade; they were in the main small tradesmen; artisans, miners, weavers and commercially unimportant folk. The day of Methodism's invasion of commerce and culture had not arrived. Again, it seems that it might have drifted in with the normal flow of emigration. But the flow of English emigrants ceased before the beginning of the Wesleyan Revival in England—America had lost its charm for the English adventurer. There was, therefore, no natural outlet and no sufficient means or incentive for the immediate and direct propagation of the movement.

A second element of surprise is the voluntary and sporadic character of its ultimate coming. England's reputation as a colonizer would lead one to feel that the transplanting of Methodism should have been more definitely planned; and that such an important event

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. W. E. Akin, of Athens Circuit, Louisiana Conference, send us an appreciated note. He assures us of his interest in and support of the Advocate.

Rev. A. A. Collins, pastor of Bernice charge, sends us a word of cheer from his work. We trust that all his aspirations for the charge may be realized.

Dr. Henry T. Carley says that the "extension" of a district is made up by the "intension" of a charge. He gives a good report of Ruston and Ruston people.

We thank Rev. D. B. Boddie for an encouraging word. The reports from Lake Providence indicate a very happy and helpful relation for both pastor and people.

Mr. C. C. Windham, lay leader of the Lena charge, Mississippi Conference, says that Rev. E. W. Ulmer is held in highest esteem by his people and a good year is expected.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, of North Mississippi, a good friend of the editor, has the Advocate sent to his daughter and to his father-in-law. That is a testimonial worth while.

Rev. S. J. McLean writes that he is putting on a campaign to pay off the church debt at Gibsland, and that he hopes after that is done to be able to do some other things.

The meeting of the Ministerial Association of the Aberdeen District, Amory, Miss., has been changed to February 12, on account of conflicting meetings on the date previously fixed.

Rev. Ira Flowers, of Covington, La., has gone to a clinic in Oklahoma City with his baby. The child has a very bad case of eczema, and that hospital seems to offer the only hope for relief.

Dr. W. P. Buhrman, presiding elder, announces four institutes for the pastors and church officers of Aberdeen District, as follows: Amory, Feb. 5.; Houston, Feb. 6; Pontotoc, Feb. 7; Water Valley, Feb. 8.

Mr. B. D. Talley, a layman from Bogalusa, called at the office, Friday. We are sorry to have missed him. We appreciate the call and we hope that he will give us another chance when he is in town again.

Rev. J. R. Countiss writes that three of his preachers, W. W. Jones, W. C. Galceran, Jr., and C. W. Avery, have been ill with flu, and that nearly every home in that section has been afflicted with it.

Rev. W. F. Roberts, newly appointed pastor of Franklin charge, reports that he is on the field and has been given a gracious reception. He looks forward to a happy and a fruitful ministry in Franklin.

A note from Rev. L. W. Cain, Winnsboro, La., assures us of his interest in and appreciation of the Advocate. He says that the debt on the church building is a great hindrance to his work, in that delightful charge.

Iuka Methodist Church, according to Rev. S. E. Ashmore, the pastor, is in the midst of a building program on the "pay as you go" plan. The church is meeting its budget regularly while it carries forward the building enterprise.

An appreciated letter from Mrs. T. H. Porter, Senatobia, Miss., speaks in very complimentary terms of Rev. A. C. McCorkle and his wife, who came to Senatobia by appointment of the last Conference. Thank you, sister Porter.

The January meeting of the Ministerial Association of Columbus District met in Starkville on the 15th. Rev. T. E. Gregory and Rev. S. H. Caffey were the speakers on the program and Rev. W. B. Baker conducted the round-table discussion.

In the sudden death of Judge J. E. Reynolds, a resident of Shreveport and a brother-in-law of Bishop Dobbs, the Methodist Church has lost a faithful member and the state a good citizen. His death occurred on January 17, and his body was interred in Arcadia.

Rev. R. G. Moore calls attention to the omission of Leland Church from the list of charges receiving 50 or more new members last year. Leland received 85, and has received 12 since Conference. The Woman's Missionary Society with 55 members raised $1,405.

Mrs. William Hill Jordan announces the marriage of her daughter Ottice, to Mr. Alva E. Swanson, at Vicksburg, Miss., on December 22. The bride is the daughter of the late Rev. W. H. Jordan of the Louisiana Conference. The Advocate extends congratulations and good wishes.

The Preachers' Meeting of the Greenwood District will meet at Drew, Miss., on the evening of January 31 and continue through the following day. The program includes Spiritual Life, Evangelism, Christian Education, Church Finances, and closes with a consecration service.

Mr. R. H. Nelson, lay leader of the Shreveport District, asks us to make announcement of the District-wide Efficiency Institute to be held at First Church, Shreveport, February 3 and 4. Brother Nelson says that the lay leaders are visiting all boards, and with good effect.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs has accepted invitations to preach at First Church and at St. Mark's, New Orleans, on Sunday, March 10. He will preach in the morning at First Church, will visit Epworth at the beginning of the evening service, and will then go to St. Mark's for the evening service.

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, Mansfield, La., will deliver the address on Evangelism at both the Missionary Institutes for the New Orleans District. The first will be at Morgan City on the morning of February 10, and the other at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, that evening. Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, missionaries to the Congo, will be present and speak at both meetings.

Rev. F. M. Casey sends news of the Institute on Evangelism for the southern group of the Vicksburg District. The meeting was held in Jefferson St. Church, Natchez, and seven of the eight preachers were present with their wives. Dr. and Mrs. Lewis, of the Congo Mission, were the speakers. W. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, was present also. The meeting was both inspiring and helpful.

Methodist Women

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., president of the Louisiana Conference was privileged to attend two most interesting meetings early in January of which she writes as follows:

"Attending the meeting of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching in Atlanta, Ga., with the privilege of sitting in the following day on the meeting of the Interracial Committee constituted an interesting experience for your president. They were remarkable meetings in many respects, serving to bring together leaders of many denominations and of both colors for a frank discussion of race relationships. As a Methodist, I came away more proud than ever of the work we have been doing and the progress we could report. Our women have been left free to pioneer, hence we've carried on kindred work for years. Other denominations are rapidly joining, but so far Methodists have shown the greatest interest and have signed the anti-lynching pledge in largest numbers.

"The reports were encouraging in that there were 50% fewer lynchings in 1934 than the year previous, also that 55 lynchings had been prevented. The work of the Association is solely educational. As a first step, it set about showing that the vast majority of these mob murders were not to 'protect Southern womanhood' as only one out of five concerned that charge. The Association is now studying underlying conditions and causes for these outbreaks.

"The whole group was invited to Tuskegee Institute, where we heard Dr. Carver tell of his experiments with peanut oil in treating infantile paralysis. The school has an able faculty which seems to be carrying on in the spirit of Booker T. Washington, 'We shall prosper in proportion as we learn to dignify and glorify labor and put brains and skill into the common occupations of life.'"

ANNUAL MEETING WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, South, St. Louis, Missouri, March 12-18, 1935.

Standing committees will meet Tuesday, March 12. An educational conference, the sessions committees, and the executive committee will meet Wednesday, March 13. The first session of the Council meeting will be held Thursday, beginning at nine a. m.

Among the speakers who will direct our worship and bring inspirational messages are Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, and Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, who will have charge of the daily worship periods at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m.; Dr. H. C. Tucker of Brazil, Missionaries and Deaconesses; Bishop Edwin H. Hughes who will deliver the annual sermon Sunday morning; Bishop John M. Moore who will consecrate the candidates Sunday evening. Bishop Moore, Miss Lena Phillips, and Mrs. J. W. Mills will be special speakers on Saturday, Anniversary Day.

The program for this day giving fitting emphasis to the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Council, which held its first session in St. John's Church, St. Louis, in 1911—will begin with the celebration of the Holy Communion in the morning, and close with an anniversary dinner in the evening.

Mrs. E. P. Wetterau, President of Centenary Auxiliary, 2820 Henrietta Avenue, St. Louis, is official hostess for the meeting, and Mrs. H. F. Clinger, 323 Clara Avenue, will receive reservations for the Anniversary dinner. Mrs. S. E. Williams, 4233 Shenandoah Avenue, St. Louis, is General chairman; Mrs. Samuel D. Nichols, 7210 South Bristol Drive, St. Louis, chairman of Homes. The Jefferson Hotel will be hotel headquarters.

Concerning Railway rates: In the Southwestern Division and other territories from which attendance is expected, (except the Southeastern Division), reduced rates on the straight certificate plan have been granted, provided certificates show the purchase of one-way first-class tickets on authorized dates of sale from points from which the fare is 75c or more; and provided 100 persons are recorded who have traveled by rail and met conditions specified by the railroad authorities. Certificates will be issued on request. Return ticket will be limited to thirty days from date of sale of original ticket.

Railroads in the Southeastern Division have in effect daily, reduced round trip fares on a basis of 2c per mile in each direction, bearing limit of fifteen days in addition to date of sale. These will be honored in pullman cars. The Southeastern roads have in effect also, one-way coach fares on the basis of 11-2c per mile, and round trip tickets may be purchased for double that basis with a thirty day limit.

Round trip tickets of all classes including clergy tickets, if the tickets are from points which the one-way fare is $2.00 or more, will be counted in arriving at the minimum attendance by rail of 100.

Certificates and return portions of round trip tickets should be presented promptly to the secretary in charge of certificates, to be properly registered. Return portions of round trip tickets will be returned at once to owners when registered. Certificates must be endorsed by Secretary of the Council and validated by the railroad agent on the proper date.

Selling dates for tickets with certificates from Louisiana and Natchez, Miss., will be March 8-17 inclusive. Validation dates, March 12 to 16, and 18. Final honoring date March 21.

Publicity agents are requested to take note of these dates, and to urge all who are to attend the meeting, to travel by rail and to purchase tickets to St. Louis on the proper selling dates.

The number of tickets purchased should as nearly as practicable, reflect the actual attendance, thus may we prove our appreciation of the courtesy of the Railroads.

A large attendance by rail will be a qualification for rates another year.

MRS. J. W. PERRY, President.
MRS. F. S. PARKER, Secretary.

FROM CRAWFORD STREET, VICKSBURG

Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, Miss., is "forgetting the things that are behind, and reaching forth unto the things that are before, and pressing toward the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

When the pastor and his family arrived at the parsonage, November 23, they found a warm welcome and a warm dinner awaiting them. A committee of elect ladies had the parsonage comfortably heated, splendidly lighted, and attractively furnished. The greetings they extended to the incoming pastor were soon augmented and strengthened by others, both men and women. These greetings continue and glow with increasing warmth.

The attendance on the church services has been quite satisfactory. At times the church is filled to capacity. The communion services are especially beautiful and largely attended.

The two most impressive services held yet were the service held in the morning of the third Sabbath of the new Conference year, when the stewards and their helpers were introduced to the congregation, and the members, betokened by a good old-fashioned Methodist handshake their support to these officials, and the White Christmas service held December 23, when a truckload of groceries and other valuables were placed on the altar for our wards in the Mississippi Orphanage, which gifts were conveyed to the Orphanage by that Prince in Israel, Mr. A. J. Martin.

The stewards, together with some of the other men who are interested, have worked out a plan by which the interest on the debt on the church is being taken care of in a very satisfactory manner without the necessity of "drives," and "campaigns," and sleepless nights, and "sole-croton canvasses." And the Floral Club (all honor to their courage, heroism, faith and church loyalty), a subsidiary organization of the church, fashioned, and functioning somewhat after the order of the old time Ladies Aid, have very graciously agreed to retire a thousand dollar bond this year, and they have almost money enough in the treasury at the present time to redeem their promise.

All the machinery of the church seems to be well-adjusted and operating smoothly and efficiently, and the prospect pleases.

We are looking forward with much interest and fond anticipations to January 27, when Bishop H. M. Dobbs is to preach for us.

T. J. O'NEIL, Pastor.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT NOTES

By Rev. H. M. McCormack, Jr.

Preachers Meet. Many preachers expressed themselves as believing that the last meeting of the District Pastors' Association was the most successful in recent years. Place of meeting: Moorhead. Time: January 8. Theme: "Spiritual Life."

• • •

Rev. J. T. McCafferty used as a devotional topic "Spiritual Life and the Wayside Ministry." He gave a most inspiring talk. This was followed by a number in song by the district trio, Cunningham, Beasley and Hollingsworth.

• • •

Dr. A. T. McIlwain, our popular and capable presiding elder, spoke briefly and to the point on "The Needs and Resources of the District." Dr. McIlwain is inviting the pastors of the district for a day-and-a-half's retreat. They are to be the guests of himself, Dr. S. A. Brown, pastor of First Church, Drew, Miss., and First Church, Drew. The retreat is to be held at Drew. We are looking forward to a new and wholesome experience in "pastorology."

• • •

A soul-stirring sermon by Dr. W. J. Dawson, First Church, Itta Bena, Miss., came at the 11 o'clock hour. Dr. Dawson, a recent transfer from the Mississippi Conference, used as his subject "Evangelism and Spiritual Life."

The Woman's Missionary Society of the local church served a delicious lunch at the noon hour.

The afternoon session was the occasion of a series of interesting addresses on different phases of the general theme. These addresses were made by Revs. J. M. Bradley, First Church, Greenwood; W. M. Campbell, Ruleville and Doddsville; R. T. Hollingsworth, Tutwiler, and A. J. Henry, Sunflower. Dr. Claude A. Parks, First Church, Indianola, was a visitor from the Greenville District.

An Honored Deltan. Practically the entire ministry of Brother W. M. Campbell has been spent in the Mississippi Delta, and most of it in Sunflower County. There was never a more universally popular and esteemed minister, of any denomination, in the Delta than Brother Campbell. He came to the Delta when it was "wild and woolly," and since the occasion when he displayed two "forty-fives" in the pulpit, and thereby enforced order in a place where rowdys previously had broken up services and driven out several other preachers, he has had the respect of every Deltan. Those days are over, but still we have a Campbell with the courage of a lion and the tenderness of a lamb—a man of God and a soldier of the Cross.

Prospects. The presiding elder reports the most encouraging prospects of any year of his experience in the eldership. At last the Delta seems to be on the verge of another phenomenal "come-back." The dawn of another fall will see a new spirit in this section. The coming of "good times" will bring a renewed hope that will doubtless prove to be conducive to spiritual as well as material progress.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

I do set my bow in the clouds, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

RAINBOWS

Of the numberless wonders of Nature,
Of the powers sent down from most high,
There is one above all
That my heart doth enthrall,
'Tis the rainbow embracing the sky.

God placed it there in the Heavens,
As a promise to people of old;
There's a color to speak
For each day of the week,
And a promise it still does unfold.

When the hours have been cloudy and lonely,
And you can't find a trace of the sun,
It's bleak and it's dreary,
You're tired and weary,
And long for the day to be done.

Then Iris prepares for her journey,
And donning her gay-colored train,
She tinges the sky,
And troubles pass by,
For rainbows come after the rain.

Oh, ye who are worn and discouraged,
Your souls buried deep in the sod,
Oh look you, I pray,
At the end of each day
For rainbows, the promise of God.

—Florence Brown Luehrmann.

Have you ever noticed that when one sees a rainbow in the sky, he invariably calls attention to it and people will run out in their yards and on their porches to see it? Not that the sight is unusual, for rainbows come often, but we never tire of looking at them. Perhaps they do not always remind us of God's promise that He would never again destroy the world by floods; but coming after the rains as they do, they nevertheless hold a promise.

The day may have been dark and dreary; we may have been sad and discouraged; troubles may have flocked about us; bad news may have come to us; there may be illness and even death, but when we see the rainbow we take courage and feel that beyond the clouds the sun is still shining. It brings hope and cheer and trust and faith.

What we would do without the precious promise of God, we can not even think, and it is sweet to remember that one of the very first of these promises came with so wonderful a vision as the rainbow. We would not appreciate the joys of life if we did not know some sorrow. We would not know how to sympathize with those who need our help and companionship. It is said that the sweetest songs are sung by those who have known sorrow. If life were all a bed of roses we would never develop strong characters.

Aren't you glad that God has given color to so many of the things He has made? The flowers, the trees, the grass, gay plumage of birds, sunsets and sunrise—such a world of beauty, and in the rainbow we find the seven colors, one for each day of the week, so that every day we may find comfort and assurance that He who made the promises will keep them and that we can count on rainbows after the rain.

ABBEVILLE, MISS., CHARGE

Dear Editor: The new pastor of the Abbeville charge wishes to report a splendid start for the new year. The people here have extended to the pastor and his wife every possible courtesy. They have showered us several times with articles of food, and have co-operated with us in all the undertakings we have promoted. During the Thanksgiving season they sent material greetings to our orphanage in a liberal manner, and have given $10.25 to the Lewis Memorial Hospital fund.

We have had our first quarterly conference. The assessments for general work were made considerably higher than our charge paid last year, and the conference graciously voted their pastor a raise in his salary.

We wish for the Advocate its most successful year. May God's grace bless your efforts in sending the printed Message of God into the many homes that are influenced by our paper.

Best wishes,

MARTELL H. TWICHELL, Pastor.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 3

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

PETER'S RESTORATION

Not much time need be taken with the scene and circumstance of this appearance of Jesus by the sea of Galilee. Peter and six others were back at their old trade of fishing, whether with the intent of permanency, we know not. Certainly they were still confused and uncertain how to go about their task. Most of all, Peter was uncertain of his standing with the Lord, no more confident of his leadership among the disciples. He had sinned; he had repented; he had received a special message from the risen Jesus to meet him in Galilee; he had hurried to the empty tomb; he had seen the Master, both alone and with others, but no formal healing had been made of the chasm he had hewn between himself and his Lord. This was the chief object of Jesus' visit as they closed a night of fruitless toil and saw him standing by a fire on the shore in a twilight that was to brighten into day, as a recent twilight had deepened into night. As ever, Jesus came to his own and crowned failure with success. Let us not dwell on the draft of fishes, as men have, in their thinking, degraded the Missionary Epic of the Old Testament into a great fish story, but rather come at once to the heart of the lesson.

Dealing with offenders is always a delicate and difficult task. Jesus here gives us a worthy and luminous example. Peter had made a public denial. Would Jesus expose and humiliate him by exacting a public confession and apology? Such procedure is urged by some individuals and cults, resulting in more harm than good. Instead of a triple confession of denial, Jesus drew from Peter a triple declaration of love and loyalty. His restoration was complete. Never again was he to doubt, much less deny. He was now prepared to proclaim the Messiah he had been first to confess, to live the gospel he preached. He saw and understood.

There is no forgiveness like the forgiveness of God. He ignores, overlooks, no smallest wrong. He is ready to forgive the greatest sin, and all sinners even Judas had he, like Peter, come to repentance and reform instead of remorse and despair. Men overlook and ignore far more than they forgive. The one is positive, the other negative. To forgive is to recognize and uphold standards; to ignore is to destroy them. To forgive is often the most effective reprimand. How could that nameless girl of the street ever return to her old life after Jesus said: "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more?" The word "sin" was sufficient condemnation. To overlook leaves the offender where he was, perhaps confirms him in wrongdoing, and brings no credit to the one who ignores the wrong. To forgive ennobles the innocent and is love's sovereign remedy for evil. Forgiveness is more than forgetting, or not carrying malice—none should stoop to that!—It should find perpetual place in the heart, even when unasked or undesired. It is at its best when sought and given, and reaches its perfection when there is restitution and restoration of trust and confidence. Good can come of evil. The efficient workman guarantees that the iron will never "break at the weld." Peter was not publicly rebuked nor humiliated. He was already penitent and humble. The public need never know the details of personal sin, the storm and stress of family life, nor the breach of friendly relations. We talk too much. It is enough that the Master "knoweth all things," and knows that his penitent disciples love him and mean to be true, even when "carried whither they would not." Peter was restored. Again, he heard the early message: "follow me." Henceforth he was to "feed the lambs and tend the sheep." Henceforth, he was to love the Master more than business or pleasure, more than place or power. Whether he was greatest of all, or loved more than others, was no longer to him a matter of the slightest concern. Peter was restored, and right nobly did he justify the patience, forbearance and forgiveness of his Lord.

Greenville, Miss.

The Methodist Home

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Psalm 90:12: So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

This is a very familiar passage to us all. For years the members of Methodist young people's organizations have repeated it every Sunday in unison. "It gives a light to every age; it gives, but borrows none."

1. The Teacher is God. He is eternal. He has lived all the days. "From everlasting to everlasting, Thou art God." He certainly can instruct us in the value of time.

2. The pupils. We are His pupils. How brief our three score years and ten. There are numerous reminders of earth's transiency in the shifting circumstances of our surroundings. But in our frailty we can lay hold of God's strength.

3. "To number our days" is the lesson. Time is God's gift. To be worthy of the great redemption we must redeem the time.

There is an unending series of sequences. Time is a part of eternity. So eternal issues flow out of our conduct now.

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun Finds from thy hands no worthy action done."

And the days must bring inner growth if there is to be visible fruit.

4. "That we may apply our hearts unto wisdom" is the objective. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." To know God and His will is the lofty purpose. "If any man seek wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not."

Prayer

Thy thoughts are so much higher than our thoughts. Thy ways are so much higher than our ways. We yearn to learn thy truth. We want to grow in the likeness of Thy dear Son. Help us to be holy as He is holy.

Christ spake with authority. He taught the words of eternal life. He died that we might live. Our prayer is offered in the name of our Saviour.

MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA

An appreciated note from Rev. F. N. Sweeney of Franklinton encloses $1.00 contributed by Mrs. C. C. Simmons for sending the Advocate to superannuate preachers. Others who have recently contributed to this cause include Mrs. Josephine Gann, Lena, Miss.; Rev. J. H. Stafford, New Orleans; Mrs. D. T. Burnett, Bay Springs, Miss.

First Church, New Orleans, gave its annual "kick-off" banquet on the evening of January 23, with 225 persons present. Mr. Fred Howell, chairman of the board of stewards, was toastmaster; and Mr. W. H. Black of Carrollton Avenue Church, the principal speaker, was introduced by Mr. C. F. Niebergall. The music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Dykers and Mr. Cooksey assisted by the choir. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Wallace, Jr., proposed a program of 125 new members by Easter; the raising of $2,008 for benevolences and $2,000 on the church debt. The entire program as outlined was underwritten by the various organizations of the church.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE JOURNAL—A CORRECTION

It is a matter of very great regret that someone connected with the statistical tables reversed the figures in the report on District Work from Main Street Church, Hattiesburg; the figures were correctly given in the report by the pastor. Apportioned $212.00. Paid $535.00. These figures were reversed in the Journal, without warrant, but of course with the best of motives, as the statistical secretary who made the change must have thought it a thing incredible for a church to pay more than twice its apportionment for District Work, especially such handsome figures as these.

The report from Crystal Springs should read $190.00 paid on General and Conference Work, instead of $90.00, but the fault lies in the manner of making the report, and not with the secretaries. The footing of table number three of the amount apportioned the presiding elder of the Brookhaven District should read $4,202.00 instead of $5,282.00. We are ashamed of every error found in the Journal, and promise that it will be better when the editors, the secretaries and the printers become more nearly perfect.

Faithfully,

W. B. JONES, Secretary.

DON'T NEGLECT COLDS

RUB soothing, warming Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier.

Musterole is NOT just a salve. It's a "counter-irritant" containing good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor and other valuable ingredients.

That's why it gets such fine results—better than the old-fashioned mustard plaster. It penetrates, stimulates, warms and soothes, drawing out the pain and congestion. Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau, No. 4867.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

Saves Good Money! No Cooking!

If you want the best cough remedy that money can buy, mix it at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money—a real family supply. Keeps perfectly, and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, clears the air passages, and thus ends a severe cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

In Memoriam

REV. C. C. WIER

Whereas, in the providence of our all-wise Heavenly Father, He has seen fit to call to His heavenly home our beloved brother, the Rev. C. C. Weir, who died in the city of New Orleans at the Touro Infirmary, December 19, 1934; therefore, be it resolved:

First. The board of Directors of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, in its regular session, January 15, 1935, of which Board he was a most faithful and helpful member, hereby express their high appreciation of his sterling Christian character, his tender and sympathetic disposition, his humanitarian spirit, his generous and unselfish consideration of his fellowman and his enthusiastic devotion to every cause or enterprise that was for the betterment of human life and living.

Second. That we greatly esteemed and valued his membership on this Board and considered his fellowship, counsel and interest in the meetings of this Board and in the welfare of the Orphanage, of the highest order; that we deeply deplore his absence from our meetings and the loss we have sustained in his death.

Third. That we recognize Brother Weir as the originator of the Orphanage movement in the Methodist Church in Louisiana, and through his toil, sacrifice and devotion this great Home for orphan children had its beginning, and that to him and to his memory the Methodist people of Louisiana and the hundreds of children who thereby receive their opportunities for life, owe a debt of lasting gratitude.

Fourth. That we express to his bereaved widow, and to his foster son, and to the sorrowing relatives our heartfelt sympathy.

Fifth. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the pages of the Orphanage register, a copy be sent to the widow, and a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

BRISCOE CARTER,
JAS. H. MAYS,
ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

A. D. CARPENTER, SR.

On the evening of December 16, 1934, the spirit of one of Louisiana's most beloved brothers went home to God in the passing of Mr. A. D. Carpenter, Sr., veteran of the War Between the States, who was one of the oldest residents of Ascension, at the age of 96 years, 8 months and 12 days. He is survived by three daughters, five sons, fifty-three grandchildren and 101 great-grandchildren.

Brother Carpenter had been a member of the Methodist church for sixty-six years. He loved the Church and never lost interest in the Church and his ministry. He was patient and kind at all times, never thinking of self but always of others. May God comfort and bless those relatives who have been left for a while.

One who loved him,
MRS. WALTER CARPENTER.

BELCHER AND GILLIAM

When my friend, Brother W. R. Harvell, was my presiding elder, he told me of one of his preachers making this remark: "Brother Harvell, for several years I have not gone to a charge where I did not soon find what's called 'a situation.' I had grown tired of 'situations'; so, when I was read out to this place, I said, 'Thank God for a place without a situation.' I've been here three months now, and I declare it the worst situation I've ever met!"

Such had so uniformly been my experience that I had decided that our Conference had nothing but "situations." However, I think I usually make a pretty accurate appraisal of a field fairly promptly—and I've found a pastorate without a "situation." My predecessors have been splendid men, and they've had splendid material to work with. Belcher and Gilliam know how to welcome a preacher and his family. We have an excellent parsonage. The Advocate has a good circulation, (and we mean to increase it). The stewards are on the job; they take care of all the finances, leaving the pastor free to work at his real task. The missionary societies are alive and efficient. Church Schools and young people's work are up to date. An unusual feature is an interdenominational mid-week school of religion, of eleven teachers, meeting at 3:15 p. m., every Wednesday. They compelled me to take Brother Flowers' place as dean of this school.

The most pleasing feature—excepting the fact that there is much evidence of spiritual life—is the beautiful harmony among the churches. Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians are all well organized, and have a fine spirit of co-operation. Dr. Early is most affectionately remembered; and Brother Ira W. Flowers did a magnificent piece of work, inspiring the people and perfecting the organization. We seem to have begun well, and are anticipating a glorious year.

ARTHUR M. SHAW, Pastor.

Belcher, La.

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

The Teacher

THE TEACHER is a prophet. He lays the foundations of tomorrow. The teacher is an artist. He works with the precious clay of unfolding personality. The teacher is a friend. His heart responds to the faith and devotion of his students. The teacher is a citizen. He is selected and licensed for the improvement of society. The teacher is an interpreter. Out of his maturer and wider life he seeks to guide the young. The teacher is a builder. He works with the higher and finer values of civilization. The teacher is a culture-bearer. He leads the way toward worthier tastes, saner attitudes, more gracious manners, higher intelligence. The teacher is a planner. He sees the young lives before him as a part of a great system which shall grow stronger in the light of truth. The teacher is a pioneer. He is always attempting the impossible and winning out. The teacher is a reformer. He seeks to remove the handicaps that weaken and destroy life. The teacher is a believer. He has abiding faith in the improvability of the race.—Joy Elmer Morgan, in Journal NEA.

THE LAYMAN'S NUMBER OF THE NEW OUT-LOOK, Canada, reflects great credit upon the management of the paper, and also upon the laymen of the United Church of Canada. The material was furnished largely by the laymen of the Dominion. The front cover page has a significant and impressive reproduction of a familiar painting of the Rich Young Man, and below are the words of Matthew, "... for he had great possessions." Every article of the issue makes worthy and substantial contribution to the literature and work of the Church.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS IN ENGLAND, as in America, have contributed to every variety of problem, especially for the hospitals. A new law has just gone into effect which taxes motorists involved in an accident $3.00 for the service of a doctor and twelve cents a mile for ambulance service. Another new law indicates the slowness of England's social progress. It provides that boys and girls under eighteen must not be worked over 52 hours a week and must not be worked after midnight. Another provision is that they must not be worked over five hours without at least a twenty-minute rest period.

THE RATE OF INFANT MORTALITY in the continental United States, according to statistics gathered by the Federal Council of Churches, shows decided progress in the prevention and cure of diseases of children, in spite of the privations imposed by the lean years through which we have passed. The number of infant deaths per thousand of live births was reduced more than one-third in the period from 1919 to 1933. The Council bulletin suggests, however, that the reduction may be in the nature of an off-set in a more favored class against a less favored class; and that there may not have been a consistent reduction of infant mortality, or at least a less reduction than is indicated by the total for all groups.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPRESSIVE TRIBUTES to the program of national recovery, which is being carried forward by President Roosevelt, is to be found in the effort to adopt its outstanding features into the national policy of England, France and Canada. The Prime Minister of England claims credit for some of the newer features of it for England; and Hon. Lloyd George, the war-time Premier, is advocating the adoption of a program embodying the main features of our National Recovery Act. The same is true of Canada, and to some extent in France. At the least, the achievements of the Administration in the United States has impressed the political leadership of these great countries; and that is to the credit of the man who dared to revolutionize our public policy in an effort to find a way out of national distress.

"LIQUIDATING" OPPOSITION is the term which the Christian Century, of Chicago, employs to indicate the disposition which communistic Russia makes of its opponents. The assassination of Kirov was made the excuse for the institution of a reign of terror in which 117 persons were ruthlessly put to death without even the semblance of a public trial, and others were sentenced to terms of exile ranging from four to ten years. Apparently the whole bloody performance was merely a method for consolidating the influence and power of the most autocratic government in the world. In Russia religion is an outlaw and there is little reason for surprise at oppression and bloodshed.

THE CRUSADE AGAINST WAR is vastly more than either the effort of anti-war propagandists in the churches, or the resistance of a group of "Conscientious objectors" in general. The movement has great support among the educators of the world. An outstanding educator, speaking in London recently, said: "It is quite right that there should be a lot of adventure and bloodshed and the like in boys' books, but they are mostly based on the glory of war and the killing of foreigners—plenty of foreigners, big, furious and frightfully cunning foreigners with all the odds in their favor. . . . If this madness spreads, obviously Europe is ruined, and it is very important that we should notice that it shows signs of spreading. A friend of mine in an important university in the east of Europe, when asked what sort of training his students received, said simply: 'My students are trained to be mad dogs.'"

THE NUMBER OF TRAFFIC DEATHS in New Orleans for the first thirty-four days of 1935, has reached the alarming total of 13. This is approximately a 60 per cent increase over 1934 and even a larger increase over 1933. At this rate the traffic deaths for 1935 will reach a total of 138. The cause for this alarming increase does not have to be stated. It is only too evident to those who drive on the streets.

BANKRUPT!

It is sometimes said that there is neither inventiveness nor progress in the ways of selfishness and sin—that worldliness travels in a circle. It would be difficult to think of pleasures more elaborate and luxurious than those which were characteristic of Babylon many centuries ago. One who imagines that there is anything novel about the coarse and the brutal types of amusement so popular today, is lacking in a knowledge of history. In the days of Nero, in Rome, coarse and sensuous pleasures reached a peak of popularity; and there is nothing so self-indulgent in our day as to be accounted novel, a stranger to history. The pleasures of the world are rooted in an age-old soil, no matter by what name they may be rechristened; and selfishness has made no new discoveries since Jesus laid bare the futility and the emptiness of the devices of the sinful heart of man. The thrill of discovery and the inspiration of progress is a contribution of the spiritual adventurer; the man who goes forth in response to the call of the Master and brings back daily the treasures of the abundant life. All else is but the oft-threshed straw of behaviour types as old as the race. The person who says, there is no new thing under the sun, is one who sees with the eye and understanding of a worldling. The sons and daughters of God are always on the march, but sin is a bankrupt in all that makes up life at its best.

FAITH AND PROPAGANDA

There was probably never a time when more was being said and written about religion than now. But when one sifts the wide variety of discussion the volume and value of the good grain is not always in proportion to the literature produced. Not long ago a speaker said that in Russia religion is so completely outlawed that not even the songs are permitted unless they seem to attack the capitalistic system; in Germany it had been stripped of the supernatural; in Italy it had been compromised; in Japan it had been made the instrument of the State; and in England it concerned itself with sect and with the philosophical rather than the practical aspects of life. That diagnosis may not be entirely correct; but there is at least reason for believing that the ground is being cut from under practical and vital religion. One who knows the heart-throb of American life can not escape the feeling that we are in great danger of reducing our public worship to a mere forum for propagandist appeals. Half of an editor's mail is made up of carefully prepared "Releases," many of them vitally related to our social life; and half of a pastor's mail has a different approach, but is in reality of the same kind—a plea for some cause or for the observance of a Day. We would not discredit any worthy cause; but we do not believe that the preacher should be a stage manager for a show not of his own production. There are great interests to which the pulpit should occasionally lend itself, because they are vitally related to its chief task. But after all, the church has one mission and one great task—to get the people saved from their sins and to help them to lead helpful and holy lives. And that is a task great enough to occupy its energy of mind and heart. It is central and vital and the force of its effort can not be dissipated without doing incalculable harm to the kingdom of God.

THE TOTALITARIAN STATE

"The Totalitarian State" is a name representing the ideal of government held by the Nazis, according to a publication of "Friends of Europe," which we take to be a peace organization, with offices in London. We gather from this publication that the Nazi state is intended to be a common denominator of the thought, the impulses and the action of the German people—a mean between the oligarchic or the aristocratic ideal and an unbridled individualism. In the promotion of this system, the boys from 10 to 18 are enlisted as Hitler Youth, and under a challenging appeal to "joyfully sacrifice his own small self" for one great aim. We can not express an opinion as to Nazi achievement or fidelity under this scheme of national regimentation; but we can easily believe that such an ambitious reversal of the historic ideals and practices of a great people would not be accepted except at the end of a bitter contest and the utter defeat of those who from time immemorial have been the directors in an entirely different system. On the other hand, there would be ground for an equally violent controversy with a pronounced liberalism of any type. Such a state, one would think, could not be maintained except under constant strain and tension, and Germany is, perhaps, the only great nation that could hope to carry through a "condensed materialized moral idealism." As we see it, the scheme is Utopian and its execution must presuppose a social and political integrity which does not exist; and which no nation could hope to maintain over a long period of time, even if it might be developed. And there is this other alarming feature: should such a huge and perfectly integrated machine be deflected from the moral perpendicular, it would be difficult to imagine anything more dangerous in its possibilities for civilization. We can not but feel that the idea has in it the possibilities of the repetition of 1914.

H. OTIS WHITE

In 1898 the writer met Otis White at Millsaps College. He was the son of Rev. M. L. White, now a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, and he graduated in the class of 1901. He was probably the most brilliant student in Millsaps College at that time, and the same was true of him both as a student of journalism at Vanderbilt University and as a law student at the University of Mississippi. He practiced law for a time in Hattiesburg, Miss., but, by every instinct of his soul, he belonged to the school room, and to that vocation he returned. During the trouble with Mexico and later in the World War he was with the Y. M. C. A. in army work. At the time of his unexpected death, he was engaged in school work in Los Angeles and made his home in San Gabriel. His widow and one son are left to mourn his going, and his body was laid to rest in San Gabriel, California, the home of his adoption, until the day when the true brilliance of his soul shall be revealed and made perfect in the Father's house.

ADJOURNED SESSION OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

An adjourned session of the Mississippi Conference convened in Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, at 10 A. M., January 31. There was a good representation of the preachers and some of the laymen. Every department of the work was gone over both in statements of the presiding elders and on behalf of the Conference Boards. At the conclusion of the business session, Bishop Dobbs was introduced by Dr. Decell, the pastor of Galloway Memorial Church; and he brought a strong and helpful message, using the words of Naboth regarding the heritage of his fathers, I Kings 21:3, for a text. Lunch was served by the church and in the afternoon some board and committee meetings were held. The preachers then returned to their fields, feeling that the day had been worth-while in every way.

THE COLDWATER FLOOD

By J. H. Johnson

The floods which spread suddenly and unexpectedly over the Coldwater basin in Tate, Panola, and Quitman Counties has been the worst ever experienced in this section. No one was prepared for it and hundreds of people found themselves marooned before they realized the danger of the situation. The situation became serious on January 22, when calls for help went out from various points. Rescue parties were organized and hundreds were taken from attics and housetops and other places and carried in motor boats to places of safety. The area covered by the flood was about twenty-five miles long and twelve or fifteen miles wide. The water at Sledge was about three feet deep in the houses, but Hinchcliff was probably the worst sufferer in the list of towns inundated. The entire population of the Coldwater basin were driven out, and some hundreds of people were taken out and placed in hastily improvised refugee camps. The rescue of those marooned was greatly handicapped by the ice which was about two inches thick. Eight or ten Negroes died from cold and exposure; and many of them suffered from lack of clothing, food and fuel; but no epidemic of typhoid fever or flu has developed as yet. There has been a great loss in personal belongings, household effects, and considerable loss of livestock. The citizens of neighboring towns and communities have rendered every assistance possible; the Red Cross; doctors and nurses have been constantly at work to make the refugees comfortable and prevent the outbreak of an epidemic. The temporary situation is fairly well in hand; but the return and rehabilitation of the many who have lost all their belongings and have been reduced to a condition of absolute want will not be the task of a day, nor will it be the responsibility of those alone who have stood by so nobly during the period of emergency and peril.

REPLY TO DR. EMBREE

On the whole, I think President Snaveley's "reply" covers adequately most of the points in the Embree speech to which a typical church college president, such as I am, would take exception. The speech was delivered, I understand, in the academic free-masonry of a gathering of southerners to whom Dr. Embree pays the compliment of assuming that they are not only scholars and gentlemen and connoisseurs of good liquor, but also equipped with a sense of humor. He therefore adopts, in places, a negligé campus diction that is fairly intelligible to readers of newspaper controversy. At any rate such homely journalese as "hoosegow," "doing very nicely (thank you)" "you come right down to cases," "pillars of the community," "sounding brass and tinkling cymbal," and the appeal to "Webster" should not be above the intellectual level of that collegiate yokelry that is, really, so discouraging.

If Dr. Embree will allow me the freedom, which he assumes, of making my own interpretation of the symbols in this quaint southern aphorism I will agree that the ideal college graduate is a scholar, a gentleman and a judge of good whiskey. My provisos would be as follows:

(1) The perfect scholarly attitude will be tolerant of those who, as Socrates might say, are in need not of scorn but of instruction. A scholarship that does not evaluate without contempt the intelligence of the unlearned and the mental ferment of religious faith is a bit lacking in completeness of data. In order to dramatize the formidable forces of obscurantism the speaker probably overstates the intellectual inertia of the average American and the illiberality of present day organized religion. The average American, even the Southerner, has, after all, average intelligence. He accepts immediately and wholeheartedly the pragmatic outcomes of scholarly research such as the radio, the telephone, the innumerable scientific gadgets that are changing our manner of life. Even the most reactionary leaders of organized religion give this unequivocal (if unconscious) endorsement to the unfolding of truth through the laboratory sciences. In areas of knowledge and theory where data is less precise and measurable, where even techniques are yet to be perfected, and where results are less definitive, such as economics, sociology, education, theology, one can scarcely impeach the intelligence of the layman and the churchman because of an attitude of suspended judgment. There is still a minority of the closed mind who reject a pronouncement because it comes from Harvard or the Yale Divinity School, or from Knox, or Birmingham Southern College; but for my part, I would just as soon find evidence of the dumbness of the great American populace in a certain pathetic trust in scientific findings in every field where they are stated with an air of finality. The newspapers may jest at the "brain trust" but the boys way up at the forks of the creek are still voting for F. D. R. and the creative scholars who framed the New Deal. Ex cathedra utterances of a materialistic philosophy from the seats of higher learning have been accepted with the same naive credulity by millions of our contemporaries, men who have abandoned without a single intellectual struggle that simple faith in the divine that alone gives joyous meaning to the confused pattern of knowledge. It is sheer cruelty for a great scholar to confirm the unthinking prejudice against religion of the masses by jibes at the "witch-burning" church of three hundred years ago or the devout lynchers of some remote congregation last year. If Dr. Embree believed that such allusions in the remotest degree represent the intellectual impact of organized religion in America today, I should have to impeach the accuracy of his scholarship in that particular field. Beyond a doubt his data from Dr. Moton's accurate compilations will demonstrate that good whiskey has been the cause of more lynchings than all the prayer meetings since Pentecost.

(2) Dr. Embree's gentleman has one noble quality, he is honest. He achieves this from hard and continuous practice in intellectual integrity. He is also influenced by members of the faculty who are themselves gentlemen. So far, good. This word, gentleman, may conveniently sum up those character and personality developments which are the secondary objectives of the college. But the marks of a gentleman that ought to characterize the college man, would include besides honesty and courtesy, some spiritual awareness, a sense of mission under God and obligation to his generation, the fundamental joy of reconciliation with his universe, a tolerant and benevolent fellowship with his contemporaries, and, please God, a heart warming allegiance to that perfect Gentleman, the Lord Christ. It is strange that one who dares portray so sensitively and tenderly this Son of Man, for whom the church, with all its imperfections and human perversions, has existed should so completely ignore and despise the educative influences of the church's impassioned evangel, her art, her thought, the high and solemn ritual, the cathedral music, the aspiring architecture, a whole segment of human culture that, with all its defects, constitutes the major impact on men's lives of this gentleman for the last two thousand years!

(3) Besides character and scholarship, the college years should contribute something (if not much) to the fine art of living; the art of intercourse, the niceties of menu, the pleasures of relaxation, the consolations, perhaps, of an innocent vice, "to talk with all manner of men and to smoke a cigar upon occasion." These are, however, minor proficiencies of the educated man, the pleasant trivia of life's interludes. They are mainly achieved, if ever, from the society and habits of the home and home town. The college should make one, indeed, a very good judge of such titillations, a very good judge of whiskey. The well educated will have a quick and lively apprehension of the glow, the wit, the fantasy of wine-inspired revellers from Anacreon, Omar, and Horace to the cocktail hour. He will also judge whiskey by its fatal fascination for the brightest and most subtle spirits, by Poe and Burns and Byron. He will appraise the momentary and delusive phantom of delight and the social miseries entailed. He will chart the record of the blood-concreted highways. Marshalling all the data, he will make his decision in magnanimous mood, "if meat make my brother to offend." He will be a judge of good whiskey on its merits and will pass sentence: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not WISE."

An eight-year-old said to me, philosophically, on the day the Eighteenth Amendment was repealed, "Well, they haven't passed a law yet that you have to drink it." But they have, sonny. This law is more cold and cruel and heartless than all dictatorships. It is the law of social convention. It is posted in all drug store windows, written on all menu cards, illuminated on bill boards, proclaimed over the radio in your nursery. It is the law. It is being assiduously codified by maitres d'hotel and restaurateurs, by collectors of internal revenue and high government officials, by bonsuivants, by great scholars and by the smiling, gracious, genial occupant of the White House. It is the law of America. I can only hope that somehow your college education will bring you a sense of values that will make you a judge of good whiskey, and the gentlemanly courage to stand for something and take the consequences.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Writing letters to people is a means of abundant interest. The post office is a place of real human drama. There we get in touch with the outside world. Doubtless in the life of a few the coming of the postman is burdensome but to the many it is a ray of hopeful light. A good letter is worth all it costs and so much more. Love letters bring brightness to the eyes and cause a thrill to the heart. Even just the size of the familiar envelope with the handwriting so expressive may make a day into a song. It is also true that many have been deeply hurt when they have received a letter carrying a sting, a threat, a curse or an accusation. A message of that character is "turning God's glory into shame." In some after years when such a message is re-read the writer will think surely some ghostly mind must have dictated that to me. But what a joy when in some quiet moment we chance to read again some message we have written or received expressing encouragement and confidence!

We can make America literate in any one year we want to do it. The man of seventy learns as fast as the boy of ten.—L. R. Alderman.

should not have been left to chance agencies. But Methodism was not taken so seriously then as now; and England and the eighteenth century were not controlled by any religious enthusiasms, especially the rigorous and inconvenient exactions of the Wesleyan Revival. So it came about that the message of Mr. Wesley reached America through the ministry of men who had been practically expatriated from their homeland; and the movement was set up more to meet the religious needs of the people than because of the abiding loyalties of those who promoted it. And the composition of the early American societies was, perhaps, even more interdenominational in character than was the case with the English societies.

Finally, it seems that there could scarcely have been found a more inopportune and inauspicious time for the rise of Methodism in America than the period at which it was introduced. The movement was of British origin, and when it was introduced into America the Colonies were already in sharp controversy with the mother Country. The "Molasses Act" of 1733 had been practically set aside by the Americans, and smuggling was practiced without shame or apology. In 1764 the "Sugar Act" was passed reducing the duty by one-half, in order to placate the colonists without surrendering the principle involved. Warships were sent to the American coast to enforce the act, and the officers were given power to collect the duties. In addition to this, prosecutions for smuggling were taken from colonial courts and placed in Admiralty courts. This determined move upon the part of Great Britain in 1764 was followed by the passage of the "Stamp Act" in 1765. And at the very moment of the organization of the first societies in America, the "Sons of Liberty," from Massachusetts to Georgia, were preaching defiance and stirring the passions of the people against England.

In the beginning, two names head what we shall treat as contemporaneous columns of advance. They were Philip Embury and Robert Strawbridge, the one of John Street, New York, and the other of Sam's Creek, Maryland. Embury, although a local preacher before he left Ireland, seems to have made no use of his ministerial commission for about six years. The urge to his evangelistic activity came from Barbara Heck, a woman who deserves to be ranked among the saints of the Methodist Church, both as the inspirer of Embury, and for her faith and sound judgment in the counsels for the promotion of the enterprise. Philip Embury and a group of his friends and neighbors, including Barbara Heck, came from County Limberick, Ireland, and settled in New York in 1760. They were descended from German Palatines who had been driven from their homes fifty years before, by the armies of Louis XIV, in that age-long struggle to make the Rhine an international border. Those refugees were settled upon a large estate in Ireland, and there Philip Embury was born about 1730. According to his own statement, he was converted December 25, 1752. Mr. Wesley made him a local preacher, and he preached for a number of years before leaving Ireland. But, as has been stated, he did not exercise his ministerial commission in America for some years. The evidence is clear that he and his family became members of Trinity Lutheran Church in New York; he was a school teacher under the direction of its pastor; and his children were baptized there. When he was reproached by Barbara Heck for not doing something to stem the tide of wickedness in their locality, he offered excuses; but he later yielded and began holding services in his own house. This appears to have been about 1766. Later a room was rented near the barracks in Augustus Street; then the "Rigging Loft," a larger place in Williams Street, was secured; and finally Wesley Chapel in John Street was built. The site of the new chapel was first leased from Mary Barclay, widow and one of the executors of the will of Dr. Barclay, second rector of Trinity Episcopal Church in New York. The rental stipulated was a "peppercorn," a term used to indicate a nominal consideration. The deed to the property was executed on November 2, 1770. The building was forty-two by sixty feet, was constructed of ballast stone, and was finished in light blue plaster. Embury, who was a carpenter, assisted in the construction of the building; and made the pulpit himself. He preached the dedication sermon on October 30, 1768. Soon after the arrival of Mr. Wesley's missionaries, Embury moved to Camden, Washington County, New York, where he died in 1775. He was evidently a good man but with no claim to greatness; and his fame is due in considerable part to his place as one of the founders of American Methodism.

The man who shares with Embury the fame of a founder is Robert Strawbridge. He was an entirely different character from Embury; he was more aggressive and he probably had a larger personal following; but with no more substantial claim to greatness. He was born in County Leitrim, Ireland, where he was converted and served as a local preacher under Mr.

Wesley. There is a tradition that he was ordained by Rev. Benedict Swope, a minister of the German Reformed Church; but no proof of this fact has been found. Asbury says that at the first Conference in 1773, an exception in favor of Strawbridge was made, regarding the administering of the ordinances, but it was under such restrictions as to give it the appearance of a concession rather than the recognition of a right. Strawbridge was a man of courage and conviction, and his pronounced opinion brought persecution upon him even before he left Ireland; and in America he was independent and intractable even to the point of being unmanageable. He settled on Sam's Creek in Maryland; built a cabin for his family; and he immediately turned this forest lodge into a preaching place where he proclaimed the message of the Wesleyan Revival. Later he built the famous log meeting-house about a half-mile from his home; and from that uncompleted and rustic center, Methodism spread throughout all the region. The time of the beginning of Strawbridge's ministry is variously estimated from 1762 to 1767. He appears to have been a preacher whose popularity was largely personal, a man of pleasing voice, an excellent singer, and an affable and congenial friend. His name appears in the Minutes for 1773 and 1775 only. He would not be subject to Mr. Wesley's representatives, but he continued to preach in an irregular way, and during the Revolution he assumed pastoral care of some of the societies which he had originally organized. He lived on Sam's Creek for about sixteen years and then moved to a farm in which his friend, Captain Charles Ridgely, had given him a life estate. He died in 1781 and his funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Richard Owen, his son in the gospel, and the man who knew him best.

There may be some doubt as to whether Embury or Strawbridge is entitled to priority in the establishment of American Methodism; but there can be little question as to which one of the contenders was the more effective in reaching the people. The influence of Strawbridge covered a wider field and yielded a richer return than did the ministry of any other of the irregular evangelists of that day. Methodism in his field gained immediate predominance which was maintained for many years. The first native preacher was won under his ministry, and he stamped the movement in that section with the independence and self-confidence of his own personality and ideals.

Robert Strawbridge had as his ablest lieutenant Robert Williams, whose name will be a credit to the Church as long as it endures. He was an English local preacher who came over with the permission of Mr. Wesley, but without an official missionary commission. He sold his horse to pay his debts, and his passage was paid by a Mr. Ashton, a friend and fellow passenger. He arrived in New York in advance of the first missionaries sent over by Mr. Wesley; and after spending about a month in New York, he went to Maryland where he became associated with Strawbridge. He was a business man as well as a preacher and he was distinguished for his energy and enterprise. He published and sold some of Mr. Wesley's books, but the Conference forbade his continuance without permission from Mr. Wesley. He brought William Watters, the first American itinerant, into the connection; and he won Jesse Lee, the Apostle of New England, to Christ. It is sometimes said that he was the first American Methodist to print a book, the first preacher to marry, the first to locate and the first to die. He established the connection with Devereaux Jarratt in Virginia; and, all in all, Methodism in Virginia and Carolina owes as much to Robert Williams as to any other of the pioneer preachers.

Another of the irregulars who labored in the field with Strawbridge was John King, who reached Philadelphia about the same time that Robert Williams landed in New York. King applied to Pilmoor for a license to preach, but it was not granted at first, and he began preaching without a license. Neither Mr. Wesley nor Asbury seem to have appreciated him; and he was made famous by the advice of Mr. Wesley: "Scream no more at the peril of your soul." He received an appointment at the first Conference held in America, but he located in 1776 and he appears to have died soon after. He introduced Methodism into Baltimore where he preached standing upon a blacksmith's block.

Still another lieutenant of Strawbridge was Richard Owen to whom reference has been made already. He does not appear to have been a man of prepossessing gifts, but was a good man and a faithful worker. His name appears in the Minutes first in 1775 and his last appointment was Fairfax, Virginia, in 1786. He died at Leesburg, Virginia, in September of that year.

It is quite probable that the most valuable and influential accession to the movement as a whole was Captain Thomas Webb, a British soldier who brought to the infant cause the devotion of his soul, the prestige of his position, and the support of his means. He came unheralded into the little room near the barracks, about February 1767; and the brilliant scarlet of his military uniform filled the little band of worshippers with wonder and awe. He does not seem to have stood high in the esteem of Charles Wesley who characterized him as an: "inexperienced, honest, zealous, loving enthusiast;" but his position in the army, his zeal for Methodism, his liberality, and his acquaintance with Mr. Wesley combined to give him a place not possible to any other of that day. He was one of the most effective evangelists in America, the largest contributor to the building fund for Wesley Chapel, and in a little time he came to be the real leader of the movement. He carried the Wesleyan message to New Jersey, and

Rev. R. V. Fulton of Choudrant charge says that his board voted to include the Advocate in its budget for 1935. Thank you, Brother Fulton, and blessings upon you and yours.

Mr. C. V. Hathorn reports the placing of the Advocate in the budget of the Columbia church, and adds his personal good wishes for the Advocate, all of which we duly appreciate.

First Church, Monroe, La., is making a staunch contribution to our debt paying campaign. We greatly appreciate this loyalty, and we appreciate no less the fine people who make up this Church.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster writes of the death of Mrs. Dr. Fred Frater, who was a daughter of Rev. R. J. Harp of sainted memory in Louisiana. Mrs. Frater resided in Shreveport at the time of her death.

In a note to the office, Miss Mattie C. Brown of Belcher, La., says that the Advocate has been in her home since it began publication. The editor makes acknowledgement of her generous words of appreciation.

Dr. George Stoves, pastor of First Church, Memphis, will assist the pastor, Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, in a ten-day revival at Tupelo, beginning April 1, according to the calendar received in the Advocate office.

Mrs. C. W. Camp, Haynesville, La., sends us a report of the celebration of the wedding anniversary of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Roach; and she graciously adds, "Our church paper gets better all the time."

Rev. J. M. Alford, in a business note to the manager, gives evidence of his interest in the Advocate, assures us that he means to keep up that interest, and concludes with commendation of the paper. Thank you, Brother Alford.

Dr. Wm. F. Quillian was elected president of the Denominational Boards of Education, which met in Atlanta, Ga., a few days ago. This wider recognition is but an extension of the feeling which prevails in his own church.

Rev. H. N. Brown was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office one day last week. He came by particularly to inquire about Mr. C. O. Chalmers, and he lingered long enough to speak an encouraging word regarding the Advocate.

Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder of the Monroe District, held an inspirational conference with the pastors of his district, at the district parsonage, January 31. Attached to the agenda was a statement of repairs made and needed at the parsonage.

Rev. W. Angle Smith, recently transferred from First Church, Shreveport, to our Representative Church in Washington, was the speaker at the Lyric temperance meeting in Baltimore recently. His address was well received and is spoken of with highest praise.

Rev. J. S. Maxey, who is serving for the fifth year Mathiston and Maben charge, North Mississippi Conference, has placed the Advocate in the home of every member of the Board of Stewards in his charge. He says that he is expecting the best year that he has had on the charge.

We have an encouraging note from Rev. N. J. Golding regarding the outlook at New Albany, his new field. He plans to meet every expectation with reference to the Advocate, and we feel sure that he will do the same thing in carrying out the entire program of the church in his charge.

A card from Rev. L. W. Sloan, of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, informs us that Rev. L. T. Hastings, pastor of First Baptist Church, Monroe, La., has accepted the presidency of the League for the state. Dr. Hastings is well and favorably known in Louisiana, and will do good work.

Mr. W. B. Relly, of the Wm. B. Relly Coffee Company and a valued member of Rayne Memorial Church, is leaving for an extended tour early in February. His tour will include the Holy Land and we do not know anyone to whom this trip would mean more. He will be accompanied by his wife.

The editor wishes to say on behalf of Mr. Chalmers, the business manager who handles all matters of business, that at the earliest moment possible due and proper acknowledgement will be made of all amounts budgeted for the Advocate. At present the entire staff is working under a great strain on account of the serious illness of Mr. Chalmers' father.

On January 17, Mrs. J. M. Wright of Vaiden, Mississippi, died. She was the last surviving member of the family of the mother of the editor. She was in her eighty-fifth year, had been married for sixty-five years, was the mother of eleven children and not a death had occurred in the family until November, 1933. Two sons died within the last fourteen months and all the other children and their father survive. She was a Baptist, a subscriber to the Advocate, devoted to the editor, and her soul was pure as the driven snow.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, Conference superintendent of children's work, was recently called to Alexandria to attend a staff meeting of the Conference Board of Education. She reports a most enthusiastic meeting, where plans were made for the general programs to be used in the local churches during this conference year. It is felt that the co-operative plan for children's work will soon be working smoothly in all our church schools.

Some interesting accounts of work accomplished last year by some of our smaller auxiliaries has come to our attention. Mangham W. M. S., under the leadership of Mrs. A. B. Beardslee, scored 90 points on the Standard of Excellence. The budget was more than doubled and the committee on Christian Social Relations did some fine interracial work by conducting a Bible class for Negro women.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Rayne, La., with an active membership of nine report excellent attendance at meetings, pledge paid in full and extensive work done on the parsonage. The total sum raised by this splendid group of women was $250.00.

On January 14, zone No. 1 of the New Orleans District, held an interesting meeting at St. Mark's Church, with Mrs. T. P. Bell, the zone secretary, presiding. The devotional was given by Mrs. Geo. Brown.

Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., Conference president was the guest of this zone and the speaker of the afternoon. A fellowship hour was enjoyed at the conclusion of the program. Miss Ella Hooper of MacDonell French Mission School was also a visitor on this occasion.

A talk on Christian Social Relations was given by Miss Maggie Middleton. A discussion of duties of officers was led by Mrs. Greener of Bude, following which was the roll call with reports from all auxiliaries comprising the zone. An interesting playlet, "World Outlook" (arranged by the District Secretary, Mrs. A. S. Oliver) was given, after which a delectable plate lunch was served. The afternoon devotional was led by Rev. F. L. Applewhite, his subject was "The Beatitudes." Plans for the year in Missionary Endeavor were given by Mrs. A. S. Oliver. A play "Publicity Pays," was given by Wesson auxiliary. The next meeting will be held at Bude. Rev. O. S. Lewis of Brookhaven pronounced the benediction.

A poster contest for the year is being conducted by Superintendent of Publicity, Mrs. Stanley Wilson. "World Outlook" is the subject for January and February. A prize will be rewarded for the best set also the best single poster.

Mrs. Newell in her letter to the auxiliary superintendents of Christian Social Relations, says: "Have you studied your community to discover its most pressing needs?" That is the most searching request made of you at the Council meeting in March, 1934. Is it a P. T. A.? Better roads? A clinic for eye, ear, nose and throat, the school house or church under the county doctor and nurse? Library service? Planned recreation for young folks? Any one of a dozen more projects will help to find living."

FROM CHALYBEATE, MISS.

The Chalybeate charge of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, is getting off to the best start in years. Our people were more than pleased to have Rev. W. C. Mattox sent back as pastor for his third year. It seems that our people love him and his family more and more from year to year. He wins people to him, not only by his deep spiritual preaching but by his godly, everyday life before his people.

Soon after his return from Conference he organized his board of stewards. We are holding regular monthly meetings of our laymen. Each church puts on the program each month at some other place. In this way the visitors entertain each month.

The charge raised its assessment for pastor's salary over last year by $40.

We have six churches on the charge, with a good Sunday school at each place.

We are looking forward to the best year's work we have had.

We have nine families reading the Advocate this year, where we only had two last year.

Best wishes to the Advocate and all its readers.

DEWITT WILSON,
Charge Lay Leader.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Remedy at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

M. C. A. secretary, Louisiana State University; Mr. Verbon Gay, Y. M. C. A. secretary, Tulane University. The Methodist students of L. S. U. will be hosts for the conference, with Rev. Joe Brown Love, director of the Wesley Foundation, and Miss Mary Bonner Johns in charge of local arrangements.

The conference will open on Friday afternoon with registration of delegates and a reception tea at the Methodist Student Center. Supper will be served at the Episcopal Student Center at 6:15 p. m. The evening program will be in the Episcopal Student Center Chapel, and will include a candlelight worship service under the direction of Miss Mary Eleanor Lutz, an L. S. U. student from Hammond, and the first of a series of four addresses by Dr. Watkins.

Saturday morning, following a brief devotional at 8 o'clock, led by Miss Mathilde Killingsworth, Dr. Watkins will bring his second message. The student delegates will then divide into three discussion groups. One of these groups will discuss "Prayer," under the leadership of Rev. J. S. Ditchburn, the second group on "The Church," will be led by Rev. J. Richard Spann, the third group will be led by Rev. G. W. Dameron, and a fourth group for pastors and other leaders of student groups will be directed by Dr. Harvey C. Brown.

In the afternoon session, Dr. Brown will lead a general seminar for the entire group on "The Wesley Foundation Organization and Programs." The afternoon session will include also a business meeting, with the election of new officers, and a program to be presented by Southern University. All of these sessions of the conference will be held at the Episcopal Student Center and lunch and supper will be served there also. In the evening Dr. Watkins will speak in the Student Center Chapel.

Following his address, a reception will be held in Smith Hall for the visiting delegates.

The Sunday morning session of the conference will be held at First Methodist Church, beginning with a communion service at 9:30 a. m. This will be under the leadership of Rev. B. C. Taylor. The new officers will be installed and a series of talks will be given by four students on the theme, "What Religion Means to Me." The students who will speak are: Albert Lutz, Southeastern, Hammond; Pearl Hattic, Centenary, Shreveport; Garnold Wroten, L. P. I., Ruston; and Lydel Sims, State Normal College, Natchitoches.

The conference will close with the church service at eleven o'clock, when Dr. Watkins will speak on "The Kingdom of God."

THE CHURCH LAY LEADER

The office of Church Lay Leader in time past has not been given very serious consideration by the pastor or church as a whole. It has often been filled by the pastor without giving due consideration to the work involved, or the man to head up the work. On account of the dual chairmanship of the same Board which existed during the last quadrennium there was some confusion as to when the chairman of the board of stewards should preside and when the Lay Leader should preside. This resulted in a slowing up of the work of the Board of Lay Activities.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

At the last General Conference this matter was simplified and the local board of stewards was made the Board of Lay Activities and the chairman of that board the Church Lay Leader. In addition to this, the functions of the local board was greatly enlarged and increased by adding to the work of the board of stewards the development of the spiritual side of the church as well as the material side. Thus the local church board under the direction of its chairman becomes responsible for the teaching of stewardship, personal evangelism, temperance and social relations as well as seeing that the accepted pledges for benevolences are paid in full, the observance of Layman's Day the second Sunday in June, the circulation of the Christian Advocate, both New Orleans and Nashville, and World Outlook, and finally, but not least, the conducting of the every member canvass at the beginning of the year.

As you can see, the task of the local church board has been enlarged but, as the success of any organization is largely dependent upon its leadership, you can see how important it is that the greatest of care be used in selecting the chairman of the board that is to head up this work.

He should therefore be filled with the Spirit of the Master and in full sympathy with the program of the church and willing to give of his time to study the best methods of teaching stewardship, personal evangelism, and seeing that periods are arranged for the teaching of temperance and social relations and promoting lay speaking.

He should have sufficient executive ability to arrange his committees so that all the work will not be done by the chairman, but that each group into which the board is divided may have a definite work to do.

He should at all times give his fullest co-operation to the pastor in charge, realizing that he is the head of the local church and in full authority to carry on the program of the same.

We therefore come to realize that the work of the Local Church Board of Stewards is no longer the prefatory work of meeting and arranging the local financial program, but that it has become a very virile thing in the life of the church. Therefore the success of the church program will stand or fall with the type of leadership in the local board. Men should be selected for these positions that are willing to take their work seriously and to "study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth, rightly not to be ashamed, dividing the word of truth."

R. S. CRICHLAW, M.D.,

N. O. Dist. Lay Leader.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, FEBRUARY 10

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN SERMON

When Peter made his notable confession of the Messiah in Galilee, public declaration of his discovery was forbidden. The facts were not yet all in. With the incarnation, the life, the teachings, the suffering, the death, the resurrection, the appearance, the ascension, all accomplished, surely there could be nothing more required for the full and effective proclamation of the gospel. Yes, there was one prophecy unfulfilled—"I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh;" one promise unverified—"I will be with you always—"I will send the Comforter." The physical facts had been made manifest, but their interpretation awaited their animation by the Spirit. The machinery was all fit and fitted. The disciples waited and prayed and consecrated themselves in that hallowed upper room. But one thing was lacking—power! A fatal need, then or now! The last touch of preparation made, the power came, came with dynamic manifestation of energy and flaming symbol of the abiding presence of the "Light of the World."

The injunction of silence was lifted, and Peter could preach—could not but preach! And, who but Peter should preach this first Christian sermon? First to be called, first to confess the Messiah, first to receive a Gentile convert, it was fit that he should make the first proclamation of the full gospel of Jesus. The sermon was in many respects a model. He was courteous in his address to the hearers. He appealed to facts of history, to him and to them well known, and to Scriptures which they had received and professed to believe. He was convincing, convicting, compelling. The primal note in his message had also been the first in the call of John the Baptist and of Jesus—"repent." When his appeal closed, the auditors did not waste time in compliment of the preacher nor comment on the sermon. "Pricked in their hearts," their thoughts turned inward, and they cried, "What must we do?" The cry was a confession of error and inadequacy in the old life. No man will seek a new way or a new life while satisfied with the old. Baptism was to follow as a symbol of cleansing and a public confession of their faith in the Messiah. That day some three thousand were added to the handful of the faithful whom Christ had gathered in the days of his physical presence, and we begin to see the "greater things" he promised at the hands of his followers, and to understand why he expended so much time and patience in making the recalcitrant Simon into a "rock."

Pentecost is an ancient event that came once for all in the world's history. The presence and witness of the Spirit is a fact of modern and perpetual experience, verified wherever God's children gather and prepare, and fulfilled where even a solitary soul is earnestly, honestly open to God. It is the outstanding doctrine of the Methodist Church—the least dogmatic church in Christendom. It was the neglected doctrine of the Church when Methodism arose. It was revived when the heart of John Wesley was "strangely warmed." Forever after this strangely self-controlled evangelist, trained in the chill ecclesiasticism of eighteenth century Anglicanism and schooled in the cold and formal logic of Oxford, preached what he felt with a power that warmed the hearts of his hearers so that they, too, "were pricked in heart," and cried with bitter tears and deep penitence, "What shall we do?" For all the coldness of his followers and their neglect of his greatest teaching, the temperature of the world has never been the same since that memorable night in Aldersgate Street, as it has never reached the absolute zero that marked the days before Pentecost. Creation implied incarnation. Incarnation implies the presence and power of God in each of his children. Miserable are we if Jesus was a magician, not the Messiah, Immanuel. Woe to us if Pentecost shall become but an ancient myth, unattested by modern experience and preaching and teaching that demonstrate and repeat its comfort and power.

Greenville, Miss.

GARNISHED TRUTH FROM HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

The "new elder" has made a round and the people are beginning to know him and to understand his methods; in just a short time we are going to begin to refer to him just as "The Elder" as he is showing some signs of real use.

A good spirit prevails over the district, the officials are more optimistic over the financial and spiritual outlook. More has been pledged on the benevolences, and the churches are very much in favor of the voluntary method of assessments. Also plans are working for a general move for evangelism. The preachers are working hard and the people are beginning to think. A spirit of co-operation is being felt and plans are made to get the workers on the district better acquainted. Groups have been organized and programs arranged so that they will be interesting to the laymen. The first meeting of the east group will be held at the First Church, Laurel, February 7 and the west group will meet March 7.

Our presiding elder does not look so much like an elder yet. A lady in Hattiesburg thought that he was a special singer, another one thought he was a salesman and he has been mistaken as an advance agent for an evangelist; some of the people in Laurel thought he was a real preacher; but I am sure that before the year is over he will measure up with the best.

Everything looks hopeful for a great advance along all lines this year.

Sincerely,

SWIFTY.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Acts 23:13—I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die for the name of the Lord Jesus.

As Paul returned from his third missionary journey, he received many intimations that this journey would be eminently perilous. He told the Ephesian elders at Miletus: "The Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city that bonds and afflictions abide me." At Tyre the disciples entreated Paul not to go up to Jerusalem. At Caesarea they "besought him not to go up to Jerusalem." He answered, "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die for the name of the Lord Jesus."

Paul was willing to sacrifice ease and comfort. Travels were difficult in his day. "Even unto the present hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and have not certain dwelling-place; and labor, working with our hands; being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it; being defamed, we entreat; we are made as the filth and offscouring of the world" (1 Cor. 4.) In 2 Cor. 11, we find his own enumeration of the catalogue of his sufferings.

Paul was willing to sacrifice his friendships. "What mean ye to weep and to break my heart?" It is hard to resist friends. Our dealing with young people has brought many frank confessions that friends bring the greatest temptations. Nearly every person led astray has been influenced by associates. But intimate comradeship with Christ can shield from the temptations of worldly companions.

Paul was willing to sacrifice liberty. He realized "bonds and afflictions" awaited him. Agabus prophesied the loss of liberty. He would contend for his liberty. He asked the Roman centurion, "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman uncondemned?" Yet he would sacrifice those rights and become a bondsman to Christ and thus permit God to use him in a larger way. He liberated spiritual forces by his self-mastery.

Paul was willing to sacrifice his life. "I count not my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God" (20:24). "I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." (21:13). There are things more precious than life. We are to resist unto blood striving against sin.

For whose sake was Paul willing to suffer? FOR THE NAME OF THE LORD JESUS. Paul counted all things but loss "for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus." Jesus had delivered him from the bondage of the law to the life of grace. Jesus was his Savior. Paul owed everything to Jesus. Paul's assurance of the future was due to the death and resurrection of Jesus. Now we see the secret of his sacrificial life and monumental labors.

PRAYER

We thank Thee for what Christ has meant to those who have trusted Him. We thank Thee for what He means to us. May we enter into the labors of these heroic Christians with the same vital relationship to Jesus Christ. We dedicate our lives in the name of our Savior.

"I WILL NOT FORSAKE THEE . . ."

Every day
I kneel to pray.
I plan just what I want to say;
I build my phrases, word by word—
And yet I know God has not heard.

A small white bed—
A bowed-down head—
My well-planned phrases all are dead.
"Please!" I weakly cry. One word—
And yet I know that God has heard.

—Gladys B. Legg.

CORINTH DISTRICT NOTES

By Rev. J. D. Wroten, P. E.

On January 21 we finished our first round of quarterly conferences and must say that a very fine spirit prevails throughout the district. All the pastors and officials seem to be in harness and not only ready to go but are already going.

There has been an increase in assessment for pastors' salaries of more than two thousand dollars. Some few charges are waiting till the second quarterly conference to fix the assessment with a view to an increase. As to Conference collections, notwithstanding the fact that one of the leading stations took the amount handed down by the district stewards, which was less than paid last year by nearly two hundred dollars, the stations have agreed to pay ten and one-fourth per cent more this year than last, on these collections. The rural charges have assumed an assessment 1.28% more than paid last year. The district as a whole agrees to pay 39% more than was paid last year.

Christian Education Institutes

This notice is further to emphasize the notice already sent out to the pastors of the district that, beginning Feb. 19, 9:30 a. m., at Holly Springs, we will hold three institutes in the district. The second will go to Ripley, at 9:30 a. m., Feb. 20, and the third will meet at Booneville, 9:30 a. m., Feb. 21.

Those asked to attend are the pastors, Church school superintendents, superintendents of the adult, children's and young people's divisions, the lay leaders, presidents of the Woman's Missionary Societies, district directors of the age groups, and the zone directors of the age groups.

Who is responsible for getting all these people to the meetings? We are dividing up this responsibility. The presiding elder is directly notifying pastors, district directors, and zone directors. The pastors are kindly asked to notify lay leaders, W. M. S. presidents, and Church school superintendents. The Church school superintendents in turn are to notify the divisional superintendents.

That it may be clear in your mind as to the institute you are to attend, let me call your attention again to the zones. Zone one is composed of Oxford, Abbeville, Waterford, Holly Springs, Potts, Camp, Hickory Flat, and Ashland. Zone two is composed of Chalybeate, Ripley, Dumas, Blue Mt., Myrtle, New Albany Station, New Albany Circuit, and Sherman. Zone three is composed of all the rest of the charges in the district—eighteen in number.

Please, pastors, find out as soon as possible how many from your charge will attend this meeting and notify the pastor of your zone how many will be there for lunch. You will likely be fed free at Holly Springs and Ripley but we can not ask Booneville to feed all who will likely be present in that large zone. But in the case of Booneville, if you will notify Brother Luter he will provide a lunch for you at a small cost if not free. But notify him of the number who will be there from your charge for lunch. When the roll of charges is called we trust that each church on your charge will be represented.

RHEUMATIC PAINS

IT takes more than "just a salve" to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the pain and congestion when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application, relief usually follows.

Even better results than the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau, No. 4867.

The "liquid test"

...It ENDS bowel worries
for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

In Defiance of a Certain Common Phrase

By Clare Shipman

"A man must live!"

Who said a man must live?

*Perchance old Socrates, when came the hour to sup Turned quavering and craven from that deathless cup
And begged those friends, "O save me from the Dark, I fly;
Though long and full my years, it is too soon to die;
A man—a man must live!"*

*Or pale Cavell, upon that misty, war-wracked morn, Recanted suddenly; the valor she had worn
Dropped like her cast-off cloak, and on the wind one cry
Wailed loud: "O, I regret—I am afraid to die!
A woman—let me live!"*

*Or it may be, those nameless heroes of today
Who face the murderous insect's fangs, and subtly weigh
The price of Science's needful steps; mayhap these sigh
In pity for themselves, in fear that they must die,
And beg "A man must live!"*

*A man must live? To truckle, crawl, and save his skin?
To lie? To rob? To add a dirty price to win
A longer breath? To strike at pain, and justify Each cruelty because he does not dare to die?
For this a man must live?*

*A man must live?
There is no falser, cheaper word that can be said,
No more malign mirage that has been bannered!
A man must live? There is a cross against the sky
That blazons forth—"A man must die!"*

THE CHRISTIAN WORLD, London, makes use of the term, "Good visibility," to enforce a plea for a clear comprehension upon the part of English statesmen of the aims, ideals and interests of the English nation. Anyone familiar with the fogs which are so common in London will readily appreciate the force of that figure. We are persuaded that no more in England than in America is there a need for "Good visibility," and a definite understanding of the paramount interests of the people and of the country.

GENERAL CHIANG KAI-SHEK, chairman of the supreme Military Affairs Commission of China, means more to the life of China than a great military commander. He is a Christian, is the promoter of motor roads, irrigation and other government projects designed to modernize his country. He has recently initiated what he calls the New Life Movement. Its purpose is to encourage purity and rectitude in personal conduct and to do away with inefficiency and corruption in public life. It is said that this movement is about to cost him the support of some of the political allies who have helped to make his past achievements possible. Their loyalty and support is not a virtue—it is merchandise which they offer in the open market.

THE HABIT OF REVIEWING BOOKS appears to be a scheme for sales promotion as often as it expresses a sincere appreciation of the work under consideration. The abuse of this practice was called to our attention recently by a layman's criticism of a well-known reviewer. If the reviewer had reservations, he did not intimate as much, for he commended the book as being "one of the best books Dr. O_____ has written." The layman purchased the book and, after reading it, he said that its whole tendency is "to undermine the foundations of Protestant Faith, and I personally fail to see why such books should be extolled in the leading (Church) paper." That has been exactly the experience of many seekers for good and wholesome literature; and pussy-footing reviewers have grossly sinned against the reading public.

THE NEW OUTLOOK, Canada, makes some interesting comments upon the settlement of the "I'm Alone" case between the United States and Canadian governments. The statement alleges: "The wet press of both countries raised such a howl of protest at the time that one might imagine the vessel was carrying the Holy Grail." But, the statement continues, it was a rum-running enterprise in defiance of the prohibition laws of the United States; and, although the revenue officers may have been guilty of a technical breach of international law, the "Canadian people are exceedingly sorry and indeed thoroughly ashamed of the whole sordid affair." . . . They "have felt all along that Canada ought to have done the apologizing. Our part in the liquor-smuggling into United States territory was a scandal, and a crime, not only against our neighbor but against humanity. And the fact that American bootleggers were in league with our criminals is no excuse for the crime."

THE MURDER OF REV. AND MRS. JOHN C. STAM by Chinese communists is one of the most brutal and pathetic incidents of modern times. Rev. and Mrs. Stam were Presbyterian missionaries, and they were married in China in October, 1933. The communist murderers were boys of high school age and were about two or three thousand in number. Baby Helen Priscilla, three months old and brought into the world by a Caesarian operation, was abandoned to her fate by the wretched assassins who fled to the mountains for refuge. She was discovered by a Chinese pastor and was carried back in a rice basket over the forty tragic miles along which her martyr-parents had been driven to death. Her tender life will be a monument to the faith and the devotion of the parents she will not recall; and not less to the apostolic quality which has made the Christian Church a reality through these two thousand years since Calvary.

THE CHRISTIAN LEADER of Boston says some straight things about some terms which have recently come into vogue in church calendars and press announcements of services: "Guest preacher has come into style within a comparatively few years. Used only occasionally at first, it now is in the headlines of every religious paper. It imports the manners of a French dancing master for use in a venerable institution called the Christian Church. There is nothing incorrect about it. Nobody can deny that a visiting preacher is a guest preacher. It is simply cheap, tawdry and unnecessary. It emphasizes what is too much in evidence now, the part of the minister. He is the star. He is the clown, glorified tight-rope dancer, ring-master, what you will. And yet all the time behind him is an institution that was there long before he was and will be there long after he has gone. We have too many polite introductions in our services, too much tea drinking in our pulpits, too many smiling guest preachers." Amen!

SOWING THE DRAGON'S TEETH

Two incidents discussed in the Church press recently emphasize the importance of official attitude in the promotion of respect for law and government. The first was a threat alleged to have been made by the mayor of Atlanta, that he would open a liquor store in defiance of the General Assembly of Georgia, if that body should not repeal the existing prohibition legislation of that State. The other was a recommendation contained in the parting message of Governor Miriam Ferguson to the Legislature of Texas, proposing a virtual repeal of prohibition acts by a statute immunizing for a period of twelve months the violator of that law, who should pay a fine equal to the ordinary liquor license tax. Both of these propositions are saturated with a spirit of anarchy and insubordination and utterly inconsistent with official responsibility, not to mention the official oath to uphold and enforce the law. We do not discuss the individuals to whom these statements are attributed; but we do not hesitate to say that such wretched duplicity as these alleged statements imply has militated against respect for law throughout the centuries; and such perverse words are doing not a little to bring government into disrepute now. Such public utterances have ominous significance in times like these; and there is never a time they should not arouse resentment in the minds of all good citizens. We need to ask ourselves whether we are prepared for the anarchy which such utterances invite and encourage. Can we disregard the sacredness of life and property without jeopardizing our own heartstone.

What would be the effect on society if the orderly processes of its regulation should be destroyed? To what quarter shall we look for the defence of our rights and the safeguarding of civilization, if a patriotic devotion to government be dissolved? And who is responsible for leadership in civic loyalty and righteousness, if not the officers who are chosen to administer and to embody the ideals of law and order? The fabric of civilization is too precious a possession to be made the pawn of appetite, passion or prejudice.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate will be found a complete list of the churches and charges which have officially notified us of their acceptance of a share in the Advocate campaign. To one and all of these we make grateful and sincere acknowledgement of this interest and help. Still others are being added from day to day and those will be given place in a subsequent list. We have had information that some others have agreed to participate; but we do not feel that we should enter such without official authorization. We are confidently counting upon every station, circuit and preacher in the three Conferences to share with us generously in this task. If an amount can not be budgeted, just get us a generous list of subscriptions for your share—that will be entirely satisfactory. We have half of the Advocate debt pledged and we wait for other churches to speed us on the second mile of the journey to success. The Advocate debt will be paid, and we want the whole of Mississippi and Louisiana Methodism to have a creditable part in the achievement and in the rejoicing. Every church can have a part and we believe that they will share in this work.

REV. M. L. BURTON

A brief announcement of the death of Rev. M. L. Burton, was carried in the columns of the Advocate two weeks ago; but the long distinguished service which he rendered as a Methodist minister entitles him to more than a mere mention of his death. At the time of his going away he was in his fiftieth year as a member of the Conference; he had been one of the leading pastors and presiding elders; and no man in the Conference was more completely identified with every interest of Mississippi Methodism past and present, than he was. He was a native son of the State, was among the first who registered at the opening of the Mississippi A. & M. College; he was a lifelong student of Mississippi history and traditions; and he was always and in all things a loyal and upstanding citizen. In Methodist circles, his name was associated with every worth-while movement of the fifty years of his ministerial career. He was the first superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage then located at Water Valley, Miss. He and Rev. J. A. Bowen of the North Mississippi Conference were co-founders of the Institution in 1896, and Brother Burton was a valuable member of its board of directors until the day of his death. For three years, he was vice-president and business manager of Whitworth College of Brookhaven; and in his last years, even though a superannuate, he was the business manager of Millsaps College and actively supervised all its affairs. To his integrity, experience and good judgment, the college will owe a debt of lasting gratitude and appreciation. Mississippi Methodism owes much to his interest and unremitting toil for the splendid collection of documents and source materials now kept in the Department of Archives and History at the State capitol. He was twice married, and a son by his first wife and the wife of the second marriage survive him. A good man and a faithful builder of Zion has gone from us—gone to be at home in the Father's house. We revere his memory and we say, "Peace to his ashes."

SOCIAL AND MORAL COLLAPSE

"Wholesome America" is the name of a broadside sent out from 97 Parker Street, Newton Centre, Mass. It is an attack upon movements seeking to give legal and moral sanction to the public vices and social corruptions which have been outlawed by the American public. It seems that the restoration of the iniquitous reign of liquor may not be without effect of encouragement to all other forms of vice—those which are the inseparable associates of drink, and the debasing practices which the moral sentiment of the nation has outlawed as public enemies. It is alleged that a bill was introduced into Congress, on January 9, 1935, to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, with the approval of the President, to conduct a lottery to raise funds to exceed a billion dollars. For our part, we do not believe that the President would sanction any such scheme; but the very proposal shows a degeneracy of political fiber which is both ominous and threatening. Such a proposition could only be made upon the assumption that public morals have sunken to a stage of tolerance for such corruptions; and the very suggestion is a serious commentary upon the state of American morals. But why shouldn't such an assumption be made when the fight for clean movies and the social purity is undermined by entertainments, even in church circles, which consist of impersonations of the most wretched characters of the screen? And to this is added not infrequently

THE REPLY TO DR. EMBREE

The reply to the address of Dr. Embree, carried on the Forum page of the Advocate last week, was prepared by Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College. Dr. Key's name was not on the manuscript and for that reason was left off the paper as it appeared in our columns. We make this explanation and apology to Dr. Key.

THE PRACTICE OF TITHING

By Rev. G. W. Pomeroy

One of the most fertile fields in the Christian life in which to apply the pragmatic test, is in the experience we call TITHING. The Psalmist said to skeptics, concerning the Godly life, "Taste and see." To the skeptic, I would say about tithing, "Try it." Dr. Fosdick said concerning the Christian life—that it was like good music—"It does not need defense, it needs rendition." Tithing does not need defense, it needs practicing. But it must be practiced with an abandon if it is to bring the greatest blessing. At the very moment a person begins to argue with himself about just what his income consists of, just then he begins to weaken the results of the experiment. If Scriptural injunction is not enough proof for you, then try and let it prove itself.

I know individuals who tithe and you can't argue with them about its merits, they know. I know a whole Church that tried tithing and it reached a new all time HIGH in resilient, buoyant faith and in spiritual living, to say nothing of its unprecedented bank account—and that in the years of depression. I saw that little Church burdened by debt, laboring under a defeat complex that came near to wrecking it. The official board along with the membership, laboring under this philosophy of defeatism talked about closing the doors of the church. The question of money had become a cantankerous sore that infected the heart of the Church until its spiritual life was nearly destroyed. A savior was needed. One was found in the experience of a Church-wide Tithing experience that was to be tried out for ten weeks. At the end of that time the Church owed not one penny. The preacher was paid in full, the presiding elder was paid, back debts were wiped out, Conference claims were paid in full, but most wonderful of all the Spiritual life of the Church was at high tide. The Church was saved.

Let's be honest—we really can't find a fault with the plan of tithing, we just aren't Christian enough yet to enter into the only real way to support the Kingdom of God in the world.

MORE THAN SKIN DEEP

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

With reference to the "Color Line" some people flippantly say that it is "no more than skin deep;" but in this they contradict the facts of ethnology and the records of history.

The distinctions of the races are established by God and nature; and these racial lines cannot be effaced.

Some would accuse the Southern people sharply because of the "color line;" but the color line is drawn equally in other sections.

For illustration observe the laws of marriage in states other than the Southern commonwealth. In Arizona the law forbids marriage between White, Black, and Yellow races. In California Whites cannot marry Blacks, mulattoe or Yellow races. In Colorado no marriages are permitted between Negroes, mulattoes and Whites. In Delaware no marriages between Whites, Negroes, or mulattoes are lawful. In Idaho Whites may not marry Blacks, Yellows or mulattoes. In Missouri the law forbids marriages between Whites, Negroes, and Mongolians. In Nebraska no marriage is lawful between Whites, Negroes or Mongolians. In North Dakota marriages between Whites and Blacks are illegal. In Oregon no marriages of Whites with either Negroes or Mongolians having one-fourth of colored blood are permitted. In South Dakota Whites may not marry Africans, Koreans, Malaysians, or Mongolians. In Utah Whites may not marry Negroes or Mongolians. In Wyoming Whites may not marry Negroes, Malaysians or Mongolians.

These laws are not born of racial prejudices, but they are the results of wisdom. Miscegenation between races always has, and always will, result in the deterioration of the mixed population.

Within racial lines crossing of stock seems to have improved and strengthened the parties to the crossing and their children. Thus in England there is a mingling of several Caucasian stocks. Hence, the poet laureate of England sang, "Saxon, Norman and Dane are we." He might have included also the strain of blood coming through the Norman French. This commingling of stocks made the very strong people of England, but there has been in Great Britain no intermingling along racial lines.

In our own country, where our territory is more widely extended, and into which have come great varieties of people, the case is far different. Laws to prevent miscegenation are wise and necessary.

Recently there has appeared a book entitled "Brown America," in which the author predicts a time when all the various racial stocks will have been commingled, and a brown nation produced, different from any of the races which have entered into its production.

This is a mere pipe dream, the racial lines in America will be preserved and no amount of sentimental talk to the contrary will have any marked effect upon the matter.

It is worse than idle for agitators of the North to denounce the South on account of "the color line." That line is drawn in the North as well as in the South. Of course, the colored population North is small as compared with the total population; and, hence, students of all colors are admitted into the public schools; but even in this particular the continuance is opposed by pupils and teachers in many schools.

A few years ago a judge in Detroit, Michigan, ruled that a Negro could own property in a restricted district of that city, but that he could not occupy it. This decision is not cited for criticism, but as a marked proof of the existence of "the color line" as far north as Detroit.

It is very easy for Northern lecturers and writers to discuss glibly the so-called race problem. They can discuss it easily because they know so little about it. And they are not as concerned about their own consistency as they might be. They seem more concerned about censuring the Southern people than about observing the inconsistency of their own people.

If the Negro population in the North were as great as it is in the South, the Northern people would draw "the color line" quite as distinctly and emphatically as do the Southern people.

A few years ago the Northern Methodist General Conference, at its meeting held in Atlantic City, passed a resolution that the body would not again meet in any city where the hotels did not receive as guests people of all colors. That was a case of playing to the galleries but it may be doubted if that resolution can be carried out. It is said already that the committee appointed to provide for the entertainment of the Northern Methodist General Conference in 1936 is finding great difficulty in carrying out the resolution. It is affirmed that several cities, the representatives of which applied for the next session of the Northern Methodist General Conference, withdrew their applications when the requirements of this resolution were brought to their attention. Just how the matter may be worked it is not possible or necessary to say, but the present situation of perplexity and difficulty confronting the committee shows that "the color line" is drawn in the North as it is in the South.

But there is a prevalent habit among certain classes of writers and speakers in the North to abuse the South on all possible occasions. They talk most mournfully about the corruption of elections in the South, not seeming to remember that the most flagrant violation of election laws are not in the South, but in the state of Pennsylvania. Those who know say that in no other state is there more corruption of the ballot box and other misdeeds in the matter of elections.

In like manner much ado is made over lynchings in the South, although there have been notable cases of lynchings outside the limits of the South. A Federal law is now proposed to prohibit lynching and to punish lynchers with Federal penalties. But in all the South during the year 1934 there were less than 15 lynchings and the number annually decreases.

Nobody will defend lynching, it is a horrible offense in which the law is lynched as well as the victim of the lynching.

But in Chicago and New York and other large cities of the North gangsters kill annually a far greater number of people than are victims of lynchings in the South. Moreover, a gangster kills for money. Their wrong doing is inspired by the low motive of greed.

But this base passion has given rise to no lynchings in the South. Lynchers in the South are not trying to get money, but to avenge some of the most repulsive forms of crime.

It is not amiss to say that it is strange that annual statistics are gathered and published purporting to show the number of lynchings; but there are no such statistics gathered about the killings in Chicago and New York and other Northern cities for money.

Again, Southern men and women are consistently opposing and denouncing lynching in the South, and the effect of their opposition has been to diminish this offense against law and order; but is there any such organized opposition to gangsters and robbers in the North?

Now, the truth is no section of this country is free from all sorts of wrong-doing and crime. It does not behoove any section to point the finger of scorn and condemnation at any other section on this account. Least of all should the Southern people be held as sinners above all that dwell in the United States.

As a matter of fact, the number of church members in proportion to the population in the South is far greater than in any other part of the nation; and the type of religion in the South is pronouncedly evangelical. In the Southern churches there are very few heresy trials, and very little heresy preached.

Are the Christian people of other sections ready to assume that the most religious section of our country is the most sinful, and that the purest type of Christianity is the most fruitful of offense?

Surely such an assumption would be an indictment of evangelical Christianity.

We do not need any additional laws for the suppression of lynchings. That matter belongs to the police power of the States; and the more that power is transferred to the Federal Government the worse it is for the States and the national government.

To transfer this duty and authority for putting down lynching from the States to the Federal Government is to debilitate and disorder the enforcement of law by both the State commonwealth and the Federal Government.

the coarsening diversions of polite but not always wholesome social practice. Our church folk had as well realize now that, if the tide of social and moral corruption now sweeping the country is to be stemmed, and if society is to be saved from utter moral collapse, we must keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Any practice which amounts to an apology for the worst in our social history is tantamount to a denial of our allegiance of truth and sobriety. We can better brook the railery of the advocates of vice than submit to the utter ruin of our social life.

QUEEN REKHETRA

Queen Rekhera of Egypt has suddenly emerged from the silence of more than three thousand years; and a part of her romantic story has been recovered from the sands in the vicinity of the great pyramids, through articles which robbers stole from her tomb. Thus the avarice of the ghoul and vandal have been made to serve the interests of Archaeology in Egypt, in helping to solve some of the age-old riddles of that ancient civilization. It is believed that the new evidence will set back the date of the famous sphinx by nearly a thousand years, and that means that the center of gravity of Egyptian history will be shifted accordingly.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

he established the Church in Philadelphia, where he was instrumental in securing an uncompleted building from the German Reformed Church. In that building St. George's Church was opened in 1769. It was largely through the importunity and correspondence of Captain Webb that the first missionaries were sent over, and throughout his stay in America he rendered an invaluable service to the Methodists. He left the country at the outbreak of the Revolution and died in Bristol in 1796; but he lived to see the enterprise, which he labored to promote and to which he gave without stint, an established and self-supporting Church.

The early stages of the Methodist movement in America were initiated and directed by this little group of a half dozen lay preachers whose only authority was their love of God and their passion for souls. From the heights of "Golden Hill" in New York to far away Virginia, they established Wesleyan centers. A stone church in New York had been dedicated, and St. George's in Philadelphia was on the way to fame before a single representative of Mr. Wesley arrived. When Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmoor reached Philadelphia they received from the Methodists a fraternal welcome; and from the hand of Captain Thomas Webb, a plan of the American circuit. After the arrival of the missionaries, the irregulars soon disappeared. Embury withdrew to the north and Strawbridge dropped out of the itinerant ranks. Captain Webb retired from the field with all the English missionaries except Francis Asbury, but Methodism had been established.

We turn now from the study of the irregular and uncommissioned preachers to the period of the missionaries who came over as the official representatives of Mr. Wesley. These were all young men, but with enough experience under the immediate supervision of the Founder to give the movement the form and the spirit which it had in England. The first effect of the presence of the missionaries was to bring system and order and connectionalism into the enterprise. Every settlement where Methodism had a representative became a link in the chain which reached from New York to Carolina; and the preachers were no longer settled pastors as Embury and Strawbridge had been, but they became Wesleyan itinerants.

Before the construction of Wesley Chapel was begun, "T. T.," presumed to have been Thomas Taylor who was one of the lessees of the ground upon which the chapel was erected, wrote Mr. Wesley a letter setting forth the history of the American development, the plans for a chapel of their own, and he requested a copy of the "Model Deeds for Chapels." Then in true Methodist fashion he concluded his communication with a plea for "An able and experienced preacher; one who has both gifts and grace for the work." Who has not heard the benevolent depreciation of words like these: "There is a real work of grace begun in many hearts, by the preaching of Mr. Webb and Mr. Embury; but though they are both useful and their hearts in the work, they want many qualifications for such an undertaking; and the progress of the work here depends much upon the qualifications of preacher?" Dr. Wran-gel of the Swedish Church in Philadelphia besought Mr. Wesley to send missionaries to assist the Americans, as did Captain Webb also; and Mr. Wesley at last acceded to their desire.

The first two missionaries sent were Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmoor. They arrived in Philadelphia, October 24, 1769, and New York and Philadelphia were the centers from which they operated. Boardman's itineraries carried him as far north as Providence and Boston; and Pilmoor, who was a product of Mr. Wesley's Kingswood school, journeyed as far south as Savannah, Georgia. Boardman established a society in Boston, but it seems to have disappeared before Jesse Lee inaugurated the permanent phase of New England Methodism, almost twenty years later. Both of these men, after spending a little more than four years in America, returned to England, January 2, 1774. Richard Boardman remained in the Wesleyan connection until his death; but Joseph Pilmoor became dissatisfied after his return to England and left the Methodists. Subsequently he returned to America and became a clergyman in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and was for a long while rector in a Philadelphia parish. He appears to have retained his loyalty to Methodism and his journals constitute a valuable source of early Methodist history.

The next missionaries to be sent were Francis Asbury and Richard Wright, who landed at Philadelphia, October 27, 1772. Asbury began at once and in earnest the long, strenuous and glorious career to which he was destined. Wright's work was confined chiefly to Maryland and Virginia; but he was not in accord with the ideas of Asbury, and after about a year he returned to England. Asbury remained on the field, even through the trying years of the Revolution, during which he was in retirement at the home of Judge White in Delaware for more than two years. Almost from the time of his arrival, he was a guiding spirit of the work; at the Kent County Conference in 1779, he assumed the control of the societies; he was made Bishop at the Christmas Conference which organized the Church, in 1784; and he labored without ceasing until death overtook him, March 31, 1816. No man contributed more to the making of American Methodism than did this stern apostle of order and righteousness.

Thomas Rankin and George Shadford, missionaries sent out by Mr. Wesley, landed in Philadelphia, June 3, 1773. They were accompanied by Joseph Yearbry, a local preacher, who was later received into the itinerant ranks. Mr. Wesley appointed Rankin to supersede Asbury as his representative. The first Conference met in Philadelphia, July 14, 1773, and Rankin betrayed at once the stern and seemingly arbitrary disposition which soon brought him into conflict with Asbury and the American preachers. Mr. Wesley issued a recall to Asbury; but he was away on his wide circuit at the time and the outbreak of the War defeated the order. Rankin left America in 1777, but Shadford remained until March, 1778.

No two men were ever more unlike than were Rankin and Shadford. Rankin was probably not as self-willed as some have pictured him, but the modest Shadford is not known as he deserves to be. His record is that of a mediocre preacher, but a man of God. He loved the people, he lived for them and he won them. No American circuit that he served failed to report a substantial gain. His two years on Brunswick circuit in Virginia resulted in approximately two thousand accessions; and it was the first real demonstration in America of the meaning and power of Wesleyan evangelism. A great revival broke out and Brunswick circuit became the center of the greatest Methodist activity in the New World. It swept over Dinwiddie, Amelia, Brunswick, Sussex, Prince George, Lunenburg, and Mecklenburg counties in Virginia, and its influence was felt far beyond that section. The Minutes of 1776 and 1777 show an increase of three or four thousand members, the direct result of the revival. Shadford left America with a record of fruitfulness unsurpassed, and the best beloved of all the Wesleyan missionaries.

The last two preachers sent over by Mr. Wesley were James Dempster and Martin Rodda. They came in 1775 just as the fires of the Revolution were about to break forth. Dempster was from Scotland and was educated in the University of Edinburgh. Mr. Wesley had great regard for him; but he was not able to adjust himself to the Methodist ministry, and he remained in the work less than a year. He later became a minister in the Presbyterian Church and spent his life in America. By a curious turn of fortune, his son, John Dempster, was admitted into the traveling connection of the Methodist Church in 1816, and he gave long and useful service in its ministry. Martin Rodda was an indiscreet and an intemperate Tory, who made untold trouble for the Methodists. He labored around Baltimore, and when his indiscretions brought him into peril he fled to the British fleet for safety. He and Rankin left for England in September, 1777.

Of the eight regular missionaries sent over by Mr. Wesley, five of them returned to England; Pilmoor became an Episcopal clergyman, and James Dempster a Presbyterian minister. Only Francis Asbury remained to lead the gathering hosts of the new Church. It should be said for the credit of Mr. Wesley and his representatives, that not one of the missionaries became a reproach to the cause which he came to represent. All of them had their faults; some of them were disappointed with the Methodist system and withdrew from the Church; and most of them were loyal to their country; but not one of them became a traitor to Christ. In the eight years of their missionary operations, they laid a permanent foundation for the Methodist Church which was to achieve ecclesiastical independence following the Revolution. They made distinct contribution to the moral and religious life of America, which we do not always appraise at its real value. When Francis Asbury came out of his retreat in Delaware, he took the place of leadership in a cause which was already established in the hearts of the people. As he went from north to south, with clarion voice he called the dispersed sons of Wesley; the ranks filled anew; and Methodism resumed its interrupted march in the conquest of America for Christ.

The coming of the Missionaries gave to the Methodist movement in the Colonies a new and wider impulse. Although the preachers were under the necessity of operating from the urban centers, they accepted the entire field for their task. In many locations, permanent results were postponed to a much later day, but the missionary was a man of dauntless courage and faith. The local aspect of Methodist development ended with the arrival of the representatives of Mr. Wesley, and it was replaced by the connectional spirit—the soul of Methodist progress. Disconnected sectors were joined in a country-wide movement with a great evangelistic purpose and plan. Under the impulse of this new leadership, the societies had a phenomenal growth. There were no reliable membership records before 1769, but there were probably about three hundred Methodists scattered from New York to Virginia. When George Shadford left, the last of the missionaries who retired, more than eight thousand members were reported—a marvelous record of growth for the ten years of missionary labor.

Still another peculiarity of the spread of Methodism in America, was its unequal distribution. Some historians account for this by saying that it was due to

Rev. H. H. Wallace writes that his people have been very cordial and kind to him, and that he finds plenty to do.

An appreciated note from Mrs. Elizabeth Cassity, widow of Rev. J. B. Cassity, still has the tone of active enlistment in the work. Her home is Ruston, La.

Rev. H. L. Johns, the presiding elder of Monroe, La., District, was in the city a few days ago. He gave a good account of his charge in that important field.

Rev. Ivan O. Donaldson, Montrose, La., sends us a copy of his calendar, a neat folder which he says is proving very helpful in the enlistment of interest in his services.

Rev. L. J. Power, presiding elder of the Seashore, Miss., District, is making full proof of his ministry in that field and office. His second round of Conferences is published today.

Brother De Witt Wilson, lay leader of Chalylbeate charge, is magnifying his office, and the Advocate has no better friend. He has already sent in 8 new subscribers on a quota of ten.

Hon. W. B. Clarke, the capable and worthy lay leader of Monroe District, is already out on his district-wide visitation. We are sure that his aggressiveness will bear fruit throughout that section.

Rev. W. I. Henley reports the inclusion of the Advocate in the budget of Inverness and Isola charge of which he is pastor, and a check for the first payment is sent with the list of names to whom the paper is to be mailed.

According to the calendar of Galloway Memorial Church, the city of Jackson has 600 families to be cared for by the Welfare Association, and Prof. R. E. Steen, I. S. Barnes and Rev. John L. Sutton have been named a committee for that task.

We are in receipt of a very appreciative note regarding the work of Rev. C. K. Smith of Tallulah, La. Bishop Dobbs paid the church a visit and preached on the evening of January 27, and the work of the church goes forward smoothly and effectively.

Our good friend, Rev. L. A. McKeown, superannuate of Merigold, Miss., sends a list of subscribers and with it a good word. One of the few sermons that we have remembered through the years was his sermon on "Remove not the ancient landmarks."

A note from Dr. A. S. Lutz of Hammond, La., brings news of the death of Dr. Lucius D. McGehee, last week. McGehee is a name long associated with church and educational history in Mississippi and Louisiana. He was buried at Woodville, Miss.

Report has just reached us of the burning of the parsonage at Dubach, La., and the destruction of the library and personal belongings of Rev. W. F. Roberts. We understand that the house was insured for $700.00; but we have no further information as to the disaster.

Rev. J. P. Bonnacarrere of Denham Springs, La., makes a good report for both his people and the prospects for success in the work of the year. A Church school annex is being built at Denham Springs; and the whole program of the church is being cared for.

The Advocate would greatly appreciate being informed of events of general interest to the Conferences, such as fires, deaths, and happenings of good fortune. We are seeking to give all the important news of the section served by the paper. Please let us know of important events.

Heard A Lot About Cardui and Used It With Good Results

For over fifty years thousands of women have taken Cardui for pain, cramps and nervousness at monthly periods. A great many learned from their mothers to take Cardui, or heard of it from reports of its good use by others. . . . "I take Cardui for pains in my side and headache," writes Mrs. H. R. Hartson, of Nevada, Mo. "At times I felt like something was pressing on the top of my head. This made me very nervous. I had heard a lot about Cardui and decided to use it. I did, with good results. It certainly helped me in every way." . . . Try Cardui in your case. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

January 27, at their home. The bride of 60 years, although unable to be out of bed, enjoyed the day with her family. Plans were made by the youngest daughter, Mrs. W. E. Brock of Natchitoches, to make the occasion a surprise but when members of the family continued coming Mr. Roach informed those present that they were not slipping upon him unawares but were a day early.

Happy were the hearts of the 27 children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren when a tray laden with gifts was brought in to the honorees who graciously accepted and expressed their gratitude for even the smallest remembrance. The angel food cake on a beautiful cut glass plate bearing the dates 1875-1935 on whose center top stood a miniature bride and groom was then presented and admired.

When the bounteous dinner was ready to be served the guests gathered around the bedside of the bride honoree while the groom offered a very impressive prayer of thanks. Dinner was enjoyed by all.

During the day the honorees reminisced their wedding day. They are the only ones living of the group who witnessed the ceremony. They say their sixty years together has not been long.

Mr. Roach came to Louisiana from Alabama in 1874 and has resided in Claiborne Parish. Mrs. Roach came from Georgia to Louisiana in infancy and has lived here. The couple have been active workers in the church at Weldon since they came to that community serving in the capacities of teacher, Sunday school superintendent, steward and delegate to Conferences. Their home has been the home of preachers and they can recall together the pastors serving the Alabama Methodist Episcopal Church for years back. They have always been readers of the Christian Advocate. Mr. Roach says now that he finds the Advocate especially interesting and that it furnishes enough reading for the entire week for him.

This couple are the parents of nine children, four of whom are now living. They are Mrs. W. E. Brock of Natchitoches, Mrs. A. L. Mabry of Bernice, Mr. Claude Roach of Bernice and Mr. Clay Roach of Lillie. There are ten grandchildren: Elizabeth, Dorothy Jane and Billy Brock of Natchitoches, Malvin Mabry of Shreveport, Miss Thya Mabry of Louisiana State Normal, Mrs. A. H. Farrar of Lillie, Mrs. J. M. Akin of Bernice, Mrs. C. W. Camp of Haynesville, Meeta Jane and T. J. Roach of Bernice. There are eleven great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

SHALL THE RURAL CHURCH FAIL?

By Rev. L. P. Jumper

The alarm is sounded from press, street and countryside that the Rural Church is a disappearing element on the field of Christian endeavor. This fact goes without question yet as we review this calamity there is a cause which imposes a responsibility of such failure, that someone must accept consciously or otherwise as a result of negligence or indifference.

In every place there is an abundance of material which God has provided for the interpretation of his word in living deeds and the promotion of His kingdom. The following is an illustration of the proof of a potential power changed to a kinetic force: Oak Grove, a small country church on the Mantachie charge, Itawamba county, Mississippi, had in 1930 preaching once a month and a small Sunday school for about two months in the spring of the year. In 1935 the same church has its regular preaching services, a live Sunday school, a splendid young people's organization, a local Board of Christian Education, executing the program of the church as outlined by the 1934 Discipline, a Daily Vacation Church School planned for the near future, an active board of stewards are meeting monthly every budget requirement. An intensive Teacher-Training course is part of the church program for the year. One Cokesbury course has been taught by the pastor in charge and one course, Worship, by Rev. W. R. Hammontree.

The course, Worship, taught by Rev. Mr. Hammontree is a memorial to his ability, enthusiasm, knowledge, Christian zeal and efficacy. The appreciation of the church is manifest in a request for a more extensive course of worship taught by Rev. Mr. Hammontree during the year.

The achievements of this rural church is a challenge to our dying communities. What shall we do? What does the Master require at our hands? What shall our answers be to the question MUST THE RURAL CHURCH FAIL?

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. H. McMullan

Mrs. L. W. Alford, chairman of Mississippi Council of Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, attended the meeting of this Association in Atlanta, January 9-11, and writes: "According to a survey recently completed by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute Mississippi leads the nation in the number of lynchings during the year 1934. Our state had six of the fifteen mob killings. This is a most humiliating report and is deeply regretted by the 2867 women, 282 men and 44 officers of the law, Christian citizens of Mississippi, who have pledged ourselves to create a new public opinion in the state which will not condone for any reason whatsoever acts of mobs or lynchings." Whatever may have been the facts involved, this record has been written into our state history as being without defense. No outlaw performance which results in the taking of six lives can be justified at the bar of either righteousness or reason. It is encouraging, however, that lynching has decreased fifty per cent during 1934. Representatives from thirteen Southern States were present and participated in this meeting. The officers of this far-reaching movement are Mrs. Jessie Daniels Ames, Atlanta, Director; Mrs. Atwood Martin, Louisville, Ky., Chairman; Mrs. W. A. Newell, Salisbury, N. C., Secretary; Mrs. J. W. Mills, Vice President of our Woman's Missionary Council; Mrs. W. A. Newell, Council Superintendent of Christian Social Relations, and Miss Estelle Haskins, Council Secretary of Literature and one of the editors of "World Outlook," are listed among the representatives at large. Special mention is made of these outstanding women that the missionary women of the two Mississippi Conferences may fully realize that the educational program against lynching has its place under the department of Christian Social Relations. We urge that the members of each society make a careful study of the literature, which may be obtained through Literature Headquarters, Nashville.

The following statement was adopted January 10, 1935:

"There are factors involved in lynching which at the beginning of this movement we did not fully realize. As we have gone more deeply into the study of this crime we have become convinced that a verbal condemnation of lynching is not enough.

"During these last years many of us have gone in person to scenes of previous lynchings to study causes back of them. We can no longer plead ignorance of or remain silent about vital psychological and pathological factors present in these acts of violence.

"We believe that lynchings generally grow out of racial hysteria caused by the fear that white supremacy is in danger. We know that in many places any person, man or woman, can create a mob and incite it to destruction of life and property by arousing this ever-present fear. In condemning lynching we must face these factors and publicly acknowledge them.

"We believe that we should intensify our original program of education and enlightenment for the formation of right public opinion, which will be the creative force for changing the conditions out of which lynchings arise.

"We believe that the social, educational and religious forces of our country should set for themselves continuous, well-planned efforts to permeate the thinking of our people with a consciousness of these facts and viewpoints. We believe, further, that these forces should direct their energies toward an intelligent cultivation of those areas, both social and geographical, still retarded by ignorance and prejudice."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

The Baton Rouge District held its annual officers training day on January 16 in the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge. Because of the severe weather many of the auxiliaries were not represented but those who were able to attend felt a most profitable day had been spent. Mrs. E. W. Chaney, district secretary, was unable to reach Baton Rouge until late in the afternoon. Several conference officers who were slated to lend discussions were prohibited from attending.

Mrs. Gilman McConnell, the capable new president of the Baton Rouge, auxiliary presided at the morning session. Mrs. Joe Brown Love led the devotional. Group discussions were led by Mrs. John B. Pollard. Dr. J. R. Spann closed the morning session with a quiet hour talk, taking for his subject "His Grace is Sufficient."

After a delightful luncheon and fellowship hour the afternoon session opened with Mrs. William Schuhle of Plaquemine presiding. Group discussions were led by Deaconesses Nettie Stroup and Verna Webster of St. Mark's. The crowning event of the meeting was an inspirational address by Mr. Thos. F. Neblett of L. S. U., whose subject was "The Problem of Peace." Mr. Neblett is the president of the National Student Federation of America and is the son of the president of the W. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference.

Lake Charles District is indeed to be congratulated upon its fine record of achievement of last year under the efficient leadership of Mrs. J. N. McDonald. All five zones of this district attained the Zone Honor Roll and the district over paid its pledge to Conference by $457.58

MERIDIAN DISTRICT

The Missionary Institute for Meridian District was held in Fifth Street Church, January 15, with the largest attendance in its history. All pastors were present and a decided interest was shown by the laymen who filled the spacious auditorium both morning and afternoon. Dr. Joseph A. Smith, presiding elder, conducted the opening exercises, sounding a high note of aspiration and evangelism in his address. The arrow hit its mark and evangelism was carried in the program of the New Year.

The plan of work of the Board of Missions as regards evangelism in the Conference was given by Rev. John Lambert Neil and W. D. Hawkins which was a challenge to greater zeal and consecration.

Mrs. D. L. St. John, district missionary secretary, brought a message of unusual interest concerning the activities of the several societies in the district giving promise of greater things for the Kingdom.

Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis were the guest speakers of the Institute and cheered our hearts by portrayal of success achieved, and indication of a coming harvest in the difficult Congo field. The progress the church has made proves that Methodism has a mission and a message for the nations. If Methodism is to survive then those who believe its Gospel and love its polity and practice, should be provoked and committed to heroic evangelistic activity. Belief of the truth has commanded the courage of those that have blessed the world. Manifestation of truth alone will scatter the obscuring shadows of ignorance of God, which enshroud the universe. Godly souls must proclaim the sinful men their guilt and danger and the full, free provisions of a loving Father's mercy and grace. The circumstances and conditions of this present time, invite evangelistic effort and spiritual uplift. Within the church, there are signs of fear and feebleness of faith. Abroad there is an undue regard for personal interest seeking enthronement, rather than right, the law of life. We note also a widely extended tendency to glorify the forces of unintelligent nature as all-sufficient causes in a way to destroy faith in a living personal God.

These modern times call for a stronger faith. A faith that inspires others to

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, FEBRUARY 17

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

PETER ON CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP

Be Temperate. Whether the terminology be ancient or modern, "body and soul" or "dual personality," the war is on between the higher and the lower. From the little child who debates whether to eat his cake or keep it, to the wisest and greatest, the question is the same—today or tomorrow?—immediate gratification and regret, or deferred satisfaction and contentment?—the great risk and the big thrill, or the safe way and permanent peace?—the controlled and purposeful life, or the hap-hazard existence of impulse and solicitation? The "day of visitation"—test—is certain, and Christians are to be living demonstrations of the superiority of their "way." Results tell who is right. If we learned more by observation, we should have less to learn by experience.

Be Obedient. Loyalty to God promotes and comprehends lesser loyalties. A good Christian is thereby made better in every relation and activity. Order and government are of God. Even the imperfect is better than none. Who waits for the perfect, lives in vain and dies waiting. Few laws violate conscience and few are violated for conscience' sake. Submission to evil is not necessarily evil, as to bear ill is not to do ill. The Jews believed in a theocratic government and were troublesome and "seditious, even while they profited by trade under Gentile rulers. Christians were supposed to be a Jewish sect and subjected to ridicule and persecution accordingly. To their pagan neighbors, it was unbelievable that any could be as unselfish and temperate as they professed to be. Surely, there must be secret orgies where restraint was off and appetite reigned without limit. Even today, we hear: "I am better than your church members, sniveling hypocrites and meddlers with the liberty of others." It is the duty of the Christian to obey the law and to seek to improve the government.

Be Different. Conformity is one curse of our age, and a millstone about the neck of church members and—ministers! Even in the most godly homes, the cry of youth it, "let me do like others." We all shrink from being thought peculiar, or even different. Some would rather steal a dress suit than appear at a formal function without one. It is better to be different than indifferent. Christian individuals must build a Christian society. "No man liveth to himself." Letting intoxicants alone is no guarantee that they will let us alone. The drunken driver does not select the car into which he crashes. The saloon is back in its room with seven devils worse than the first. It seeks our youth, insidiously, persistently in press, bill-board, radio and movies. The road is made glamorous, but its end is death—death to a sense of discretion, of duty, of business judgment—death to body and soul. So long as the sober are endangered by the drunken; so long as they are taxed to clear up the wreckage caused by strong drink; so long as men desire the abundant life for themselves and a wholesome environment for their children; so long as they love the Christian ideal, so long must they fight intemperance. It is as little use to preach temperance with the lips and open the saloon with the ballot, as to build hospitals while scattering germs and cultivating disease. Eradication is the only final solution. Meanwhile, let us do the best we can under a government willing to sell its citizens for revenue. Let us preach, pray, educate and enjoin in every possible way till the traffic in character-wrecking narcotics, whether in liquid or powdered form, is forever banished from the earth. Our age, like that of Peter, is corrupt and sensual. Then there was no voice to warn, no ballots to control. Now, we have both. On with the fight till the victory is complete and final.

Greenville, Miss.

To Whom It May Concern:

The Board of Christian Education of the Mississippi Conference is anxious to build up a circulating library for the use of the undergraduates in their Conference courses. With this in mind, we are asking any who may have books in these courses to either give them or loan them to this library for this cause. With the increased cost of the tuition, and the expense of purchasing the books, it is almost prohibitive for some on the salaries they receive to take the course. This has been mentioned to several members of the Conference and a number of volumes have already been promised. If this appeals to you, please correspond with the undersigned, or send the books direct to the office of the Board of Christian Education, 304 Millsaps Building, Jackson, Miss.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Matthew 20:3—Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with; but to sit on my right hand, and on my left is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

It was quite natural that the mother of Zebedee's children should think James and John deserving the choice seats in the kingdom. She was their mother.

Jesus answered her request for this special favor by saying that the seats would be given "to them for whom it is prepared of my Father."

God is no respecter of persons. He does not arbitrarily show favoritism. He is impartial. He loves all. Hence Jesus asked, "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" (vs. 22). The connection is significant. God reveals Himself to those who seek Him. God bestows forgiveness upon those who repent. Spiritual baptism comes to those who consecrate themselves entirely.

Self-discipline is necessary to any achievement. "There is no royal road to learning." "Sure I must fight if I would reign." Apply the principle anywhere. Excellence demands its price. Conditions must be met.

Do you marvel at the man who prays easily and fervently and effectively? He has met conditions. Do you marvel at the man who lives triumphantly while you stumble along? The seats close to God are prepared for those who prepare their hearts.

Our generation wants spiritual attainment without paying the price of daily prayer, daily self-denial, daily cross bearing. But the words of Jesus are eternally true, "Whosoever shall save his life shall lose it; and whosoever would lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it." Mark 8:35.

The merchantman in the parable of Jesus saw the pearl of great price. He wanted the pearl and he attained it, but only after he had sold everything and paid the price of the pearl. "I lay in dust life's glory dead, and from the ground there blossoms red, Life that shall endless be." (George Mathesen).

Prayer

May we be willing to relinquish our own self-determination for the higher will of Christ, and thus find abundant life? We keep the flesh subservient to the spirit and thus enlarge the spirit. We thank Thee that Thou dost meet us when we seek Thee. When we ask, the doors are opened. When we hunger and thirst after righteousness, we are filled.

We search our hearts. May we be willing to drink of the cup that Christ drank, and to be baptized with the baptism with which Jesus was baptized. We ask in Jesus' name.

Jackson, Miss.

In Memoriam

WM. J. HAMMON

Williams Jefferson Hammond, was born near Nashville, Tenn., June 6, 1878. Graduated in the law department of Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., in 1908 and came at once to Jonesboro, La., where he practiced his profession till his death, December 27, 1934.

He served as District Attorney two terms and was twice elected to serve in the House of Representatives of his state, in which capacity he was serving at the time of his death.

He was married to Miss Jennie Harris, January 16, 1910, and they seemed just made for each other. He leaves his widow, a son Stanley, and Mildred and Dorothy Jean, together with two other nieces whom he had reared and loved as his own.

Brother Hammon was active in the masonic lodge, having filled every office in the lodge, and was always present, if some higher obligation did not keep him away. He was an Odd Fellow, and had filled, not only the offices in the local lodge, but had gone to every office in the state, and was twice elected to the grand lodge of America and filled an important place in that body.

He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1923, and filled more offices and filled them better than any man I ever knew. He was, and had been for a long time superintendent of the Sunday school to which he was absolutely devoted, and was chairman of the board of stewards, and had served at different times as church lay leader, and was a delegate every year to the district and annual Conferences. Faithfulness was his motto and no cause ever committed to his hand was allowed to suffer. He led the delegation to the last Annual Conference and was placed on one of the important quadrennial boards.

He not only gave his time and energy to the church, but his money also, nothing could cause him to neglect the financial obligation which he regarded as binding as any bill of his own private making.

Brother Hammon was the most useful and the best loved man I have ever known. It just seemed impossible at first that we could ever carry on without him. Our love for him, and our confidence in him led us to place so much in his hands that his voice was the voice of the church and his judgment was the judgment of pastor and congregation. When losses come in the church, and we would feel discouraged he would always say we must carry on, and we know that would be his advice to us now and so we are determined to go ahead.

His body lay in state at the church Sunday morning, arriving five minutes before ten as it was his unfailling custom to get there at that time. The funeral was at 2:30, and the largest congregation that ever attended any church funeral in Jonesboro attended. Three weeks to an hour an advance step in the church was made in which several hundred dollars was raised to erect an educational building to his honor and to be known as the Hammon Memorial.

Jonesboro and Jackson Parishes have lost the leading citizen, his family one of the most devoted husbands and fathers, the lodges a most useful member, and the kingdom of God a worthy and exemplary Christian, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has lost a capable leader. But we must and we will carry on the work he loved. A sad farewell here, but a happy good morning there, awaits us.

JOHN S. HENLEY.

RESOLUTIONS BY W. M. S. OF ELECTRIC MILLS, MISS.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Anna E. ## A CHILD'S LAXATIVE SHOULD BE LIQUID

(Ask any doctor)

For your own comfort, and for your children's safety and future welfare, you should read this:

The bowels cannot be helped to regularity by any laxative that can't be regulated as to dose. That is why doctors use liquid laxatives.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative dose gives the right amount of help. When repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, natural laxatives that form no habit — even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. Every druggist has it.

A Vegetable Laxative
That Thousands Like

So many men and women have proved their preference for Thedford's Black-Draught, by buying it as needed, that you ought to try it if you are not really enthusiastic about the laxative medicine you have been using. Far and near, for nearly 100 years, Thedford's Black-Draught has been the standby of thousands of families as a laxative for the relief of constipation and many bad feelings due to faulty elimination. Surely it must be very good in its way to have had such long, widespread use. Let Thedford's Black-Draught help to bring you better health when you need a reliable, purely vegetable laxative.

Conclusion

THE churches must follow the way of education if they are to build for permanence. If there is propaganda for militarism abroad in the land we would meet it, not with propaganda; but with facts and with a Christian philosophy of life. Our task is not so much to promote issues as it is to lead people to face these issues with all the resources available and to arrive at their own points of view. Our function, we believe, is to furnish our constituency with such materials as will enable them to know as many of the facts as possible when otherwise some might be withheld; and to guide them into enterprises and activities expressive of their devotion to the cause of peace. In the face of the present world situation what can be more important than that the people of our churches, from the youngest to the oldest, apply the principles of Jesus to the problem of war as unreservedly as they apply his principles to questions of daily conduct? As we all commit ourselves to the peace cause, we appeal for a new devotion to the processes of education in order that our foundations may be secured.

Wallet of the Week

THE REVOLUTION IN URUGUAY, which broke out January 28, is being directed by General Munoz, the exiled head of the National party. It is apparent that the affair was carefully planned. A band of 1,000 well-armed men was organized in Brazil and simultaneously with the crossing of the border into Uruguay, telegraph and telephone wires throughout the country were cut. This fact made all reporting to the outside world impossible, but more important to the invaders was the fact the Government could not secure knowledge as to the movements of the revolutionary army, nor could it have accurate information as to the seriousness of the disturbance.

REVEREND W. W. GIBSON, WESLEYAN MISSIONARY to the Province of Hunan, China, has been called home on account of his health. Although the Province is more than 250 miles square, the missionary has walked all over that vast area for thirty-four years; and he is well known on every road and in every inn throughout the district. He is said to be one of the ablest and most devoted missionaries that the Wesleyans ever sent out, and his withdrawal from that interior Province of China will doubtless be a real privation to the people whom he has served so long and so unselfishly. Before going to that mission field, he practiced law in England; and he carried to his greater task the trained mind that made him a great pioneer for his Lord.

AN AUTOMOBILE DRIVER IN NORWAY, who figures in a traffic accident, is not allowed to give himself a character for sobriety and escape punishment. If he is charged with being intoxicated, a drop of blood is taken from his ear and tested according to the method of Professor Klaus Hansen of the University of Oslo, and if the specimen shows more than the permissible minimum of alcohol, that is the end of the argument. A few chemical tests might remove some of the hazards of American traffic; and they would certainly raise some arguments against liquor and those who sponsor its manufacture and sale.

CAROLINE TICKNOR IN THE BOSTON TRANSCRIPT says of the "Fourth R," The three Rs, Reading, 'Riting and 'Rithmetic in the day of the little red schoolhouse, did not comprise the entire curriculum; there was a fourth R that played a vital part in the education of our hardy first settlers, whose industry and thrift built up this nation. The fourth R was Religion and the pursuit of Righteousness. The belief that man was a spirit, and not merely a body, was not then considered debatable, and in the training of a child the spiritual welfare was looked upon as the primary consideration. This point of view elicits small attention today, though many find our present methods sadly inadequate, and are now stressing the need of placing far greater emphasis upon the teaching of Good Citizenship.

A YOUNG JAPANESE SCULPTOR, according to the Christian Century, has placed on exhibition in a New York gallery his bronze figure of a Negro who was lynched in Sherman, Texas. We do not know any of the facts concerning the incident which inspired his art; but it is certainly one of the bitter ironies of present day events, that a representative of a race, whom we esteem to be pagan and to whom we send our missionaries, should be able to offer such a rebuke to our own civilization. We may be offended by the art and by the use of the incident for artistic treatment, but one thought we can not escape. The artist has committed to the permanence of bronze those taunting words of the Book, "Physician heal thyself."

DR. J. GRESHAM MACHEN, who some years ago fought a losing fight with the authorities of Princeton Theological Seminary over the Fundamentalist issue, is again to the fore in religious discussion. This time he is charged by the New Brunswick Presbytery with insubordination to the Church, on account of his support of an independent Board of Presbyterian Missions. This new Board, which had been organized as a protest against the alleged unorthodox teaching of the regular Board, was not given recognition as an accredited agency of the Church. It is in reality a revival of the old controversy. Dr. Machen may be charged with insubordination and one may not agree with his view; but there can be no question as to the sincerity, when he has staked everything for his conviction.

MRS. MARY HAVEN THIRKIELD, wife of Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield, retired, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died in Brooklyn, New York, on February 15. She was seventy-six years of age, and was the daughter of Bishop Gilbert Haven who died some years ago. Bishop and Mrs. Thirkield were once residents of New Orleans, and the sorrow of the Bishop, himself just recovered from a serious illness, will enlist the sympathy of friends here. Funeral and interment was in Franklin, Ohio, on Monday, February 18.

CONVICTED!

It is said that at West Point Academy the place of Benedict Arnold among the Generals of the army is a blank—he was a traitor to his country. So we believe that the name of a traitor to society should not be spoken, and certainly that it should not be heralded as has been the case in the wretched publicity given the trial at Flemington, New Jersey. We have not mentioned that name even once. Not that we held prejudice, or that we lacked interest in the most notorious case in the crime records of the century; but because we were unwilling to lend the columns of the Advocate to the gratification of a maudlin and morbid interest in the sordid and wretched story of one of the worst crimes ever committed in the history of the country. We are not without the instinct of sympathy; and, now that the trial is over, we simply record the feeling that justice has been done. We have a feeling of pity for a man whose perverted nature led him to commit such a heinous crime; but we believe that the only defence for civilization is in the faithful and fearless administration of justice through the courts. We place the interests of society and the sacredness of human life above pity or any other emotional urge of the soul. It is but natural that the first reaction to the verdict will be a softening on account of those who will be made to suffer through the infliction of the extreme penalty of the law. But no one should forget that there rests a shadow upon "Hopewell" that will abide until the resurrection morning. That shadow was as unmerited as it was uninvited, and not even the execution of its author can blot out its haunting and hideous outlines. Beyond every personal consideration, is society, bleeding, humiliated and stained by the ruthless cruelty of one who was a traitor to both law and morals. It was a desperate ordeal for the jury upon whom that grave responsibility fell; but their fidelity to duty, unpleasant and hard though it was, tends to fix anew confidence in the moral integrity of the American citizen; and the conduct of the case will strengthen the faith of the country in the unimpeachable honor of its courts of justice.

SALVATION OR SOCIAL OBJECTIVE?

In certain religious circles, there seems to be a definite swing toward a political form of social regulation. We believe in social justice and we stand against the exploitation of any class, race or creed. We do not object to the enunciation of the great principles of economic and social righteousness through pronouncements by the church. But we wonder if a too particularized program may not be open to serious criticism; and if such does not tend to shift the emphasis from spiritual aims to a mere policy of social and economic control. We have in mind a specific case. Some months ago a certain American church, after a detailed indictment of what it termed "the present competitive profit-seeking economy," resolved to set itself to work for the abolition of the system and for the inauguration of "A genuinely co-operative social economy, democratically planned to adjust production to consumption requirements, to eliminate private ownership of the means of production or distribution wherever such ownership interferes with the social good." We recognize the saving clauses contained in this ambitious pronouncement, and we do not criticize the motive underlying it, but we wonder if it does not assume a judicial responsibility which might be too great for such a tribunal? In the case to which we refer, a small group of churchmen were undertaking, we think, to pass upon matters which have staggered the best minds of the world, not to mention their side-stepping the Gospel for a scheme of social regulation—becoming a divider of the inheritance, which Jesus refused to undertake. It is not the end, but the method to which we object. The church has a vital interest in every question which affects the lives of the people; but as its weapons are not carnal, its approach must of necessity be different. Without the heart change, the primary goal of the Christian enterprise, social schemes, however or by whomsoever christened, will end as political gestures do. We would keep the primary emphasis of the church upon the salvation of the people.

THE MACON

Another name has been added to the list of major disasters in the air service of the nation. Along with the Shenandoah and the Akron, the name Macon must now be chiselled—a vain and melancholy memorial of what ought to be labelled as the unfriendly yesterdays of our international thinking. This monster of the air, pride and purpose of war-minded men, floated in the twilight some two thousand feet above the waters of the "Pacific," and without warning, it descended into the oblivion of the remorseless ocean. And night drew over the spot a pall of darkness which the devout Hebrew might have listed as a symbol of Jehovah's displeasure. But, aside from all moralizing as to the legitimacy of things built to destroy the lives of men, is the fact that these three monster dirigibles were constructed at a total cost of some seven million dollars and they have all descended from their last and lofty flights. So far as we know, not one of them served any useful purpose. Today they are melancholy memories, particularly to the families and friends of those eighty-nine men who rode to death in the sickening disasters. A certain popular magazine recently extended hospitality to one who brought the railing charge, "The Church Builds Battleships." Perhaps it may now offer a similar hospitality for that same writer to explain, "Who Destroyed the Macon." We believe that war and catastrophe are but the penalties which we must suffer for refusing to hear the voice of God: "Nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

GOLD

At no time in many months has interest been so great or feeling so tense on any public question as in the Supreme Court decision on the "gold clause," which was a fundamental factor in National Recovery legislation. The decision of the court was rendered Monday at noon, and, while we have not seen the text of it, its general trend is said to be favorable to the government. Aside from all personal feelings in the matter, we would say that such a decision will do much to reassure the public and to help on the program of economic rebuilding now under way. We are glad that the decision was favorable to the administration, and we hope that it may cement public feeling and purpose regarding our common task. It is no time for retracing our steps, except for the protection of the honor of contracts with other nations and their citizens. We believe that the decision protects such obligations. We say this without reference to any political party or faction.

FOLLOW ME

By Rev. J. Henry Bowdon

We are living in a confused and perplexed age. Possibly the confusion and perplexity of our times falls more heavily upon our boys and girls than on anyone else. The wide spread unemployment, the poverty, the want, and the social injustice of our times have taken from us much of the idealism of the past. We have been disillusioned just at the time when it hurts worst. We agree with Dr. Tittle, "It is now apparent that we cannot go on much longer with our national antagonisms, racial antipathies, and class conflicts, or with that reckless greed for gold which has pitted us against one another, caused us to fear and hate and hurt one another, led us more and more to depend upon physical force, taken away from us our faith in the reality and power of spiritual forces (our faith, that is, in God), and left us not only spiritually but even materially impoverished." That is not a very bright or hopeful picture, but we believe that it is a fairly accurate one. Is there any way that we might retint that picture—put a little faith, hope and love into it? We believe there is.

Last summer thousands of young people were brought face to face with the mighty challenge: "Dare We Be Christians." Thousands of us replied, "We Are Able." We knew that it would be difficult, but difficulty did not scare us. We remembered that Jesus did not take the easy way. He did not follow the line of least resistance. When we grew a bit indifferent and unconcerned, these words condemned us, "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin." There was hope, and courage, and faith in our lives now because we had accepted a challenge.

This summer we go back in our thinking nineteen hundred years and we stand by the river bank, in the market place, and on the highway to listen to the gentle words of the matchless Christ as he says, "Follow Me." Are you lost amid the confusion and perplexity of your times? Then listen as he says, "Follow Me." Has our cruel and heartless economic system been unjust to you, robbing you of your right to work, and taking from you a joyous and happy spirit? Maybe there is help for you in the call of Christ. Has the rank materialism of another generation left its blight upon your soul? Are you looking for an ideal around which to organize your personality? Are you in search of a leader who knows the way to happiness, joy, peace and life? Perhaps we had better follow one, who at least thinks that he knows the way to a better, richer and fuller life. Indeed we are convinced that we must follow him or perish in a world-wide catastrophe.

PATTERN

By Rev. D. B. Boddie

It is near eleven thirty o'clock in the morning in the little city of Lake Providence, La., February 8, 1935. I am sitting in my study just across the street from the County Jail. Large crowds of Negroes are gathered. Each one has his eyes focused on an upper window of the jail. The crowds are getting larger all the time. They keep coming. Some are standing on cars, hoping to get a better view. Some are old, white-haired men and women, some young men and young women and there are little children. There is no loud talking. No clapping of hands. No shouts. There is a restless stillness, that makes me feel awful. What is all this? Just a few minutes more, and there will be a legal hanging in the jail. The trap will be sprung on one or two or three blacks—it may be a man and a woman. I am thinking as I look on this pitiable scene: The court has tried to do what we have instructed it to do. These black skin folks have been convicted of murder. The court has been faithful to carry out my instructions and yours, but what does it all mean? I read where a Japanese publicist said, "America Teaches, Japan Learns." Is it that these poor Negroes have learned their lessons of murder from white men and women? Remember, we are PATTERNS.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies, D.D.

Silently, surely, swiftly they are passing away, the old preachers and others, comrades of other years, and yesteryears of youth and mature manhood. Bryant's vision of life, his "Flood of Years" comes to my mind as I think of them, with all our hopes and all our fears, our failures, our success at times, the warm hearty hand clasp, the kindly beaming eyes, the words of cheer, the heart of fellowship. Every true, worthy life, writes its own "In Memoriam" on the tablet of past experience in the vast hall wherein is stored memory's harvest of years and years. Herein lies the real riches of life, and I sometimes think—it may be at the best times—one may have a gleam, foretaste of a fuller, larger life beyond. "Life and immortality brought to light," that's a glorious thought, a splendid promise that gilds all the gloom of these latter years, an assurance of a Presence unseen, but not unknown to God's children. Oh friend, lay aside, cast out haunting doubt and fear; walk by faith with the Immortal One, and share immortality with him. For the Christ of the heavens deigns to walk with these erring ones of earth in comradeship and comfort. A few yesterdays ago an eminent jurist loved and honored by kindred and friends, then anon a cultured woman the light of whose face, tender with patience and kindly charity pass on. Lift up your heads oh gates of pearl, and let these heirs of glory come in. These and others like unto them will know their places in the house not made with hands. Many will be lonely as these are lost to sight but faith, and trust, and memory will store in the deep recesses of the soul what they were and how they crystallized in character graces high and holy. Such rich heritage do they leave with us, and not unlike strains of distant melody borne on vernal airs, cheer loved ones on the hither shore. What was it you said, Paul? "I have fought a good fight." Not only is life a pilgrimage, but a struggle and faith is the mightiest factor in the great arena. It bridges the chasm between two worlds and links the life that now is to the life beyond. So with these thoughts we consign our loved ones in death to Him who cared for them on the way home.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Our National Government is urging every family in America to make some improvement in their house. That is a good suggestion and as far as people are financially able every family in our nation should try to do some this year. I think something should be done to change and brighten up our minds and hearts. So many have had the same wall paper on their minds since that misunderstanding long years ago. The furniture of their minds has not been rearranged since they set their prejudices in early life. The windows have become darker and darker so that now they can't see any good any where in anybody. The water in the well is not like it used to be for so many things have fallen in and it has not been cleaned out. It might help change the environment to tear down some old fences which have ceased to be any good. To hear the clear ring of hammers and the music of the saw might not hurt any of us for at least it would sound like we were building a better character.

The hardest task a person has in the Christian life is to talk to some one about giving his heart to Jesus Christ. It is so easy to go all around the subject and then wait for a more convenient time. It seems that people can learn to pray easier than they can learn this. We all can talk glibly about children, business, domestic cares, and everything except the most important subject this side of the Judgment. The paramount question for every soul in this world is: "Is your soul in harmony with the will of God for you; or are you a rebellious prodigal son, or an obedient, faithful, believing son or daughter?" We can so easily point people to the best highway to the place they are going, but so many are dumb in the presence of one lost on the highway of eternal life. To lead one soul to Christ will revive the flame of a Christian heart into fervent glow and frequently it will revive a dying church. Maybe that is the reason Jesus said that his followers would be "the light of the world."

REV. A. W. TURNER ILL

A telegram from Rev. Robert M. Brown reports the serious illness of Dr. A. W. Turner of Shreveport. Prayer is requested for the recovery of this valuable servant of the church. No man in Louisiana has wrought more effectively for the cause of temperance than has Dr. Turner, and his illness will enlist the sympathy of a host of friends throughout the state.

"METHODIST MISSIONS" NEXT

There is increasing interest in the elective courses now being published in the Adult Student. A large number of requests for information in regard to these courses reach the General Board of Christian Education. Beginning with the first Sunday in April the Adult Student will carry a three months' elective course for adults on "Methodist Missions." Adult classes in the Sunday school should use this material; also all the groups in the local church which are interested in the cause of missions. For further information and advanced copies of the April Adult Student, write Editorial Department, General Board of Christian Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee.

WHY?

Faith is all that God would have us know
Faith of violets, blooming in the snow;
Faith of rivers that forever flow;
Faith of grass; of trees that only grow
And bear their fruits in season.
Birds only know to sing; sunlight to dance.
All nature tries God's glory to enhance,
And man alone forever asks the reason.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Church Extension will meet at the First Church in Alexandria on Tuesday, March 12, at eleven o'clock. Applications either to the Conference or the General Board must come before this committee.
MARTIN HEBERT, Chairman.

PENSION COSTS

For less than a million persons who would be eligible for old-age pensions, according to an estimate sent to the Capitol on Saturday of last week by the Administration, the yearly pension cost would be $111,000,000. This figure contrasts favorably with the $450,000,000 estimated by some congressmen as the total that would be required by the proposed plan. The table from which the Administration's estimate was made, drawn up by the economic security committee, was based on the number of persons above 65 who are receiving relief in the states, plus those who are getting old-age pensions in states that have pension systems. When the Administration's estimate was made, the Senate finance committee was receiving testimony from spokesmen for the Illinois Manufacturers' Association and others opposing the economic security plan. The House ways and means committee, after weeks of hearings, was settling down to consideration of the measure in executive session preparatory to a re-vamping for bringing it before the House. The committee's figures showed 736,342 persons above 65 on federal relief rolls, plus 179,557 who are receiving old-age pensions from the 23 states in which the laws are in effect. Laws have been passed in seven other states but are not yet in effect.

the friendly attitude of a predominant church in one section as against the unfriendly attitude in another. The localities where the Church of England was predominant, for instance, is represented as hospitable ground. That, however, appears to be an assumption which it would be difficult to justify. A more likely explanation is that the people in some places were utterly dissatisfied with their church provision and were ready for change. It was not the friendliness of the Establishment in Virginia, but the disgust of the people on account of the character of the clergy which made a favorable atmosphere for Methodism. On this point, there appears to be pretty general agreement among those who have made careful study of religious conditions in the Old Dominion. Reverend Devereux Jarratt, rector of Bath Parish in Virginia, spoke of his predecessors in the parish as, "Velvet-mouthed preachers," who preached to the people, "Morality, and smooth harrangues, in no wise calculated to disturb their carnal repose, or awaken anyone to a sense of guilt and danger;" and he said, "Most of the clergy, as far as I can learn, preached for a long time, what is little better than deism." Rev. Archibald McRoberts, who was the only congenial and sympathetic friend of Jarratt, renounced the Church of England after spending twenty years in its ministry, and he became a Presbyterian minister. He wrote Jarratt, July 13, 1780, that the English Church owed its authority to an act of the legislature, and not to the word of God—prostituting the sacred institution of Christ to the vilest purposes and characters.

Bishop Meade, commenting on the corruptions of the Virginia clergy, alleges that the charge of gross misconduct is, "Evident from the petition of the clergy themselves to the legislature asking an increase of salary, saying that the small encouragement given to clergymen is a reason why so few come into this Colony from the Universities, and that so many who are a disgrace to the ministry find opportunities to fill the parishes." The Bishop says further: "Such being the case, who can question for a moment the entire accuracy of the account both of the preaching and the living of the clergy in his day as given by the faithful and zealous Mr. Jarratt? and who could blame him for the encouragement offered to the disciples of Mr. Wesley, at a time when neither he nor they thought there could be a separation from the Church of England? Dissent from various causes, was now spreading throughout the Commonwealth; dissatisfaction with the mother-country and the mother-church was increasing, and the Episcopal clergy losing more and more the favour of God and man, when this devoted minister . . . , was glad to avail himself of any aid in the good work he was endeavoring to perform." In still another place, he says: "A pious member of the Church, from somewhere in this region, I believe, wrote to the Bishop of London of the gross ignorance of four clergymen, mentioning them by name, and of the immorality of one of them, comparing them with the learning and the piety of two Presbyterian ministers who had just come into the State, and prophesying the result of these things unless arrested." Even after the colonial regime had ended, he says that Jarratt was humiliated by the ordination of two candidates whom, as a committeeman, he had refused as unworthy; for Bishop Madison substituted another committeeman who passed them. This incident occurred in Petersburg, Virginia in 1792, and Bishop Madison's apology, "Ministers are scarce, and we must not be too strict," is itself a sufficient defence for the character and courage of the humble man who refused to become a party to a policy that compromised religion and the Church.

It is commonly assumed that the failure to plant Methodism in New England was due mainly to the antagonism and opposition of Calvinism, the accepted theology of that section. There can be no doubt that such did play a part, but we think it is not a sufficient explanation of the postponement. The New Englander was satisfied with the teaching of his church and with the character of its ministry; and when the advance guards of Wesleyan faith and practice appeared he was not ready for a change. But when Congregationalism became politicalized and secularized through its activity during the Revolution, and the Church taught a socialized philosophy rather than religion, the feeling and interest of the people changed. Abel Stevens says that, when Jesse Lee invaded Boston, there were fewer active parishes in the City than there had been fifty years before, and only "Old South Church" of all the Puritan establishment retained its evangelical allegiance. He quotes from the Great Awakening by Joseph Tracy, "There were many in the churches, and even in the ministry, who were yet lingering among the supposed preliminaries of conversion. The difference between the world and the church was vanishing away, church discipline was neglected, and the growing laxness of morals was invading the churches." He means that the religious leadership, which had been able to repel the early missionaries of Methodism, had lost its hold upon the people and that they were thereby made ready for any innovation that might offer satisfaction for their hungry souls. They did not accept Jesse Lee without resistance or reservation; but the time was ripe for ecclesiastical change, and Methodism struck its roots deep into the soil of that rock-ribbed home of the Pilgrims.

War is always a disastrous incident in the life of a people, and in nothing is the effect more serious than the affairs of the church. The outbreak of the Revolution was particularly disastrous for Methodism; and nothing but the favor of God could have saved it from collapse and ruin. To begin with, Mr. Wesley greatly inflamed the minds of the Americans by his "Calm Address;" and the Tory activities of Martin Rodda and, in a less pronounced degree, of Thomas Rankin, did little to reassure those who were excited on account of the struggle. Forrest and Wren were imprisoned; Hartly was whipped and imprisoned; Peddicord was severely beaten; Garrettson was almost killed by a mob; and Asbury was fined in Maryland for preaching, was shot at, and was ultimately forced into seclusion for a period of more than two years. In zones of active military operations, the work had to be abandoned; and Benjamin Abbott says that in Trenton, New Jersey, the army turned the Methodist meeting house into a stable. But, notwithstanding the handicaps of war and a vicious public antagonism, the societies added ten thousand members during the progress of the conflict.

In England the difficulties were great enough, but Mr. Wesley was an ordained clergyman and he was supported by a small group of his fellow clergymen who were hospitable to him and to his work. But in America, from the irregular beginnings in 1766, to the day of the establishment of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1784, there was not a single ordained Methodist minister, either missionary or native preacher, on the continent. The movement was developed by lay preachers under the direction of Mr. Wesley who remained on the other side of the Atlantic. The people felt very keenly the implications of mendicancy in their having to go to the altars of other churches for every ecclesiastically approved administration of baptism and the Lord's Supper. Their humiliation finally became the occasion of a revolt which came very near to overturning every prospect of securing a ministry for the Methodists, according to ancient and approved forms of ordination.

The ordination question had troubled the Methodists from the beginning; and from the days of Strawbridge, there had been an insistent demand for the right to administer them. The tenseness of feeling was greatly increased by the war and its complications, and by the number in the societies and classes, who had never been baptized. Even some of the preachers were not baptized. Under date of January 10, 1782, Asbury says: "Brothers M. and F. met me at White Oak Chapel, where A. C.—, one of our young preachers, was baptized by Mr. Jarratt." That statement refers to Adam Cloud who had been admitted on trial in 1781, and who was at that time one of the preachers on Roanoke circuit in North Carolina. In 1779 the Conference of the southern preachers was held at Broken-Back Church in Fluvanna County, Virginia, and it was resolved to ordain preachers for the Methodist societies. An ordination committee was named who first ordained themselves, and then proceeded to ordain others who were first elected by the Conference. The adoption of that course resulted in an issue between the northern and southern preachers which threatened the unity of the organization. The next Conference met at Manikintown, Virginia, and Asbury, Watters, and Garrettson appeared as ambassadors from the northern group. At first the southern preachers refused to be conciliated and a split seemed to be certain; but finally it was agreed to suspend the ordinations until Mr. Wesley might be communicated with, and the suspension was continued from year to year until 1784, when Dr. Coke was sent over with instructions from Mr. Wesley to do the very thing that had been demanded so long.

We have discussed the primary factors in the planting of Methodism; but there are certain secondary facts and influences which deserve some consideration also. A very advantageous and saving fact in the dark period of war and controversy was the great Virginia revival in 1775 and 1776. It stirred anew the spirit of evangelism among the Methodists; and their minds became so engrossed with the mighty manifestations of the presence of God, that controversy and ecclesiastical demands were forgotten for a time, and even the disasters of war were partially offset. The revival brought to the Methodist people a consciousness of the full meaning and power of the Wesleyan movement, and they became strongly attached to its spirit and polity.

Another important fact was the enlistment of auxiliary agencies in the work. There were many who contributed in this manner, but we notice one in particular. Devereux Jarratt, rector of Bath parish in Virginia, probably meant more to the founding of Methodism in Virginia than any other man outside of the movement. When George Shadford was assigned to Brunswick circuit in 1775, his staunchest ally was this modest and unassuming representative of the Church of England. He placed the prestige of his Church behind the Methodist cause: and Asbury says that he went so far as to ask that his own parish might be included in the Brunswick circuit, so that his people might have the benefit of class and be joined in society.

The first thing to be observed about Jarratt is that he was a lineal descendant of the type of spirit and ex-

Rev. W. L. Broome, presiding elder of the Lawton, Miss. District and a former member of the Mississippi Conference, says that he has read the Advocate all his life and reads it still. He reports that they are still hauling water in that section, but that they have made a good start on the new Conference year.

Dr. Buhrman reports that the attitude of the officials in every charge of the Aberdeen, Miss. District indicates that a very earnest effort will be made to bring salary payments up to the assessments; and he says that the amounts assumed for Conference and General work total 47 per cent more than was paid last year.

President G. F. Winfield of Whitworth College sends us notice of the formal opening of the Tung-tree farm recently given to the College by Col. L. O. Crosby of Picayune, Miss. ## CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT— MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

As I look back over the children's work of the Mississippi Conference for the past year, I feel deeply grateful to the untiring efforts and keen interest of our faithful local superintendents—many of whom have rendered very outstanding work, and to the auxiliary presidents, the zone chairmen, and the district secretaries, all of whom have co-operated in a beautiful way.

The records show an increase over the previous years of 59 new organizations in the primary and junior divisions and a total of 155 organizations for these two divisions. The Council pledge for the department has been overpaid according to reports received by me. The type of work done is indeed gratifying. World friendship has been made very effective. Our children have participated in numerous worth-while projects and activities whereby friendly attitudes toward children of other races and classes

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

have been established. We know good seed have been sown and that God will give the increase.

Now that the co-operative plan has gone into effect this means that one organization with regular Sunday sessions, and wherever possible regular week-day sessions of the Church school, is the channel through which the missionary emphasis will be carried forward. Teachers of primary and junior children will seek to make world friendship an on-going interest throughout the year.

The Woman's Missionary Society will have the following relation to this plan:

1. Every society will elect a secretary of children's work who will be responsible now for helping primary and junior workers discover ways in which missionary emphasis can be made more meaningful in their respective classes and departments. Be sure to send me the name and address of the secretary.

2. The woman's section of the Board of Missions will share in the fourth Sunday offerings to the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. Eight per cent of this offering will be directed to the woman's work. The secretary and other children's workers should see that the records are kept of the amount of the offerings made by each of the children's departments and that the Sunday school treasurer promptly sends the offering to Conference treasurer of the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise.

3. The woman's section of the Board of Missions is to co-operate in preparing World friendship units. The first unit will be on Japan and will be given in March. This unit includes eight sessions and cannot be completed in a month without extra sessions. It is strongly urged that the extra sessions be held on a week-day rather than on Sunday afternoon or evening because many of the activities suggested are more easily entered into on a week-day.

The books for this study must be ordered from the Methodist Publishing House. The primary book is I WONDER ABOUT JAPAN, and the junior, WORK WAYS IN JAPAN. They are 25 cents each and the Church school is expected to pay for these as well as all other literature.

Let us remember the work is entirely co-operative now with the Board of Christian Education and Woman's Missionary Society which will mean better advantages and greater opportunities for our Children, if we assume the responsibility that is ours.

MRS. PAUL ARRINGTON,

Conference Secretary of Children's Work.

Magee, Miss.

FROM JONESBORO, LA.

The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad. The pastor and the official board were led of the Lord to secure the services of Dr. D. L. Goals, general evangelist of Los Angeles, Calif. The revival began on the first Sunday in January and we were favored by the weather until the last Sunday and then the revival had reached such momentum that, notwithstanding a downpour of rain all day, we had three great services. The church here has never experienced such a spiritual awakening before. It is impossible to put on paper the power and results of the meeting. The largest day services ever held; the stores closing for the last week of the meeting; and Jews, Catholics, and all Protestants attending, and all alike speaking in highest terms of the revival. A large number was received into the church, and the number

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore

At the beginning of the year it was our desire to have a group organized in every local church. We made little progress in 1934.

The Federal Council of Churches has published a program "The Fellowship of Prayer" for pre-Easter use. May we urge the groups to sponsor this program.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the necessity of the local groups having a definite plan for their discussion theme at the meetings and for their intercession. We must grow spiritually through intelligent reading and thought if we do our best work. Time must be allowed for this.

The supply of literature for this work has been exhausted but as soon as possible a new booklet and a new leaflet will be available from Literature Headquarters. Much time and value is to be secured by the use of our special page in the World Outlook.

We are gratified at the fine way some groups are working in our Conference. They are using their own plans and getting such fine results. The possibilities of the Spiritual life groups are as limitless as the power of God is limitless, and the need of the world is desperate. Let us truly believe in the power and claim it for ourselves, our church, and our world.

There are many things for which we need to pray, but at this time we are asking the groups to join us in intercession for several objects in our work:

1. A deepened spiritual life in each individual in our church.

2. That every society meet its pledges in full, that the work be not hindered.

3. For the Council meeting in March, that it may be a time of rich spiritual development and wise planning as we begin a new quadrennium.

4. For our Conference meeting that the program may grip and inspire our women to consecrate their earnest endeavor to become world-minded Christians.

5. For all the Spiritual life leaders and groups that we may be truly creative in our work, and release power in the church.

These five requests mean much if we are faithful in our intercession.

The suggestion has been made that every local group meet for special prayer the day the Council opens, March 14.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. H. M. McMullan

Mrs. John W. Boone, superintendent of supplies writes: "As the work for the New Year begins, I want to urge the auxiliaries to plan for sending boxes to our Wesley House, where they are needed to help carry on the work, also, to send boxes to our missionaries and superannuate preachers. In 1934, 196 boxes valued at $1,735.48 were sent. I realize the local needs in every community have been great and much has been done to relieve suffering but let us not forget to send boxes to our Conferences Institutions. In helping others, we receive a blessing."

"Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart." You are invited to unite in a world-wide fellowship of worship and prayer on the first Friday in Lent, March 8, 1935. Let us pray for: The missionary enterprise and for all who share therein. A quickened conscience toward the world's burden bearers. Courage to stand for the right and willingness to accept the sacrifices involved for us all in the building of a better world. Justice and understanding between individuals, classes, races and nations.

Special evangelistic services were held recently among the hospital patients at Ming, a Station in the Congo Mission, by the station evangelist, at the same time that the station revival was in progress. Dr. W. S. Hughlett, medical missionary in charge of the Minga hospital, says: "These services resulted not merely in a wave of spiritual emotion but in the people confessing their sins and insisting upon making wrongs right. The typical Negro is reputed not to connect his religion and ethical conduct as closely as one might wish. Therefore, the effect of this revival on the consciences of some of the villagers was a cause of genuine thanksgiving."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Plans for the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference in DeRidder are rapidly being completed. The dates are set for April 3 to 5. Mrs. Charles Sills of DeRidder has been made chairman of the registration committee, Miss Daisy Davies of Atlanta will be the Council guest.

Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter, Conference corresponding secretary, will attend the meeting of the General Missionary Council to be held in Little Rock, Ark., February 26 to 28. Attention at this meeting will be focused upon missionary work in Brazil and Europe, the discussions being led by mission secretaries of the Board of Missions who have recently made visits to these countries.

How proud we are, as missionary women when we learn of success coming to students of our mission schools in far away lands. Five mission schools in Korea, recently participated in an oratorical contest and English contest. Holston Institute girls, at Songdo, Korea, won first place in both contests. They were presented with bronze plaques which have to be won three times in succession before they can become the property of any school. But no matter who wins next year, Holston Institute will have the honor of having its name inscribed on these plaques at the very top of the list of schools that have held these trophies.

TITHING

By S. M. McReynolds,
Louisiana Conference Lay Leader

"From the day of your fathers, ye have turned aside from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith Jehovah of Hosts. But ye say, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye rob me, but ye say, wherein have we robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings." Malachi 3:7-9 (R V).

There is no question concerning which our Church is more muddled and "at sea" than the question of our financial obligation to God. Leaders have advanced one theory after another until the average Christian is hopelessly confused. As a consequence, he has drifted into practices that are wholly inadequate and un-Christian. I believe most of us have come to the place where we can say with John Wesley "I am sick of opinions."

I believe it is clear from the passage in Malachi that when Christian people start giving God's way, systematically and proportionately a revival will be forth-coming. "Bring ye the tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house, and prove me herewith, saith Jehovah of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Does not God mean what He says? Why do we doubt the wisdom of the tithe?

I am not unmindful of the many questions that will arise in your mind. Let us look briefly at a few. Should a man tithe when he is in debt? You are in debt to God, deeply. How do you expect to get out of debt to Him without tithing? Do you consider your obligation to Him less binding than those you have to men? Another question: How much of my tithe should go through the channels of the Church? I would suggest the larger part of it. All other worthy causes and institutions receive their life-blood from the Church.

Some of you will more than tithe this year if you pay your pledge in full, regardless of your financial situation. I challenge you to step out this year and begin tithing! You can make no mistake. It's the only way, because it is God's way.

Christian Education

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, FEBRUARY, 24.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

JESUS HEALS; PETER PREACHES

Peter and John, though Christian apostles, went to the Jewish temple at the hour of prayer. We may well suspect the plety of those whose sectarian bias prevents their finding God among men who have less of light or learning. Christianity parted company with Judaism reluctantly, even as the Methodists with the Anglicans. Judaism might have become Christianity! She had her opportunities, and Jesus seems never to have been more pathetically disappointed than when she "would not," and her "house was left desolate." The apostles saw the religion of the Messiah not as a contradiction, but as a fulfilment of the law and the prophets.

The needy have ever known where to ask alms. The most godly are the most human, and the most humanitarian. Those who love God, love men. Worshippers are givers. The righteous do most to clear up the wreckage of sin and abate the suffering it has caused, as well as the suffering whose cause is unknown. Peter had no silver or gold. He was following hard after One who probably never had five dollars in his life, but whose gift to the world is more than the "foundations" and benefactions of all the rich. Peter gave "such as he had," and the beggar himself was enabled to be a giver. True, money is needed, but when Christians cease to lament their lack of silver and gold and generously and joyfully give such as they have, there will be such an advance in the Kingdom of God as has not been seen since Pentecost. This done, Methodism might quadruple its harvest in a year without an additional dollar of expense. Unemployed American Christians have lost a million years of evangelistic opportunity, of gentle and generous ministry, during the Depression. Multitudes have robbed themselves of the privilege of worship because they had no coin to give. Their worship would have been precious to God and a blessing to others who despite their burdens have carried on. Unemployed a year, and not a day given to God's cause or God's needy—not even God's day! Even worse is the record of many who have both time and money.

The lame man received that which is better than money; Peter preached; three thousand were added to the church; then the rulers, imprisonment and trial. Peter before the Sanhedrin! He had cut a sorry figure when Jesus was before the same tribunal a few weeks before. Now, men mark not his cowardice, but his boldness. He does not flinch, though his life is now truly at stake. Thousands were converted, but not members of the Sanhedrin. No sinners are so difficult to change as religious sinners, especially if they are high in authority. Like true politicians, they question not the fact of the healing, but the authority of the healer. They would rather be regular than bright. They cited Peter for healing; he charged them with murder, even the murder of their Messiah, the world's only Savior. The accused became the accuser; the trial judges the defendants! How their consciences must have burned! They had thought themselves done with the Nazarene when Pilate wrought their bidding. They, Sadducees, believed death the end, and Jesus was dead. They had made sure of that. Peter was sure of his resurrection, and preached it in their faces and to all the world. Noble Peter! "Thou art a rock."

Healing power is God's power, as truly as creative power. Let us not rule him out because that power is today largely transmitted through medical skill by which millions are restored. The state has taken over much of the work of charity, and gives a living to thousands. The chief business of the church is to give life, to build character, to develop personality, to restore spirit, and inspire courage. Let us give what we have. Better times tarry not for parties nor for political and economic theories, but for better people. There is "no other name" by which they can be produced.

Greenville, Miss.

"YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY"

"Young People's Day will be Sunday, March 10. The February issue (page 28) of the Epworth Highroad will carry a special program for use in local churches on Young People's Day. As far as the church at large is concerned, the offering which in other years has been taken on Young People's Day has been discontinued and we are asking for increased financial support on Church School Day, April 7. The educational values of the Young People's Day, however, remain, and we should encourage the observance of the day with an appropriate program."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

At a recent meeting of the Baton Rouge District staff of Christian Education held in the home of Rev. K. W. Dodson, in Baton Rouge, plans were begun for summer camps, and other features of Christian Education in the district.

The Christian Adventure Camp, for Intermentals of 12 through 15 years of age, will be held July 30-August 3, with Rev. Ira W. Flowers of Covington as dean, and Miss Mary Searles as business manager. This camp will be a Conference-promoted program for the young adolescents of the Baton Rouge District, in lieu of a Conference-wide assembly for this age group.

The Christian Culture Camp for young people of 16 through 23 years of age will follow the Christian Adventure Camp, beginning August 6, closing the 10th. Rev. C. E. McLean will again be business manager.

The usual summer camp meeting will begin on the afternoon of the closing day of the latter camp—August 10, closing the following Sunday, the 17th. All of these programs will be held at Bluff Creek, La.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Isalah 57:15—For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

God is of endless duration. He inhabiteth eternity. Every moment of vast eternity is illumined by the presence of God.

There are no boundaries of space to his habitation. "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me, even night shall be light about me." Ps. 139:8-11.

The text declares that God dwells in the high and holy place, for He is the high and lofty One. "Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne." Ps. 97:2. "Unto Thee will I lift up mine eyes, O Thou that dwellest in the heavens." Ps. 123:1. "The Lord is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens." Ps. 113:4.

But God "humbleth Himself to behold the things that are in heaven and in the earth." Pa. 113:4. "Though the Lord be high, yet hath He respect unto the lowly." Ps. 138:6. God dwells in the humble and contrite spirit. The majestic, sovereign, eternal Lord God has taken up his abode in the humble and contrite heart. From the great heights He stoops to the penitent soul. When man is reconciled to God, God reveals Himself. Our transgressions are removed as far as the east is from the west.

The condition of God entering the human heart is that He shall find humility and contrition. The word humility is derived from the Latin "humus," meaning earth. Humility is a simple word, but it is an important word in the vocabulary of a Christian. Contrition means even more than humility. It means brokenness of heart for having offended God. But God will never despise the humble and contrite heart.

God makes no promise to dwell in the heart of the proud and hearty. Selfishness creates a barrier. But contrition opens the door.

Note the work of God in the contrite heart. He "revives the spirit of the humble." He "revives the heart of the contrite ones." He that is abased is exalted. God heals the heart of the penitent when He forgives and gives peace. He shows mercy; according to His loving kindness and tender mercies He blots out the transgressions.

Prayer

We are impressed with the view of Thy greatness. Thy efforts to redeem us mean more to us when we consider Thy majesty and holiness. We see how great is Thy compassion that Thou shouldest manifest Thyself to us.

Reverently, humbly, contritely, we come to Thee. Teach us Thy will. Make Thy abode in our hearts. We ask in the name of Jesus.

To End Stubborn Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving! No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils and children love its taste. This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

DON'T NEGLECT MINOR THROAT IRRITATION

IT may become serious. Rub on soothing, warming Musterole. Relief generally follows quickly.

Musterole gets such marvelous results because it's NOT just a salve. It's a "counter-irritant"—easing, warming, stimulating and penetrating—quick and helpful in drawing out pain and congestion.

Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau, No. 4867.

Radio: Tune in the "Voice of Experience," Columbia Network. See newspaper for time.

MRS. PATTIE Y. DUPREE

One year ago today the sweet spirit of Mrs. Pattie Y. Dupree took its flight to mansions above, leaving an aching void in the hearts of her innumerable host of friends and loved ones.

She was a woman of unusually strong personality, and in every way beautiful—spiritually, mentally and physically—and to know her was to admire and love her.

She was born March 7, 1882, and was married to Dr. H. T. T. Dupree March 8, 1881. To this union were born two daughters, both of whom died in infancy.

"Cousin Pattie," as we, the children, affectionately called her, was a devoted wife, and filled the position of mother to the Doctor's four children and a foster daughter in such a way as to make life sweeter and more blessed. Always holding up the highest and noblest ideals, she was an inspiration, not only to those of her own household, but to all with whom she was associated.

How dearly we loved her, and how very much we miss her!

For many years she had been a faithful, consecrated member of the Methodist church at Raymond, Miss., and there was always the "Prophet's Chamber" in her home, where any of God's servants knew there was ever a welcome for them.

Letters written by her dear hand, and tenderly preserved by her loved ones, bear beautiful testimony to her rare mental culture, purity of heart, and devotion to the highest ideals of life.

She had reached "the eventide" of life and awaited the summons of her Lord to come up higher, so just one year ago today, February 26, 1934, as the day was sinking into rest, her sweet spirit took its flight to the Father who gave it being, and she entered into "the land where there is no night."

In her life there was a blending of sunshine and shadows that ended in a glorious sunset.

Those of us who knew and loved her best may visualize the rapture that filled her soul when the portals of heaven were thrown open and she met her Savior face to face in the early morning of her new and higher life, her Coronation Day!

One year in heaven! What has it meant to you, dear one? A year so short to you, and so full of blessedness.

"Think of stepping on shores and finding it Heaven!
Of taking hold of a hand and finding it God's hand;
Of breathing a new air and finding it celestial air;
Of feeling invigorated, and finding it immortality;
Of passing from storm and tempest to an unknown calm;
Of waking up and finding it HOME."

Her daughter,
EMMA DUPREE O'NEALL

In Memory of Our Beloved President of Missionary Society, Mrs. Marion M. Lewis

"God, in His wisdom, has recalled
The boon His love has given,
And though the body slumbers afar
The same is safe in heaven."

It is true that God is constantly gathering his choicest flowers from His garden of souls, that live for a time here on earth as mortals, but with Him they will live and bloom anew.

There are none of us who could express in mere words how much we miss Mrs. Lewis, our president, co-worker and friend. No one could have been more kind, more earnest or loyal, more generous with her talent for leading and teaching. She so truly won our hearts that her memory will be always with us even though—

"A precious one from us has gone;
A voice we loved is still.
A place is vacant in our society
Which never can be filled."

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. JOHN LEACH,

Constipated?

The doctors say . . .
Use liquid treatment

Here is the soundest advice anyone can give on the subject of laxatives. It is based on medical opinion. We want you to have the benefit of this information no matter what laxative you may buy:

The secret of real relief from constipation is reduced dosage. You can't regulate the bowels unless you can regulate the help you give them. That is why doctors use a liquid laxative; the dose can be measured to a drop.

Avoid laxatives that you can't cut down in dosage; especially those that seem to require larger doses than when you began their use.

Under the doctor's care, you usually get a liquid laxative. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. Smaller and smaller doses—until you don't need any.

of professions, reclamations and consecrations would run into the hundreds. Those joining the church included all classes, from the young and tender to those who had put off the call of God through the years; and from the lowly to the most outstanding citizens of the town and parish.

Dr. Coale is so far from having anything professional about him that he gets a thrill out of every good service or profession equal to that of a boy preacher who has just won his first victory in the Lord's work. He preaches the Methodism of our fathers, while pleading for the better life and service of every Christian, regardless of denominational lines. His ministry is a positive blessing to every Christian, and they came in multitudes to hear him. The one thing which has put some of our evangelists on the rocks is foreign to him. What the people give or pay, they do so without pressure or even mention on his part, unless the pastor forces the issue upon him. Of course, Christians always want to show their appreciation of such services, and therefore it becomes a means of grace. Dr. Coale is the pastor's friend in every way. The climax of his work along this line was doubling the subscription list of subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and raising several hundred dollars with which to build an educational building, to be named the William J. Hammon Memorial. While we did a wonderful improvement of the church last year, it is easily discernable that our plant is entirely too small and thus we are launching out.

No, I am not mad, most noble brethren, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness when I say to my brethren in Louisiana, Tennessee, South Carolina and Missouri if you secure the services of Dr. Coale you will see the cause of evangelism, so dear to every true preacher's heart, lifted clear out of the criticism which some have caused to be made against our worthy and consecrated evangelists.

Dr. Coale was invited back next year by a unanimous standing vote.

Tells How CARDUI

Relieved Pains and ## Renewed Strength

"Before the birth of my children, I suffered so much from weakness in my back and pains in my side," writes Mrs. Joe Brown, of Greer, S. C. "I felt so worn-out. I was so nervous I could not rest at night. I read of Cardui and decided to take it. It strengthened me and stopped the pain. I do not know what I would have done without Cardui." . . . Cardui has been used by women for over 50 years. It is purely vegetable, harmless. Get a bottle, today, and try it! Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

THEN shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward. Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and He shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity; And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noonday; And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water whose waters fail not. And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in.

SIR JOHN SIMON, A MINISTER IN THE BRITISH CABINET, recently instituted a suit for libel against a minister of the Methodist Conference of that Country. It appears that the minister had not been careful to substantiate his charges which he made, and the prosecution resulted. When the case came on for trial the minister was ill and not able to appear in court; but he sent an apology for his error through his attorney; and Sir John Simon magnanimously accepted the apology and withdrew the suit. But the sad feature is that the fact of gross indiscretion must remain.

THE GENERAL BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION has prepared an excellent "Service for Church School Day," which comes April 7. It consists of a general program for congregational use, and a separate eight-page folder for officers and teachers. The supplement is made up of an introduction, and supplemental material for the Chairman of the Church Board of Christian Education, the General Superintendent of the Church, and for the one who may deliver the sermon or address. We have the impression that this program contains more real meat than did the programs issued for Sunday School Day.

THE EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN TRINITY CHURCH of Southern California contemplates placing an exhibit in the proposed Palace of Religion at the California Pacific International Exposition which opens May 29, at San Diego. According to the publicity sent out by the promoters of the Exposition, other denominations which have indicated a purpose to take part are Seventh Day Adventists, Rosicrucians, Latter Day Saints (Mormons), Salvation Army, and Christian Scientists. The list of probable participants does not indicate that the promoters of the scheme will be charged with excessive orthodoxy.

THE METHODIST RECORDER, London, commenting upon the semi-centennial of the death of General Chinese Gordon, who was killed in Kartoum, Africa, says: "A braver, more fearless, and more consecrated man never lived. The attempts to detract from his memory have been numerous, but his name will ever live in British history and in the annals of Christian saints . . . Gordon's name will be remembered not only because of the tragic end of his wonderful career, but because of his manly Christian character. There was in him a combination of genius and deep spirituality. He was a great military leader, but he was also a great man in prayer. Did not Tennyson write of him?—

"Warrior of God, man's friend, and tyrant's foe,
Now somewhere dead, far in the waste Soudan,
Thou livest in all hearts, for all men know
This earth has never borne a nobler man."

THE GENERAL MINUTES AND YEAR-BOOK is just out, and it measures up to its usual standard of excellence both as respects the workmanship and the material included. It has not been possible to give it a careful examination, as yet, but we notice two errors affecting the constituency of the Advocate which were wholly unnecessary. Under the list of "Full-term Presiding Elders" contained in the Year Book section, the names of W. L. Doss of Louisiana and J. T. Leggett of Mississippi appear. Neither of those brethren was appointed presiding elder last year, and both of them are now serving pastorates.

THE REPUBLICAN-TRIBUNE, OF CHARLOTTE, Mich., recently wrote an editorial dealing with liquor, which said: "We were one of the men who honestly believed that controlled liquor would be preferable to a decade of discouraging prohibition. We were wrong. . . . In many respects the old saloon was a paragon of virtue compared with the modern beer garden. At any rate, young girls were not tolerated in the old saloon. Today they furnish a definite percentage of the beer garden patronage. The writer from this time henceforth is publicly and politically dry and shall at every opportunity vote against the liquor traffic." This statement taken from The Voice needs no re-enforcement.

THE PRICE OF HOGS HAS REACHED THE PEAK for a number of years, according to market quotations of the past week. That is an intensely interesting fact to the hog-raiser; but even that has an off-set. The price of bacon is four times the price of the hogs, and all meat and dairy products are in proportion. That means that the staples of our food requirements are beyond the reach of the average person's ability. The rise in these products would make little difference, if there were any compensation in an increased earning for those who must make a market for them; but that is not the case; and, as we see it, the rocketing prices will simply leave the producer where he was while it increases the difficulty of the man whose limited means will be cut in half by advances in the prices of what he must buy.

THE MORAL UNITY OF LIFE

Sacred and secular are two of the most unfortunate words in our vocabulary. By their implication God is virtually assigned to a cloister frequented by a few; and the multitudes, confessed to be spiritual orphans, are given a measure of absolution for the blame or the moral reproach of denying God a place in their lives. Surely leaving God out of account in any matter is not something that should be passed as either proper or harmless. We need to reconstruct our interpretation of life upon the basis of God's universal love and dominion. Christianity is no more a compartment or a segment of society than it is a common denominator of its elements. It is an experience of salvation and a recognition of the authority of Jesus Christ over what we have and what we are. We have no right to encourage a spiritual laxity by admitting the propriety of such zoning of conduct. The absoluteness of the sovereignty of God is emphasized again and again when he is described as "a jealous God," and a separateness is required among his people. And the gospel of the new dispensation does not soften the exaction; for the relation of the church to Christ is represented as that of a bride to her husband. The uncompromising demand of the kingdom of God is righteousness—a life without reservation. No man has a right to endorse or to encourage moral concessions for any person or for any reason whatever. To do so is to burn strange fire in the censer of the church. Any individual has the right to repudiate the authority of Christ, but he must take responsibility for it himself. No true and understanding Christian will give his blessing to the repudiation of the kingdom of God, by a term which may imply a suspension of moral responsibility. Whether we classify a moment or an act as sacred or secular, it is a moment or an act directly related to God: As St. Paul says: "For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord."

TRIED WITH FIRE

During the last two decades, the Christian Church has been passing through a period of criticism and opposition as malignant in character and as unrelenting in its pressure as that suffered at the hands of Nero or any other representative of pagan Rome. The sickening horror of the World War was boldly charged to the failure of the church; too confident representatives of science hurled themselves against its ramparts; the enemies of prohibition, with every form of subsidized publicity imaginable, have attacked the church; a movement dignified by great names attacked its missionary administration and policy; and the resistance which the church is making to war, and particularly against the wretched practices of munitions-makers and other war enterprises is being assailed by those merchants of international disaster. This league of opposition and unholy criticism has been greatly advantaged by the truckling attitude of time-serving politicians. They have made possible the aggressions of an alliance of social vice, crime and other things which minister to moral chaos. Without the support of national legislatures, the vampires of the war game could not survive three months. Regardless of the disclosures being made, there is scarcely a chemical plant recently built that was not constructed with reference to its immediate transformation into a war enterprise. And for the sake of a little revenue the lives, the fortunes and the morals of the people have been pawned to liquor. The church is keeping up its fight against this coalition of enemies; it is struggling valiantly to maintain its missionary advance; it is seeking earnestly to awaken within the people a new sense of social responsibility; and it is making progress toward a reunited Christendom which no other generation has made. It is not unlikely that the church historian five hundred years hence will point to this period of criticism and opposition as one of the heroic epochs in the life of the Christian Church. Certainly, he who promised that the "gates of hell" should not prevail against the church will neither forget nor desert his embattled host.

THE CHRISTIAN QUEST

The pursuit of righteousness is an idea often and variously presented in the Scriptures, particularly in the New Testament. We do not recall a more suggestive figure, nor one which more adequately portrays the story of Christian growth. Purity, a sacrificial spirit, and saintliness are not character accidents, but they are developments of the soul brought about through a definite commitment to Christian aims and a constant pursuit of the virtues of the Christian life. Worship, if it has any stimulating and inspiring value, is no mere religious convention to which we give formal heed. It is the irrepressible urge of the soul in its quest for God. Conversation, no matter how effected nor what its emotional associates may be, is not an end in itself, and it does not, of itself, bring full satisfaction for the hungry heart. It is the beginning of a quest for a holy life, and each day is registered in spiritual confidence and exaltation which is reflected in the very personality itself. No boy ever chased a butterfly across the fields without the gorgeous splendor of the butterfly's wing being reflected on his face. No lover of flowers ever gave to his flowers constant and tender care, but that his life breathed in the fragrance of his garden pets. So no one ever gave himself to the pursuit of righteousness, except to experience a transformation of his life too real to be misunderstood or misinterpreted. That august and priestly assemblage in Jerusalem may have had many doubts and misgivings concerning Jesus and his unlearned and ignorant followers; but one thing was settled: "They took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." The pursuit of righteousness lifts the soul toward God; it transfigures even the commonplace incidents of life; and it gives to every relation of the Christian a touch of beauty and glory.

FRAGMENTS OF A FIFTH GOSPEL?

A few weeks ago there was discovered in Egypt what is believed to be the oldest Christian writing in existence. Fragments of two small papyrus sheets written in Greek characters were purchased with other papyrus material in Egypt, and it was brought to the British Museum. The trained eye of the Keeper of Manuscripts fell upon the Greek letters Iota-Eta, the ancient Christian symbols for the name of Jesus. After studying the scraps more closely, Dr. Bell, of the Museum, says that they were written not later than the middle of the second century, and that they are copies of an older document. Fragmentary as it is, it is believed to be the most valuable find that has been made in the sands of Egypt, not alone for its age, but for the vastly more important reason that it has the appearance of being the foundation of our fourth Gospel—either that the Johannine Gospel was drawn from the material of which this is a part, or that the two had a common source. A fair presumption in favor of this theory would tend to give a direct and positive validation to the fourth Gospel; would dispose of many of the critical problems which have been raised; and give it a rank and an originality not less than that accorded the synoptics. Cities have been razed and their sites forgotten; and civilizations have come and gone; but he who said: Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away, makes the very sands of the desert to be the bearers of his message.

THE CHURCH PRESS

It almost frightens one to think seriously over what he observes being read by the people whom he meets in daily contact. The fact that their lives are being directed by the reading material to which persons give attention makes the matter all the more serious. We find the commercialized advertisements dominating the policy of many popular magazines and newspapers. A change in owners turns a dependable journal of opinion into a agency of baneful propaganda. All too many books are either flippant or irreverent. And this literature is being read by our people everywhere.

The writer has heard several of his fellow ministers comment on finding the literature of Unity, Christian Science, and premillennialism in the homes of their church members. Our people are reading such publications to the neglect of their own literature. They are being attracted to outside agencies which sooner or later will cause them to lose interest in what their church is doing.

Our hope in such a time of threatened apostasy seems to lie in the periodicals produced by the church. These have a definitely idealistic purpose. They exist to interpret modern existence in its highest terms. The church press warns when danger threatens. It is muzzled by no predatory interests. It sets forth convincingly the abiding values of the religious life. This is its mission. It utters the voice of prophecy concerning the purpose of God in this and the future ages.

The message of the church press must be megaphoned until it reaches every Christian. Our papers should deliver this message to every home in the Christian church. It should be carried far beyond the confines of the church into all the areas of present day existence.

Strangle the church press and religion's most convincing voice is hushed. Amplify that voice, and the message of God will have its rightful chance with this generation.

SPIRITUAL TRAINING IN THE HOME

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

It would be an exceedingly difficult task to select a topic for discussion of a more vital and fundamental importance than that of spiritual training in the home. The church is frequently criticised today for its lack of spirituality; but the trouble is not with the church. The root of the matter is in the home. The tide of spirituality in the church will fall just as low and rise just as high as the tide of spirituality in the home. And what is more, the religious temperance of the nation will fall and rise with the religious temperance of the home. The spirituality of the home is the measure of the spirituality of the church, the community, and the nation. Hence, the vital necessity of spiritual training in the home.

The editor of the Manufacturers Record, which is a business journal, has this to say: "Above all else this country needs a nation-wide revival of old-fashioned prayer meeting religion. A religion that makes a man realize that if there is a heaven there must also be a hell. A religion that makes a man realize that every act is recorded on his own conscience; a religion that makes an employer understand that if he pays his employees less than fair wages he is a robber; a religion that will teach church members that if they fail to support religion with their contributions and pay their pastor less than a living salary they are robbing both man and God. Until the people of this nation accept and live this religion there will be strife where there should be peace. A nation-wide acceptance of this true religion would bring business and world peace." There is but one fault to be found with this statement of the editor of the Manufacturers Record. He should have gone one step further and emphasized the fact that there can be no nation-wide acceptance of religion without spiritual training in the home.

The editor of the Christian Herald, Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, says: "The one great need of the United States is a genuine revival of the religion of Jesus Christ. This nation does not need a revision of the tariff to bring prosperity—it needs religion. This nation does not need increased trade with other nations to restore prosperity—it needs religion in the heart. America needs a religious revival. The great need is religion. It does not need statesmanship, or diplomacy, or economics, or politics. It does not need laws, but religion—the religion of Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the World." Let me again emphasize the fact that this great need, of which Dr. Sheldon so forcefully speaks, cannot be realized without spiritual training in the home.

The fathers and mothers of today are making a serious mistake—a mistake which, if persisted in, will result in the disintegration of our civilization and ultimately accomplish the downfall of our nation. The mistake to which I refer is the neglect of the spiritual training of their children in the home while placing their dependence upon educational processes, obsessed with the misleading idea that intellectual training alone will make good citizens of their sons and daughters; but that this idea is based upon a false assumption was demonstrated in the murder of the Franks boy by Loeb and Leopold, both of whom were highly educated, one of them being able to read, write, and speak fifteen different languages.

History records two outstanding illustrations, one of the far reaching results of spiritual training in the home and the other of the terrible consequences of its criminal neglect. Max Jukes was born in New York and married a woman of his own type. Neither cared for religion or morals and both loved sin. They had twelve hundred descendants, nine hundred of whom have been located and their characters examined. The records show that almost all were criminals, paupers, drunkards, insane, and licentious. Three hundred died prematurely; two hundred were thieves and murderers; one hundred contaminated with vicious diseases; and ninety were prostitutes. They cost the government $1,250,000. The other example is found in Jonathan Edwards. He and his wife were reared in Christian homes. Fifteen hundred of their descendants have been found. Two hundred and eighty-five were graduates of colleges; sixty were university professors; thirteen were college presidents; more than one hundred were lawyers; more than one hundred were preachers; seventy-five were army and navy officers; one was vice president; three were United States senators; sixty were doctors; sixty were authors; thirty were judges of courts and among them were ministers and missionaries who carried the gospel to other lands and blessed the world. Only one of the fifteen hundred descendants ever approached being a criminal and that was Aaron Burr who himself was seeking to be a Christian when a college president made light of a revival that was in progress and turned him aside from that purpose.

The present and future prosperity of this nation depends upon religious training in the home. Mr. Babson, the nation's business statistician, says: "Much of the prosperity of this nation is due to family prayers which were once held daily in the homes of our fathers. Whatever the argument pro and con may be, the fact nevertheless remains that such family prayers nurtured and developed those spiritual resources to which the prosperity of the nation is due." If then this statement of Mr. Babson be true, give us homes where the Bible is read, whose members attend church and Sunday school, and where family prayers are held for the purpose of religious training; give us public schools and colleges where the Christian religion is honored and taught, and I will show you the most flourishing and prosperous nation in the world, a nation that is happy and free.

Spiritual training in the home is necessary because it is essential to the perpetuation of our national life and history. Henry W. Grady spoke a divine message when he said: "The majesty and strength of our nation is in the homes of our people; let us keep them pure and independent, and all will be well with the republic. Let us in frugal industry make them self-sustaining. Let us make them homes of refinement in which we shall teach our daughters that modesty and patience and goodness are the charms of woman. Let us make them temples of liberty and teach our sons that an honest conscience is every man's first political law; and that no splendor can rob him and no force justify the surrender of the simplest right of a free and independent citizen. Above all, let us honor God in our avocations—anchor them close in his love, build his altars above our hearthstones, uphold them in the simple faith of our fathers, and crown them with the Bible—that Book of all books in which all the ways of life are made straight and the mystery of death made plain. The home is the source of our national life."

The homes in which there is religious training for the future citizenship of this country are the bedrock of this nation. John and Charles Wesley, both of whom received intensive religious training in the home, led a religious revival that saved England from a bloody revolution like that in France when the streets of Paris flowed with human gore—the blood of the flower of her citizenship. In like manner, if America, which God intended to be the lighthouse of the world, is saved from wreck and ruin it can only be done through spiritual training in the home.

BISHOP HORACE M. DUBOSE

Last week, February 10-17, Waynesboro had the very rare privilege of having one of its own sons, after more than fifty years of distinguished service in the ministry, come back for a series of sermon-lectures. This son was our own Bishop Horace M. DuBose, who spent his later boyhood in Waynesboro, and since leaving here has achieved distinction as a minister, scholar, writer, historian and archaeologist. And with all of his accomplishments he has kept burning the fires of a vital Christian experience.

From a mind richly stored with information gathered from many sources and many lands, and from a heart kindled with the illuminating power of the Holy Spirit, he brought messages that will long live in the minds and hearts of the thoughtful and reverent citizens of this community. He told us most interestingly of his travels and archaeological work in Palestine, Egypt, and among the ruins of ancient Nineveh and Babylon, and preached on the great experiences in the life of our Christ.

By such messages from a mind so dynamic with information and from a heart so filled with the Spirit men could not be otherwise than inspired to better living. Waynesboro is proud of her son, and is grateful that he turned his face back to the home of his youth and came and abode with the relatives and friends breaking the Bread of Life during these days. May God's richest blessings be upon him, and may a large portion of the Master's Spirit continue to abide in our hearts.

C. C. CLARK, Pastor.

perience which produced Methodism. He was the son of a carpenter and his mother died when he was about thirteen years of age. He then fell into the hands of a horse-racing, cock-fighting, farmer brother. He grew up, therefore, with no religious background. In the course of time he became a school-teacher and came in contact with a Mrs. Cannon, a very pious woman of the Presbyterian faith. Under her influence, he was led to an interest in religion and finally to an experience of salvation. His whole approach to Christianity was experimental and practical rather than theological; he developed kinship with the passion and thought of the early Methodists; and even a style of preaching which marked him as one of them. After his ordination, he preached several sermons in London, and he says: "It was strongly suspected I was a Methodist, or something else beside a churchman." But he declares that he had never conversed with a Methodist, nor did he know their principles. During his sojourn in London, he heard Wesley and Whitefield and one of the lay preachers; but he says that, although the two leaders "spoke well and to the purpose," he was little edified. Naturally Jarratt's inclination was toward the Presbyterian ministry, and he expected to cast his lot with that body. But he says: "The general prejudice of the people, at that time, against dissenters, and in favor of the church, gave me a full persuasion, that I could do more good in the Church than anywhere else. This gave a very decided preference in favor of taking orders in the Church."

The tie of interest which marked him with Methodist sympathies was destined to receive severe testing; for he says that as a preacher of experimental religion in the Establishment: "I was opposed, and reproached, by the clergy—called an enthusiast, fanatic, visionary, dissenter, Presbyterian, madman and what not." Again, "I stood alone for some considerable time; and I dare say no man was ever more cordially abhorred than I was by the clergy in general." So when Robert Williams came to his home in Virginia, the soul of Jarratt was unconsciously in revolt on account of the attitude of the clergy of the Establishment toward his ministry. He was much pleased with Williams and his preaching, by whom he says he was assured that, "Methodists were true members of the Church of England—that their design was to build up, and not divide the church—that the preachers did not assume the office of priests—administered neither the ordinance of baptism, nor the Lord's Supper, but looked to the parish ministers, in all places, for these—that they travelled to call sinners to repentance—to join proper subjects in society for mutual edification, and to do all they could for the spiritual improvement of those societies." It should be said that this statement was concurred in by the Methodists generally, and by Joseph Pilmoor in particular. Jarratt then quotes Williams as saying, "He that left the Church left the Methodists," and he says for himself, "I put a strong mark on these words." This statement was recorded in 1794, more than twenty years after the incident; and after he had experienced great disappointment in the setting up of the Methodist Church as a separate ecclesiastical body. It should be said here, that he placed an unwise and probably an unwarranted emphasis upon the assurances of Robert Williams. Mr. Wesley had been brought up in the Church of England, but the rank and file of the Methodists had little in common with the Establishment. Time was to demonstrate that no man, not even Mr. Wesley himself, could speak authoritatively and finally for Methodism; and especially under the changed conditions in America, and the unrelenting hostility which the Church of England displayed toward the Methodists on both sides of the Atlantic.

Jarratt says that he first went from house to house in his own parish for "prayer, singing, preaching and conversation;" and in making response to the solicitations for help: "Thus commenced the enlargement of my bounds of preaching, which, in process of time, extended to a circle of five or six hundred miles—east, west, north and south." This ministry, chiefly to the Methodist societies, covered fourteen counties in Virginia and five counties in North Carolina. He confesses frankly that his first giving countenance to the Methodists was to prevent dissensions in the Church such as the Baptists introduced; but that he "jumped out of the frying pan into the fire." When the Established Church was put down and the clergy were deserting because deprived of their livings, he admits that the question of the administration of ordinances became a great problem. After the suspension of the Virginia ordinations, Jarratt came promptly to the help of the Methodists: "In order to remedy the complaint of the want of ordinances, and to render them steady to the church in future, I took some long rides through several circuits, to baptize their children, administer the sacraments, etc. All which I did without fee or reward—and I continued so to do, as long as the Methodists stood to their profession." He says that in the spring of 1784, in order to make more firm their attachment to the Church, he attended Conference at Ellis's and preached, counselled the preachers, and administered the sacraments. It is clear from these statements that he was rather insisting that a great movement should be bound by individual interpretations; and that he could not realize the wider problem which the Methodists were coming more and more to face.

After the organization of the Methodist Church, he became rather cynical and bitter, particularly toward Dr. Coke whom he refers to as the "little man," and his "little soul." It appears, too, that the Methodists were not more considerate of him. Methodist historians have given prominence to his antipathies; but his long and unselfish service to the societies should be appreciated as a far greater factor in determining our estimate of his character and work. He suffered much at the hands of his own Church for the sake of promoting a genuine work of grace among all classes. When he was attacked for his activity in this regard, he says: "No clamor, opposition, or reproach, could daunt my spirit or move me from my purpose and manner of preaching, or induce me to give flattering titles to any man."

In some respects he was a bundle of paradoxical relations: developed as a Presbyterian; took orders in the Church of England; and typed by Wesleyan evangelism. His Christian spirit and judicial temperament stand out in a fine way in his apology for the emotional excesses of the revival, which he called "wild fire." He quotes Jonathan Edwards: "Wherever these most appear, there is always the greatest and deepest work." He was offended by the confusion of simultaneous prayers; but he says; "It requires much wisdom to allay the wild and not damp the sacred fire." Last of all, it is to the pen of Devereaux Jarratt, an outsider, that we are indebted for the most detailed and appreciative account of the Virginia revival. He tells the story without a tinge of jealousy—that the revival affected seven or eight counties in Virginia and that the circuit of George Shadford in 1776, "Many hundreds have in a few months been added to the Lord. And some are adding still." Truly he was a friend to the Methodists and he was a noble example of Christian catholicity.

When the representatives of Mr. Wesley came over there were three church buildings, including the log meeting-house which was never completed; and there were three lay preachers and three hundred members scattered over a wide extent of wilderness. In the fifteen years which followed their arrival, Methodist services were held in private residences, barns and court-houses; and the membership grew to fifteen thousand, two-thirds of whom were in Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina. It is impossible to give an estimate of the number of buildings that were erected; but there were eighty-four preachers actively engaged in the work; there was a network of circuits covering

New York, New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas and parts of Tennessee; and the circuit-riders were pressing along every trail that led towards the border of settlement and civilization. This is the record which lies back of the convening of the Christmas Conference of 1784 when the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized; and such is the story of the expanding of the Methodist horizon on this side of the Atlantic.

Chapter III

ECCLESIASTICAL INDEPENDENCE

The adoption of the Declaration of Independence marked the beginning of a new era in the political and social history of the American settlements; and the retirement of the Wesleyan missionaries was the herald of a no less distinct change in the ecclesiastical life of the people called Methodists. As was to be expected, the Church of England inherited the unpopularity of the government which maintained it; and every movement of British origin or under any form of British control was suspected and opposed by the patriot forces in the colonies. The mistrust of Methodism on account of its British relation was greatly intensified by the Calm Address which Mr. Wesley issued in 1775. In that document he undertook an impolitic and offensive support of England against the patriot cause, and the wonder is that his action did not destroy the Methodist movement in America altogether. In addition to the blunder upon the part of the founder, the societies contributed something to the irritation on their own account. For some reason or other, the Methodists of Virginia, in 1776, engaged in active and open opposition to the move for disestablishment in that Colony; and in the petition which they presented to the Legislature, they definitely allied themselves with the Church of England and against other Protestants whom they termed "common dissenters." As we have stated already, Methodist preachers and leaders suffered much during the Revolution at the hands of mobs and magistrates who were willing to lend themselves to misguided enthusiasms and patriotic prejudices. By 1779, however, sentiment had so completely changed that the Methodists then joined in a petition for dissolving the relation between church and state in Virginia. In that same year, the traveling preachers of the South met in Conference at Broken-Back Church, Fluvanna County, Virginia, and proceeded to ordain themselves without reference to historic forms of succession. Both the Established Church and Mr. Wesley were involved in this unwise spirit of independence and revolt. In our time it would probably be attributed to the development of the "spirit of nationalism;" but it was due in considerable measure to the resentment of the Methodists on account of being so long denied a duly accredited ministry of their own. By this denial, they had

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. L. L. Cowen, pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, has received 106 members into his church since Conference.

Rev. Harry S. Allen, one of the General Evangelists of the Church, will assist Rev. E. C. Gunn in a meeting at Lake Charles, March 17-31.

The little son of Rev. W. M. Jones of Prairie, Miss., was stricken with scarlet fever recently, but his condition was reported as favorable at last account.

We are glad to be able to report that Dr. A. W. Turner's condition is improving. He is still in a serious condition, but the ominous symptoms of a week ago have disappeared.

In a business note, Rev. W. W. Cammack, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, says he is "the oldest and smallest member of the Mississippi Conference."

Rev. Martin Hebert writes us an appreciated note from the little city by the Ouichita—West Monroe. He says that in spite of a few bad Sundays, they have made a good start.

Rev. B. D. Benson, pastor of Toccopola, Miss., recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, in the Water Valley hospital. We are happy to know that he is well on the way to recovery.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is constantly on the go. His schedule for the last ten days included Natchitoches, State Normal and Rayville in Louisiana; Winona, Miss., and Little Rock, Ark.

The four institutes conducted by Rev. W. P. Buhrman, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, are said to have resulted in much good. A large number of the stewards of the district attended.

Rev. A. S. J. Neill of Gueydan, La., is looking after all the interests of the church in his field. He had a church conference on the night of February 20, in which the Advocate had a place.

Rev. Ira W. Flowers, pastor of Covington, La., has returned from Oklahoma City where he carried his baby for treatment. His friends will be rejoiced to learn that the baby is much improved.

Mrs. C. M. Martin of East End Church, Meridian, and the widow of a superannuate preacher of that Conference, writes of her joy in church work. She is in charge of the nursery department of her church.

Rev. A. F. Godat, now an insurance man of New York City; but formerly of New Orleans, retains his interest in the Crescent City and in the Advocate. His gracious words to the editor are duly appreciated.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, says that all the pastors are doing good work and are very happy. He was much pleased with his missionary Institutes at Hammond and Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Roberts, widow of the late W. G. Roberts, once of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences and brother of Revs. L. L. and H. G. Roberts of Mississippi, was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office a few days ago.

Rev. H. E. Pfost, pastor of Oak Grove charge, received eighteen into the church on January 20. On Thursday, March 21, Bishop Dobbs will speak on "The Meaning of Religion for Today." Brother Pfost is enthusiastic about his work.

Rev. J. J. Baird reports a fine interest in church work and an advance in the pastor's salary at Tchula, Miss. He says that the salary has been paid to date and that twice as much will be raised for benevolences as was raised last year.

The Methodist Men's Club recently organized at Amory, Miss., is well spoken of, and it promises to become a power for the enlistment of the men of the city. The next session of the North Mississippi Conference will be held in that church.

Mr. R. A. Pullen, chairman of the Board of Stewards of Aberdeen church, reports that at the end of the first quarter one-fourth of the entire budget for the year has been raised. That shows what system and a consistent planning will accomplish.

For two years past, Scarritt College for Christian workers has not undertaken a regular program of work during the summer quarter; but this year a full schedule of work is being resumed, according to announcement sent to the Advocate office.

The Aberdeen District Preachers Meeting was held at Amory, Miss., on February 12, and the next meeting will be at Calhoun City, March 5. Rev. W. R. Lott will lead a discussion on making reception into the church mean more to children. Rev. H. C. Lewis will preach the sermon.

Rev. Newton D. Guerry, who has made a special study of the rural church, is making an interesting demonstration of the possibilities of the country church at Woodland, Miss. He is organizing it to serve the people in a larger and a more satisfying manner than it has been doing in recent years.

Mr. G. L. Morelock, secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, will conduct an Institute for stewards and other church officials in New Orleans, March 10-12. The sessions will be held at Rayne Memorial Church and no steward or church official should miss any one of the three sessions scheduled.

The editor makes acknowledgement of a very gracious personal letter from Rev. A. H. Williams, formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but now a superannuate of the North Alabama Conference. His home is at Attalla, Ala., and he writes in highest appreciation of the people of Mississippi and Louisiana.

The Kiwanis Club of Columbus, Miss., did a very gracious and beautiful thing in paying tribute to the memory of Mrs. McIntosh, wife of Rev. W. M. McIntosh, who is an honorary member of the Club. Rev. E. Nash Broyles of First Methodist Church offered the prayer, and an account of the service was carried by the Columbus Commercial Dispatch.

FROM OLIVE BRANCH, MISS.

Dear Dr. Duren: You may say through the Advocate to any who are interested in our church work at Olive Branch that the embarrassing church debt which has been hanging for several years over our splendid church building has been satisfactorily settled. The people had almost despaired of raising it at all but after a liberal offer had been made by the holder of the mortgage we rallied our forces for the final effort. After heroic work and sacrifice every dollar has been lifted from the church and the balance remaining, which is not large, fully covered by individual notes.

Our people are happy over results and we feel sure that prosperity will come to the church.

Sincerely,

J. D. SIMPSON.

MONROE DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE

Shall we call it something new under the sun? Well, as far as the writer's experience is concerned, new methods of getting the people to attend were used. It was given a new name. It was new to the knowledge of this reporter in that there was the largest attendance in proportion to the church membership of the district that he has ever seen or heard about. And Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, from the Belgian Congo, said there was the largest attendance that they had witnessed in institutes in three Annual Conferences. It was new with new interest in old interests. There is a new district leader who is asking us to call him by a new name—"District Pastor."

The "Inspirational Missionary Addresses were truly inspirational, only they indicted! Dr. Lewis spoke like a man. Mrs. Lewis spoke like a woman. They spoke like men and women "almost inspired" with unselfish interests.

"District Pastor" H. L. Johns had offered ten dollars to the charge that should succeed in getting the largest per cent of its membership to attend the "District Rally," to apply on its benevolences. He also sent out two hundred pieces of advertising. Mer Rouge, Rev. J. A. McCormack, pastor, got the ten dollars, with twenty-four present, or 9 per cent of its membership.

There was an attendance of three and one-half per cent of the membership, or two hundred forty-seven. You would have declared, most likely, had we not made an actual count, because the main auditorium of First Church, Monroe, seemed to be just about filled, that there were four or five hundred present. It was an inspiring sight. All of the pastors of the district were present, with the exception of one who was sick.

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, of Mansfield, La., and Conference Missionary Secretary, brought a brief message on evangelism. Mrs. H. L. Johns opened the meeting with an organ prelude. Rev. W. C. Scott, of First Church, Monroe, led us in prayer. Mrs. James T. Harris sang; Mrs. D. C. Metcalf gave a short talk on "The World Outlook," and Miss Elizabeth Langford made announcements in regard to our week-end Christian Culture Institute, February 22, 23-24, to be held at First Methodist Church, Monroe. Each one brought his lunch, and the local committee provided coffee.

After lunch Mrs. W. D. Bozone met with about sixty workers of Children's Divisions of the district. Mrs. Bozone is District Director of Children's Work.

This "Rally" is characteristic of the way things are "running" in the Monroe District!

Laxative Medicine

It is just as natural for the digestive system to respond to the laxative action of Thedford's Black-Draught as it is for the body to pick up energy from foods from the garden. Both are vegetable products of Nature. Black-Draught is composed of laxative herbs, selected in the course of long medical experience. And in Black-Draught they are prepared by simply drying and finely grinding them so that the human digestive system can most easily absorb the medicine needed to relieve constipation. When you need a laxative, get acquainted with Thedford's Black-Draught.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

The Officers' Training Day for the Alexandria District was held in First Church, Alexandria, on January 31. Mrs. L. S. Sims, district secretary, presided.

Mrs. R. F. Harrell led the morning devotions, taking for her subject: "Finding God Through Prayer."

The instruction period followed with the following instructors leading the various groups: Mrs. George S. Sexton, Jr., Mrs. W. H. Martin, Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter, Mrs. H. J. Powers, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Mrs. O. E. Woodard, Mrs. R. F. Harrell and Rev. A. K. McLellan.

At 11:15 the groups reassembled in the auditorium and an open forum was conducted by Mrs. Sims.

Miss Mathilda Killingsworth, a Scarritt graduate who has just taken her new position as director of student work at the State Normal at Natchitoches, gave an inspiring message using for her subject "Scarritt College."

The meeting was closed with a consecration service led by Mrs. Sexton. A record attendance was reported for this occasion, showing nearly 250 in attendance.

We are happy to announce that Alexandria District made a fine financial record for last year, the treasurer's report showing that their district pledge to Conference was over paid by $100.00.

Monroe W. M. S. closed its year's work with flying colors. Not only did they pay all pledges and scholarships in full but four life members were made at their December meeting. Those to receive this honor were Mrs. A. R. Holloway, president of the auxiliary; Mrs. S. R. Wright, Mrs. W. D. Bozone and Mrs. Walter Scott.

Mrs. W. A. Newell, Council superintendent of Christian Social Relations, writes to the auxiliary superintendents as follows: "Christian citizenship calls for action on motion pictures. For years good people have tried to devise some way of cleansing the motion picture industry of evil features, so that their children might enjoy this wonderful form of entertainment without being contaminated. Every device has failed. Now a new way has been opened by the church. Will you help by joining the Legion of Decency? Our Church, through its bishops, its Board of Education and the Woman's Missionary Council, endorses this league. There are no dues, no meetings to attend. Joining consists in signing a 'Declaration of Purpose' the gist of which is 'I will remain away from all motion pictures which offend decency and Christian morality and will try to induce others to do the same.'"

Your auxiliary superintendent was sent a sample of these cards and urged to order them and to work diligently for signers. This column would be glad to print the names of auxiliaries following this instruction from Mrs. Newell and also the number of signers. Let's hear from you!

The Quitman auxiliary met at the parsonage January 28, at which time a very impressive pledge service was held with Mrs. T. B. Cottrell as leader, using a chart explaining where and how the pledge is used. The program topic included three parts: 1st, Praise and Promise; 2nd, Prayer and Partnership; 3rd, Pledge and Participation. This was given responsively with occasional verses of hymns sung. The most impressive part of the program was the pledge service emphasized by burning candles representing service, prayer and giving, as they gave off their light prayer was offered for those in the fields of service. An interesting letter from the Council president was read by Mrs. L. E. Dease. The candle lighting by the leader and her inspiring words gave fresh inspiration to the members, who after a period of meditation and prayer quietly signed the pledge cards; these showing an encouraging increase over the pledge of last year.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess with Mrs. H. C. Watkins and Mrs. B. H. Carter as co-hostesses.

ports that two young women who finished the Normal school in May, 1934, are now teaching in mission schools. Both these girls were trained in Council home and both are married. "It is a new day for Africa," says Miss Zicafoose, "when a woman of this tribe can work outside her home if she wishes."

The Methodist Layman

A MESSAGE FROM THE LAY LEADER OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By J. M. Sullivan

Dear Brethern: The report received recently from our Conference treasurer showing payments on the benevolences up to February 1 is given below. It will be of interest and a source of concern. Here it is:

Brookhaven District

Crystal Springs, $30.00; Osyka, $7.00; Utica, $10.56.

Hattiesburg District

Hattiesburg Broad St., $31.20; Laurel, West Laurel, $5.00; Waynesboro Circuit, $9.00.

Jackson District

Fannin, $19.00; Forest, $20.00; Mendenhall and D'Lo, $7.50; Vaughan, $35.00.

Meridian District

Burnside, $10.00; Lauderdale and Electric Mills, $39.50; Meridian, Hawkins Memorial, $38.15; Union, $105.00.

Vicksburg District

Vicksburg, Gibson Memorial, $29.51.

Seashore District

Logtown, $5.00; Moss Point, $21.50; Saucier, $33.00.

It might be well if the situation of our benevolences as reflected in this report could be carried with emphasis to every adult member of our Church in the Mississippi Conference, provided it be given serious consideration with reference to what was done last year, what we are asked to do this year, what the needs demand, what our financial duty and ability is, and what our "new financial plan" contemplates.

Last year the payments on benevolences up to February 1 amounted to $638.00 as compared with $455.92 for the same period this year. In view of all that has been done to encourage a better start and accomplish more early in the year, this report is discouraging.

This year the askings for General and Conference work amount to $66,585.00, which represents approximately $5,548.00 per month. If our goal for the benevolences is 100 per cent collected monthly, there has been paid to February 1 about one twenty-fourth, or approximately 4 per cent of what should have been ready for distribution on that date.

The needs this year are made more demanding and call for more prompt and fruitful efforts because of the great deficit last year. Without reference to the past, the needs of this year are greater than the askings can supply. Who can study the objects for which the benevolences of our Church are raised and at the same time consider how little is being done without recognizing that the needs are really and seriously great?

Every member of the Church, without reference to age, has a financial responsibility and can generally discover some way to meet it when this is recognized as a duty. As to ability, it is quite evident that if our membership were as loyal to the Church as to many secular agencies and if they could discover their ability to contribute to the needs of the Church with one-tenth the readiness and degree that they recognize their ability to gratify the desire for numerous and sometimes expensive pleasures, however wholesome and helpful they may be, the very reasonable askings of the Church would be taken care of with ease and an evangelistic spirit would be spontaneous.

The new financial plan contemplates a loyal acceptance by every charge to the askings as apportioned by the district stewards, with a determination to follow the plans for developing greater loyalty. It also contemplates a very careful effort of those officials to make the apportionments as wise and just as possible, and a willingness of the larger churches to make extra efforts when needed to assist the weaker ones.

You will note that the treasurer's report included only eighteen charges, one hundred and thirteen having paid nothing. Is that not inexcusable? If it is the best that could be done, no one should complain, but what is the outlook for Mississippi Methodism in this quadrennium?

Pastors will please compare the figures given with their records, and in case of any mistake being discovered, communicate with the treasurer, Mr. F. Y. Whitfield, at once, that he may make the proper adjustment.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MARCH 3

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

MODERN FORMS OF HYPOCRISY

While we marvel at the character and achievements of the members of the early church, none who read the record will believe that all were saints, or that the apostles were gifted with omniscience. In general, directed by the Spirit, they sometimes resorted to casting lots, or used the trial and error method common today. Under the stress of poverty and persecution, their brotherly love prompted a noble experiment in communism. Like a loyal and devoted family, "none said that aught that he had was his own." It was the communism of generosity not greed; of sharing not grabbing. Its motto was not "stand and deliver," but "come and receive." Very soon there appeared those who had more appetite for food than for work, there was bickering over the division of supplies, and the experiment failed. Meantime, Barnabas won great acclaim when he sold a piece of land and added the proceeds to the common fund. This set off the fires of ambition in the hearts of Ananias and his wife. They would have their names written high on the roll of generous givers. They sold their land and made a donation—with reservations! They expected to receive such expressions of appreciation and gratitude as had come to Barnabas. Instead, they were sharply and publicly rebuked for deviltry and lying to God. Regardless of divinely sanctioned penalty, it is no wonder they died under the shock. So perished the couple greedy for a fame they did not merit and for a reward they had not earned. Next comes Simon the magician, who would add another trick to his bag and become immensely rich if only Peter would sell him the power to transform man by the touch of his hands. But recently a pagan, he probably did not know the enormity of his offense till the horrified Peter bade him begone with his money, declaring that he had no part or lot with the lowly Nazarene and his self-sacrificing followers. So the primitive church was purged. Its reputation and life were at stake, and the apostles had an authority the modern minister will hardly dare assume, regardless of theories of "succession." The church today, fortified by the achievements of the centuries, can be more tolerant. In spite of the sneer of the scorner, it must not forget that it represents the Christ who by patience and forbearance transformed the unstable Peter into granite; that it is a nursery caring for infants; a school training the young and immature; a hospital nursing the sick and the lame back to health and vigor.

There have always been hypocrites in the church, but it has never had a monopoly of the breed. They strut or sneak in every group. Witness the Boors assuming the manners of culture; the poor draped in the habiliments of the rich, or riding in automobiles that will be taken back when the first installment falls due, while grocery bills remain unpaid; cowards, boasting and bluffing of their "courage." School boards know well they must be on guard against imposition by "scholars" whose "Ph.D.'s" were bought or forged—and not teachers alone have been made "doctors" for a price! Not all hypocrites meet with sudden or tragic death, but all pay a fearful penalty. No vice is more despised than hypocrisy, as no virtue is more appreciated than genuineness. Perhaps "Hambone" in the comic strip was at his best when he said: "The more folks tries to look like what they ain't, the more they looks like what they is." Is there not another most subtle form of hypocrisy in which sheep wear wolf's clothing, as when men purposely evade being ranked among the good, refusing to "put the best foot forward?" Do we not owe it to ourselves and to our fellows to seek to appear at our best, as well as to strive to be better?

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Mat. 6:12—Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

1. The importance of the petition. Jesus includes this in the model prayer He taught His disciples. Every petition in this brief prayer is vital. He adds a footnote on this petition at the close of the Lord's prayer. Jesus had come to save us from our sins. Jesus prayed from the cross, "Father, forgive them."

2. The nature of forgiveness. Forgiveness does not annul God's natural law. The natural and moral worlds are organically related to the government of God. It remains true that we reap what we sow. The sequence of cause and effect cannot be abrogated. Forgiveness is not immunity from the natural consequences of our misdeeds.

But forgiveness is spiritual. Forgiveness does bring the restoration into Divine favor. Forgiveness makes possible the filial relation to God that we may cry "Abba, Father." The estrangement caused by sin has been removed. Those once alienated by wicked works are reconciled. Harmony with God is restored. Right attitudes result in right relations with God.

3. Condition of forgiveness. Go on with the prayer, "As we forgive our debtors." Consider the emphatic statement of Jesus at the close of this prayer: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive men not their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Jesus taught Peter that a Christian must be willing to forgive "until seventy times seven times." The parable of the unforgiving steward plainly reveals that a man who desires forgiveness must be willing to forgive. Forgiveness demands forgiveness. When Jesus pointed out the disastrous consequences of hate in the sermon on the mount, He said, "Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." Acceptable worship waits on the restoration of right personal relation. Well does St. Paul enjoin us: "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you." Eph. 4:32.

4. The results of forgiveness. T. W. Pym writes in his "Psychology and the Christian Life": "I know of no adequate remedy psychologists advance for the cure of worry that arises from remorse, nor is there any remedy except that provided in a doctrine of forgiveness." O how blessed is Jesus bringing this peace with God and our fellowmen and release from our worry. He knew how hate explodes and brings trouble not only to the object of hate but to the one who harbors it. He saves us from it.

But the blessings of forgiveness are not only individual blessings. Forgiveness clears the atmosphere in the home and removes the clouds of misunderstanding and ill will. Many a broken home is re-established as a result of forgiveness.

Mutual love and forgiveness brings right relations in the home.

Brotherhood reigns in the community life as a consequence of forgiveness. It brings right relations in industry, in civic life, in racial relationships, in international life; it creates friendship and co-operation, while hate creates strife, discord and even futile war.

Prayer

We stand in need of Thy forgiveness. We thank Thee for Him who prayed and died for our forgiveness. We are graciously forgiven through Christ. We would freely forgive as we are freely forgiven. We would show others the same consideration we ask of Thee.

CONSTIPATION Can be Helped!

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?

Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

MRS. FANNIE EDMONDS

On the evening of December 3, 1933, Mrs. Fannie Edmonds closed her eyes for that last long sleep and went home to heaven. She came into this world March 27, 1858. She was married to W. G. Edmonds November 22, 1876. There came into this home six children. Two preceded her to the better land. Four survive her—John, Mrs. R. L. Criscoe, Mrs. Lottie Weems and Miss Elizabeth Edmonds. In the fair dawn of girlhood she gave her heart to God. In health and strength she walked with the Master and while the days of suffering gradually stole the bloom from her cheek, it could have been no other than the indwelling presence of the Comforter that gave her fortitude to bear the pain of the weary days and nights, and yet greet the friends and loved ones with smiles and tender tones. Her home life was ideal. Quiet, unassuming, yet true to every relation of life, she added to the sum of human happiness, and, were everyone for whom she did some loving service to bring a blossom to her grave, she would sleep beneath a wilderness of flowers. A sweet, happy home is broken up. The home where the children have gathered for family reunions is no more. Her great soul was forever expanding in gratitude to humanity. There are many who could join me in tribute to the loving service of her hands, for flowers skillfully arranged to best display their beauty for the pleasure of her friends, for dainty dishes to tempt the sick, and for warm, comfortable garments she deftly fashioned for those less fortunate than she. After her hands were still we thought of how much they had done for those she loved, until lately they were shorn through illness of their strength; for God said "their work is done." She was so appreciative of her children and often she would say, "I wish you knew how good they are to me." She never felt that she was in the way and had outlived her usefulness, but she was ever watching for an opportunity to make others happy. It was my pleasure to visit her often and I always was helped, soothed and comforted as I was not before I went there. The thought I would banish forever if I could, is: The last visit has been made and I shall see her no more with mortal eyes. She loved the Methodist church, to which she belonged. She attended service in the house of God when her body was in pain, but she remembered the words of Him who said, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together," and she was true.

Her pastors each found in her a friend. Her home was open to them and they delighted to partake of her cordial hospitality. She did not believe in keeping words of appreciation and praise only to breathe them into dead, cold ears and leaving the thirsty soul to go through life unrefreshed and longing for the kind words which are so plentifully poured upon the grave; but she spoke them while the ears could hear, the eyes see. We shall do well to follow her as she followed Christ.

When the end came she was surrounded by her children, other loved ones and friends, and as we beheld her peaceful face we were comforted. As her feet came to the mystic river of death she seemed to catch a glimpse of "the things which the Lord hath prepared for them that love Him." May the children and loved ones so live as to form an unbroken family circle in heaven.

"Sleep on, dear mother, and take thy rest.
God called thee home; He thought it best.
A FRIEND.

Meridian, Miss

J. C. ELLIS

Brother J. C. Ellis was born and reared at Paulding, Miss. He was born March 25, 1874. He had lived since early manhood at Bucatunna, Miss., and for about twenty years had been postmaster here. He was a member of the Masonic Order at the time of his death, and his Masonic brethren had a part in the last rites at his funeral. He was a member of the Methodist church here for a number of years, and an official member for the greater part of the time. He would work wherever his pastor placed him, always punctual in attendance in every service of the church. He served as superintendent of the Sunday school for several years and was a steward at the time of his death.

His friends were legion; the rich, the poor, both white and colored, counted him as their friend.

He died suddenly on his way home to lunch from the post office, January 3, 1935. His daughter, Mildred, was with him when he fell dead. Brother Ellis is survived by his immediate family, Mrs. Pierce Smith Ellis; two daughters, Mrs. R. M. Fisher, Jr., and Carolyn Ellis; one son, James Ellis, also one brother and two sisters.

He was a good man, unassuming, unpretentious, a lovable, dependable man. He loved the church and God, was thoughtful about his pastor. A quiet, sincere Christian. We expect to meet him in the Christian's home in glory.

WALDO W. MOORE, Pastor.

Bucatunna, Miss.

ing this winter with his sister, Mrs. J. S. Foster.

At the first business meeting of 1935, Clarksdale auxiliary president asked each member of the Missionary Society to pray each day either at 8:30 or 2 p. m. for all Church causes and activities.

West Point auxiliary expressed its loyalty to the pastor by voting to be at prayer meeting on Wednesday night and to attend every service of the church during January. How did the plan work?

Rule six, page nine, of the 1935 Hand Book says: "Study conditions in your church and be ready to carry out Conference and Council plans as perfectly as possible."

Malvina, Miss.

This portrait was painted by an unknown artist. Tradition says that it was made for a society of Methodist women, and when the society disbanded the portrait was presented to Rev. Stephen Asbury Roszel. It remained in his family until after the Civil War; and it was then presented to Judge Richard H. Tebbs, of Leesburg, Virginia, by George Roszel. From Judge Tebbs, it descended to the late Hon. Charles B. Tebbs, of Washington, D. C. Permission for its use in this work was generously granted by Mrs. Chas. B. Tebbs and Hon. William F. Tebbs of Houston, Texas, two of the owners of the portrait.

JUDGE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, according to press dispatches, is seriously ill. The indications are the distinguished jurist, who is ninety-four years of age, is nearing the end of his distinguished career. His service as one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States was long and honorable; and he made a contribution to American jurisprudence not less important than that made by his worthy father in the field of literature.

THE MOONSHINERS OF GEORGIA, according to an Associated Press dispatch, have petitioned against the repeal of the prohibition laws of Georgia. That kind of liquor propaganda shows that they are either hard-pressed for argument, or they place a low estimate on Georgia intelligence. As for ourselves, we do not recognize a distinction of character in liquor peddlers. When we first went to school we learned that dollars can not be subtracted from apples and we still believe that the principle is true.

THE FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, Chicago, on Easter morning, will dedicate what is said to be the "World's largest tubular bell carillon," for the "nation's tallest church-office building." The carillon is located in a tower 400 feet above the street. It is the gift of Mr. William E. Turner, of a pioneer Chicago family, himself now 76 years of age; and it is a memorial to his father and mother. The church is located in the "Loop district" of the city, and is apparently dependent largely on rentals for its support, as it is a sky-scraper office building.

GREAT BRITAIN IS UNDERTAKING TO DEVELOP TELEVISION with a seriousness and an earnestness greater than that in any other country. It has been demonstrated that a film can be taken, developed and broadcast within forty seconds. The Treasury and British Broadcasting Corporation are financing the developments; and it is asserted that "the time may come when broadcasting entirely unaccompanied by television, will be almost as rare as the silent cinema film is today." According to the New Outlook, television broadcasts are already maintained on limited lines, but its use is to be considerably broadened in the coming months.

THE PEACE POLL conducted in co-operation with the Association of College Editors, has secured an expression from 90,000 students in 115 colleges. Such questionnaires tend to direct a judgment and they necessarily leave many angles of an issue untouched. So far the result has been overwhelmingly against war, particularly a foreign war; and it shows a pronounced opposition to the preparedness insistence which is being urged, and it favors government control of munitions industries and the conscription of all resources. There may or may not be much significance to the poll itself; but it shows that the present generation does not look favorably upon the encouragement of war.

OUT OF BERLIN'S TOTAL POPULATION of more than four million people, more than three million of them belong to the Evangelical Churches. There are 603,150 who make no confession; 441,133 are Roman Catholics; 150,564 are Jews; and only a few belong to the smaller religious bodies. The Protestants have had a small decrease in the last ten years, and the Catholics a considerable increase.

THE NEXT GENERAL CONFERENCE, is the caption of an editorial in the last issue of Zion's Herald, Boston, dealing with the vexatious race problem. We do not refer to it in any spirit of criticism; but the refusal, so far, of any city to invite the Conference for the session to be held in 1936 "on the terms laid down in the Tittle resolution" adopted at Atlantic City three years ago shows the stubbornness of the problem which the church and the country face in common. It is one thing to outline a policy as was done at Atlantic City; but to bring the public to the terms of such a paper is quite different. No one knows the problem of our sister Church better than the Southerner. We have doubtless failed in many things regarding race matters; but we know the problem first hand.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT is again face to face with the difficult political problem growing out of its Indian government. In projecting plans for the future of that vast area it is confronted by every manner of racial and religious problem. There is the rivalry of the Hindus and the Mohammedans on the one hand, and the demand of the Indian Christians on the other hand, for political organization upon the basis of individual fitness for such responsibility, not upon adherence to any faith. There has been throughout India a manifest softening toward Christianity in the abandonment of persecution of those who abandon the older national faiths for Christian baptism. This change is said to have come about within the last two decades, and it may well be taken to mean the beginning of a new India.

ALABAMA REMAINS DRY

The Alabama election which was held as a referendum on the prohibition statutes now in force is, we believe, an unmistakable evidence of a right-about-face on the liquor question throughout the country. And it was certainly a decided defeat of the interests and of the politics which is seeking to re-enthroned liquor, to force it upon the country. In 1909 Alabama defeated prohibition by a majority of 26,000 votes. In 1933 it voted for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by a majority of 33,000. In 1935, 49 of the 67 counties gave a decided majority for prohibition and the state as a whole voted to retain the prohibition statutes, by a majority of six or seven thousand. But the wet press, in the very issue that records the defeat of liquor, says that certain little politicians will seek local option, in order to defeat an election to which the wets are positively committed. Their little "yes men" talk local option but their names are withheld. A few days ago we heard a distinguished editor of another state quote a penologist to the effect that liquor and politics are the two "incorrigibles" with which society and crime agencies have to deal. He then added for himself that he had heard of liquor being "rectified" but not politics. The business which has debauched civilization since the days of Noah respects neither law, liberty nor life. In Louisiana the local option law has been declared null and void; and in Alabama local option is invoked when the business has been outlawed in a state-wide referendum. In the city of New Orleans, 23 persons have been killed in traffic accidents since January 1—more than one for every three days this year. That is the highest record ever made in the city. The papers have announced that certain hotels have stocked liquor by the carload for Mardi Gras. But we say that the handwriting is on the wall—the day of liquor is ending. The people are beginning to realize that some things are more precious than either tax money or doles.

THE CHURCH PAPER

Three items, which have been called to our attention recently, have greatly re-enforced our conviction as to the value of the church paper. The editor of the Baptist Witness in Florida is quoted as having made the statement that the editors of that denomination had made an investigation which revealed the fact that practically nine-tenths of the total sum raised by the Baptists for benevolences is contributed by those who subscribe for their church paper. To the same effect, is the statement of the pastor of a Methodist Church in Florida. That pastor says that he takes the collection for the benevolences himself, and that eighty per cent of the total amount contributed for benevolences comes from those who read the church paper. On the very day that we were told these things, a preacher from another Conference spoke to us about publicity for a certain Conference project for which he is responsible. He said frankly that without the support of the church paper, worthy and needy as the cause is, it would fail. We do not lose sight of the fact that the people who are most loyal to the program of the church will take the church paper; but we know that it is equally true that those who are best informed as to the enterprises of the church will be its staunchest supporters in all that it undertakes. We believe also that, without the support of the church paper, many of its worthiest enterprises would be doomed to absolute failure. But no paper can give effective promotional support, no matter how worthy the cause may be, unless it shall have financial support to make it possible to render that service. We do not hesitate to say that we believe that one of the very first items in the program for the year's work should be an adequate provision for the church paper. It may be placed in the local budget, or it may be sustained through individual subscriptions. It makes no difference as to the method. It is vitally related to everything that the church undertakes, and it should have a cordial and a substantial support.

THE MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The meeting of the Missionary Council held in Little Rock, Ark., February 26-29, was probably the best and the most satisfactory that has been held. Every missionary interest of the church at home and abroad; and every problem and every related interest was ably and effectively presented. The Council was well attended and the addresses were of a very high order. Bishop Ainsworth delivered the opening address on Tuesday evening. Dr. W. G. Cram, Bishops E. D. Mouzon and John M. Moore, and Bishop Carter, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, were the speakers for Wednesday morning. Wednesday afternoon was given over to the missionaries from the various fields. Wednesday evening Bishop A. W. Leonard of the Methodist Episcopal Church, brought a great address and he won the hearts of his audience by his courageous and outspoken utterances on the great questions and problems of our day. He gave a very effective interpretation of the difficulties which confront the church in many lands; and he brought his message to a close with a strong appeal for the evangelistic courage and fervor that shall bring back the power of the days which followed that evening in Aldersgate Street when the heart of John Wesley was strangely warmed. Dr. C. C. Seleckman, of Southern Methodist University, and others spoke on Thursday, bringing to a conclusion three great days of fellowship and high communion.

In connection with the meeting of the Missionary Council, the Methodist Press Association was called to meet also. Editors present were Dr. A. J. Weeks, President; A. G. Millar, Arkansas Methodist; F. H. Richardson, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; P. M. Boyd, Florida Christian Advocate; J. M. Rowland, Richmond Christian Advocate; C. C. Ransford, of the Nashville Christian Advocate; E. H. Rawlings, of The World Outlook; and W. L. Duren, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. An elaborate banquet was tendered the Editors by the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce. The banquet was held at the Albert Pike Hotel; most of the Board of Governors were present; and Mr. Wallace Townsend presided. Dr. A. C. Millar made some remarks and then introduced the visitors. Hon. J. N. Heiskell, a former U. S. Senator from Arkansas, made the principal address—in every way a credit to the man and to the occasion. Dr. A. J. Weeks, the President, responded on behalf of the editors, in his usual happy vein.

INSTITUTE FOR CHURCH OFFICERS

Mr. G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, will conduct a three-day Institute for church officials in New Orleans, beginning Sunday afternoon, March 10. The meetings will be held at Rayne Memorial Church. Mr. Morelock has held nearly a hundred of these Institutes, and we do not know of any effort being put forth which promises greater things in the way of making effective the entire program of the Church. Every officer in the Church should be present for all three of the sessions.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

By Dr. A. P. Hamilton,
Professor in Millsaps College

The very fact that we feel the propriety of using the qualifying adjective in the above title is proof that we are conscious of a difference in kinds of education. The Christian college was first projected on the assumption that there should be a difference, that there is a difference. The State Institution must be neutral on the subject of religious teaching and of instruction for character.

The Christian college, however, is avowedly spiritual in its objective. It stands up and says openly and unashamed before the world: "We believe man's first concern in this brief school of life is to make a life, not a living."

Now in the final analysis, we must agree, I think, that no college, Christian or otherwise, can educate any man; that no college ever has.

No faculty, however brilliant, can educate a man. Einstein himself cannot educate anybody.

The student, the man to be educated, must do the work himself.

Colleges, schools, libraries, faculties, teachers, are merely the means, the stimuli, to wake up the sleeping powers, to point the way; to inspire, to spring the mind and spirit.

That is just where the Christian college comes in. Herein is the difference. The subjects taught and learned are pretty well stereotyped and mill-run everywhere. The men who teach constitute the difference.

A Christian college insists on a certain kind of man to do the teaching. He must have something that the ordinary teacher in another kind of institution has not got. Finally, then, a college is merely a place where an education may be acquired.

A Christian college is not only a place, a body, or corporation; it is a body plus a soul.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

By Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College

The Christian college is the largest single resource of the nation for the sort of intellectual and spiritual service to the next generation that colleges render. Dr. L. R. Alderman, Director of the Emergency Division of the F. E. R. A., says: "We have in this country 968 independent colleges, most of which have, or have had in the past, a church sponsorship." More than half of the young people enrolled in all the American colleges and universities of every kind are getting their college education from so-called Christian colleges.

These church-related colleges are not all alike. Some of them do not deserve the name of Christian college. But they have a norm, a unity of spirit and purpose, among the conflicting types of theories, of college training in the present-day America, that is easily recognizable. The Christian college stands for something. That something is Christian character, the training of the youth into the full stature of a man in Christ Jesus. Such a purpose has given a continuity and consistency to the development through the decades of the typical church-related college. It has been flexible and has grown with new conceptions of educational service. But the sense of mission, the evangelistic impulse, has given heart and meaning to its policies and observable identity to its aims.

The Christian college has stood for the ideal of human service, faith in spiritual values, freedom of thought and integrity of scholarship. It has stood for these things not in spite of but because of its religious motivation. Personality development, the concern for the educational needs of the individual, counselling and guidance, the very procedures that great public and secular institutions are now attempting through the machinery of deans and personnel offices—that sort of service to the student has been the aim of the Christian college from the first. I believe it can truly be said that the professor in the small church college, with his intimate and friendly solicitude for the growth in character and personality of his pupils has vitally affected American college procedure in this its latest and best development.

The Christian college, that arm of the Christian church which touches the next generation on so wide a front, is a stabilizing and steadying influence in a society that has to a degree lost its moorings. Independent, spontaneous, and affecting more than half of the college trained of America's tomorrow, the Christian college by its very nature must be forever free from the possibility of federal or state direction and propaganda. It may save the soul of America and the fabric of democracy.

So long as the Christian college is performing with integrity of thought and character and singleness of purpose so fundamental a service to youth, it will be maintained and supported. From the church, the college will draw its authority, its sponsorship, its animating purpose and in part, its support. That support is a challenging task. The colleges of the Southern Methodist Church alone represent a total capital investment of $103,833,728.00.

May the Church feel the appeal of a service so vital and so far-reaching as that of the Christian college.

MRS. McINTOSH PASSES

On Wednesday, February 13, about 6:30 p. m., Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, wife of Dr. W. M. McIntosh, long-time General Evangelist of our Church, passed into the glory land. Sister McIntosh had been ill for some time and had suffered much, but the end came as peacefully as a little child goes to sleep in a mother's arms.

The funeral service was held at Central Church, where Dr. McIntosh had served as pastor, conducted by Rev. T. B. Thrower, pastor, assisted by Dr. E. N. Broyles, pastor First Methodist Church, Columbus, Rev. W. M. Wright, Dr. J. D. Franks, pastor of First Baptist Church, Columbus, and Rev. R. J. Shelton, former pastor East End Baptist Church, Columbus. The altar was banked in beautiful floral tributes. The body was carried to Iuka, where Dr. and Mrs. McIntosh made their home for a long time, and laid to rest from the home of Mr. J. C. Jourdan under the direction of Rev. S. E. Ashmore, assisted by Rev. J. W. Holliday and Rev. T. B. Thrower.

Mr. E. F. Webb, district lay leader, is endeavoring to secure a good attendance from every pastor and board of stewards in the district.

The discussions in the Institute will build to a sound financial policy for the local church, based upon spiritual values, and the responsibility of stewards.

Plans are being carried forward for an eventful gathering to train the leaders for all the churches in the district.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

If it be true, as has been well said, the Old Testament foretells the New, and the New reveals the Old, the Bible as a whole contains many lessons of value, not only of moral and spiritual worth, but in the conduct and direction of the Christian ministry. In the Old Testament the priestly office is honored and magnified. To the priests and the temple the people looked for guidance and teaching in religious and civil affairs. The glory of the Holy Shekinah lighted the temple and the will of God was manifest to his people through the medium of the divinely called and anointed priesthood. Its authority was unquestioned by stringent and legal enactments.

In the fuller revelation of life and grace contained in the New Testament we are said to be kings and priests in the church and kingdom of God. Despite the fact that the priestly office has been abused and used for the purpose of exploiting and maintaining ecclesiastical domination, that is a poor reason for not recognizing its potent value in the Christian ministry. It is recognized in the prayer of intercession, the administration of the communion and in the apostolic benediction in our churches today. One may say that all of God's children by faith and adoption are kings and priests unto Him. That is true in a larger sense, yet a careful study of the polity of the New Testament will show that in a special sense men are called and set apart to this ministry. Even as the priests of an elder day ministered in holy things in tabernacle and temple, so do God's ministers of this latter day minister to the faith, comfort and assurance of his people.

And the congregation look to the minister in his priestly function and office as a medium for spiritual blessings. This view is not an undue exaltation of the preacher but a recognition of his proper relation to his people. For "he that is greatest among you is servant to all," and wise indeed is the servant of the Lord who rightly and circumspectly uses his high office. Since the priests of Old Testament days were clad in beautiful garments indicating a life dedicated to mercy, holiness and service to Israel's God, so let the ministering priests at his altar in this latter day recognize their intercessory relation and be faithful thereto. For priest, presbyter, elder, bishop are really interchangeable and like terms in the Word of God.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

been largely deprived of the privileges of the church to which, as Christians, they were entitled. In any event, the acknowledgement of the independence of the United States made certain a change in the ecclesiastical arrangement under which the movement in America had been developed; and it made all the more necessary the establishment of an independent ministry with the privileges, the power and the freedom to meet the changed conditions and the growing needs of the Methodist societies in the new Country. Whatever of obtuseness might be charged against Mr. Wesley in some other matters, it must be admitted that in this he sensed accurately the situation which he and his cause must face and he set himself immediately to the task of making ready for the issue.

Mr. Wesley grappled long and earnestly with the problem of securing ordained clergymen to assist him in his work. He often importuned the bishops of the Established Church to ordain men for his societies, but without success. At his instigation, Dr. Barnard, Bishop of Londonderry, Ireland, ordained Thomas Maxfield, the Bishop said: "Sir, I ordain you to assist that good man (Mr. Wesley), that he may not work himself to death." After a few years, Maxfield deserted the Wesleyan connection and left Mr. Wesley in greater straits than ever. No bishop would come to his assistance, and in sheer desperation, he "enlisted the services of a rather shadowy Greek Prelate, Erasmus, Bishop of Arcadia" in Crete. Erasmus ordained John Jones, a man of considerable learning, a former master of Kingswood school, and a long-time helper of Mr. Wesley, for whom both he and his brother, Charles, had vainly sought ordination at the hands of Anglican bishops. This incident gave such offence and Charles Wesley's opposition became so pronounced and annoying that Jones left the Methodists, procured reordination from the Bishop of London, and was rector of Harwich for the remainder of his life. At this juncture John Richardson, a young Yorkshire curate who was episcopally ordained, was awakened under the preaching of Thomas Rankin. He joined the Methodists in 1763 and became a valuable assistant to Mr. Wesley.

For a long while every means of securing ordination for Wesleyan preachers had seemed to be closed, except to ordain by presbyters—the practice followed for two hundred years by the Church at Alexandria. Mr. Wesley had pondered this course for many years, and in the month of February, probably the fourteenth, 1784, he invited Dr. Coke to his private chamber in London and outlined to him his thought concerning America and the matter of providing an ordained ministry for the societies in that country. He proposed the ordination of minister by presbyters, and the appointment of Dr. Coke to be superintendent over the entire work. In this statement of purpose which Mr. Wesley made to Dr. Coke, he seems to have made no mention of Asbury; but later Dr. Coke, who appears to have been dubious as to the acceptability of such a plan to the Americans, made the first reference to Asbury, and the suggestion of his inclusion as joint superintendent was probably his letter to Mr. Wesley August 9, 1784. Dr. Coke argues with Mr. Wesley for the abandonment of timidity as to procedure, and for the assumption of a conciliatory attitude toward the Americans, particularly towards Asbury. He tells Mr. Wesley, and wisely so, that nothing should be trusted to the willingness of presbyters on the other side of the water, and he insists that he be consecrated for the work of a superintendent by the imposition of Mr. Wesley's hands. Assisted by Rev. James Creighton, a presbyter of the Church of England, Mr. Wesley consecrated Dr. Coke; and the three ordained Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey, first as deacons and then as elders. This was done at Bristol, September 2, 1784.

The course of events up to this point is simple enough; but when Mr. Wesley refused to admit the implication of his ordinations, the story becomes more complicated. Dr. Coke made the matter perfectly clear in his letter of August 9, 1784, and Charles Wesley was in no doubt as to what his brother had done. He wrote Dr. Chandler that he had, "Assumed the episcopal character, ordained elders, consecrated a bishop and sent him to ordain our lay preachers in America." A recent biographer of Mr. Wesley says, "Inconsistency is the privilege of a genius;" and he argues that Mr. Wesley's action was hopelessly inconsistent, and that he was torn between his love for the Church of England and his own relation to the very practical and distressing needs of the American Methodists. He asserts that Mr. Wesley should have left "succession" out of consideration, and that he should have acted upon the theory of his mother who, in defence of the ministry of Thomas Maxfield, held that the validity of a Christian ministry is proved not by its credentials, but by results.

Washington Irving, with characteristic shrewdness, said that the witches were burnt to gratify the populace, but that they were tried for the satisfaction of posterity. So we may say that the superintendency of the Methodist Church was established to meet a need which could be met in no other way; it belongs to the history of the movement; and it has amply justified its institution. It has stood the tests of one hundred and fifty years of operation, and to argue its ecclesiastical regularity is to raise unnecessary doubts. In the study of the organization of the Methodist Church in America, however, we must consider what Mr. Wesley intended to do; for it is a decision which involves many things which came up in the founding of the Church. Strange and inconsistent as it may seem to us now, Mr. Wesley did intend to set up a ministry for American Methodism; but he evidently did not intend to create a church which would be separate from the Church of England and independent of himself. The ordination certificate given Dr. Coke reads:

"To all to whom these presents shall come, John Wesley, late Fellow of Lincoln College in Oxford, Presbyter of the Church of England, sendeth greeting.

"Whereas many of the people in the Southern provinces of North America, who desire to continue under my care, and still adhere to the Doctrines and Discipline of the Church of England, are greatly distressed for want of Ministers to administer the sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, according to the usages of said Church: And whereas there does not appear to be any other way of supplying them with Ministers

"Know all men, that I John Wesley, think myself to be providentially called at this time to set apart some persons for the work of the ministry in America. And therefore under the Protection of Almighty God, and with a single eye to his glory, I have this day set apart as a Superintendent, by the imposition of my hands and prayer, (being assisted by other ordained ministers), Thomas Coke, Doctor of Civil Law, a Presbyter of the Church of England, and man whom I judge to be well qualified for that great work. And I do hereby recommend him to all whom it may concern as a fit person to preside over the Flock of Christ. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this second day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-four.

"JOHN WESLEY."

This is the initial document in the formation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the first paragraph after the greeting sets forth in unequivocal language the facts that he had been unable to provide a ministry in any other way; that the American societies were to continue under his care; and that they were to adhere to the doctrines and discipline of the Church of England. At the session of the British Conference in 1785, a statement signed by Mr. Wesley was inserted in the Minutes. After commenting on the situation created by the war and the desertion of their posts by the clergy, he says: "Judging this to be a case of real necessity, I took a step which, for peace and quietness, I had refrained from taking for many years. I exercised that power which I am persuaded the great Shepherd and Bishop of the Church has given me: I appointed three of our laborers to go and help them, by not only preaching the word of God, but likewise by administering the Lord's Supper and baptizing their children throughout that vast tract of land.

"These are the steps which, not of choice but necessity, I have slowly and deliberately taken. If any one is pleased to call this separating from the Church he may. But the law of England does not call it so."

This statement is clearly to the effect that Mr. Wesley meant to extend the authority and the privileges of the commission given his original missionaries to America to include all the functions of an ordained ministry; but that he did not intend to dissolve the relations with the Church of England. That understanding of the mind of Mr. Wesley is evidently reflected in the refusal of Asbury to accept ordination as Mr. Wesley's appointee. Any student of Asbury's course must feel that he meant to effect the complete elimination of Mr. Wesley from the control of American Methodism, and that this flat refusal to receive the appointment solely upon his designation was the first stage in the battle for the independence of the Church. Asbury wrote Joseph Benson that he was opposed to the binding minute, declaring obedience to Mr. Wesley "in all matters relative to Church government," which was adopted by the Christmas Conference. There is no evidence to show that the calling of a Conference was contemplated by Mr. Wesley and the probability is that he would not have approved it. While there was no specific limitation in the instruction given Dr. Coke, in his correspondence with Bishop White of the Protestant Episcopal Church, under date of April 24, 1791, he admits: "I am not sure but that I went farther in the separation of our Church in America than Mr. Wesley, from whom I received my commission, did intend. He did, indeed, solemnly invest me, so far as he had a right so to do, with Episcopal authority, but he did not intend, I think, that our entire separation should take place." The man who was strenuously opposed to government from a distance of three thousand miles was not to be misled by the appointive right of Mr. Wesley. The hour for action had come in the fortunes of the American societies, and Asbury did not propose to surrender the opportunity and implication of the victory of American arms.

Dr. Coke said that when Asbury met him at Barrett's Chapel, on Sunday, November 14, 1784, he was accompanied by a council of preachers of the American connection, to whom he requested that Mr. Wesley's communication might be submitted. This request was Boy Scout Troop No. 300 of Donaldsonville, La., held its first Court of Honor on Washington's birthday, also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Boy Scout movement. Rev. C. W. Lahey is scoutmaster. Twelve boys were given tenderfoot badges and seventeen received second class certificates.

Rev. S. H. Caffey of West Point, Miss., preached recently upon the text: "Am I my brother's keeper;" and in his discourse he related an incident of a soldier in the great war who said that his military training created a thirst for blood which required earnest prayer and the assistance of the Holy Spirit to free himself of.

Miss Minnie Eudy, Meridian, Miss., sends us a copy of a letter written by her grandmother in February, 1932, to the editor of the Advocate. She was then almost seventy-five years of age, and lived just a year afterward. She said that she had read the Advocate all her life and her devotion to it was such that her grandchildren referred to it as "big mamma's paper." She concluded the letter with the wish that the paper might prove as great a blessing to others as it had been to her.

Mr. Paul Ramsey, a senior of Millsaps College and a son of Rev. J. W. Ramsey of Porterville, Miss., was awarded recently a scholarship in Duke University covering all expenses. His address on Christianity and War, which appeared in the Nashville Advocate of February 15, has received wide commendation; and he has received a number of invitations to deliver the address during the coming summer. The Advocate joins with many friends in congratulations and good wishes to both father and son.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. H. McMullan

To the Auxiliary President in the
Mississippi Conference—

Dear Co-workers:

Have you been busy cultivating those splendid young women in your church who are not already members of your auxiliary? These young women are of major interest to us, and we need to present the work of the Woman's Missionary Society as a big business for the Kingdom and as an enriching experience for every woman. You have the high privilege of finding and training them for immediate and future leadership. Appoint a sponsor or committee to look after these young women.

Some auxiliaries are successful in enlisting them directly in the adult group. Others have found the circle more interesting. Meeting the local situation—but reaching young women—is the better part of wisdom.

The five points you will gain on the Standard of Efficiency for the "Organization and Cultivation of young women," will mean a great deal to the future of your auxiliary as well as to help you get on the honor roll this year.

Most of the circles use the regular program material, the same as the adults and carry the full line of work; however some of the newly organized circles prefer the literature for new societies. They can use this the second year if they request it.

If there is a possibility of organizing a young women's circle in your auxiliary, please write me at once and I shall be so glad to help you in every way possible.

May God bless you.

Sincerely,

MRS. HOMER E. FRIZELL,
Secretary Young Women's Circles.
Vaughan, Miss.

February 25, 1935

The Vaughan Auxiliary has started the New Year off with a greater determination to do more in His Kingdom and to accomplish more in the Missionary work. We have been on the honor roll for the past six years, but we are not satisfied with that; we want to do more than make the 85 credit points.

We were so glad to report a life member last quarter, and we are hoping to have another one this quarter. The superintendents of all the departments are carrying on their work as nearly according to Council plans as is possible and great results are being accomplished. The young women's circle has increased their membership. They have just given a play to increase the funds in the local treasury, and have enjoyed helping our missionary daughter, Mary Humes, who is in her senior year at Millsaps. We have adopted a little boy from our Methodist Orphanage whom we love very much, though he is there we look after his needs.

4. Discuss Honor Roll Standard. (Determine to attain it).

At the Brooksville Church on February 13, the Columbus Zone held a joint meeting with the Macon Zone. Nine auxiliaries were represented with an attendance of sixty-eight. There were three Conference officers present. Mrs. L. J. Hasko, chairman of the Columbus Zone, presided. The opening devotional was given by Mrs. E. H. Johnson of Brooksville. In inculcating the theme of the meeting, "Officers Training," Mrs. R. P. Neblett and Mrs. J. G. Wilkins of the Brooksville Society, presented a playlet in which the duties of the officers were stressed in an impressive and spiritual way. The activities and the objectives of the zones were discussed in talks that were uplifting and inspirational. Mrs. T. W. Lewis, Jr., reported the work of the Christian Social Relations department of the Columbus First Church of last year and outlined plans for this year. "Anti-Lynching" was a talk by Mrs. Pilkington of Artesia. Mrs. T. B. Thrower of Columbus Central Church presented the work of the Spiritual Life group and told of the goal that should be set for the ensuing year. The music included a vocal solo, "Satisfied With Jesus," by Mrs. T. B. Thrower, accompanied by Mr. Sterlin Thrower. The April meeting will be held at West Point with the Starkville Zone. The program was concluded with a prayer by Mrs. R. P. Neblett.

The Methodist Missionary Societies of Starkville, Cedar Bluff, Longview and West Point had a most successful zone meeting Wednesday afternoon with the Starkville auxiliary as hostess. Mrs. Will Hicks of West Point is chairman of the zone for 1935. Mrs. C. R. Justice of West Point is secretary.

After a short devotional service and the reading of the minutes, the roll of auxiliaries was called and visitors introduced—Mrs. R. P. Neblett of Brooksville, Conference secretary; Mrs. C. A. Pilkinton, secretary of Columbus District and Mr. Fred McDonald, superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson. Mrs. S. H. Caffey of West Point, a new member, was recognized.

Mr. McDonald told of conditions at the Orphanage. He suggested that each auxiliary adopt one of the 174 children to care for and also send in all the coupons

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Deaconess Sheila Nuttall, in charge of rural work for the W. M. S. of the Louisiana Conference, is now pleasantly located at Choudrant in the Ruston District. She is closing a splendid piece of work and we are indeed proud that the Louisiana Conference was one of the first to employ a deaconess for rural work.

The young people of Indian Village gave a very splendid pageant at Christmas time under the supervision of Miss Nuttall. The result of the coming together of the young people for rehearsals was an organization of a Young People's Division in this church.

Deaconess Nuttall has also recently assisted the Choudrant Missionary Society in the study of the book, "Suynki Looks at Japan." At this time the society met in the home of Mrs. Willis for a Japanese tea and for the study of the book. As the group sat on cushions on the floor in true Japanese style they discussed questions of interest concerning the Japanese people. At the conclusion of the study Japanese games were led by Miss Nuttall.

Deaconess Nuttall accompanied Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., and Mrs. W. H. Martin to Nashville last fall to attend the retreat held at Scarritt College and on her return was the first in the Louisiana Conference to hold a retreat in her district.

This spiritual life retreat was held in Zone 2, Ruston District, at Salem Church. The retreat lasted for two days, the attendants spending the night in the homes of members of Salem Church. Miss Nuttall was ably assisted by Mrs. W. R. Whittaker, spiritual life leader for the Ruston District.

After spending two days of close fellowship, prayer and communion with God, the Findings Committee submitted the following conclusions:

1. While finding God, we must not lose sight of the fact that God is seeking us. We must remove all hindrances.

2. Self-discipline is one of the steps toward removing the hindrances so that God may find us.

3. Finding God transforms our lives, gives us a new sense of power, peace, and joy.

4. Renewing our spiritual lives daily through worship is needful.

5. When we talk to God we need to pause and let God talk to us. Therefore we should set aside a period daily for quiet worship.

6. Through Spiritual Life Groups our lives are enriched and fellowship is strengthened.

7. The first objective of our prayer groups should be the deepening of our own spiritual lives, then we shall be better fitted to reach others.

8. In order to find God, we must seek Him, even though we must climb rugged mountains. We find God not only in the spectacular and beautiful. We must find Him in the humblest things of life.

9. We must find God through repentance, before we can find Him through service.

10. Sometimes the patterns of our lives are changed by the things we do, but if we let Him, God will always direct us.

11. Since God is the ruler of the universe, He is the source of unlimited power, with which we can fill our lives if we will.

12. God expects nothing unreasonable of us—only what we can do. But to accomplish His will we must do the things He calls us to do.

13. This retreat has been a spiritual blessing and uplift to each one of us.

MRS. T. W. MADDEN,

BLACK HAWK CHARGE OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By W. Geo. Campbell

Sunday, January 20, 1935, was a great day for the rededicating of our lives to the services of the Lord in the Black Hawk community and in the entire Black Hawk charge of the Methodist Church. The meeting was held at the church at Black Hawk. At ten o'clock the regular Church school was functioning. At eleven o'clock the Rev. R. L. Ellis was in the pulpit. Our beloved J. B. Streater was in the chair. The choir was in readiness. Brother Ellis selected two songs and after they were sung he introduced our presiding elder of the Greenwood District, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, who preached the sermon of the morning.

"The Value of the Church," was the subject of the sermon as announced by Brother McIlwain. From Numbers 10:29 the speaker read the words where Moses said to Hobab: "Come thou with us and we will do thee good." "The Church," said Brother McIlwain, "makes a two-fold appeal to us. It promises to help us and we can help it." The speaker then showed in a very forceful way how the Church can help socially, in a business way, morally, and above all, spiritually. It was shown that we can help the Church by only doing our duty in various ways.

At twelve it was time for refreshments. The good ladies of the charge had not neglected this part. A large crowd ate for one hour and then at least one-half the food provided was taken back home. That is the way the ladies co-operate.

In the afternoon beginning at 1:30 there was an inspirational lecture given by lay leader of the Greenwood District, Superintendent B. P. Brooks of Belzoni City School. Professor Brooks' subject was "The Other Fellow." Mr. Brooks showed that the other fellow has possibilities as well as needs. It will be a joy to us later, he pictured, if someone tells us that we have helped in the past in helping him onward and upward.

Following Superintendent Brooks in his great talk was Rev. R. G. Lord of Grenada. After a beautiful tribute to Brother J. B. Streater he spoke of how we should be laborers together with God. It was brought out plainly but forcefully that the dominant purpose of the Church is to reach every person.

The people of the Black Hawk charge will do more in the service of the Lord in the future. They can not fail to do so after the Revival of last Sunday.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON.

MARCH 12

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

OVERCOMING PREJUDICES

The eager soul of the devout Gentile Cornelius cried for fuller knowledge. For all such God has light. He was told to send for Peter; Peter was sent to him. God works on both sides of the fence, preparing the herald and the hearer. It is not easy for exclusive man to understand the inclusive God. Nothing is harder to overcome than taboos and prejudices. Three times Peter had to be told not to call anything of God's creation common or unclean. The Gentile messengers at his door made clear the meaning of his vision. Without hesitation or argument, he broke caste and lodged the strangers overnight. Early next morning, he was on his way to the Gentiles, in better spirit than was Jonah when sent to Nineveh.

Like Jonah, he found the soil ready for the sower. Cornelius was not only devout, but evangelistic. He had gathered his servants, soldiers and kinsmen to hear the messenger. Peter at once eased the social strain on both sides by saying that he was deliberately and gladly violating Jewish custom in obedience to the command of God, and asking Cornelius to state the ground and purpose of his call. This done, Peter preached. Beginning with the call of Israel, he traced the development of the gospel through the preaching of John, the work of Him "who went about doing good," gave personal witness of his life, his work, his crucifixion, his resurrection, and the forgiveness of sins to all who believe in him.

If men had noted that Peter had been with Jesus, they might now well know that Jesus was with him. As he preached, the Spirit came, even upon these Gentile hearers, as upon Jews. "They magnified God." He was greater than Peter or Cornelius had known. The "good news" brought rejoicing. It always does. Is not this a missing note in present-day preaching and hearing? Emotion is decried in religion, and cultivated everywhere else. Most of what we call "modern life" is based on emotion, not on reason. Can one find hid treasure, the ship-wrecked discover land, the perishing reach food and drink, the dying recover life without a thrill? In their ecstasy, these hearers "spoke with tongues." The meaning is open to debate, but the language of joy, grief, earnestness is universal. Though the stranger knows no word of the language, he is never in doubt whether he is witnessing a wedding or a funeral.

Racial and national prejudices are still rampant, newly resurrected and clothed in the habiliments of hate. We fend ourselves against correction of social and economic injustice by parading the bugaboo of "social equality," well knowing that personal friends and guests are of our own choosing. It is far better that my neighbor have a home of his own than that he be a guest in mine; better that his lameless be healed than that he share my bread. The questions pressing on conscience are: Are we sharing the blessings of the gospel and of civilization with the under-privileged? Are they given even a suggestion of equal opportunity for education, culture, progress? Are they paid according to the quantity and quality of their work, or according to color of skin, and national origin? Who fixed that "standard of living" by which we discern how much a day's work is worth? Would not a fair wage for all tend to elevate the "standard of living" for all? Is the man who thinks only of his own welfare a Christian? The nation? The race? How many Gentile Christians of the twentieth century can keep step with Peter, the Jewish Christian of the first century?

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

By Rev. A. K. McLeilan

Young People's Day is to be observed this year on Sunday, March 10, or at some more suitable date. An excellent program has been prepared for use on this occasion entitled, "Today and Tomorrow With Jesus." The February issue of the Epworth Highroad carries this program and it may be found on page 18. The program should be presented by the young people at one of the regular church services, under the guidance of the pastor. No offering is to be taken this year on Young People's Day. This feature of the program has been merged with Church School Day on April 7. We urge the young people's counselors and the department officers to co-operate with the pastor and make wise plans for the observance of Young People's Day.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

The Methodist Home

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Religion is a home stabilizer. Dr. George Walter Fiske, Professor of Religious Education in the Graduate School of Theology in Oberlin College, writes in his book, "The Christian Family" (Abingdon, 1929):

"An experienced judge in Akron, Ohio, testifies that he has never had a divorce case in which the two parties were members of the same Christian Church. Judge Webber, of Elyria, Ohio, with a long experience on the bench of Lorain County, declares that he has never divorced two people who were members of ANY church. There must be a reason for these striking facts. The experiences of two ministers of contrasting types is worth comparing. One, a country pastor who has married only his own people, has married 175 couples, and only one of these marriages has resulted in divorce. The other, a city minister with something of a reputation as a "marrying parson," has married over twenty-one hundred couples in nearly half a century. It is his judgment that less than seven per cent of these couples have been divorced, and very few of these were among his own church people.

"We do not search far afield for some very sound reasons why the Christian religion stabilizes the family. It reduces our family difficulties to the minimum because it teaches reverence for personality and the rights of others. It teaches the practice of unselfishness. Unlike other religions, its outstanding quality is kindness. It makes people more considerate and more patient, more thoughtful of others. The more Christian one is, the less selfish he grows. The whole Christian movement has always opposed self-indulgence, which is a major symptom in the disease of selfishness and the chief cause of the troubles leading to divorce. The religion of Jesus is the surest stabilizer of the family also because it teaches the finest kind of friendly teamwork and develops stable character in the process."

PRAYER

Our Father, may love sanctify all human relationships.

In this age when our hectic modern life has undermined even our most precious institutions, may we dedicate our homes to Thee. May our homes produce mutual love, honor, fidelity, forbearance, and companionship. Forbid that individualism should run amuck.

May our homes be places of worship and character-building. We ask in the name of Thy dear Son.

... and they use liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel. A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid. People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.

JOHN GRAHAM CALHOUN

John Graham Calhoun was born January 31, 1845. At the age of 15 he united with the Church in Alabama. Coming to Mississippi a few years later, he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when it was first organized in Mt. Olive. He served the Church in varied ways, trustee, steward, Bible class teacher nearly all his life here. But he will be especially remembered as the teacher of the young men's Bible class for more than thirty years. He was married to Susan Ann Thompson, October 25, 1866. Eight children were born to them, six of whom are still living. He was one of fifteen children and four brothers and four sisters of them are living now. About sixty-five nephews and nieces and thirteen grandchildren to mourn his loss. He was a faithful soldier in the Civil War for two years. He had reached the ripe age of 90 years and 3 days. As a wise and judicious father, a faithful husband, a loyal and upright citizen, devout and sincere in all relations of life, of him it could be truly said: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them." His was truly a remarkable life and only the recording angel can know how much treasure he laid up in heaven, by his consistent life of religious service.

LEVI LAFAYETTE UPTON

The subject of this sketch, Levi Lafayette Upton, was born November 8, 1853, near Buena Vista, Marion County, Ga., and departed this life at Slaughter, La., at 7:30 p. m. Sunday, February 3, 1935. Brother Upton was a son of the Rev. T. J. Upton, member of the Annual Conference, (admitted 1858 died 1912), and Elizabeth Wheelless Upton, both of Georgia.

Brother Upton was twice married. He was first happily married to Miss Mary Anna Calhoun, Claiborne Parish, La.,

MOTHERS! Just a word about a refined, reliable laxative that little children really like to take: It is called "SYRUP OF BLACK-DRAUGHT," and sells for 50 cents a bottle, at drug stores. SYRUP OF BLACK-DRAUGHT acts well without harming delicate children. So many mothers have bought SYRUP OF BLACK-DRAUGHT for their children. Try it, for yours.

October 12, 1879, near Old Athens, La. To this union were born seven children, Edgar C. Upton, Will Lawrence, Prentiss, Thomas, Elizabeth (Mrs. H. G. Henderson, Fort Smith, Ark.), Mary Davidson (Mrs. Ellis J. Smith, Homer, La.), Della Calhoun (Mrs. J. Ingram Law, Bass, La.) His second wife is Mrs. Carrie Bell Morris Upton (married, Slaughter, January 30, 1898), who is thus left alone, as there are no children to the second marriage.

Brother Upton was educated in Homer College, Homer, La. He taught in the public and in private schools of this state; was superintendent of schools of Richland Parish; vice president of old Centenary College at Jackson, La., and also assistant of the preparatory department. A successful farmer, Mr. Upton was prevailed upon to run for the Legislature. While no politician, he served his state for two terms, eight years, as Representative from East Feliciana Parish. (1916-24). In community life he was an active and forceful worker. Was member of boards of aldermen, secretary and treasurer of such boards. A friend and advisor to many who needed him.

He joined the Methodist Church when a child in Mt. Lebanon, and always served the church faithfully, as teacher, Sunday school superintendent, steward, for many years. The son of a Methodist preacher, he was always the preacher's friend. Even to the end his interest in the affairs of the state and of the church was keen, his vigorous mind was active, and his faith as a true, consecrated Christian was unflinching. His life was an honored product of the Methodist parsonage.

The funeral services were conducted in the Slaughter Methodist Church, Monday afternoon, in the midst of a large congregation of friends and relatives, by the pastor, the Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, assisted by the presiding elder, the Rev. K. W. Dodson, and the pastor of Slaughter Baptist Church, the Rev. Mr. Stubblefield. Interment was in beautiful Redwood cemetery, which he had helped as an officer of the cemetery association to beautify. His life was a testimony, and his works follow him. One of his daughters told me, "I cannot remember a time when my father did not read the Bible and have prayer in our home. I know the Bible now because I heard my father read it to us ever since I was a baby." Dear readers, we need more such fathers and homes today.

REV. J. CUDE ROUSSEAU.

Give that COLD Just 24 Hours

Colds Go Overnight When You Take the Right Thing

A cold doesn't have to run its course and expose you to serious complications.

A cold can be routed overnight if you go about it the right way. First of all, a cold being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. Secondly, a cold calls for a COLD remedy and not for a "cure-all".

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is internal and direct—and it does the four things necessary.

Fourfold in Effect

It opens the bowels. It combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. It relieves the headache and grippy feeling. It tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold.

THE SPEAKERS AND PROGRAM

The speakers are all our own—led by the incomparable Bishop Arthur J. Moore, fresh from our Oriental mission fields. Bishops John M. Moore, Ainsworth, Darlington, Dobbs, Boaz, Kern, and others. Pastors: Bob Shuler, Walter Anthony, Ray Jordan, and others. Secretaries: Schisler, Cram, Emmons, and others. President C. C. Selecman and others.

These meetings have definite purposes. Not only will there be the inspiration and spiritual uplift of ringing sermons and mighty throngs of eager, earnest people; there will be a special gathering of preachers for definite planning of local evangelistic movements. There will be a special banquet for young people. A mighty mass meeting at night addressed by Bishop Arthur J. Moore. A plan will be proposed to rebuild the altar in the home—to rekindle the flame of fireside devotion in a hundred thousand Methodist families. A plan the pastors will welcome.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES of Arkansas, a few days ago, voted to divert 45 cents per gallon excise tax on liquors to relief purposes. The Arkansas liquor ostrich may poke his head in the sand, but his baleful plumage will remain visible.

THE STRUGGLE OF SCIENCE AGAINST THE DISEASES which afflict the human body has brought to light many interesting facts. It is revealed that wars have been determined by epidemics; many diseases which once afflicted the race have disappeared altogether; Typhus has a recorded history of at least fifteen hundred years; and the one thing in which the feudism of the races and the animosities of the nations is dissolved is the fight upon disease.

A REVOLUTION SAID TO HAVE ORIGINATED IN MACEDONIA is in progress in Greece. According to press reports, neither persons nor properties are respected; and to the horrors of machine-gun and artillery fire, pillage and piracy have been added. Even the tobacco fields of the countryside have been laid waste. Samos, Chios, and Mytilene, names cut deep in Grecian literature, have fallen; and even Athens, regal despite her age-long desolation, is threatened by the despoiler. Such is war and the war spirit in every land, which respects nothing as either sacred or private—not even the ruins which remain as melancholy memorials of a golden age of national history.

THE HONOR ROLL of the Federal Council of Churches contains the names of only two Southern states that have a record of no lynchings for the past two years, Arkansas and Virginia. Only North Carolina and South Carolina are added as having no lynchings in 1934. In five states of the Union, there has never been a recorded lynching: Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont. Maine and New Jersey have not had a lynching since 1866. Delaware, Iowa, Michigan, Nevada, South Dakota and Wisconsin have not had a lynching in twenty-five years. But Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Kentucky and Texas have the unenviable distinction of having furnished the stage for the fifteen lynchings recorded in 1934.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT has introduced a bill to reimburse Canada for additional expenditures in connection with the erection at Vimy Ridge of a memorial to the Canadian dead. The New Outlook, Canada, says that the bill is to take care of the expenditures for additional private plots surrounding the monument; and that it is a token of gratitude to the Dominion and a gesture worthy of France. This little Canadian land in the heart of the French Republic will have served a noble purpose, if it may only impress succeeding generations with the brutality and futility of war.

REAR ADMIRAL RICHARD BYRD, after his long and lonely sojourn in the darkness and icy wastes of the Antarctic, is on his homeward journey. What secrets he has learned from the silences of that far away region, we do not know; and, perhaps, no one will know for a long time. But, for the moment, the pulse of the nation responds to the home-coming of its intrepid adventurer, as did the heart of ancient Rome to the return of her victorious Consuls. Admiral Byrd will receive a great welcome from all classes, irrespective of any interest in his achievements.

SOME OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS, according to a bulletin of the International Labor Organization, have a much more liberal system of insurance and pensions for wage earners, widows and unemployables than have the countries to the north, or even some European nations. These provisions are said to be large and substantial and they are paid under more liberal conditions than in other countries. The insurance funds are said to be well organized and efficiently administered; and in some of the countries, compulsory social insurance has been made a constitutional requirement.

THE NATIONAL YOUNGER MEN'S MISSIONARY CONGRESS is announced for the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, May 2-5. It is to be held under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement; it is inter-denominational in character; and the theme of the Congress is, "Jesus Christ and the World Today." All ministers and laymen are invited to attend; but those with an expectancy of twenty-five years are specially urged to be present. The program outlined and the speakers announced indicate that a definite and substantial contribution will be made to the thinking of those who have the good fortune to attend the Congress.

OUR EVANGELISTIC CRUSADE

Under the leadership of some of the ablest and best known men in the Church, the Committee on Evangelism is undertaking a series of regional meetings preparatory to a church-wide crusade for souls. This movement has no material end in view; it does not propose to standardize the evangelism of the churches; and it does not seek to supplant either the leadership or the organization which is directly responsible to every community for promoting the revival spirit. These meetings are designed to be a kind of trumpet-call to the whole Church, to gird itself for the mighty spiritual awakening for which the General Conference has specifically dedicated its energies for the present quadrennium. There has probably been no time since the rise of Methodism in the great Wesleyan Revival when every preacher and every layman in the church needed more to feel the burden of our great spiritual responsibility. The whole church needs to feel the thrill of a great baptism of spiritual power—a Pentecostal equipment for the stupendous task to which our energies have been dedicated. There are multitudes in the membership of our churches who need to be made conscious of the vital implications of church membership, and in many cases a personal experience of salvation. There is a vast untouched heathenism throughout the land, dwelling in the very shadow of our lordly church spires, but knowing nothing of the light and guidance of our Christ. No church dominated by formal or conventional religious ideals, can muster either the courage or the faith necessary for a great revival movement. This time of crisis in Zion will be no less a time of testing for the men and women who must meet the spiritual needs of this day, or fail utterly in their responsibility to both God and men. No blare of trumpets can save the world. Every pastor should feel the burden of souls and every church in the land should go down upon its knees in a prayer of penitence and confession and in a plea for power adequate to the task which is not a corporate, but an individual and a personal responsibility.

DR. C. C. MILLER DIES

The press dispatches report the death of Dr. C. C. Miller, a veteran minister of the Louisiana Conference, at Jackson, La., on Friday last. Dr. Miller had been in failing health for a number of years; and at the time of the last session of the Louisiana Conference, he was seriously ill. After a desperate fight, he made some recovery, but he became completely deaf as a result of his illness. Hopes were entertained that he might be spared for a while, and his death will be a sorrowful surprise to a wide circle of friends. For many years, Dr. Miller has been one of the picturesque characters of the Louisiana Conference; no man among us was more faithful and true than he was; his genial spirit and delightful humor won for him a place in all hearts and he will be sadly missed. But we know that his noble soul has enriched the Conference of saints on the other side, and we look forward to the day when we shall see him again, in our Father's house. We hope to publish a fuller appreciation of his long and distinguished service.

REV. JOHN S. HENLEY DEAD

News has just reached us of the death of Rev. John S. Henley, pastor at Jonesboro, La. We have no details of the death of this faithful and devoted man, and we give only the fact that the friends of Brother Henley may know of his going. A fuller account will be given later.

METHODIST EDUCATION

The observance of College Day and Education Week should cause our people to reflect upon the course and the aim of the educational program and policy of the church. Kingswood School in England, and Cokesbury College in America were phases of the Wesleyan Revival—evangelism with an educational accompaniment. But in 1820 theological pressure had become so great that our Methodist fathers were forced to launch a movement to counteract the Calvinistic teaching which was predominant in the schools then existing. The General Conference of that year urged the Annual Conferences "to establish literary institutions under their own control," and so Methodist theology and the fundamental facts of evangelical Christianity marched hand in hand in our cultural progress. Educational institutions were founded and maintained in order to discharge this three-fold responsibility to the people. Our college centers are still maintained, but our educational program is more diffused, in that effort is now put forth to carry the educational message into every local church. The colleges are the centers from which educational ideals and standards are radiated throughout the entire field, regardless of previous academic training or cultural opportunity. That which began timidly as correspondence instruction has been broadened into Christian Culture courses, Standard Training Schools, and Institutes for Church officers in every nook and corner of Methodism. These efforts are in no sense the "meteors of a season"—they are constructive agencies which the church has devised for raising the intellectual and the efficiency standards of the Methodist people. There is no longer any excuse for poor craftsmen among the Methodists; for the church is carrying to the very doors of the people the best thought and culture which this generation affords. Men and women with trained minds and with spiritual experience and insight are sent over the church to interpret its educational message and purpose. The day is past when it is deemed sufficient to mill minds to any theological pattern; and the church now seeks to make every man, regardless of collegiate backgrounds, an intelligent, capable and consecrated workman in the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. In no other way can it set forward the Wesleyan movement in this generation, or provide a vehicle for the attainment of Mr. Wesley's evangelistic goal of a world parish.

Contributed Editorial*A MINISTER'S READING

By Dr. Cleanth Brooks

Reading, for a preacher, may easily become a disease. When one reads just to kill time, he really kills it, and a little later himself, too. If one reads to inform his mind or to refresh it, he soon has a good habit; and soon has to fight for time enough to read. I had a friend once who bought many books, and good books, but along with this good practice he hardly ever read a book. A preacher who reads inordinately and never really digests what he reads puts a bad taste in his congregation's mouth, and soon he is looking for a congregation. Mr. Wesley used to say that he was a man of one book. And so he was, but all books of the whole world ministered to him. He illustrates the fact that a great saint is also a great worldling. And this is true of all the great saints.

No doubt a great deal of time is lost by not knowing what to read. At the same time, with so many helps to wise reading there is no adequate excuse for anyone's failure to read. Mr. Wesley said to one of his preachers that he must learn to read—that is, that he must learn to enjoy reading, or must quit the ministry. It is just that important and just that necessary.

As for the reading at one's own desk, the Bible of course comes first—the Bible until it becomes a pleasure. A little girl was saying to me that she was not able to pray. She did not seem to know that she was putting up a childish test for the patience of the moods of the Spirit. So the language of the Old and New Testaments in the original tongues or the many translations, written over great stretches of time and bearing on many phases of life, one must read for a long time and then only here and there get the pure beauty in reading or meditation. Very few persons even with the training that entitles to a degree ever master the language so that they read well and easily or without slavery; so that unless with the finest scholarship one would best learn to know and read in his own tongue. But do not neglect the translations such as those of Moffat or of Goodspeed and Smith. For my devotional reading and for reading from the pulpit, I have for a long time used these and other translations. This for the New Testament and for the poems and part of the prophecies of the Old Testament. Here there is delightful reading that one can indulge in with no thought that he is reading just to carry out a duty.

WOMAN'S WORK

By Mrs. T. B. Cottrell

I would like to share with you some encouraging notes sounded in a recent letter from Mrs. Helen Bourne, Council Educational and Promotional Secretary. This will encourage us and also enable us to see what part we have had in reported progress.

"We find an active gain all along the line in the Department of Education and Promotion—we had 645 new societies and 34,087 new members reported in 1934, and our present membership is 244,817."

The increase in offerings was most gratifying. Fifteen conferences were unable to meet their pledges and five conferences overpaid. It is most gratifying to find so many have come back to their places of "paid in full." We rejoice with Mrs. Bourne in these lines of success, realizing that every auxiliary in Southern Methodism has had a part in bringing this to pass; but it is with great sorrow that we say to you that the Mississippi Conference is one of the fifteen which did not meet its conference pledge. Need we ask why? Rather may we ask ourselves this question, "Did I do all I could to bring up this deficit?" May we resolutely determine at the very beginning of 1935 that the Mississippi Conference will not be classed with the delinquents another year. If I have failed in any way, and the cause should be laid at my door, kindly tell me that I may correct my error.

I throw out the challenge to every woman in each auxiliary to add one dollar to her pledge already made and together we shall meet our obligation with ease and much joy. Who will be the first to meet the challenge?

We appreciate the beautiful spirit of co-operation displayed by all officers and members of the Conference and bespeak a continuation of your loyalty. It is through your untiring efforts and ceaseless prayers that a forward move was made in organization, mission and Bible study, and a better understanding of missionary work in our society.

Fourteen new auxiliaries were organized, but some failed to report, so we could not count these a net gain. Fifty-five auxiliaries are on the "Honor Roll," and quite an increase in number of certificates for Council recognition were granted—forty the last quarter which indicates interest and a more thorough understanding of missions. Meridian District set the example of a "Coaching Day in Missions," which will be followed by all districts during 1935.

Progress was shown in the department of children's work through organization and finances and it is with joy that we enter into the co-operative plan given us by the General Conference.

We are enlisting your enthusiastic co-operation in helping us to reach our goal in World Outlook campaign which ends March 18. Our superintendent says we lack 500 subscribers. Will you not rally to her untiring efforts, and also avail yourself of the pertinent missionary news of the World? Our heartfelt thanks are extended to the district secretaries who, with many other duties incumbent upon them, have accepted a certain quota for each district.

Have we broken our alabaster box of ointment at the feet of our Master? Has it meant sacrificial living? Has it meant sacrificial giving of time, talent, and money? Are we willing to give of our best to Him who gave up all for us, and purchased us on Calvary's tree?

The great apostle, Paul, said: "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." When we, as a Woman's Missionary Society, follow this exhortation, every phase of our work will go forward, and we shall find such joy in building His kingdom where peace and righteousness prevail.

LOUISIANA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

Rev. Francis Scott McBride, D.D., national superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, will attend the meeting of the Louisiana state group in New Orleans on March 18. On Sunday, March 17, Dr. McBride will preach at the Westminster Presbyterian Church at 11 a. m., and at the Coliseum Place Baptist Church at 7:45 p. m. Mr. O. B. Christgau will speak at Napoleon Avenue Methodist Church at 11 a. m., and at Carrollton Avenue Baptist Church at 7:45 p. m. In the afternoon, a young people's conference in behalf of prohibition will be held in the auditorium of the Baptist Bible Institute, 1220 Washington Avenue. The hour will be announced later. Dr. McBride will also speak at Baton Rouge and Shreveport.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MINISTERS AND LAYMEN FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

For your information, some of the accomplishments and requests of your Historical Society are listed here. Please read carefully, file this Advocate or clip this article for constant reference, and assist the Society in every possible way.

1. Through the efforts of H. G. Hawkins, President of the Historical Society, on May 14, 1935, at Washington, Miss., there will be dedicated a monument marking the birthplace of Mississippi. An elaborate program has been planned, including addresses by Mr. Dunbar Rowland, Governor Connor, and Bishop Dobbs. Please plan to be present.

2. J. B. Cain, Conference Historian, is proceeding to write the History of the Mississippi Conference, beginning where John G. Jones left off in "Methodism in Mississippi." The President and Secretary of the Historical Society are gathering much information that will be useful in bringing this history up to date.

3. The "Biographical Record of the Members of the Mississippi Conference" is being recorded for permanent keeping, thanks to the co-operation of the ministers and the interest already manifested by them in the early returning of the necessary information and fees incidental to the undertaking.

4. The Secretary of the Historical Society has compiled a list "by Charges" of all the appointments that have ever been made by a regular session of the Mississippi Conference. By corresponding with him, each charge or church may now secure a list of the pastors and presiding elders that it has had during the years.

5. Articles are desired that contain any reliable information concerning the original organization of churches, Sunday schools, Woman's Missionary Societies, Wesley Brotherhoods, etc. Printed yearbooks and directories of churches, no matter what their dates, are desired, especially those that give information concerning organizations of churches and the erection of church buildings.

6. Obituaries of prominent Methodist laymen or local preachers, of years gone by, are desired. These obituaries may be highly regarded by the descendants or relatives or loved ones of the deceased, but many of them will be of great service in the writing of the Conference History. Please send copies of any such obituaries that you may have, or know of, to the undersigned, or else send the original clipping with the request that it be returned. Care will be taken to see that all such articles and obituaries are promptly returned.

7. Presiding Elder Minute Books of by-gone years are wanted also. These books contain much information that may be gleaned from no other source. If the families of departed presiding elders, or living presiding elders and ex-presiding elders themselves, will contribute these books to the Historical Society, it will be a great service. Please inform the undersigned where any such books may be procured, or send the books themselves to the undersigned and postage will be refunded promptly. These books will be valuable in writing the Conference History, in preserving the life and labors of the presiding elders themselves, and will be filed by the Historical Society for the reference of any who may need information from them.

8. We desire brief articles written by present-day ministers and laymen, especially the older ones, concerning their recollection of the "giants of old" and the Church of old, concerning any story of great heroism, consecration, pioneering, faithfulness, etc., concerning the organization of churches and charges, and concerning their own early lives and service in the Church as ministers or laymen. Please write such articles for us at once, and send them to us without further bidding. This is your invitation and urgent request to do so.

Finally, accept our thanks and the gratitude of future Methodism for any such service that you may have already done, are doing even now, or will do in the future in line with these requests.

Sincerely,

GEO. H. JONES,

Secty. Miss. Conf. Historical Society.

Montrose, Miss.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

acceded to, and, after debate, they were unanimously of opinion that it would be best immediately to call a Conference of all the traveling preachers on the continent. Dr. Coke knew that the man who had held the Methodists steady amidst the distractions of war and who with the authority of his own personality had conquered the spirit of ecclesiastical revolution, following the ordinations in Virginia, was not to be set aside by a stroke of the pen, even though it be that of Mr. Wesley. He realized, too, that the failure of his mission would very probably result in making permanent the irregular move which had been temporarily suspended. Francis Asbury outgeneraled the ambassador of Mr. Wesley; for Dr. Coke would not risk bringing disaster to the Methodist cause. The only detail upon which he refused to surrender was indicated by the minute declaring allegiance to Mr. Wesley, and that was rescinded by the Conference of 1787—apparently for the very reason which Asbury had foreseen.

As soon as it was agreed to call a Conference, Freeborn Garrettson was dispatched to Virginia and the south to summon the preachers to meet in Baltimore, December 24, 1784. Asbury arranged a preaching tour of a thousand miles for Dr. Coke, who was accompanied by Black Harry; and he took Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey with himself on a tour through Maryland. On December 18, Asbury and the envoys of Mr. Wesley arrived at Perry Hall, the home of Harry Dorsey Gough, where they discussed at length the details of the momentous occasion in prospect. On the morning of December 24, they rode to Baltimore where the Conference was opened at 10:00 o'clock in Lovely Lane Chapel. The benches were without backs, there was no heat in the building, and the weather was cold; but "friends in Baltimore," says Dr. Coke, "were so kind as to put up a large stove and to back several of the seats." Here sixty of the eighty-four American preachers assembled for ten days and deliberated upon the communication of Mr. Wesley. Here they worked out the details of an organization that was soon to become one of the most numerous and militant ecclesiastical bodies in America.

Unfortunately no official minutes of the proceedings were kept; and the individual recordings were naturally colored by personal opinion and are sometimes conflicting. The journals of Coke and Asbury give the most detailed records of what was done; but these must often be supplemented from the journals, diaries, and reminiscences of others who were present.

Thomas Haskin, whose manuscript journal is now in the Library of Congress, records objections to the plan, and expresses his own fears as to the wisdom of setting up an independent church at that time. But, in assigning value to his opinions, it should be kept in mind that he had been received into full connection just six months before the organization of the Church; he located and went into business in 1786; and in 1800 he withdrew from St. George's Church, Philadelphia, and joined with some independent Methodists who established Union Church and secured for their meeting place the south end of Whitefield Academy. The names of twenty-nine preachers who were in attendance have been determined with reasonable certainty, and others living in the vicinity of Baltimore are presumed to have been present.

Asbury was ordained a deacon on Saturday, December 25, and an elder on the following day, by Dr. Coke, assisted by Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey; and on Monday, the twenty-seventh, he was ordained a superintendent by the same elders, assisted by Philip W. Otterbein, a minister of the German Reformed Church in Baltimore. Otterbein, who was a friend of Asbury, was Arminian in theology and was fervently evangelistic in his ministry; and in 1800 he joined with Martin Boehm, a preacher among the Mennonites, in the organization of the United Brethren in Christ Church. On the last day of December, several deacons were ordained; New Year's Day was given over to the consideration of Cokesbury College; and on Sunday, January 2, Freeborn Garrettson, James O. Cromwell, Jeremiah Lambert, William Gill, Le Roy Cole, Nelson Reed, John Hagerty, Reuben Ellis, Richard Ivey and James O'Kelly were ordained elders, having been ordained deacons two days earlier. John Tunnell, Henry Willis and Beverly Allen were elected elders, but not being present they were ordained later. John Dickins was ordained a deacon, and Caleb Boyer and Ignatius Pigman were elected deacons and ordained later. The Conference adjourned on January 2, 1785.

In addition to the setting up of its ministry, the Christmas Conference approved the Articles of Religion—Mr. Wesley's abridgement of the thirty-nine articles of the English Church; and it arranged a form of Discipline for the government of the Church. This Discipline was in the form of "Conversations," questions and answers, and was really an adjustment of the large Minutes of the Wesleyan Conference to meet American conditions—it even retained the form of its title. The Conference adopted a stringent regulation on the subject of slavery, which caused great excitement and opposition throughout the connection. The preachers, including Dr. Coke, were vigorously opposed and even threatened; and at the Baltimore Conference, June 1, 1785, was entered: "It is recommended to all our brethren to suspend the execution of the minute on slavery till the deliberations of a future Conference; and that an equal space of time be allowed all our members for consideration, when the minute shall be put in force. The regulation was never revived, but in spirit it was never repealed.

After the adoption of the name, The Methodist Episcopal Church, the matter of first importance to the Conference was the establishment of a ministry for the new Church. It was certainly the first interest with those rugged pioneers who had battled so long against moral and spiritual conditions made more difficult by their own lack of full ministerial authority. They had a commission to preach the gospel to the people; but were denied the privilege of administering the sacraments of the Church. Asbury says: "It was agreed to form ourselves into an Episcopal Church, and to have superintendents, elders and deacons." They planned that henceforth the Methodist Church should be able to offer every ecclesiastical right and privilege of the Christian Church without waiting for the consent or willingness of any one. The ordinations of Mr. Wesley were, therefore, but a step in the march of events which culminated in the complete independence of the Methodists.

The study of the origin and the ecclesiastical regularity of our episcopacy belongs, of course, to the polemical literature of the Church; but there are certain facts with which the historian must deal because they have bearing upon the development and progress of the movement. In demanding the submission of Mr. Wesley's plan to the Conference for ratification, Asbury achieved the independence of the American Methodist Church; but he probably exalted the authority of that body to a degree which he did not intend, and which he certainly did not accept. His episcopal course was unquestionably founded upon a belief in the absolutism of his power. In 1801 he recorded his opinion thus: "There is not—nor indeed, in my mind, can there be—a perfect equality between a constant president, and those over whom he always presides." This comment was provoked by a theological treatise on the origin and powers of the primitive episcopacy. Whatcoat, who belonged to the same school of thought, is quoted as believing that "it is not an office taken at pleasure, but an order of God." Jesse Lee and John Dickins held more liberal views of the tenure and powers of the episcopacy. So, at the very beginning, we find Esau and Jacob struggling in the womb of their Methodist mother.

Many things might be said of the men who, as bishops, were charged with the leadership and direction of the new Church. No two men were ever more unlike, or together served more effectively in an important epoch of Methodist history. It is probably true that no ecclesiastical body was ever more fortunate in the character and ability of its initial leadership; but this is not the place for formal biography, and we can only give a brief appreciation of the two leaders whom we recognize as occupying a unique place in our history.

Doctor Thomas Coke, the appointee and the ambassador of Mr. Wesley, was of course accepted by the Conference in the relation for which he had been named and consecrated. He is, therefore, the dean of the bishops of the Methodist Church and is so listed on its episcopal roll. He was an only child and was born in Brecon, Wales, September 9, 1747. His father, who was a wealthy surgeon, provided the best educational opportunity to be had; and Dr. Coke was, therefore, one of the most accomplished men of the entire Wesleyan connection. In his seventeenth year, he became a gentleman commoner of Jesus College, Oxford; and he received the Bachelor of Arts Degree, February 4, 1768, Master of Arts, June 13, 1770, and Doctor of Civil Laws, June 17, 1775. He was ordained a deacon in the Church of England, June 10, 1770, a priest, August 23, 1772, and some time afterward he became curate at South Petherton, where his vigorous preaching on the great themes of Scripture soon attracted wide attention. It was here that he came in contact with Thomas Maxfield and the tone of his preaching was perceptibly changed. His reflection of Methodist passion and fervor brought persecution and ultimately expulsion from his curacy. He was chimed out of the pulpit by the ringing of the bells of the parish church. He was humiliated and was much depressed, but fortunately he found asylum with a family of Dissenters named Edmonds whose social prestige and fine loyalty did much to recover his broken spirit.

On August 18, 1776, Dr. Coke traveled a distance of twenty miles and had an interview with Mr. Wesley at Kingston; and on August 19, 1777, we find him enlisted with the Wesleyans, but for some reason his name does not appear in the Minutes until 1778. Dr. Coke's contribution to Methodism has never been estimated at its true worth; for he probably gave greater and more constructive service to the cause than any other man of that period. He was a great student, a worthy author, and more than once he was the agent of his Church in delicate and exacting crises, and he met with manliness and fidelity every obligation of the trust. To him more than to any other was due credit for the Deed of Declaration which secured a succession to the Wesleyan chapels. He was probably the only man, not excepting Mr. Wesley or the saintly Fletcher, who could have steered the plan for America to a suc-

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. A. W. Turner is able to sit up after his recent severe illness. This will be good news to his many friends throughout Louisiana.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is writing a biography of the late Rev. Sam P. Jones of Georgia, which he hopes to bring from the press late in the summer of this year.

Mrs. R. E. Smith, the chairman of the new "Committee on the Local Church," is magnifying her new office by carrying the educational message to every charge in Louisiana.

A Standard Training School for the south end of the Greenville District, with an attendance of 60, was held at Leland recently. Rev. R. G. Lord was the director of the school.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, who is pastor at Como, Miss., writes in commendation of the Advocate; and he is doing his part to help us win the fight for freeing the Advocate from debt.

We have received notice of the death of Rev. O. A. Thrower at Fort Myers, Fla., on February 13. Brother Thrower was once pastor at Lake Charles in the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil has received 41 new members into Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, since Conference; the Church school is growing and every unit of the organization is running smoothly.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, the wide-awake presiding elder of Greenwood, Miss., District, is carrying every detail of the church program to all the stewards of his district. Of course, he is succeeding.

Rev. Dan C. Barr, one of the honored veterans of the Methodist ministry in Louisiana, is in Mosely Clinic, at Monroe, La., suffering with a carbuncle. We hope that he may soon be restored to health.

Rev. Roy Wolfe reports progress on the Saucier charge. Rev. Porter Caraway of Gulfport will assist him in a revival at Saucier, March 6-15; and O. C. Hull, a lay evangelist, at Lyman, March 24-31.

Rev. E. L. Jernigan is doing an excellent work at Marks, Miss. He reports a Christian Culture Institute for Quitman County in which 41 were enrolled; a Standard Training class; and 15 new members received.

Rev. Henry Felgar Brooks of Tupelo, Miss., has changed the plans for his revival. He will preach for a week before Easter, and Dr. George Stoves, of Memphis, will begin on Monday, 22, instead of the date originally set.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is scheduled to preach at Clarksdale on the morning of March 31, and to dedicate the church at Dublin that evening. He will also attend the North Mississippi Woman's Missionary Conference on April 2, 3.

Rev. W. R. Lyons is doing a splendid work on Pearl River charge. He is doing extensive repairs on Pearl River and Bush churches, and best of all the bills will be paid when the work is finished. His finances are the best the charge has known in years.

Mr. Fred Coon, Monroe, La., is in the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital of this city, for an operation upon his eye following a automobile accident which occurred some months ago. Brother Coon is one of the valuable laymen of First Church, Monroe.

Noel Memorial Church, of which Rev. L. L. Cowen is pastor, is a veritable beehive of activity. The Advocate is included in the budget of the church; and every provision is being made for the cultivation of the devotional life of the membership, and for reaching the unenlisted.

Mr. David L. Bingham, of Memphis, Tenn., has established a scholarship trophy to be passed from chapter to chapter of the Kappa Sigma college fraternity in the Ninth District. The trophy is given in honor of his father, the late J. R. Bingham of Carrollton, Miss.

Rev. W. H. Giles is meeting with great success in his ministry at Bastrop, La., where he is the new pastor. He is having great congregations at all services, including the church-night hours, and has organized a plan for the discharge of the building debts of the church.

Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, while still confined to his room, is able to sit up several hours each day. His recovery is considered no less than a miracle, and he is grateful to his many friends who remembered him in their prayers during the two months of his illness.

Clalborne Church just outside West Monroe, La., is being served by its organizer and best friend, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter. Though a very small organization, Brother Ledbetter and his people are raising $1.25 per month to help make the Advocate Campaign a success.

We regret to learn of the illness of Rev. Guy M. Hicks of Mansfield, La. We understand that Brother Hicks, after spending some time in a local hospital, was carried to a hospital in Oklahoma. We trust that he may soon be able to return to his work, and in the vigor of health.

We regret to learn of the serious illness of Mrs. C. W. Avery in the Methodist Hospital at Memphis. Brother Avery is pastor at Duncan and Alligator in the Greenville District. Let our people remember this pastor and his wife in their distress. (Since the above was written, we learn that Mrs. Avery's condition is reported improved).

Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Alford of Baton Rouge, La., were injured in an automobile accident last Sunday, according to a telephone report to the Advocate office. Both of them are in a Baton Rouge hospital, and we do not know the details of the accident or the extent of the injuries. We understand, however, that they are expected to recover.

Chaplain Howard Brooks, of the United States Navy, with his family have recently been on a visit to Rev. J. J. Brooks of the North Mississippi Conference and to Rev. B. P. Jacob, Raymondville, Texas, of the same Conference. These are the parents of Chaplain and Mrs. Brooks. Chaplain Brooks is now stationed in the office of chaplains in Washington, D. C.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard.

The New Orleans District held its Annual Officers' Training Day at Houma on February, with Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, the district secretary, presiding. The auxiliaries throughout the district were well represented.

The devotional periods were led by Deaconesses Hendricks and Kelley. The instructors for this occasion were Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter, Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, Mrs. R. W. Irvine, Mrs. W. W. Holmes, and Mrs. J. B. Pollard.

At the close of the afternoon session a visit was made to the MacDonell School and Wesley House. All were much pleased with the new furniture that has recently been placed in Keener Hall.

A number of ladies from the Baton Rouge District motored over for this interesting and instructive meeting.

On February 19, the annual meeting of the Advisory Board of MacDonell School and Wesley House was held at the school with Mrs. John A. Pharr, president, presiding. Annual reports were made at this time and ways and means were discussed for the advancement of this work for the new year. The following were in attendance: Mrs. J. A. Pharr, Berwick; Mrs. Geo. Sexton, Jr., Shreveport; Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter, Shreveport; Mrs. James H. Chambers, Baton Rouge; Mrs. D. B. Carre, New Orleans; Dr. W. L. Duren, New Orleans, and Rev. B. H. Andrews, New Iberia.

We note with interest the splendid report of the work at Jubilee Inn in Shreveport, under the supervision of Deaconess Mary Freeman. This home is filled to capacity and many girls have been turned away for lack of room. A sweet Christian atmosphere prevails in this home and a large number of the girls are active in church and young people's work. Deaconess Freeman says: "Tomorrow's home life and ideals will be determined by the girls of today. We are striving to minister to them here in such a way that their contribution to the home and church of tomorrow will be of the highest character."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore

Fourth quarter Mission and Bible study report:

Mrs. M. T. Lockman sends a summary of 156 reports—130 Mission Study classes with 3750 members; 116 Bible study classes with 3174 members; 22 have met requirements for Council credits. There are at least 50 churches in our Conference that are not reporting Mission and Bible classes. Most of our auxiliaries are doing splendid work and fully 50 per cent of them are making the Standard of Efficiency.

* * *

Most of our Missionary Societies have completed the foreign mission study, using "Suzuki Looks at Japan," or one of the other recommended books on Japan. Orientals "In American Life," by Albert W. Palmer, ties in consistently with the foreign mission book. If you are studying the supplementary book on Japan by Wainwright do not let it take the place of the recommended home mission book. Rather, take them both,

The mission study class of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, Charleston, Miss., held an all-day meeting, February 25, to study their new book "Suzuki Looks at Japan." The morning session consisted of a class in geography, conducted by Mrs. Rathburn, with Miss Georgia Fonda's circle answering questions on the schools, and the old faiths of Japan.

Then Mrs. Turberville's circle held a round-table discussion of the youth, the schools, and the old faiths of Japan.

After a bountiful and delicious basket lunch the study was resumed. Mrs. Boone's circle gave several interesting papers on the changing social and religious conditions of Japan. The question of international relations was discussed with Mrs. Jinkins representing the side of China, and Mrs. Stewart that of Japan. Mrs. Rathburn concluded the program with a talk on the position of the United States on this question and a prayer for peace and mutual understanding among the nations.

* * *

An interesting dialogue on "How best to carry on the work of advancing the religion in Japan" was given by Mrs. Page, Mrs. Roberts, and Mrs. Fultch.

"A Japanese Woman Discussing Marriage in Her Country" was impersonated by Mrs. Paul Wells.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CONFERENCE LAY LEADER OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: The report on benevolences just received from the Conference Treasurer shows amounts paid up to March 1, and will be read with some encouragement when compared with the report of last month. It will be noted that the total of $1,704.76 has been paid by thirty-three charges and that the total by districts is as follows: Brookhaven District, $112.37; Hattiesburg District, $158.14; Jackson District, $765.40; Meridian District, $459.65; Vicksburg District, $114.75; Seashore District, $94.45.

The amounts paid by charges are as follows:

Brookhaven District

Crystal Springs, $40.00; Meadville and Bude, $20.00; Osyka, $33.25; Utica, $19.12.

Hattiesburg District

Bonhommie, $25.00; Bucatunna, $27.00; Hattiesburg, Broad St., $31.20; Laurel, Kingston, $13.00; Laurel, West Laurel, $5.00; Shubuta, $36.20; Waynesboro Circuit, $20.74.

Jackson District

Brandon and Pelahatchie, $45.00; Carthage, $26.00; Clinton, $17.00; Fannin, $47.90; Forest, $20.00; Jackson, Capitol St., $317.00; Jackson, Galloway Memorial, $250.00; Morton, $7.50; Vaughan, $35.00.

Meridian District

Burnside, $10.00; DeSoto, $22.00; Enterprise, $45.00; Lauderdale and Electric Mills, $39.50; Meridian, Hawkins Memorial, $38.15; Philadelphia, $200.00; Union, $105.00.

Vicksburg District

Natchez, $50.00; Roxie, $16.20; Vicksburg, Gibson Memorial, $48.55.

Seashore District

Logtown, $5.00; Moss Point, $40.65; Saucier, $48.80.

It may be noted that the total payments made on the benevolences during February were $1,248.84, and if a similar amount is paid during March, the situation will be far better than at the same date last year. Perhaps each of the 98 charges not represented in the above list will make even a small payment during the current month, and it will be splendid if the next report includes payments from 131 charges.

FINANCIAL RECOVERY FOR THE LOCAL CHURCH

By M. L. Walton, Jr.,
Conference Lay Leader, Baltimore Conference

The above caption is the title of an attractive, interesting book by Dr. J. E. Crawford, associate secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities. Prior to the publication of this book, I was requested by the General Board of Lay Activities in session at Lake Junaluska to review and appraise it. Upon reading it I was convinced that the author had made an exhaustive research of the literature bearing on Church finance, and was impressed by his unusual and sound approach to this question, as well as his logical conclusions. I was struck by the fact that in the period of crisis and transition which our Church is undergoing in initiating the New Financial Plan, the advance preparation and the publication of this book are providential.

Upon reading this book I am impressed by the fact that great profit will be derived by our membership, both by individual reading and by its use in study classes. In my opinion, it is the best and most comprehensive book which has been written in this field.

Personally, I feel that the board circulation of this book will bring a great blessing to the Church, as well as joy to its readers, who will experience the satisfaction of rethinking the principles governing this important function of the Church's life. A richer and broader spirituality will inevitably follow. Can any member afford to neglect the study of this question? It behooves every pastor in co-operation with the Lay organization to exert every possible effort to have his members read and study this great book.

BOOKS

Faith That Propels. By G. Ray Jordan. Whitmore & Smith. $1.50.

This volume is a fitting sequel to a previous volume by the same author: "Courage That Propels." These sermons which come from the pen of a young minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, clearly reveal the trend of thinking of the young ministerial mind today. The deep religious convictions of the preacher are so evident one cannot miss the earnestness of his soul. He allows nothing to become a substitute for vital truth.

Clergymen and laymen alike may receive inspiration and guidance from this volume.

The author reveals an unusual familiarity with a broad field of knowledge. He is at home with the great minds of every age. Poets, philosophers, and prophets are made to contribute to his stimulating themes. People of every age and station of life pass in review. A clear understanding of human nature in its reactions to life situations is quite evident. Every sermon is rich with illustrations from actual experiences in every-day life.

The author shows that there is no conflict between intellectual honesty and fundamental religion. Indeed, the only way to find reality is to face life and truth as they are. He believes that all truth is a revelation from God, and deals with his major problems in the light of this conviction. Fundamentals are handled courageously and in the light of modern discoveries. One is impressed with the necessity of a "Moral Standard" in a scientific world, one cannot escape the conclusion: "nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure." Religion may have gathered much "Excess Baggage" in the course of history, but it has kept the things that are necessary to the highest type of life.

R. R. BRANTON

Toward the Sunrising. By Dr. R. H. Bruner. Cokesbury Press. $1.50.

In TOWARD THE SUNRISING Dr. Bruner has given us a readably written book of sermons. They are fresh and spicy.

The author, in his introduction, calls attention to that procession of days noted in the beginning of Genesis calling us to observe that it runs. There was evening and morning, one day, a second day, and so on. Evening always precedes morning.

Then follows the sermons each based upon a suitable and suggestive scripture.

Each sermon is preceded by some fittingly chosen poetic quotations which form a kind of commentary upon the scripture and topic.

There are the sunsets of several wrong or decadent things such as "an old faith," "selfishness," "war," and "wickedness." And there are the glorious sunrises of "justice" and "righteousness."

"Beyond the Sunset" and "Toward the Sunrising" are the chapters that fittingly close the refreshing and stimulating series.

The Rediscovery of John Wesley.

By George Croft Cell. Henry Holt & Co., New York. $2.50.

Dr. Cell, who is Professor of Historical Theology in Boston University, has undertaken a revision of the traditional attitude towards John Wesley in this scholarly work. This book is in no sense a biography after the usual pattern. Dr. Cell has examined the Wesleyan Revival at its origin, using as the source of his information Wesley's Journal and Wesley's Letters. Also, Dr. Cell draws upon another valuable source for his interpretation of Wesley, namely, the opinions and judgments of Wesley's contemporaries. Dr. Cell recognizes the value of the opinions and attitudes of contemporary minds on such a subject as John Wesley.

The thesis of this monograph is that the Wesleyan Revival was, in its origin and earliest stages, negatively a powerful reaction against Arminian Anglicanism in the doctrine of Christian experience and against High Church principles in the theory of Church institutions and the exercise of the pastoral office; and positively a return to the faith of the first Reformers, Luther and Calvin. While the author uses something of the proof-text method of supporting his arguments, this method does not become laborious. This book will be of vital interest to all who are interested in Methodist origins.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MARCH 17

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE POWER OF UNITED PRAYER

The deliverance of Peter from prison is not more marvelous than the simplicity with which the story is related. It is a factual story without a single word by way of ornament. It came, of course, from Peter himself, and he tells it simply and humbly, acknowledging that he had thought it all but a dream till he found himself alone in a familiar street, in the cool fresh air of the night. No word of explanation or elaboration can add to the clearness or force of the record. If we attempt to leave God out of this deliverance, we may as well leave him out of the rest of the Bible.

When Peter found himself free, he hastened to the house of Mary, the mother of Mark, "where many were gathered together praying," quite possibly in the same "upper room" where the Master had prayed with them and for them at the Last Supper. Clearly, it was meant that we should discern intimate connections between this prayer room, the prison gates, and the throne of God. Cooperation is the law of the spiritual life and growth and power. God comes only to open hearts and helps only willing hands. He loosed the chains and opened the gate, but Peter had to put on his own clothes. This is not the only group to be astonished at the suddenness and completeness of the answer to prayer.

These disciples did not stop with "a word of prayer;" they "prayed without ceasing." The Church will have more power when it is more given to insistent and continued prayer. It is significant that those who pray most, most believe in prayer. The arguments of those who never pray may be taken with more than a grain of salt. The disciples prayed for Peter, definitely, directly. Much so-called prayer is utterly pointless. Perhaps this is why so many "prayer meetings" have failed. In every community some needy, worthy person or cause may be found as an object for prayer, and persons can be brought together to focus their prayers on that definite end.

Prayer does not change God, as spades do not change rivers, but they open irrigation ditches and life-giving water, obedient to gravitation, flows where it could not go without the spade. The sun does not change at the equinox, but its summer heat waits a change in the position of the earth. So, the blessings of God await the cleared channels which only prayer can open; his glory waits the changed attitude of man, and prayer works and witnesses that change. "Men ought always to pray, and not to faint." Greenville, Miss.

Second: We recommend the holding of Vacation Schools wherever at all practicable.

Third: We urge that the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise be emphasized in every school on the district, that appropriate literature be secured and used, that Missionary programs be rendered the fourth Sunday in each month, and that the fourth Sunday offering be applied to this worthy enterprise.

Fourth: We recommend that Training schools be held at such places, and at such times as are feasible, and that Training classes be organized wherever conditions justify such organizations.

Fifth: We urge that Young People's Day be observed in all our churches, March 10, or as near thereto as is convenient.

Sixth: We urge that every school in the district strive to have at least one representative at the Young People's Assembly at Brookhaven, June 3.

Seventh: We urge that all our pastors and Church School workers apply themselves diligently to the inaugurating, and conducting of a campaign of evangelism, and that we strive to secure our quota of the 750,000 new members fixed by the General Conference Committee on Evangelism as our goal for the current quadrennium.

What Better Background Could a Laxative Have!

Civilized man has tried thousands of remedies for constipation, but comparatively few have held their place in reputable medical use and retained approval in medical literature. From among these few highly favored laxatives—favor established by many years of successful use in this and other countries—are selected the ingredients which are combined in Thedford's Black-Draught. Such a scientific, dependable background should encourage any one needing a laxative to try purely vegetable Thedford's Black-Draught. It is popular because it brings such refreshing relief without being expensive.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Gen. 30:30: And now, when shall I also begin to provide for my own house?

Jacob fled from the house of his father to become a stranger in a strange land. He pillowed his head on the rocks amid desolate surroundings. Yet when sleep overpowered him, he saw a vision of angels ascending and descending upon a ladder that reached to heaven.

Jacob stopped at Haran. He met the woman of his choice. The deceiver was deceived. He labored and toiled for many years. He was blessed with a family. He found abundant material success. "And it came to pass, when Rachel had borne Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away that I may go unto mine own place, and to mine own country." Laban remonstrated. Jacob then asked: "And now when shall I also provide for my own house?"

Note the emphasis of the words, "and now." Jacob could merely have said, "When shall I also provide for my own house?" Certainly he had no excuse now. Nor have we.

Note the significance of the little word "also." Could he not just as well have said, "And now when shall I provide for my own house?" Jacob saw that the people about him did provide for their own households. Others looked after the interests of their faith and culture. Yet he had been too busy seeking material profit. He was living by bread alone. What would it profit him if his business thrived and he neglected his home? What if his home became spiritually bankrupt? He should be a husband and not merely a supporter. He should be a father rather than a mere provider. He should cast out the idols and build the worship of God. He would know his children and their aims in life. They should know him.

But what tragedy that the mercenary spirit again gripped him and he delayed his journey home. For not until the Jacob experience did Jacob truly provide for his own household.

It is refreshing to read Paul's epistle to Philemon. Paul spoke of the "church that is in thine house." Susannah Wesley held a church in the Epworth rectory. How well she provided for her own household. How many other homes were blessed because she provided for her own household.

The human race should be nurtured from the cradle in the way of God.

The "Sunday School Board" of a few years ago issued certificates when whole families attended the Church school. How far-reaching the blessings when the entire family worships in God's sanctuary in the congregation of the believers. What an ally to parents who provide for their own households.

PRAYER

Our gracious Father, we would seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. May spiritual ideals and spiritual culture pervade our homes.

We thank Thee, O Father, that Thou hast provided for Thine own people an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

We ask for Thy abiding presence in Jesus' name.

FROM WESLEY CHURCH, MERIDIAN

Dear Dr. Duren: Just a few words to let you and the Advocate readers know that our first quarterly conference was a delightful occasion with the congregations and the official board. We had our new presiding elder, Dr. Joseph A. Smith with us, who brought us a great spiritual message. And we feel the work of the district is going to move forward under Brother Smith's kind administration. He has a kind word for everybody, and is looking after the spiritual work of the church first. And we feel because of such a spirit the work will go forward both financially and spiritually. We have a small membership here at Wesley, but they are a fine, loyal people. We are trying to build up a desire for the Advocate and trust we will be able to send some new subscribers. We are expecting and praying for a great and successful year. We feel we have such an efficient and spiritual leader in our presiding elder the people are willing to work hand in hand with him in making it a great year on the district.

Active unions make active districts. Great work can be accomplished in unions that can not be accomplished in any other organization, so it is up to us to keep our unions going in a big way.

In Memoriam

JOHN WESLEY CRANFORD

Brother Cranford was born June 23, 1873, died February 22, 1935, age 61 years, seven months, twenty-nine days. He was married to Miss Nannie Kirkpatrick on March 21, 1906. To this union was born one child, a son, Otis, who survives with his mother, one uncle, and his grandfather. Brother Cranford was a good man, well liked by everybody. He was a member of the Methodist Church at Fellowship in the Hindston community, and also a member of the Masonic Lodge there.

It can truthfully be said that he loved his church, and his pastor, his home was always open to the preacher. The funeral was conducted by the writer, in the Fellowship Church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Delk, a Baptist minister. He was laid to rest in the Fellowship cemetery, with Masonic rites. May God bless the bereaved ones in their sorrow.

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God to remove by death the Rev. M. L. Burton, president of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, and one of the most influential members of the Mississippi Conference, therefore, be it resolved by the faculty of Millsaps assembled on this the nineteenth day of February, 1935:

First, that in the loss of Rev. M. L. Burton the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College has been deprived of one of the most devoted and valuable trustees who has served the college in her entire history, and that we are sensible of the magnitude of our loss, and that his long and faithful service deserves our enduring remembrance.

Second, that the Mississippi Conference has lost a member who will be hard to replace and one whose service can hardly be estimated in terms of members added to the church, or of financial benefit gained by his wise counsel. The development of the young ministers under his supervision as presiding elder would alone render him remarkable.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this body, and additional copies be sent to his wife and son who survive him, and also be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, in the providence of our all-wise Heavenly Father, He has seen fit to call to His Heavenly home our beloved brother, Paul W. Ayers, who died at his home in Vinton, La., February 8, 1935; therefore be it resolved:

First, that the officers and the members of the Methodist Sunday school which he faithfully served as superintendent and later as assistant superintendent, hereby express their high appreciation of his sterling Christian character, his tender and sympathetic disposition, his generous and unselfish consideration of his fellowman, and his enthusiastic devotion to every cause that tended to inspire higher ideals in the youth of his community.

Second, that we greatly esteemed and valued his membership in our Sunday school and considered his counsel and interest in our work of the highest order; that we deeply deplore the loss we have sustained in his death.

Third, that we express to his bereaved family and the sorrowing relatives our heartfelt sympathy.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread on the records of the Sunday school and one sent to the press for publication.

SEASHORE DISTRICT

By Rev. Roy Wolfe

The Christian Education Institute was held at the Main Street Church, Biloxi, March 1, 1935, with a good representation from the district.

Rev. E. S. Lewis of Pascagoula conducted the devotional after which Rev. I. H. Sells, executive-extension secretary, took charge. He introduced the following visitors: A. E. Bradley, district director of adult work; Miss Josephine Lewis, district director of young people's work; Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Conference director of adult work; and Mrs. J. L. Carter, Conference director of children's work.

The presence of Rev. O. W. Moerner of the General Board of Christian Education was greatly appreciated. He brought two very helpful messages during the day; one on Missions and the other on Leadership Training. Rev. W. H. Lewis of Lucedale spoke on Evangelism.

The different workers met in their respective groups and these discussion groups were led by the conference and district directors. They proved very helpful.

The ladies of the Main Street Church served lunch to those present. We were indeed grateful to them.

A NEW TYPE OF PROGRAM FOR EPWORTH LEAGUE

By Melvin Hemphill

The Epworth League meeting of the young people's division of the First Methodist Church of Moorhead, Miss., has a regular attendance of around fifty or sixty high school and junior college students. With such a group we felt the need of some change in the type of program we had been using at our meetings, which had very little if anything of interest to the members. We of course went to the one who can always help the League out when in need, our pastor, Brother McCormack. As a result of our conference, we arranged a type of program that has proved popular and helpful in many ways. Feeling that such a program might be helpful to other Leagues I am giving below a brief outline of it:

First, we chose as a theme for a series of programs, for a period of twelve Sundays, "Highlights in the History of Methodism." The program is typewritten by Brother McCormack each week, and given to the chairman of the program committee on or about Tuesday. He distributes the parts in order to those on the program, and they have several days in which to prepare them.

Brother McCormack uses as a basis for these historical sketches the "History of Methodism" by McTyeire; re-writing it in simple language and emphasizing the highlights. For instance, our last program had five parts as follows: "The Effect of the Methodist Movement On the Church of England," "The Effect of the Movement on the English Nation," "Epworth Homelife," "Estimate of Mrs. Samuel Wesley," and "John Wesley's Marriage." Many of us knew little if anything about the history of our Church, and to learn about it gives us a new appreciation of its worth and its contribution to civilization. For instance, in our last program we learned that Methodism brought about prison reform in England, gave rise to popular education as we have it today, fostered the beginning of the Sunday school; and that while one of the youngest of all Protestant denominations, it is now the largest, and has had probably a very great influence in molding present-day Protestant church life.

Such realizations are sure to instill in us a greater appreciation, love and enthusiasm for our great Church. We know, it is helping our League to have this change of diet, and feel that such a change occasionally would help other Leagues.

Moorhead, Miss.

BABINGTONS CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDINGS

In these days when shallowness of thought and selfishness of character act to discredit the sacredness of the marriage bond it is highly refreshing to know that there may yet be found many godly couples whose lives together are the best illustrations of the real meaning of marriage and of the home.

In Franklinton, La., two Golden Wedding Anniversaries have been celebrated in the same family within the space of ten days. The first was that of Mr. T. M. Babington, Sr., and Mrs. Allie Magee Babington who were married on February 18, 1885. The second was of Mr. W. W. Babington and Mrs. Mima Magee Babington whose marriage occurred on February 28, 1885. The anniversaries celebrating these happy events took place in Franklinton on February 14 and 24. Numbers of friends and relatives as well as most of the children and grandchildren of both couples called to pay their respects to these splendid citizens whose long and useful lives have been sources of great blessing to the community.

W. W. Babington and T. M. Babington, Sr., are brothers and both have served long and acceptably in the Church. The former is at present the senior member both of the Church and Sunday school and has served as chairman of the official board and is at present an honorary member of the board. The latter has been Church treasurer for a long term of years and his services in the Sunday school have been of a high order. Though failing health in late years caused him to retire from any public participation in church life, he has continued these duties in the privacy of his own home and has maintained the splendid efficiency which has always characterized his work in the church.

Mrs. Mima Babington and Mrs. Allie Babington are cousins and represent all that is fine, noble and pure in womanhood and in motherhood. Their children certainly have occasion to rise up and call them blessed. They have constantly shared with their husbands in loyalty and service to the church and community throughout the years.

Character, loyalty and service are meaningful when expressed in human living and we believe that in these two couples who for fifty years have maintained their homes and have helped to build the community and to promote the kingdom of God these qualities have long abounded and do abound.

THE DELIGHTFUL DIVERSION, is the title of a book just published by The MacMillan Company. It deals with book collecting; and the author lists more than six hundred books published in this country, many of them within the lifetime of the present generation, which have a collector's value ranging from $15 to $10,000, in first edition form. The possession of such a volume might help to recover some of the lost items of our literature.

THE EASTERN AIR LINES, according to an announcement by Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, have established a seven and a half hour schedule between New Orleans and Chicago, and a twelve hour schedule between New Orleans and New York. One may have breakfast in his New Orleans home and lunch in Chicago or dine in Gotham, and with a 25 per cent reduction in through fares for the service of "Fleet-winged Douglas Flyers." Truly we are fast becoming an "air-minded" generation.

A BILL, INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS recently, proposes to limit liquor advertising in Britain. The bill provides penalties up to three months imprisonment and $500 fine for sending circulars advertising intoxicating liquors, except upon written request; the limiting of liquor advertisements in newspapers and periodicals to the names of alcoholic beverages, the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers; and the prohibition of posters, placards, aeroplane illuminations or other devices containing an invitation or inducement to drink intoxicating liquors. It may not pass, but the accusing finger rests upon the felon.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED IN HANGING OF MAN TO MISSISSIPPI OAK, is the headline of a March 13 Associated Press dispatch from Slayden, Miss. The story is that of the hanging of another Negro by a mob and for the crime of murder. Motorists report the hanging of a Negro by the roadside about two miles from Maringouin, Louisiana, a few days ago. No report of this seems to have been made in the press, and the details of it are not known. But surely the time has come when such acts in contempt of law and the courts of the land should be suppressed with as vigorous a hand as that which has been laid upon the kidnaper and the bandit. The only brief which we hold is for civilization. The citizenship of the country needs to develop a conscience on the subject of lynching.

CHANCELLOR ADOLPH HITLER, according to press dispatches, has boldly and defiantly thrust aside the terms of the Versailles treaty by ordering the quadrupling of the German army. This means that the actual fighting force of Germany is to be immediately increased from 100,000 to 400,000 men. The mere terms of the Versailles treaty are not nearly so important as is the warlike ambition manifested by the daring dictator who rules Germany. It might be well for Mr. Hitler to read through again the disastrous record made by one of his ambitious predecessors; and he might profit by recalling the saying of the seer, "Righteousness exalteth a nation"—not political ambition backed by great standing armies.

THE MASSACHUSETTS STATE LEGISLATURE has before it a bill to require teachers, instructors, and professors to take an oath to support the federal and state constitutions. The measure is probably intended to promote a political or social theory of government, rather than to safeguard the documents in question. In plain English, the Legislature of Massachusetts appears to have lacked the courage to say what it meant; and it seems to be willing to reflect upon the character and loyalty of a whole group of good citizens rather than to label a group of offenders. Massachusetts can hardly laugh at the "monkey-statutes" of any other state, after this attack upon its own teachers. Such moves would be humorous, if it were not for the injustice done by them.

THE ADDRESS OF THE BISHOPS of the A. M. E. Church, assembled in Council at Little Rock, Arkansas, has in it some telling and affecting statements. On the subject of Economic Justice it says: "While the country as a whole has been drifting along in utter helplessness, the Negro, the economic pariah of the American family of peoples, has found his lot even more difficult. He still represents the largest group proportionally, of the army of unemployed, and receives the smallest proportion of the emergency jobs and of the National Relief." The statement is made that in the sixteen Southern states and the District of Columbia the child of the white race receives $45.63 for its education, while the Negro child receives only $14.95, and in some instances as low as $1.50. The Bishops went on record as favoring the Wagner-Costigan bill to make lynching a crime against Federal law.

EDITORIAL

LENT

The Lenten season of the church calendar does not rest upon any, "Thus saith the Lord," but it has values of spiritual discipline which should not be discounted. It has also values of spiritual suggestion which the wise pastor will be quick to appreciate and appropriate. The very fact that the thinking of the multitude is concentrated upon spiritual things has a mellowing effect upon even the hardest sinner and is, therefore, an evangelistic asset not to be overlooked. But it is no less true that the preacher must capitalize the suggestion rather than the convention which the atmosphere has established. The total content of the message of the cross is in the apprehension which turns the feet of the throng toward the altars of the church, not in conventional act or habit of self-denial which superficial souls are disposed to practice. No degree of maceration of the body or cloistering of the soul can unfold within us the holy significance of Lent. Its very implication is a challenge to every one to face the issues of life, human and divine, in all their stark reality. That was exactly what Jesus did in the hour and experience about which our Lenten meditations pivot. To do less is to rob it of every creative possibility. It should be a time of high personal communion, not just a season for pious meditations and shallow chastenings. It should not be the incentive for a mere spurt of evangelistic fervor; but rather the occasion for the unveiling of the redemptive passion and power of Calvary. When John Wesley said to the Bishop of London, "Church or no church, we must attend to the work of saving souls," his words were charged with feelings of a divine urgency which was the creative impulse of Methodism. He took no account of seasons or of instrumentalities, except as means to the one divine end, the saving of souls. It was that urgency which moved St. Paul to write to Timothy, "Be instant in season, out of season;" and such should be the surge within our souls today.

REUNION WITH HONOR

Under the above caption, the leading editorial of Zion's Herald for March 6, discusses certain problems connected with the reunion of the various bodies of American Methodists. Dr. Hartman places special emphasis upon the "major issue," the Negro and the Negro race as sons and daughters of Wesley. We hold Zion's Herald and its editor in high esteem; but we can not feel that it is quite fair to the Joint Commission, to which this matter has been entrusted, to enter into a discussion of possible conclusions which they might reach. Such would cause the Methodist public to prejudge the work of the Commission, and would just as certainly prejudice the cause of reunion. And, aside from the issue to which it relates, we can not believe that the interests of the kingdom of God would be served by raising the ghostlike issues of the past at a time when no definite proposition is before Methodist peoples. We believe that the South will speak out with candor and frankness when the time arrives for such; but to raise a problem by anticipation, will, we think, almost surely defeat the end toward which the church is moving. After all, the church is a democratic institution and one never gets all that one seeks. But in wisdom, we fortify our advance position and then seek an enlargement of vision for a further conquest of the unattained ideal. We do not think that it would be wise to open the wounds of the past over a hypothetical issue; nor do we believe that any particular standard of social recognition is a matter of first importance in a reintegrated Methodism. We supported the unification plan which was defeated; we still believe in synchronizing the heartbeat of American Methodism; and we stand against the injustices and the discriminations of which the Negro is too often a helpless victim. Attitudes are stubborn things and we see no reason for concealing the facts either from ourselves or from others. The reunion of Methodism will not be brought about through the surrender of any side on controverted questions; but through our toiling and hoping together for the coming of the perfect day.

SAMSTONE HOLMES HONORED

The friends of Dr. Samstone Holmes, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes of New Orleans, will be delighted to learn of the honor just conferred upon him by his appointment to the Labrador Expedition of the International Grenfell Association. He was the nominee of Forsythe Infirmary, the outstanding children's dental clinic of the country, Boston. The appointment means a year in Labrador visiting the institutions founded by the International Grenfell Association, and Dr. Holmes is to be the dental representative for the expedition which goes out this year. He was graduated from the Loyola School of Dentistry in New Orleans a year ago, and since that time he has been an interne in Forsythe Infirmary, Boston. We extend our sincere felicitations to Dr. Holmes and to his no less worthy parents.

MEMORIALS

Please take notice that all obituaries and memorials should be as brief as possible. The Advocate rule limits the space to 200 words unless the excess is paid for at the rate of one cent per word. We have not enforced the rule, but we have been forced to abbreviate some of the memorials. We cannot undertake to insert memorials upon a particular page, nor can they be published immediately. All memorials are dated and are printed in their turn, and the most important exception which we make is in cases of memoirs for Conference journals. We have seven unpublished memorials and obituaries on hand now, and some of them are too long. Please help us and do not become impatient with us.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

By Alfred W. Milden

I have always been a lover of books, of books that are worth while, that carry with them a message. Of books like these John Milton said: "A good book is the precious life-blood of a master-spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life." Preeminent among these is the one referred to by Sir Walter Scott shortly before his death when he asked his son-in-law, John Lockhart, to read to him. "What book?" "Need you ask? There is but one." What we are pleased to call the Bible is the book of books. Through it God speaks to the heart of man, if man can be induced to listen. It makes a clarion call to the best that is in him to break the shackles of his carnal nature and assert his spiritual freedom through the power of the Infinite Spirit. It is a composite library of sixty-six books of varying length, in prose and verse, in which are embedded the earliest songs and stories of the race, and all is brought into the truest harmony and accord by the divine Musician and Composer. Judaism has given us the Old Testament, Christianity the New. It is the achievement of scholarship to make this truth known to the peoples of the world with the utmost possible accuracy and faithfulness in the innumerable languages and dialects of today.

As laymen of the church we are serving, we could not render a more lasting and finer service to the growing generation than to impress upon them the importance of a real knowledge of this treasure-house of spiritual thought. It is a far more neglected book than it deserves to be. Inasmuch as the public schools of the land have been obliged for various reasons to stand more or less aloof, it is all the more incumbent on the various churches to present its claims and make known its virtues to those who are otherwise deprived of its message. The Church school has in the performance of this office its highest trust. The ministry can render most effective service just at this point. The world will grow better or worse, it seems to me, as it cherishes or neglects this book of books.

In approaching the broad economic problems which affect the lives of all people we want to be aware when we are experimenting, and mentally alert to the hazards involved.—John G. Winant.

DID YOU HEAR DR. AND MRS. W. B. LEWIS?

Did you have the privilege and the great joy of hearing Dr. W. B. Lewis or Mrs. Lewis, during their visit to the Mississippi Conference, as representatives of the General Board of Missions at our Missionary Institutes? If you heard them, I am sure you realize the need of a brick hospital in Africa so that they can minister to those needy people in a more efficient way. The present hospital in which they serve, is made of mud and grass and they need a brick hospital and it can be erected for $10,000.00. Would you as an individual or as a member of some group or church, like to have a part in making this hospital possible? Send me your contribution and I will put it with what I have now and forward it to help in this way.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis are to return to Africa in April, therefore, what you do will have to be done quickly.

I am sure you will recall that neither of them made any complaint, and this is what impressed me that they were not complaining, but were doing their best with what equipment they had. But, what about our opportunity of building the brick hospital so they can do better work?

If you are interested, please let me hear from you.

Yours sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS.

Meridian, Miss.

THE NAVAL MANEUVERS

Letter of Protest Sent to the President

The following letter signed by 198 eminent citizens throughout the country has been sent to the President:

Dear Mr. President:

We have every confidence that the maintenance of peace is one of the important objectives of your administration. We rejoice in the leadership which you have exercised in the improvement of our relations with Latin America. We desire particularly to commend you for your declaration to the effect that during the period covered by your administration the armed forces of the United States will not be sent across the boundry line of the nations of the western hemisphere. The great majority of the thoughtful religious people of the nation will support you in these and kindred efforts.

We are convinced, however, that the projected naval maneuvers tentatively scheduled to be held in the Pacific during the period from May 3 to June 10 will, if held, seriously complicate the task of maintaining peace in the Pacific. It is reported that the proposed maneuvers will encompass more than 5,000,00 square miles of Pacific seaways and will involve the employment of 177 surface ships and 477 airplanes of the fleet's high seas air force. This vast armada has been described in the public press as "the largest and most powerful by a wide margin ever assembled under a single command in the world's naval history." Surely, Mr. President, the launching of such a program at such a time cannot but have the effect of making even more tense and difficult our relations with Japan.

In laying this matter before you we are motivated by our desire to see your "Good Neighbor" policy extended to include our relations with Asiatic peoples. We do not believe that it is a "Good Neighbor" policy for the United States to go through with the plans for the maneuvers as recently announced by Admiral Reeves.

We beg of you, Mr. President, as the commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the United States, and in the name of peace, to alter the plans for these maneuvers so that they may be held, if at all, under such circumstances as will not occasion suspicion and ill will in the Far East.

Respectfully yours,

(SIGNATURES).

FEDERAL COUNCIL VIEW OF MEXICAN CONFLICT

Opposition to Senator Borah's resolution, which would set up a governmental inquiry into the religious situation in Mexico, was expressed by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in a statement adopted on March 1. The proposed investigation by the American Government was termed "an unwarranted interference with the internal affairs of another nation." At the same time, the church council went on record as strongly supporting "religious liberty for all groups both in Mexico and in every other part of the world." The text of the resolution was as follows:

"In the absence of sufficient authentic and unbiased information, we do not undertake at this time to pass judgment on various aspects of the controversy between the Mexican Government and the Church. On two points, however, our convictions are clear:

"1. We take a vigorous stand in support of religious liberty for all groups both in Mexico and in every other part of the world. We would be untrue to the genius and spirit of Protestantism were we to do otherwise. If the Mexican or any other government fails to recognize the right to full freedom for the worship of God and for religious teaching, it will forfeit the respect of all who understand the indispensable place of religion in both personal and national life.

"2. We record our strong opposition to the resolution introduced into the United States Senate calling for an inquiry by the American Government into the religious controversy in Mexico. We would regard such action by our Government as an unwarranted interference in the internal affairs of another nation. We believe that it would have no value for the safeguarding of religious liberty and would jeopardize our friendly relations with Latin-American countries. Moreover, the proposed measure ignores the grave denials of religious liberty existing in other nations, which are equally subject to investigation."

MRS. W. F. TILLET TRANSLATED

After an extended illness, Mrs. Tillett, wife of Dean W. F. Tillett, died March 4, at Nashville, Tenn. Probably no two people have meant more to the ministry of the Southern Methodist Church during the last forty years, or have held a larger place in its affections than have Dean and Mrs. Tillett. For a whole generation she was a gracious hostess and a veritable mother to Vanderbilt men. Her going will be the occasion of sincere sorrow to the alumni of that institution throughout the Southland; and will call forth tender and affectionate sympathy for her distinguished husband who is left to mourn her loss.

IF I WERE A LAYMAN IN 1935

1. I would make a serious attempt to find what's the basic trouble with our world.
2. I would read a few good challenging books on economics, science, psychology, and religion.
3. I would put myself through a severe examination and discover how sound are my religious convictions.
4. I would major in the spiritual life and become a master Christian.
5. I would join myself to nineteen other spiritually-minded men and together lift my church out of the doldrums.
6. I would be a channel through which God could send forth the living waters to thirsty and dying men.
7. I would be a living fire whose coals would kindle and lift up the hearts of my loved ones, my relatives, and my acquaintances.
8. I would seek definitely every day to speak a good word for Jesus, especially among the unsaved.
9. I would so live and so love that there would be some great positive lifts in my life.
10. By my Christian faith, optimism, and enthusiasm I would smash present-day negative criticism, religious complacency, and spiritual impotency, and I would demonstrate that Jesus Christ is the only adequate Saviour.—Christian Advocate, New York.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

cessful conclusion. As an Englishman, he faced the most delicate situation imaginable and, yet, he measured up to every exaction and detail of the national and religious emergency produced by the war. He was not perfect; and he lacked some elements of adaptation for the work of a bishop in America; and he made some surprising blunders; but his greatness was nowhere more conspicuously demonstrated than under humiliation and gross mistreatment. One is rather surprised to find that his monument in the Coke Methodist Church, Brecon, Wales, makes no mention whatever of his connection with American Methodism; but it does pay high tribute to his missionary labors, particularly the effort for the spiritual emancipation of the Negro race. It was as the father and promoter of Methodist missions that he truly towers among men. His interest and consecrated zeal were responsible for the missions launched at the Christmas Conference; he founded Wesleyan mission in the West Indies; he placed himself and his material fortune on the missionary altar; and there is no more inspiring and heroic figure in the missionary record of the Christian Church than Dr. Coke, in his sixty-seventh year, on the high seas at the head of a band of missionaries bound for India. Six ships of his merchant convoy were lost, the wife of one of his missionary associates sickened and died, and on the morning of May 13, 1814, they found his lifeless body on the floor of his cabin—unattended he had met the angels. His body was lent to the waves that sweep the shores of the land of his last missionary dream; there it will rest until the day when the seas shall give up their dead; but his unconquerable spirit abides in missionary power and inspiration. His fame was no accident, and he earned the right to be enrolled as the premier of missionary bishops.

Francis Asbury, plebeian born and a rugged apostle of the wilderness, whose education was had in the school of experience, was the very antithesis of the scholarly and the aristocratic Dr. Coke. After the loss of a sister who died in infancy, like Dr. Coke, he was an only child; but without dower of fortune or access to the culture which might have heightened his triumph. His father was an English gardener who was industrious and honest, but poor. Francis Asbury was born at Handsworth near Birmingham, England, August 20 or 21, 1745, and he served six years as a harness maker's apprentice. At the age of thirteen he was converted; in a little while he began to hold religious services and then to preach; and he was admitted on trial in the traveling connection at the Conference in London in 1767. After two years spent on English circuits, he volunteered for America, and on the twenty-seventh of October, 1771 he landed at Philadelphia where he immediately began a type and a term of service destined to make him immortal.

There was no semblance of brilliance about anything that Asbury did. Indeed, he does not appear to have possessed any scintillating gift. He was simply an untiring and conscientious worker at the one task to which he gave himself. His title to fame can not be defined in the terms of any philosophy of life, nor even to a well-reasoned policy of action; but must be discovered in the sum of his achievements. When he declined to be consecrated to the office of a superintendent, except he be elected by the preachers, he was true to the political philosophy of the Revolution—government rests upon the consent of the governed. It was, therefore, the inflexible demand of Asbury, and not the plan and design of Mr. Wesley, that secured autonomous control for the American Methodists. He was a man of the people, not on account of any theory of social relations which he held, but by the tie of constant association. There is no intimation that he was ever considered to be a great preacher, but he was unquestionably an effective preacher. Thomas Ware said that his public prayers often created an expectation in his audience which he could not measure up to in his preaching. But his influence with such men as Judge White, Senator Bassett, and Harry Dorsey Gough indicate that he was vastly more than a mediocre man. He was not a man who, in his administration, could conceive and carry into execution an elaborate and far-reaching program; but his progress was through a process of trial and error. Within the limits of his field, however, he was very effective. His mind was not of a speculative type; he never surrendered to sentiment or emotion; but he recognized his own limitations and kept steadfastly on his course. He traveled upwards of five thousand miles a year for more than a third of a century; he was never daunted by weather, nor by roads, nor could the approach of age slow his pace. He preached his last sermon in Richmond, Virginia, on March 24, 1816—exactly one week before his death which occurred at the home of his friend George Arnold, near Fredericksburg, Virginia. The distinctive achievement of his life is the Methodist Church which is his sufficient title to distinction, and his forty years of consecrated leadership and toil is its glorious benediction. The radiant afterglow of his fame lingers upon no ivy-grown college tower; no academic honor or recognition attached to his name; and he was to the end of his life, Francis Asbury, Bishop by the suffrage of his fellow preachers, and by the consecration of himself to the task. He lived a plain man among men and he ended his days as he began—a knight of the road, an itinerant Methodist preacher whose ministry was neither changed in its emphasis, nor lessened in its toil by his ecclesiastical exaltation.

The next step in the formation of the new Church was the setting up of its ministry—licentiates, deacons, and elders. In a way, the ministry of the Church had been typed already by the work and the workmen who had developed the field. The itinerant feature of Methodism had become so prominent that the preachers were referred to as “land-strollers;” and their faithfulness in keeping engagements for services, regardless of weather, passed into the American proverb: “There is nothing out today, but crows and Methodist preachers.” The changes which the Conference made in the ministry related mainly to the functions of the group of preachers chosen for ordination. According to the Discipline, the office of a deacon is, “To baptize in the absence of an elder, to assist the elder in the administration of the Lord’s Supper, to marry, bury the dead, and read the liturgy to the people, except what relates to the administration of the Lord’s Supper.” The office of an elder is, “To administer the sacraments of baptism and the Lord’s Supper, and to perform all the other rites prescribed by our liturgy.”

There has been some misapprehension as to the introduction of a time limit upon the pastorate. By recommendation of the Conferences, the preachers had interchanged quarterly or every six months; but no action was taken on that subject in 1784, and the length of pastoral tenure was left unrestricted. The first enactment on the limitation of tenure was in 1792 when the term of a presiding elder was fixed at not to exceed four years for any one district. In 1794 a note was inserted in the Minutes saying, “The bishop and conferences desire, that the preachers would generally change every six months, by the order of the presiding elder, whenever it can be made convenient.” It was not till 1804, twenty years after the establishment of the Church, that there was a law placing a limit on the pastoral term. At that time the General Conference inserted in the Discipline the words, “Provided he (the bishop) shall not allow any preacher to remain in the same station more than two years consecutively.” The limit thus became mandatory.

The larger responsibilities of an elder, now comprehended in the work of a presiding elder, were not an enactment of the Christmas Conference, but the office was practically instituted then. In their notes on the Discipline of 1796, Coke and Asbury say: “When Mr. Wesley drew up a plan of government for our Church in America, he desired that no more elders should be ordained in the first instance than were absolutely necessary, and that the work on the continent should be divided between them, in respect to the duties of their office.” This statement implies that the office really originated in 1784 and in deference to the wish of Mr. Wesley, that the ordinations should be limited to the necessities of the work. The presiding eldership was unofficially recognized in the Minutes of 1789, but the office was not established by law until the Conference of 1792, and its original office was to supply the sacraments to the people, not the administrative function of the statute.

The Bishop’s Cabinet was a still later development. Bishop Asbury never used his presiding elders as counselors in making the appointments, although he is quoted as having written a letter in which he said: “They must be my committee of safety.” In 1806 Dr. Coke criticised Asbury’s absolutism in making the appointments; and he said of his own method: “Every year I preside at the Irish Conference & the preachers are stationed by myself and a committee of nine who are the representatives of the Districts.” He said also, “I approve of the stationing of the preachers by a committee at each Annual Conference with the Bishop at the head of it.” It appears, therefore, that credit for the origin of the Bishop’s Cabinet belongs to Dr. Coke. As is well known, Bishop McKendree stood with James O’Kelly against the absolutism of Bishop Asbury, and he is believed by some to have been the author of the statement quoted by Ezekiel Cooper in his paper on the Bishop’s Power: “It is an insult to my understanding; and such an extraordinary stretch of power, so tyrannical, (or) despotic, that I cannot, (or) will not submit to it.” Whether this is McKendree’s statement or not, when the burden of responsibility fell upon him he declined to accept it without the counsel of the presiding elders. Asbury urged him to make the appointments without consulting the presiding elders, but in a letter written to Asbury from Cincinnati, October 8, 1811, he says: “I still refuse to take the whole responsibility upon myself, not that I am afraid of proper accountability, but because I conceive the proposition included one highly improper.”

The task of arranging the form of Discipline was greatly simplified by the use of Mr. Wesley’s liturgy and the Large Minutes of the Wesleyan Conference as guides. Much of the Discipline was a mere adaptation of these to meet American needs; but there were some things in which the Conference launched boldly upon an open and uncharted course. All of these things will be discussed at length at a later period in the pro-

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. George H. Jones reports that Montrose, Miss., charge joins the Advocate campaign, and he assures us that he will see after the interests of the paper in his field.

The Laymen's Institute held for the New Orleans District was a great success and a greater inspiration to those who attended. The attendance record for the three sessions was 158, 177 and 203.

Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, has received 131 new member into his church since Conference. He is also leading a "Go-to-Church" campaign which is to carry through to Easter.

Colonel R. F. White, son of Judge Horace H. White of Alexandria, La., is critically ill in a Shreveport hospital. He has been in the hospital for several weeks, and while hope is entertained for his recovery, he is seriously ill.

Rev. V. G. Clifford is much pleased with the spirit of optimism which pervades his district. The amount accepted for General and Conference work is fifty per cent in advance of what was paid last year. The total amount accepted is $7,698.

Dr. D. L. Coale began a meeting with Rev. Martin Hebert at West Monroe, on March 17. Brother Hebert reports that the outlook for a great revival is good. We regret that we can not accept his invitation to share the fellowship with his good people.

The beautiful and appreciative words of our friends often make the editor and publisher feel that they have been adopted into the families of many of our readers. Such a feeling is ours as we read the letter of Mrs. S. R. Morgan of Greensburg, La.

Rev. Henry Rickey of Zwolle, La., has expended $300 on playground equipment and is now doing extensive repairs on the church building. He says that he has already started payments on his benevolences and that they will be paid in full as they were last year.

Brother R. A. Rees, Booneville, Miss., sends a remittance for his father who went home to heaven on February 24, and he has the paper changed to his own name and address. We hope that the paper may long minister spiritual comfort to him, as it did to his sainted father.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, the thorough-going workman, friend of the Advocate and pastor at Ripley, Miss., sends a campaign remembrance. He expresses regret at the editor's absence from the Missionary Council, but we saw him in the gallery the night of Bishop Leonard's address.

Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Simpson express their thanks to the young people's division of the Brooklyn Methodist Church for a beautiful set of silver teaspoons which that group presented as a token of appreciation for the work with them last year. Brother Simpson is now at Daleville, Miss.

A card from Rev. Frank A. Matthews, pastor of Clay charge, was misplaced; but its belated publication can not detract from its interest. It bears the message that a seven-pound boy, John Robin, was born January 31. We congratulate the pastor and his wife, and we do not wonder that the prospects are rosy.

Mrs. Robt. M. Brown, wife of the pastor of Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, says that a census has been made preliminary to an evangelistic campaign to run until Easter; and that the entire church is a bee-hive of activity. On a recent Sunday night more than one hundred came to the altar in dedication of themselves to personal work for souls.

Rev. J. F. Dring of Ringgold, La., has completed and paid for a six thousand dollar church at Heflin, which will be dedicated by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, on April 7. The presiding elder, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, Rev. W. W. Perry, Rev. P. B. McCullen and Rev. T. J. Holladay, former pastors, have been invited to be present. All the obligations of the church are paid monthly.

Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Alford and Mrs. K. W. Dodson, enroute to the funeral of Dr. C. C. Miller, on Sunday afternoon, March 10, had a serious accident when the car struck some loose gravel and turned over. We are glad to be able to report that, while Brother and Sister Alford were painfully injured, no bones were broken. They were carried back to Baton Rouge in an ambulance, Sunday evening.

A note from Rev. R. S. Walton says that the funeral of Dr. C. C. Miller was conducted by Rev. K. W. Dodson, and associated with him were Dr. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Rev. Wm. Schuhle, Rev. C. E. McLean, and Rev. R. S. Walton. Rev. Mr. Smith, of the Baptist Church in Franklinton, brought over a quartet who sang. Mrs. Miller and the members of the family from Lafayette, Gilliam, and New Orleans were present.

Louisville writes: (We are doing such splendid work in our Missionary Society that I hardly know where to begin. We are divided into six circles, and each one is studying a Home, a Foreign, and a Bible Study book. Our leaders have made the study work quite attractive with plays and pageants. All of our members take part on the programs, and I feel that this has helped each one to realize the beauty and benefit of the study work. Our society has given two Life Memberships and donated to another. Our membership has increased wonderfully. All its members are wide awake and deeply interested in the opportunities for service offered by their Missionary Society.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames of Atlanta, Ga., who is the executive secretary of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, spent a few days in New Orleans last week in the interest of her work. All auxiliary superintendents of Christian Social Relations of New Orleans with the Conference superintendent, Mrs. R. W. Irvine, were privileged to meet with Mrs. Ames and hear her speak on this very vital subject to missionary women.

Mrs. Ames said that missionary women must do all in their power to stamp out this great evil, first because it is wrong and unChristian and second because there is nothing in our American life today that so hinders the progress of missionary work in foreign lands as this base and corrupt influence.

The annual meeting of the Louisiana Association for Prevention of Lynching met in Baton Rouge on March 14, with Mrs. Ben Knox of Shreveport, president, presiding. Mrs. Ames was the guest speaker at this meeting.

***

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council was held in Centenary Church, St. Louis, March 12-18. Saturday, March 16, was observed as anniversary day as it was just twenty-five years ago that the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies united into one great body known as the Woman's Missionary Council. The speakers for this anniversary occasion were Mrs. J. W. Mills, vice president of the Council; Dr. Lena Phillips, president of the National Council of Women of the United States; Bishop John M. Moore and Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Geo. Sexton, Jr., Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter, Deaconesses Stroup and Hopkins of St. Mark's were in attendance on this auspicious and happy occasion.

The new Year Books of St. Mark's Community Center are just off the press.

These books will be most welcomed as a book of this type has not been published by St. Mark's for the past five years. It contains interesting material and many full-page pictures of the various activities of St. Mark's. A large number of these books were distributed at the Council meeting in St. Louis last week. St. Mark's will have a large exhibit of their work at the Woman's Conference in DeRidder and the new Year Books will be distributed to Louisiana women at this time.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

MONROE DISTRICT INSTITUTE

From Monroe District comes news of a most successful and inspiring weekend Institute held at First Church in Monroe, February 22, 23, 24, with West Monroe and Gordon Avenue churches acting as co-hosts.

Mildred Dennis, district director and dean of the Institute, reports that 84 of the 145 who registered received credits in courses taught by Rev. J. Midyett, W. D. Boddie, H. L. Johns, and V. Morris.

Monroe and West Monroe homes were open to the delegates, and special entertainment was provided through a banquet, a picnic lunch and a weiner roast.

Because of the excellent business management of Elizabeth Langford, assisted by Jack Rodgers, Shreveport District director, as recreation leader, much enthusiasm was shown throughout the entire program.

On Sunday morning the delegates attended services at First Church, where Rev. Virgil Morris preached the sermon.

MILESTONES OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By Rev. M. H. McCormack, Jr.

The "Greenwood District Bulletin" made its bow in the realm of inter-church journalism this week. It is a "neat" organ in both content and form. Ably edited by Dr. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder, the new bulletin sets forth in its first issue the accomplishments, goals, and outlook of the district.

Several items are worthy of general notice. At the recent special Pastors Retreat held at Drew, January 31-February 1, certain definite goals were set. Under "Spiritual Life" the pastors agreed to devote at least thirty minutes each day to daily quiet-time and devotions, and to endeavor to get their people to do likewise. Under "Christian Education" it was agreed that we would hold at least one leadership training class in each charge, and one district Standard Training school at Greenwood. Two hundred dollars was set as the minimum district goal for Church School Day offering.

The "Bulletin" stresses the need of retiring the debt on our Conference Organ, the "Advocate," and states that several charges have agreed to put sizable amounts in their budgets for this worthy cause; they are Drew, $24.00; Greenwood, $48.00; Inverness and Isola, $24.00; Itta Bena, $24.00; Sunflower, $12.00; and Tchula and Cruger, $30.00. Other charges have not as yet had the matter presented to them, but it is practically certain that most of them will "follow suit." These amounts are being paid in monthly installments.

Financial reports show splendid progress throughout the district. Our presiding elder is thoroughly awake and putting on a progressive and constructive program. He has made a most favorable impression on the entire constituency.

The amount accepted by the several charges of the district for benevolences is eighty per cent more than the district paid last year, and since the charges were deliberate in making these assumptions, we have every reason to expect them to be paid in full.

The District Conference will be held in First Church, Winona, April 24, 25. Bishop Dobbs is to be with us, and it is announced that he will preach Wednesday evening and Thursday morning of the conference. Any announcement that Bishop Dobbs will preach in this vicinity makes large attendance a certainty.

We cannot help but take note of the splendid work being done in the Schlater and Price Memorial charge, of which one of our outstanding young ministers is pastor—Rev. W. Jeff Cunningham. This small charge has paid its pastor's salary to date and already raised 25 per cent of its quota for benevolences. It goes without saying that the spiritual state of the charge is on the incline. Dr. J.

M. Bradley, new pastor of the First Church, Greenwood, is fast building up a reputation among the preachers and people of this district as a man of unusual pulpit power. I do not recall having heard better preaching from an "ex-elder." That "four-in-four-out" law is revealing lots of hidden talent in both directions. We had better "preachers" among the "elders" than we suspected and better "elders" among the "preachers" than we could imagine.

The Moorhead church has recently installed a new outdoor electric bulletin board which is attracting much attention. This board, with changeable steel letters, provides a very effective means of advertising the church services, and also of reaching numbers of non-churchgoers with a thoughtful message each day. It has proved a definite stimulant to attendance. It also provides a convenient means of church identification by displaying the name of the church and pastor, visible both day and night. The bulletin is easily read from passing automobiles and by pedestrians passing on the sidewalks.

THE RUSTON DISTRICT NEWS

The Ruston District comes to the close of the first quarter of this Conference year with a good start on a fine year's work. Our new elder has begun like he possessed previous experience in the work of the presiding elder. Every district-wide event has been well attended and well handled by Brother Hoffpauir.

Beginning with the meeting of the district stewards before Christmas and ending with the Missionary and Evangelism institute of last week there has been an enthusiasm and an interest which is out of the ordinary. As a result of this interest the different charges have accepted a quota for the benevolent collections which is more than twenty per cent larger than the amount given for these causes last year. On account of the fine discussion of these matters at the meeting of the district board of stewards we feel sure that the most of the charges will pay every dollar of the amount accepted.

Plans are being laid for the institute for stewards which will be held at Arcadia during the latter part of March. Every steward in the district will receive a personal invitation to attend this institute and we are planning for a large attendance.

The Ruston District has done a fine piece of work in the Advocate campaign. According to the last report we were ahead of all the districts in the three Conferences. Some of the churches have not yet responded, but intend to later. Let us make this as near unanimous as possible. J. HENRY BOWDEN,

METHODIST STUDENT CONFERENCE

The Louisiana Methodist Student Conference was held at Louisiana State University, February 8, 9, and 10. A varied and helpful program was participated in by representatives from all of the colleges in the state. The outstanding feature of the program was the addresses given by Dr. W. P. Watkins, department of Church History, Candler School of Theology, Emory University. Discussion groups were conducted by Rev. J. S. Ditchburn, director of the Episcopal Center, L. S. U.; Dr. J. Richard Spann, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge; Rev. G. W. Dameron, pastor First Methodist Church, Crowley, and Dr. H. C. Brown of our General Board of Christian Education, Nashville, Tenn. Rev. B. C. Taylor of the First Methodist Church, Natchitoches, La., conducted the impressive Communion Service on Sunday morning, at which time the new officers were installed. The officers for the new year are: Paul Entriken, Centenary College, president; Albert Lutz, Southeastern College, vice-president; Marion Agate, Southwestern College, secretary-treasurer; Pearl Hattis, Centenary College, publicity superintendent. Rev. and Mrs. Joe Brown Love and the students of the Methodist Student Center at L. S. U. are to be congratulated upon the fine program planned and the excellent way in which it was carried out and the delightful hospitality of Louisiana State University.

THE WINONA CIRCUIT

Dear Dr. Duren: On the first Sunday in February we began a series of church rallies throughout the charge. In these rallies we preached on Stewardship of time, talent and money. God lent His presence to each service. As a result several adopted tithing. As a further result the financial report of the stewards at our recent quarterly conference was larger than usual. The attendance is increasing and the entire charge is on the monthly system of payment. Much of this good work is due to our good presiding elder, A. T. McIlwain. He is a great preacher, a great Christian, and a great presiding elder. You will hear great things from the Greenwood District this fall.

We are planning some group revivals for this charge, in which we expect to reach more people and have more time than we otherwise could.

Dr. Duren, we begin this revival the third Sunday in July near your old home. We herewith give you an invitation to attend this meeting.

No, Dr. Duren, we have not forgotten the Advocate. I have appointed an agent to look after subscriptions, and hope to send in some soon.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MARCH 24

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

PETER DESCRIBES THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

The Christians were still under the fires of criticism and persecution. All sorts of iniquities were charged to their account. Peter urges them first of all to preserve among themselves the Christian attitude—harmony, brotherly love, forbearance, humility. Nothing could or can so appeal to the world as true Christian fellowship. They are not to return blow for blow, evil for evil. The only peace resulting from this method is the peace of exhaustion; the only quiet, the quiet of death. Armament provokes armaments and war begets war, as munition-makers well understand. Christians are to answer reviling with blessing; to be peace-makers, not trouble-makers nor war-makers.

Evil-doing cannot pay; righteousness cannot but pay. The constitution of the universe commends the one and condemns the other. Those who seek "good days," who desire to preserve youthful zest and joy in living must watch the tongue, shun evil, do good, seek peace with passionate zeal. The blessing of God, the benevolent eye of the heavenly Father is upon them, and "his ear is open to their cry," while "the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil" as the face of the summer sun on up-rooted plants. "The stars fought against Sisera." Right is wrought into nature as grain into wood, and only disaster can attend its violation.

Though the discipline of pain is not to be escaped, no permanent personal or spiritual ill can come to the righteous. Character is impervious to detractors and spiritual life beyond the thrust of the sword or the agony of the cross. Worthiness of the cause may more than offset the pain of persecution, while luxurious ease and unholy pleasure may inwardly writhe under the scorpion sting of outraged conscience, or the bitter disappointment of unrealized ideals. Nothing is nobler or more ennobling than sacrifice for a good cause and nothing so degrading and galling as giving life for dross and ashes.

The way of the righteous is "strait," indeed, but who cares for an "easy" religion? Christ enthroned—"Sanctified"—in the heart will give the needed strength and courage. Unwavering loyalty and unbroken fidelity to him will furnish abundant reason for the hope within, and ample answer the cavilling questioners. Should suffering come, it is but a sign-post marking the way of him whom we follow. "It is better to suffer for well-doing than for evil-doing." Of sheer cost and pain, can you not point to one ungodly home which shows more than any hundred godly homes you have known?

Men may doubt the evidence of miracles. They cannot gainsay the evidence of a transformed life. The best evidence is living evidence. Happy the pastor who can say of his members: "Ye are our epistle, known and read of all men."

Greenville, Miss.

CHILDREN'S DIVISION

By Doris Branton

A bit of explanation regarding the World Friendship Units for primary and junior children is in order since so many have made inquiry concerning them. Quoting from a pamphlet sent from our General Board of Christian Education we have: "For churches using the Closely Graded Courses, special World Friendship Units in booklet form are provided twice each year. Each booklet contains suggested procedure and activities with all the necessary guidance for eight sessions, including Sunday and additional sessions. Their use will in no way interfere with the continued use of the Closely Graded Courses for all other sessions. These booklets may be used in the following ways:

(1) They may be substituted twice each year for four sessions of the Closely Graded courses for primary and junior children, with the extra sessions there provided for.

(2) An interest in the unit may be developed by the primary or junior superintendents at a regular session of the department. Additional sessions with a carry-over into the Sunday sessions, may then be held until the unit is finished.

Missionary units having a similar emphasis and occurring at the same time, twice each year, for both primary and junior children, will be a part of the regular lesson material in the Group Graded Lessons. Guidance for the teacher for Sunday and additional sessions will be found in the usual sections of the "Elementary Teacher," pupils' materials in "Our Little People" and in Junior Lessons. The booklet for those using the Closely Graded material are as follows:

(1) "I Wonder About China" by Jaunita Ray Kent, for Primary children.

(2) "Work Ways in Japan" by Constance Rumbough, for Junior children.

The price of each booklet is 25 cents and they may be ordered from the Publishing House.

More and better materials than ever are to be had this year on evangelism with children. Every pastor, teacher, and parent should feel responsible for making children deeply conscious of what comradeship with Christ means. I shall be glad to furnish any persons with the leaflet materials that are available, on request.

Did you have a Vacation Church School last year? Do you plan to have one this year? The new units seem more interesting than ever. We want to help you, if we can, in getting ready for your school. Write us for the list of materials and for other helps that are available. The address is: 1130 North Rampart, New Orleans, Louisiana.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Luke 15:8-10: What woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it? And when she hath found it she calleth her friends and neighbors together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost. Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of God over one sinner that repenteth.

Here is a meditation for the home page. Jesus takes an illustration from the familiar practice of the housekeeper.

1. Each person is of great value. Souls are the coins of God's kingdom. Each person bears the image of the Creator. Each soul is minted of God. Luke 15 contains three parables that teach this lesson. In the parable of the lost sheep the shepherd left the ninety and nine and went into the wilderness in search of the lost sheep. In the parable of the lost coin the housekeeper searched until she found it. She was willing to remove all the furniture and devote whatever time necessary to do so. In the parable of the prodigal son, the father still prizes the affection and the fellowship of the prodigal. What an encouragement to the penitent sinners who heard and what a rebuke to the scribes and Pharisees.

2. Souls without God are lost. This is the whole meaning of the parable. This is the reason the shepherd left the ninety and nine to search for the lost sheep. This is the motive of the Incarnation. This is the mission of Jesus. "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save his people from their sins." Mat. 1:21.

Consider the passionate pleading of Moses for back-slidden Israel in Exodus 32:31-33: "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. But now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written. And the Lord said unto Moses, Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book."

Consider the burden of Paul for his kindred. Romans 9:1-3: "I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost, that I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh."

3. The Christian attitude toward the lost. The passages above quoted are striking illustrations that those without God are lost and those in touch with God are burdened for them. The gospel reveals the Christian attitude toward the lost. "God so loved that He gave His only begotten Son." The Cross shows that there is no limit to the suffering of God for our sins.

It is Jesus speaking in these parables. He is striving to arouse the scribes and Pharisees. In this particular parable consider how a housekeeper will remove every object.

4. The lost coin is found. Is not this encouragement to every Christian, engaged in the quest for souls? That lost coin becomes of value again when it is found and restored into circulation. It can be invested and will yield eternal dividends.

5. The joy that results from the reclaiming of back-sliders is forcibly illustrated in each of the three parables in this chapter. Truly "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine forever and ever."

Christ rejoices. He is speaking. He "exulteth in spirit" when the seventy returned from their mission.

Heaven rejoices. "Likewise I say unto you there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

A merely contemporary Christian is only a pagan whose life is edged about with Christian idealism.—Lynn Harold Hough.

From the First

"I have found Cardui a great help to me," writes Mrs. G. W. Bennett, of Biloxi, Miss. "During change of life, I was weak, nervous and run-down. I knew I must do something or get down in bed, for I was just dragging about. When I first began to take Cardui, I could see it was helping me. By the time I had taken five bottles of Cardui, there was a great difference in my condition. I was so pleased with Cardui I wanted others to try it." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The "liquid test"

...It ENDS bowel worries
for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

MRS. A. W. TURNER

Mrs. Mary Morgan Turner was born in 1867 at Harvell's Mill, St. Helena Parish, La. Her parents were J. S. and Rebecca Morgan. She became the wife of our well known and beloved Dr. A. W. Turner in September, 1884.

For thirty years she served as mistress of the parsonage and was faithful to the many and varied duties adhering thereto. It is no small task to fill the role of a preacher's wife and at the same time properly rear a large family, but this she did, and today they are, with the exception of Ward Ella (Mrs. Seaman Mayo), who died some years ago, an upstanding group of men and women, serving well their church and community. They are: Mamie, secretary to the Shreveport City Council; Marvin, a Shreveport business man and a steward in First Church; Homer, who follows his father's line of work in New Orleans; Maude, in California; Anna Pharr and Warren, who belong to Mangum Memorial with their father. Anna Pharr is State Hi-League Counsellor and business manager of Young People's Assemblies.

For the past twenty years Mrs. Turner has been in her own happy home in Shreveport, while her husband has been engaged in prohibition work. Poor health curtailed her church activities the last ten years, and she was practically a shut-in. But as "All sorts of things and weather make up a year and a sphere," so was her life mingled with sun and shadow. While a semi-invalid, she did not spend her time repining, but found pleasure in her flowers, writing poetry, and, most of all, in her children and grandchildren.

Her back yard was her garden, where she found recreation and raised many kinds of flowers which cheered her own room when she was forced to remain in bed. At such times she composed verses dealing with daily affairs, friendship and nature. Truly she understood the language of nature and passed many hours in communion with those mystic inhabitants of the world about us, which we having eyes see not; and ears, yet hear not.

As a preacher's wife she made no bid for publicity or popularity, but was a "homebody." After all, maybe the Great Gardener felt about her as she writes about one of her flowers, chrysanthemums—

I went for a walk in my garden today
And viewed my "mums" in every direction.

They all smiled up and seemed to say,
"We know we are deep in your affection."

Said the glaring yellow one, "Look at me.
I am so big and fine and tall."

They danced and seemed so full of glee.
But I turned to the little red ones by the wall.

"You dear little red ones, you are so humble

And bright and sweet, and 'most hid away.

I'll gather you up for my living room table,

Where I can see you the livelong day."

And so the Gardner plucked our flower, but the sweet fragrance of her life lingers with us.

Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Robert M. Brown, at Mangum Memorial Church, January 28, on a beautiful afternoon. The setting sun flooded the altar where myriads of flowers testified to the love and respect in which she and her family are held. Bishop Dobbs spoke most fitting words of comfort. Others who took part were Dr. George Sexton, Dr. Dana Dawson, and Dr. John Foster. Her body was laid to rest in beautiful Forest Park cemetery.

MRS. ROBT. M. BROWN.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, in the providence of our Heavenly Father, He has seen fit to call to His Heavenly Home our beloved Brother, T. E. Holland, who passed on at his home in Pascagoula on the night of January 14, 1935.

Therefore, be it resolved: The officers, teachers and members of the Pascagoula Sunday school of which he was for a number of years the faithful and beloved superintendent hereby express their high appreciation of his sterling Christian spirit, his generous and usual first consideration of his fellow man, his always cheerful disposition and his enthusiastic devotion to every cause or enterprise that was for the betterment of human life and living.

That we greatly esteemed and valued his membership in this Sunday school and considered his fellowship, counsel and interest in the school and church of the highest order. That we deeply deplore his absence from our Sunday school and the loss we have sustained in his death. That we express to his beloved widow and children and to the sorrowing relatives our heartfelt sympathy.

We cannot say and we will not say
That he is dead—He is just away.
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,

He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you—O, you, who the wildest yearn,
For the old time step and the glad return.

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There, as the love of Here;
Think of him still as the same I say;
He is not dead—He is just away.

CORINTH DISTRICT INSTITUTES

By Rev. S. E. Ashmore

We wish to give a report of the three Christian Education Institutes held in the bounds of the Corinth District the past week.

Our good presiding elder, Brother J. D. Wroten, has divided our district into three zones. Zone one has seven charges; zone two consists of eight; and zone three contains seventeen. The pastors and delegates of the charges in zone one met in Holly Springs with Brother J. V. Bennett, pastor-host, on Tuesday, February 19. All but one charge was represented in this zone. On Wednesday, February 20, those in zone two met in Ripley with Brother W. W. Woollard, pastor-host. All eight charges of this zone were represented. Those in zone three met in Booneville, Thursday, February 21, with all seventeen charges represented except one. Brother P. E. Luter was the pastor-host.

The programs of the three institutes were about the same. Brother Wroten had brought together a fine team to guide us in the work done. Brother J. E. Stephens, our pastor at Oxford, and chairman of our Conference Board of Christian Education, brought a great message on the subject: "The Relation of Christian Education to the Home and the Church school and the part the Board of Christian Education of the Local Church has in this." Brother W. C. Newman, dean of Grenada College gave a stirring address on "The Relation of Christian Education to the Church College." Brother R. G. Lord, executive secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education, was with us and led the groups in a round-table discussion concerning the work in the local church.

Brother Wroten stated some goals of the district as follows: The Board of Christian Education organized and working in every local church: A Genuine Revival in every church: One-half of all benevolences raised by Easter Sunday: A Family Altar in every home.

The afternoons of the Institutes were given over to group meetings. Brother Lord met with the workers with children in one group; Brothers Newman and Stephens met with the workers with young people in another group, while Brother W. L. Robinson, our Conference Director of Adult Work met with all the workers in the Adult Division of the local church.

In the group meetings of the Adult workers in all three places, those present pledged themselves to try to reach the goals set forth by the presiding elder.

The Lord wonderfully blessed us in all these institutes. Much information was given and all who attended were inspired to go back to their several charges and do a better work in the local church.

We were served bountiful lunches by the good ladies in each place which were greatly enjoyed by all present.

Truly we have seen the dawn of a new day in the work of Christian Education in our district. Our presiding elder, Brother Wroten has endeared himself to preachers and laymen, and is making a great leader.

Iuka, Miss.

RESOLUTIONS

The above was passed by the Methodist Sunday school in Pascagoula on the first Sunday in February, 1935. And it was further resolved that a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate, New Orleans, and a copy to the family of the deceased.

THE COMMITTEE.

MRS. GRACE BYRD STAFFORD

February 9, 1854, Grace Aquilla Byrd was born in Holmes County, Goodman, Miss. As a lovely young girl she became the bride of Mr. James Greer of Tennessee. The young husband contracted pneumonia and died on their wedding trip. Later she married Mr. R. T. Stokes of Madison County, and at his death, she moved to Vosburg, to be near her mother and sister. Her life in Vosburg endeared her to the people of that community. Having no children of her own, she was at all times greatly interested in young people and especially in her three young nieces. Taking the two oldest to Whitworth College to be educated, and that she might be near them, she accepted the position of matron. Many college girls recall her lovingly. While there, she was married to Captain E. W. Stafford of Stafford Springs and for eight years they lived a beautiful life together. The gracious hospitality of their Godly home was ever extended to God's ambassadors. In Capt. Stafford's declining years she ministered to him with tender devotion. After her husband's death she went to live in Hattiesburg, and there allied herself with God's people, in their on-going activities. She loved her church and she loved God's people, but had great pity and compassion and ever lent a helping hand to the sinner or the needy. To her neighbors she was "Auntie," too, a dear and beloved and honored friend. How she loved them! She and her sister had a joint birthday on February 9 and they were showered by these loved friends, but the following Tuesday, pneumonia seized the frail yet gallant body and quickly gained the victory over the flesh but the gallant spirit was undaunted—death had no sting for her! She demonstrated her Christianity daily and left to us the heritage of a life well lived, ripe and ready for her great reward. Mrs. Hamblen, her sister, and many relatives and five step-children are left to mourn their loss. They "rise up and call her blessed." In this modest country home in Spottsylvania County, Virginia, Bishop Francis Asbury died, March 31, 1816. His body was first buried near this house, but in May it was removed to Eutaw Street Church in the city of Baltimore and finally it was buried in Mt. Olivet cemetery of that city.

WAR—WANT—WASTE—WHY? is the title of a new film produced by the Good Will Pictures, Inc., to help local groups to intensify their program on World Peace. It clarifies the disarmament problem, and impressively presents the economic waste of war. The picture is being distributed by the Y. M. C. A. Motion Picture Bureau at 347 Madison Ave., New York, and 19 So. LaSalle St., Chicago. Its production was made possible by a small group of women who are intensely interested in the abolition of war.

THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS, of Callendar, Ontario, have had a disgusting degree of publicity, particularly in the United States. The latest episode is the protest occasioned by the passage of an act of the provincial legislature making them the wards of the crown, to prevent their being improperly exploited. Really we see very little distinction in being exhibit A, even in the king's zoo. But legislatures have to have something to make them immortal.

JUDGE BEN LINDSEY, famous Denver Juvenile Court figure of a few years ago; herald of a new day in social thinking; and once an advocate of a loosening of the marriage bonds, has at last decided that "a good old-fashioned marriage until death us do part" is best after all. He seems to think that our grandparents were not such foes to progress as he once thought. He takes a cut at religion and education as having failed in their obligation to the family and in scientific preparation of the sexes for marriage; but the most impressive feature of his recent deliverance is the reversal of his own form on the social issues of our day.

BEER ON THE WAY OUT? Since the legislature during the last session legalized the sale of beer in Mississippi, some six or eight counties have held elections to determine whether or not the sale of suds in those counties would be allowed. Every county that has held an election thus far has overwhelmingly voted against lawful sale of beer within their confines.

Such overwhelming sentiment in these several counties leads one to suspicion that beer is on the way out in Mississippi. Legislative action during the next regular session would not be much of a surprise. Left up to the vote of the 82 counties, beer sales would probably be outlawed in the vast majority of cases right now.

AUTO RUNS WILD, KILLS TWO COWS; OCCUPANTS HURT, was a headline introduction to an Associated Press dispatch from Jackson, Miss. The story goes: "An automobile got out of control just west of the city limits tonight, ripped through 75 yards of farm fence and veered wildly into a herd of cows in a field, killing two of them and crippling a third, before it overturned injuring one of its three occupants seriously." We first thought that this rare specimen of composition was a bit of provincial humor. But the second paragraph ended: "They were taken to police headquarters where they were booked on charges of drunkenness." Then we knew that the disturbed "control" was not mechanical, and all the liquor was not in the radiator.

ALICE M. EVANS, in the London Quarterly and Holborn Review for January, points out the fact that the countries which have turned to dictatorships are those which have no background of popular government. Russia, Italy and Germany are the illustrations of her theory. Following the war there was a great wave of idealism and enthusiasm for revolutionary democracy; but when economic difficulty began to press upon them they reverted to a phase of their history. They deified the state and the social and economic factors of life, while the aesthetic and religious values were suppressed. A unified government was made into a fanatical form of religion—an idolatrous worship of the nation, in the heart of which was International peril.

A STATESMAN'S PRAYER. Following is the prayer offered by Hon. Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, at the Protestant Episcopal Convention on Evangelism, Atlantic City, last October, according to Federal Council Bulletin: Our Father in Heaven, we would know more of the mind and personality of Christ. We are living in an age of growing materialism and of weakening faith. We are forging titanic forces without spiritual foundation. We are generating fear and hatred. We are building up a civilization largely without Thee. Grant that we, members of Thy Church, may catch the vision of the need—and lead Thy Church to take a vital part in the building up of our civilization more nearly according to Thy will, as manifested in Jesus Christ. Help us to bring to the profound problems of the day a wisdom gained through knowledge of Him—and a vision caught from His presence. Help us not to fail Thee. Amen.

DAILY MURDER

On Monday, March 4, when the Advocate went to press, twenty-three persons had been killed this year in traffic accidents in the streets of New Orleans. When the paper came from the press on Thursday the number had risen to twenty-seven, according to the telltale figures on the front page of a New Orleans morning paper. In sixty-five days of this year, twenty-seven people had been killed in fatal accidents in the city, and during the Carnival, the number was more than one a day. During the Carnival period we saw more drinking and drunks than in all the eight years of our previous residence in the city. We saw three boys, apparently about fifteen years of age, walking in front of the door of a church where a dozen or more people were standing. They had a quart bottle of liquor which they were passing from one to the other, and from which they were all drinking in shameless defiance of either place or persons. We saw a young fellow at Camp and Poydras streets who was so beastly drunk that he was reeling all over the sidewalk and who had to lean against a building in order to light a cigarette. We know of instances of women who were brazenly drinking and offering drinks to others; and we have been told of many instances of disorder and misrule not chargeable to any seasonal spirit of fun-making abandon. This is all an example of the "controlled liquor" about which the politicians were talking when they mediated and planned the release of a flood of character-destroying, home-wrecking, poverty-producing, and crime-breeding rum to deluge the morals of the nation. Present indications are that traffic fatalities in the city of New Orleans will be one hundred per cent greater this year than they were last. We say again, we are against liquor, we are against the liquor business, and we are against everything that contributes to the reign of terror for which it is responsible. The situation in New Orleans is not different from that in other sections where liquor is sold.

JUDGE R. B. RICKETTS

We record with profound sorrow the death of this gifted and high-souled friend whom we had known for thirty-six years. He was unassuming and modest in bearing, sincere in his friendships and pure in life. His true worth was discovered through association. To have had him for a friend, was to find in his character new angles of beauty and strength at every turn in the cycle of life. He was a graduate of Millsaps College in both literature and law; for twenty-two years he had been United States Commissioner in Jackson, Mississippi; he was a worthy steward in the Methodist Church; and a citizen whom any city might delight to honor. But his pilgrimage of fifty-six years of honorable and unselfish service is ended. A glorious background of floral tributes gave melancholy expression to the esteem in which he was held; but the tragedy of death is not relieved by any setting of flowers, and the sobs of breaking hearts are not hushed by the language of beauty. Judge Ricketts was a man of unflinching faith in God and that is the immortal page of his modest but noble biography. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning, when we shall rejoin our friend in the fellowship eternal.

THE EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCES

The Evangelistic Conferences at Jackson, Miss., on March 19, and at Shreveport the following day were both great occasions. It is likely that more people were in attendance than have been present at such meetings in recent years; and the addresses were of a very high order. Bishop Arthur J. Moore's address on Missions was a striking and an effective presentation of a great theme. It was challenging in its disclosures and it was filled with a new note of hope because of the splendid Christian achievements daily witnessed on those frontiers of the church. All the speakers made an impassioned plea for an evangelism that shall reflect the passion, the earnestness and the effectiveness of the days in which Methodism came into being. We confidently expect that the report for 1935 will show a great number of accessions to the membership of the church, and with it a substantial revival of interest in our entire program of work. The very fact that such an immense concourse of people could be brought together from every section of the two states to spend an entire day in thinking and planning for the great task to which the whole church is committed, is at once hopeful and significant. The speakers for the two days included Bishops Dobbs, Hay and Arthur J. Moore; Doctors Shuler, Cram, Towner, and Simmons. There was not a lag in the interest from the beginning to the close.

SOWING THE WIND

A few days ago, eleven persons were arrested for picketing a New Orleans movie theater. We do not know anything about "The Man of Courage," the picture which occasioned the trouble; and we do not sympathize with self-appointed guardians of the public. This incident, however, should serve to call attention to some serious trends in American social and political life. We believe that there should be a more careful and vigorous supervision of picture production, both as to propaganda and morals, than is at present maintained. The employment of severe measures for the suppression of those who usurp police power may sometimes become necessary; but it will greatly help the moral effect of it, if the public has reason to feel that an honest effort has been made to prevent the exploitation of the people by irresponsible propagandists under the patronage and protection of the barons of Hollywood.

AS ONE ELDER TO ANOTHER

A few days ago we chanced to come upon a letter which hits off in a very happy way a situation which exists in the Methodist Church. We give the part of the letter to which we refer:

As one Elder to another, I greet you. Out from the quiet solitude of the district parsonage, I send you this message. As one who belongs nowhere and who is responsible for everything, I write this epistle.

I have about decided that people have been laboring under a false idea as to who the "Forgotten Man" is. It is not the ex-soldier, or the farmer, or even the superannuated preacher; but the Presiding Elders of the Methodist Church. I know where Moses spent that forty years in solitude. He was Presiding Elder of some district over in Midian. And you will recall that when he came back he was a changed man. He never had another fight. He never killed another man, though I am sure he wanted to. The fire of the earlier days had died out. His one-time courage was gone, and henceforth he is known as "Moses the meek."

I have made some new discoveries. I have discovered, among other things, that I have been doing work and solving problems that could have been laid on the manly shoulders of my presiding elders. I just didn't know any better, so went ahead and did the work myself. Now, after the "Windows are darkened and the grinders are few," I find that I have been doing another man's work as well as my own. I think my Elders in the past owe me a refund of some kind.

"OUR DEBTS"

By Rev. W. H. Giles

The total indebtedness against the physical property and institutions within the bounds of our three participating Annual Conferences, according to statistical exhibits, is $2,602,747. Of this amount, approximately $1,128,000 is against local church buildings and parsonages. Due to the fact that little has been done, except in a few cases, our Conferences and many of our local churches face serious crises—crises in Christian faith, leadership, liberality, and possibly common honesty!

Because of these debts, many of them staggering we admit, our General, Conference and Local Church programs are seriously and unnecessarily impaired, in degree. The retrenchment all along the line has gone on so far as to indicate a definite loss of courage on the part of many of our preachers in their capacity as spiritual leaders; and a consequent loss of courage and liberality, commensurate with ability, on the part of our people. The possible has become the impossible with too many of us with reference to "our debts." Defeatism prevails in the minds of some, where faith, honest effort, and liberality would solve their problems.

The way to cross a mountain which stands in the way of progress is to tunnel under, or find a "pass" where you can cut a highway over it. It takes faith, energy, liberality to do either. God used His servant Moses to lead the Children of Israel across the Red Sea. He will use our ministers and laymen to muster faith and organize for the journey over the mountain of "our debts," if we will let Him!

WHAT PRICE ISOLATION?

By Daniel A. Poling

Commenting editorially upon the defeat of the World Court adherence resolution by the United States Senate, a New York journal said: "Let us not call it defeat for the President, but victory for the United States of America." We would change that to read: "Let us not call it defeat for the President but defeat for the United States of America." Nor do we consent to the defeat as final, as more than another, though tragic, delay.

Nothing happening in world affairs within the decade has done more to make world security less secure and peace more uncertain than this latest refusal of the Senate to accept as real the relationship of this country to the rest of the world. Nothing could have happened at the moment, accompanied as it is with a new military and naval budget approaching a billion dollars, to so aggravate rising suspicions in the Far East. Nothing else could have been done or left undone quite so disturbing to Anglo-American solidarity—Anglo-American solidarity for preserving the integrity of China and the continent of Asia from yet bloodier strife.

Not that our adherence to the World Court is in itself a momentous matter. The President's message made the truth plain that with the limiting amendment we would have given little, as well as sacrificed nothing of our own sovereignty. Our vote for adherence would have been little more than a gesture, but it would have been that; and it is even the gesture that we refused.

The world rocks, the world of which the United States is a part, the Senate to the contrary; and our answer to those who wait for our co-operation to help steady it is "To hell with Europe and those other nations!" There is little comfort and no reassurance in the fact that it was a blind man who said it! Whether or not Europe pays the war debts, America must still have commerce and engage in economic and political relationships with the nations we hold in default. Without arguing the merits of that case, accepting either the negative or the affirmative of that debate, ours is a world shrunken from a circumference of twenty-five thousand miles to a quarter of a second across the widest ocean.

We are already entangled. The constant question is "How untangle and survive?"

Is "To hell with Europe !" our best or final answer to that question?

Some gentlemen who have never seen the Atlantic coast line fade into the mist and who view the Western Front only from Capitol Hill in Washington are, we know, both brilliant and sincere. But when they vote against the World Court to keep the United States out of the next war, they do so blind to the fact, if not intolerant of it, that without a World Court and without a League of Nations, we did not escape the last war. If "isolation" means peace now, why did it mean war then? If "isolation" is to bring us prosperity, good will, and the solution of our Far Eastern problem, why has it brought us the opposite in the last six troubled years?

All that we have done by denying the President's recommendation and repudiating his international leadership is to compromise his position in world affairs and measurably at least deprive ourselves of a voice in those deliberations and decisions by which others may control the destiny of human affairs, including our own fate.

The world needs the United States in its Herculean endeavor to achieve security and peace. But failure to co-operate with other nations by the methods acceptable to the great majority of the nations, including those nations with whom we have most in common, will inevitably bring upon ourselves, not the isolation we choose, but the political and economic loneliness not even a blind politician desires.

Today, as never before in our national existence and by the vote of the Senate of the United States, this country stands alone in the society of nations. "To hell with Europe and the rest of those nations," defines the issue. When that battle cry of provincialism becomes the program of any people, then is the course of that people set for destruction.

The President of the United States does not consent. The majority of the Senate of the United States do not consent. We believe the American people will refuse consent—that this government will decline to abdicate her rightful place in the world affairs. Those voices and journals that for the moment seem to prevail will be answered by a matured national judgment that will help save America by sending her to join with others in helping save the world.—Christian Herald.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Looking for the good we might see in people is a very good habit. To be sure we may be led into being deceived by wicked people yet in the long run we will do everyone more good. At least we will keep in closer touch by that method than the habit of waiting for people to prove themselves before our critical eyes. Whenever we become suspicious of people we think less of them. Suspicion is like any other emotional evil, it increases with time. But having seen the nobility and genuineness of a soul in a certain action, there is the place to begin to increase your estimate of their worth. We are great in heart in the proportion to the number of people we hold in high esteem.

Corra Harris has died and left to us the memory of the picture of the "Circuit Rider's Wife." How the people, Methodist in particular, enjoy her books! The Methodist Church has changed since she was the keeper of a parsonage. It remains now for an understanding woman to write the heart story of the circuit rider's wife today. The problems are not the same but just as testing and perhaps more so. Today she must be able to be all things to all people at all times. In this turmoil of complex church organization and demands, coupled with the swift moving social life into which she and her home are thrust, this age demands more prayer, strength of character and leadership than were ever demanded of pioneers.

How strange it is that we think we are getting ready to live! The fact is we are living right now. We do have some hope that we will be in a better condition to really live some year in the near future. Many lives are just wasted by good meaning people who pass right on without using the days they have right now. To be absorbed in a worthwhile task; that is living—to find an ideal and make it your own, that is life. To champion some cause for right; to put character in the daily task is truly living. The word of encouragement, the visit for cheer, the criticism cast off and then the day is over. All of that can be done today in the Name of the Master.

DeRIDDER READY

DeRidder is eagerly awaiting the arrival of the date of the Woman's Missionary Conference. We feel proud and honored that our city has been chosen as the meeting place for this godly and consecrated group of God's co-laborers. The entire town is co-operating in an earnest effort to make your stay here as pleasant as possible. We are looking forward to a great time. We believe that you will bring great blessings to us.

Naturally our facilities for entertainment are limited and therefore we shall only be able to furnish entertainment for those designated as delegates.

We welcome you! We pray that your stay will be profitable to you and to us.

GEO. W. POMEROY, Pastor.

gress of the Church; but mention of them should be made in connection with the Christmas Conference, because they show the breadth of vision of the men who were charged with the duty of guiding the destinies of the Methodist Church. They show, too, the courage and the faith of the preachers who were to do service in promoting righteousness, justice and salvation among the people of the new Republic.

The first important matter after the establishment of the ministry, was the promotion of the cause of education. Poor and undeveloped as the country was, education came in for serious and substantial consideration. Four years before the Christmas Conference, John Dickins had drawn up a plan for a Kingswood school in America, and it was that plan and subscription which was enlarged to a Cokesbury College, at the insistence and under the promotional leadership of Dr. Coke. Ten days before the Conference convened, Dr. Coke records that he had prevailed upon Mr. Dallam to give land for a site valued at fifty pounds currency. Later he says that he and Mr. Asbury together have secured a thousand pounds sterling, and that the sum was increased to one thousand and fifty-seven pounds and seventeen shillings, sterling, before they left the seat of the Conference. Two days after the adjournment, Dr. Coke was in Abingdon where the College was to be located, and he ordered the materials for the building. On May 30, 1785, the Bishops were again in Abingdon and they had "proper bonds drawn up" for the four acres of ground upon which the building was to stand and for which they agreed to give Mr. Dallam sixty pounds sterling. Asbury preached the sermon at the laying of the foundation, July 5, 1785; and again at the formal opening of the Institution, December 6, 1787. The house was a three-story brick structure, measuring forty feet by one hundred and eight feet, and it has been described as being the equal of any college building in America at that day. It is true that the enterprise failed, but the conception and the effort are among the most challenging incidents in the educational history of the nation. It is amazing beyond measure that fifteen thousand pioneers, poor, scattered from New York to North Carolina, and themselves uneducated, should have enterprised and carried forward such a stupendous task. It probably goes far toward explaining the substantial progress which Methodism has made in the United States.

Another interesting feature of the Christmas Conference was the launching of a program of Christian missions. The church was organized with about eighty-three preachers, and three of them were designated and set apart as foreign missionaries—Freeborn Garrettson and James O. Cromwell for Nova Scotia, and Jeremiah Lambert for Antigua in the West Indies. A public collection was taken at the Conference and thirty pounds sterling was raised; and, in Philadelphia and New York, Dr. Coke increased the amount to sixty-six pounds sterling, or $325. From Baltimore, therefore, the new church moved out under the inspiration of a great missionary impulse—an interest which has given distinction to its work and progress.

Closely akin to the missionary interest of the Methodists was the charter declaration of opposition to human slavery. Of all the amendments which the Christmas Conference made to the "Large Minutes" of the Wesleyan Conference, the most extensive and the most daring was the answer which it gave to "Question 42. What methods can we take to extirpate slavery?" The action taken did not receive unanimous consent even from the preachers, as is shown by the controversy which arose between Dr. Coke and Jesse Lee at the first Conference held after the organization of the Church. The controversy resulted in the arrest of Jesse Lee's character by Dr. Coke, but later the charges were withdrawn and Dr. Coke made apology to Lee for wounding his feelings. The membership and constituency of slaveholding sections were thoroughly aroused by the daring course championed by the Methodists; and they assumed a determined and threatening attitude toward the supporters of the new legislation. Here, as has often been the case, the spokesmen for human liberty were in advance of their day, in the courageous solution which they offered; but it reflects credit upon the heart of the leadership of the church that it should have dared to make such a pronouncement at that time.

The Conference adjourned on January 2, and the sixty preachers, who had been in attendance, saddled their horses and set out for the various fields of labor from which they had come. They returned to their posts with an objective and an inspiration which they had not had at any time before. Freeborn Garrettson and James O. Cromwell sailed for Nova Scotia about the middle of February, and there they remained until April, 1787. Jeremiah Lambert, who had been the first missionary to be appointed west of the Alleghenies, went to Antigua, but he probably remained only a little while. At the Conference in June, John Baxter was ordained an elder and was assigned to assist Lambert in Antigua. Lambert returned to Maryland on account of failing health and died in 1786. Dr. Coke occupied himself with the educational and the missionary enterprises which he promoted at the Christmas Conference; and in the controversy over the rule on slavery which he courageously championed. He went northward from Baltimore, preached and held Conferences until June 2, when he left for his return to England.

Before the end of October, 1785, Bishop Asbury had made a complete round of the church, riding from New York to South Carolina twice. After the adjournment of the Conference, he went southward to Charleston; and then returned to Green Hill's near Louisburg, North Carolina, where the first Annual Conference in the history of the new Church was held, April 20, 1785. The Conference was attended by twenty preachers; Beverly Allen, who had been elected an elder at the Christmas Conference, was ordained; and the first clash regarding the rule on slavery occurred. On May 1 the second Annual Conference was held at Mason's in Virginia; and there the rule on slavery and the petition sent to the Virginia Assembly seeking the emancipation of the slaves, caused an angry discussion. It appears that some leading laymen of Virginia were present and demanded the suspension of the rule. Asbury says that they were angry enough and some threats were made, but no bones were broken. From Colonel Mason's, the Bishops moved on to Baltimore where on June 1, the final Conference of the year was held. Le Roy Cole, an elder ordained at the Christmas Conference, was suspended; two deacons and four elders were ordained; and the rule on slavery was suspended.

Following the organization of the church, there was a marked revival of activity at the North, where the progress of the societies had been seriously crippled by war activities. In Philadelphia, New Jersey, Delaware and New York, the work prospered again. In the latter part of February, Bishop Asbury, Jesse Lee and Henry Willis entered Charleston, South Carolina, and after a stay of about two weeks, in which services were held in an abandoned Baptist church, Henry Willis, the presiding elder, was left in charge until the Conference when John Tunnell was sent as pastor. Rev. William Hammett and others later caused some dissensions, but this marked a permanent beginning of Methodism in the city. At Cheraw, South Carolina, during a journey with Asbury, Jesse Lee had a conversation with a young clerk who told him of religious conditions in New England, and he then resolved upon a mission to that section, for the realization of which he had to wait four years. The new Church had an auspicious beginning. The first quadrennium resulted in ninety-eight recruits for the ministry; more than twenty-two thousand additions to the membership; and it ended with a great revival as a climax.

The opening year of the second quadrennium was signalized by two outstanding events: the one was auspicious and constructive, but the other proved to be unwise and disastrous. These events were the introduction of Methodism into New England, and the formation of the Council. The invasion of New England began with the assignment of Jesse Lee to Stamford circuit, at the Conference of 1789. Richard Boardman had made a tour of the section in 1771; William Black, a Wesleyan preacher, in 1784; and Cornelius Cook and Freeborn Garrettson in 1787, but no permanent success followed their efforts. Jesse Lee crossed into Connecticut with a determination to win New England for the Methodists. His first sermon was preached in Norwalk, June 17, 1789; the first society was organized at Stratfield, September 6, with three devout women for members; and the second class was formed at Redding, December 28, and consisted of one male and one female member—"Mr. Aaron Sandford, and Mrs. Hawley, his wife's mother." Lee's Chapel, the first Methodist Church in New England, was built in Weston, now Easton, Connecticut, in 1790. On February 27, 1790, Jacob Brush, George Roberts and Daniel Smith arrived at Dan Town where they met Lee—they were his first reinforcements. Jesse Lee entered Boston, July 9, 1790; but he was not able to organize a society there until January 13, 1792; and the cornerstone of the first church was laid on August 28, 1795. From Boston and Lynn, he passed on into Maine where he formed the first society at Monmouth, "about the first of November, 1794;" and the first meeting-house was erected in Readfield in December of the same year. After eight years of labor, Jesse Lee left New England, and the work had grown from Stamford circuit and a lone missionary to twenty-two circuits, thirty-four preachers, and three thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine members. It is doubtful if, all things considered, there can be found a more impressive record, or an instance of a fame more justly earned than that of Jesse Lee, the first missionary to New England.

The widespread opposition to the regulation respecting slavery, especially to Dr. Coke's strong and uncompromising advocacy of the rule, was the occasion for the first rift in the good feeling of the church. There seems to be no reason for questioning the sincerity of Dr. Coke; but he failed to appreciate what had been the effect of American independence upon the thought and feeling of the people, particularly toward what might seem to be English dictation. His superior position in the church and his educational qualification made it easy and natural for him to be charged with being "overbearing." While he was in England in 1787, he made some arbitrary changes in the times and places for holding the Conferences, which rather irritated the preachers. No assignment of reason for those changes

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. J. B. Conner is meeting with encouragement and success on the Coffeeville charge. All items of work show an increase over last year.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is scheduled to dedicate the church at Hamilton, Miss., during his visitation throughout the Aberdeen District at the time of the district conference.

Robert W. Parks, a charter member and chairman of the Board of Stewards of Drew, Miss., Methodist Church, died on March 21. A fuller notice of this good man's life will be furnished later.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will preach at Tutwiler, Miss., Methodist Church, Monday, April 1, at 11 a.m. Brother Hollingsworth, the pastor, invites neighboring ministers and people to the service.

Rev. M. E. Scott of the Okalona charge has already paid one-half of his benevolent claims, and he expects to have the entire amount in cash by the district conference which meets on April 24.

The Meridian District of the Mississippi Conference chartered a train for the Conference on Evangelism held in Jackson, March 19, and two hundred and thirty people went over for the meeting.

Rev. W. H. Royal is assisting Rev. A. P. Smith in a revival at Simsboro, La. The meeting is to conclude with the second quarterly conference and a rally for the new church building which is being enterprised.

The church at Houston, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. G. H. Boyles, made a splendid report at the second quarterly conference, held recently. Interest and support go hand in hand among his people.

Evangelist Harry S. Allen has an open date in April preceding Easter. He would like for some one to use him for that period. He may be reached at Lake Charles, where he is to be for another week, assisting Rev. E. C. Gunn.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. J. H. Haughton of Prairie, Miss., church a few days ago. She was long an active worker in the church of that section. She was buried in Aberdeen, Rev. W. R. Lott and Rev. W. M. Jones officiating.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Porter, wife of Rev. James Porter, a superannuate living at Oakland, Miss., has been quite ill with pneumonia. At last report she was improving, and we trust that she may be well on the road to restoration by this time.

Mrs. Dodson, wife of Rev. K. W. Dodson, was in the accident in which Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Alford were injured. Mrs. Dodson suffered the fracture of some ribs; but we are glad to be assured that she is, along with the others, well on the way to recovery.

Rev. E. P. Craddock, Potts Camp, Miss., and a friend of many years, sends us a program of his pre-Easter services—a dramatization of the last week in the ministry of Jesus. The Passover, The Garden, The Trial, The Crucifixion, and the Burial are the subjects.

Rev. J. C. Wasson, Oakland, Miss., is making full proof of his ministry in his new charge. He had held two meetings already and in one of them he reports that the membership of the church was doubled. We appreciate his words of commendation for the Advocate.

The church building at Pontotoc suffered considerable damage in a tornado which visited that section recently. The windows and roof were damaged and the body of the building suffered; but the loss was covered by insurance—an item which uninsured churches would do well to take note of.

Mrs. J. M. Bedwell sends us a sketch of the life of Rev. D. N. Foose, a local preacher of Tchula, Miss., who was recently killed in a railroad accident.

Brother Foose was the father of Mrs. W. N. Duncan and Mrs. J. T. McCafferty, the wives of two of the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference.

It has been suggested a number of times that we publish a list of the movies with the age groups of the National Film Estimate Service review of the movies. We will try to do so, but with the distinct understanding that it is published as the estimate of that group and without any commendation on our own part.

Rev. Alvin P. Smith, Simsboro, La., suggests the creation of a circulating library for the use of undergraduates, the depository to be the Board of Education office in Alexandria. Brother Smith requests the loan of books for the course of the Third Year. We trust that persons who may be able to assist him will notify him to that effect at once.

Rev. F. W. Odum of Nebo, Miss., charges sends us notice of the death of Miss Mary Lee, at Hamburg, on March 2. She was seventy-seven years of age, a life-long Methodist; and she gave her life largely to the care of an afflicted brother. She expressed the desire that she might be spared to continue her ministry to her bed-ridden brother as long as he lived; and just nine days after her going the two were reunited on the other side of the River.

Bishop Horace M. DuBose is to begin a series of revival services at Kingston Laurel Methodist Church on Palm Sunday, according to notice sent by Rev. A. B. Barry, the pastor. Brother Barry invites the ministers adjacent to attend, and he asks an interest in the prayers of all that this may be a great revival.

Rev. R. V. Fulton sends us the notice of the death of M. A. Gaston who was 82 years old and had been a member of the Methodist Church for 52 years. He was a steward of Indian Village church for seven years and Sunday school superintendent for twenty-two years.

"Rev. H. A. Wood, our pastor at Fayette, Miss., and Rev. Chas. Assaf, home missionary for the Mississippi Conference, closed Sunday night, March 3, a two-week's revival campaign in the town of Harriston, two miles from Fayette. A vacant store building was used for assembly purposes. The meeting attracted much attention, and was well attended by the citizens of both Fayette and Harriston." So writes Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, who was present at the last service, when nine people were received into the membership of the church by profession of faith, the names to be added to the roll of Fayette Methodist Church.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

"Cannon proved that in fear and anger there is an increase of adrenalin and sugar in the blood. He and Crille and others also showed that adrenalin in the blood causes increased metabolism, increased thyroid activity, increased blood pressure, increased pulse, increased respiration, leucocytosis, increased sweating, dilation of the pupils, diversion of blood to the surface of the body and increased brain activity.

"Cannon experimentally tested the blood of all the students in one of his classes in the medical school, then announced that he would give them a stiff examination and let them worry about it for a few hours, after which he tested their blood again. In every one of them he found an increase of sugar in the blood. This indicates that the lesser forms of fear and anger, such as anxiety, worry, apprehension, irritation, annoyance, and vexation create results which are in the same in quality.

"It appears that this physical injury is largely in the nature of an acidosis, too much to be handled by the protective 'buffer action' of the blood cells—an increased hydrogen-ion concentration of the blood, and an increased alkaline reserve.

"The hypothesis that fear and anger in various degrees of intensity are an important factor predisposing to disease would help explain the influenza epidemic in 1918 after a considerable period of anxiety and hatred due to the war. It would partly account for the higher death rate among the very poor who suffer so much from anxiety, especially in such poverty-stricken countries as India and China. It would help explain the emotional diseases of childhood, the time of emotional strains due to the growth of self-consciousness and adaptations to other people and new situations. It would help explain the rise in the death rate from heart disease, hardening of the arteries, the kidney diseases in Western civilized countries where the strains of modern life are so great."—(Richard B. Greeg in "The Power of Non-Violence." Lippincott, 1934).

We thus see that there are biological and physiological injuries to those who give way to anger and who bear malice. It is written in the very law of the universe that the wages of sin is death. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil." Psalms 34:16.

The physical and moral worlds are organically related. God governs the world in righteousness. Love and forgiveness are blessings in more ways than we have dreamed of. How truly Jesus spoke when He declared, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matthew 5:5. There is cosmic support for good-will. Love is at the heart of things. And it is ingrained in the very constitution of the universe that we reap what we sow. God is not mocked.

PRAYER

Our Father, wherever we study Thy world we are impressed with the unity of this universe. Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of Thy throne. All history bears witness to this great truth. They that live by the sword perish by the sword. In our own bodies we see written Thy laws.

Jesus would give us life, and that more abundantly. When we are saved from our sins we find godliness profitable for all things, having promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come. Help us to obediently keep Thy commandments. If we love Jesus we will keep His words.

Heard A Lot About Cardui and Used It With Good Results

For over fifty years thousands of women have taken Cardui for pain, cramps and nervousness at monthly periods. A great many learned from their mothers to take Cardui, or heard of it from reports of its good use by others. . . . "I take Cardui for pains in my side and headache," writes Mrs. H. R. Hartson, of Nevada, Mo. "At times I felt like something was pressing on the top of my head. This made me very nervous. I had heard a lot about Cardui and decided to use it. I did, with good results. It certainly helped me in every-way." . . . Try Cardui in your case. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

FROM AMITE CHARGE

Dear Dr. Duren: Your paper is the Medium of Exchange among our Congregations, and I would feel very derelict if I were not to use it in letting other congregations know something of the worthy things being done by our faithful members. Their zeal and activity are both remarkable.

We followed a good pastor and found a good people. The work is moving on into broader fields and higher spheres, enriching the life with every onward step. Our people put on a Christmas Pageant that was so sublime in its conception and beautiful in its rendition that its impression will be remembered through many years to come. Get-together meetings have been held; in one case for the whole congregation; in other cases for the different groups, and at these gatherings the programs are social, literary and spiritual. The spiritual always climaxing. A Wesley Brotherhood has been organized among the younger married men of the congregation. This promises to be one of the best things of the year. Our young people are wonderful in their efficiency and in their consecration. You can count on them for full force activities. The senior Missionary Society and the Young Women's Missionary Society are both strong and active—a joy in the kingdom. A general Worker's Council, Board of Christian Education, Board of Stewards, and other division groups plan and execute together. The church auditorium was filled last Sunday afternoon, at a Union meeting of our young people, at which time Dr. Pierce Cline, of Centenary College addressed them. He was at his best. The local program and decorative schemes were well planned and effectively carried out.

The senior Missionary Society has been doing good things for the parsonage. A Detroit Jewel gas cook range and other repairs and conveniences which have been provided add comfort and pleasure to life in the parsonage.

We shall come up with our part of the Advocate subscriptions, and, with every good wish for the Advocate family, I am,

Faithfully,

H. B. HINES.

DEDICATION AT NATCHEZ

May 14, 1935, has been fixed as the date for unveiling and dedicating at Washington, Miss., six miles northeast of Natchez, a monument on the lot where once stood the little Methodist meeting house, in which was held in 1817 for thirty-seven days the constitutional convention which organized the western part of the Mississippi territory into a state, writing a constitution, and choosing the name Mississippi. The delegates were forty-seven in number, from fourteen counties and were said to have been of a high order of intelligence and integrity.

The deed for church purposes was made by Rev. Lorenzo Dow and his wife, Peggy Dow. After the congregation built about 1825 a larger house, which is the present Washington Methodist church, the original house and lot were sold to Jefferson Military College. Though the house was used by the college a number of years for literary purposes, it finally was demolished.

August 20, 1934, the trustees of the college deeded the original Lorenzo Dow lot, and twenty feet additional, to the state, for this monument purpose, making now one hundred feet square.

On two different occasions Andrew Jackson camped his men at Washington, and a reception was given in their honor at the college.—Vicksburg Evening Post.

RESOLUTIONS BY WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF OAK RIDGE, MISS.

Whereas, the Angel of Death has visited our Society and has taken away a highly appreciated, loyal, and dearly beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Eva W. Green, who was an enthusiastic and efficient member of our Missionary Society and who has left us an example of kindly service and humility in doing the Master's work; and

Whereas, the good that she did, the life that she lived among us, spurring us on when our zeal would lag, planning and working always for the best interest of our church and its institutions, will linger in our memory and inspire us to strive to attain the finer and nobler things of life; therefore, be it

Resolved, that though we grieve for the passing of such a friend, we bow to the will of the Omnipotent and Omniscient Ruler of all things, knowing that our loss is her gain; and be it further

Resolved, that the Missionary Society extend its deepest sympathy to the grief-

stricken family in their bereavement; and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be placed in the minutes of our Missionary Society, one sent to the sorrowing family, and one sent to each of the following publications: Oak Ridge Spotlight, Vicksburg Evening Post, and New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by Members of the Oak Ridge Woman's Missionary Society.

MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION IN APPEAL FOR ALCOHOL EDUCATION FUND

To Hebrew and Christian alike the Word of God unceasingly teaches responsibility for the welfare of their fellowmen. Cain's question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" is still answered by Jehovah, "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to me from the ground." Habakkuk's pronouncement of "Woe to him that giveth his neighbor drink" has not yet been repealed, nor can be, until alcohol ceases to be a habit-forming nar-

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, MARCH 31

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE EARLY CHURCH A MISSIONARY CHURCH

Instead of saying that the early church was missionary, we may say it was missions. Its sole organization was but a means to missionary ends. It was composed of the "sent." The title of its book of history "The Acts of the Apostles" may be exactly and literally translated "The Deeds of the Missionaries." The disciples scattered by persecution "went everywhere preaching the word." They had little other "church business." Every sermon was meant to convince men that the Messiah had come to them, and to persuade them to come to him. Peter, John, Mark, Luke, Philip, Barnabas and Paul were missionaries—the first and the last perhaps the greatest of all time. If any early Christians were non-missionary, they did not amount to much, and they receive small mention in history. It is so today. Peter the Jew was by birth and training, by race and prejudice, opposed to missions, especially to unclean Gentiles. Peter the Christian, constrained by his vision and compelled by the success of his visit to Cornelius, became a militant missionary. He bore the brunt of the blame on the part of the conservatives in the "Mother Church" at Jerusalem for carrying the Gospel to the Gentiles and broke down opposition there to "foreign missions."

The Athenians were not the first nor the last to worship an unknown God. The Jews had done so for centuries. In vain had the psalmist declared unto them that "the earth is the Lord's and they that dwell therein." In vain had Jonah exemplified God's love and care by preaching successfully to Nineveh. God is still greater and better than we know. His faithful followers dare not rest till knowledge of him covers the earth as the waters cover the sea.

The Great Commission is not provincial but universal. The only command to go is to go into all the world. A national or racial religion may soothe to sleep; it cannot arouse to salvation. Christianity disturbs and distresses. It hears the plaintive cry to God's "other sheep" and cannot rest till they are brought "to the one fold under the one Shepherd." Christ enthroned in the life supplies a missionary motive and impels to missionary action. Do those who oppose missions teach Christ to their neighbors? Do they live Christ in their own homes?

The early Christians were missionaries. Their means were small, their numbers few, their difficulties many, the dangers great, the governments hostile, their organization inefficient. Write the word "not" before each adjective in that sentence, and you state the situation today. Conditions are almost entirely reversed. And still—to be a Christian is to be a missionary.

YOUR PLANS FOR CHURCH SCHOOL DAY

What plans have you made for the observance of Church School Day, (formerly called Sunday School Day), in your church? The date is April 7 or as near thereto as suits your church.

THE PROGRAM. I have sent out to every superintendent of active schools a sample program and directed them to order programs from the Methodist Publishing House, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. There are two parts to the program. One part is for those who take part on the program or for the officers and teachers, and the other part is for the congregation. The program for the officers and teachers cost 25 cents per dozen and the program for the congregation cost 60 cents per hundred. You may put on the program without the congregational programs but it will be much better to use them. You will need not more than one dozen of the other program. If any church feels that it is not able to buy the programs just drop me a card and a sufficient number of the programs for the officers and teachers will be sent you free.

Since the pastor has a large place on this program I suggest that pastors on circuits put on this day in every church on the day of your regular appointment at that church during the month of April. The pastor is expected to preach a sermon on Christian Education in the local Church. As he is required to do this once during the year he might make the occasion of Church School Day the time when he does this. Take the offering and send it to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss. All of this offering goes to support the work of advancing the program of Christian Education in the local churches of our conferences. Your support will be highly appreciated.

R. G. LORD,
Executive Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

At the recent meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, held in St. Louis, eight young women were consecrated for special missionary service by Bishop John Moore. Of this number six were deaconesses who will be given their appointments at the meeting of the Board of Missions in Nashville in May. The other two will go to foreign fields, one a nurse is assigned to China, the other was appointed to do educational work in Cuba.

The worship services were led by Dr. Thomas Elva Jones, president of Fiske University, who was formerly a missionary to Japan.

At the memorial service the name of Mrs. W. F. Tillett was read. She was the wife of Dean Tillett of Vanderbilt University and was known and loved by many Louisiana women and a great friend to all Scarritt College students.

It was voted that the Week of Prayer money for 1935 will go to Ensley Community House at Birmingham and to work in Japan and Korea.

The next session of the Council will be held in Dallas, Texas. At this time the Jubilee Year of Home Mission work will be celebrated.

* * *

According to the usual custom, the deaconesses' conference was held on the day preceding the opening of the Woman's Missionary Council. Deaconess Minnie Lee Eidson who is doing rural work in the Oklahoma Conference is the president of this organization and Dea-coness Willia Duncan of Centenary Institute, Nashville, is the secretary. Many interesting talks and discussions pertaining to the work of a deaconess were given.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. H. McMullan

To the women of the Mississippi Conference—

We just want you to know what the women in the different auxiliaries of the Vicksburg District are doing—First, and foremost, we are striving to be more spiritual, and the cultivation of more spiritual life groups has been made a real issue. Then we are moving forward in membership, some have increased their pledge ten per cent in their auxiliaries, we have had a decided increase in mission and Bible study classes, and more societies are trying to do standard work and attain the Honor Roll.

We have attended meetings in two different zones, and I wish to say here, that the Officers' Training Schools put on at Satartia and at Edwards were successes from many points of view. I hope to finish my round of zone meetings before summer.

We are looking forward to Conference and know that we shall get a blessing by being there and mingling with the many spiritual and devout women, who have the leadership of the Conference in charge.

If there are any auxiliary presidents in the Vicksburg District who read this and have not as yet, despite my earnest pleas, sent me in your 1935 roster of officers and the amount of pledge you have decided upon for 1935, please do so, as soon as you read this.

Yours for greater service in Christ's name.

Sincerely,

MRS. J. W. GRIFFIS,

District Secretary.

Yazoo City, Miss.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore

Thursday morning at conference Mrs. D. H. Hall of the New Albany, will make her financial report for the year 1934. At that time pledges for 1935's work will also be made. Possibly, you will be interested in some of those figures now. Possibly, knowing these figures will stimulate your giving and your secretary will be enabled to increase her pledge.

Are you not glad that your Conference paid its pledge in 1934? Let us do it in 1935 without any outside help.

Are you proud of the item Life Memberships $825? That did not mean one for each auxiliary did it? That did not mean that we all tithed our Local Money did it?

Notice the item $482.81 in the children's work column. Is that what it might have been? In 1935 let us watch that fourth Sunday offering in our Sunday schools. We shall receive eight per cent of that for our children's department.

Greenwood District led in total finances for 1934, in gifts for the rural worker, and in undirected pledge.

Greenville District led in gifts for Week of prayer, Scarritt maintenance, and Scholarship fund.

Corinth District led in gifts for Life Memberships, Children's work, and Bible Women.

If you are not one of these leaders why not make your plans now to be on the list in 1935?

The last Bulletin tells us that the totals sent in to Mrs. Fulton for 1934 are $39,274.21 more than for the year 1933. She says: "We rejoice over this increase because it makes possible larger gifts to mission work and because it indicates continued loyalty and systematic giving on the part of the membership of the Missionary societies." We have helped to make this report possible. Let us rejoice and set our goal of one-fourth our pledge paid each quarter so that Mrs. Fulton, Council, and our workers at home and abroad will know that we do honor our Master and His cause.

In Memoriam

RESOLUTIONS RESPECTING MRS. D. W. GRIMES OF DURANT, MISS.

Whereas, it has pleased God in His wisdom to call this lovable Christian woman to the beyond, and

Whereas, in the years that she lived among us, the good that she did, especially the life that she lived will linger in our memory. Be it

Resolved, that the Missionary Society does feel a great loss in the departure of this beloved member and extends its deepest sympathy to the grief-stricken family in their bereavement; and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be placed in the minutes of our Missionary Society, one be sent to the sorrowing family and one be sent to each of the following publications: Durant News and the Christian Advocate.

MRS. JOHNIE H. TARTT,

MRS. R. C. EIMORE,

MRS. G. R. BENNETT,

Committee.

RESOLUTIONS—MRS. GRACE STAFFORD

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst by death, our dearly loved friend and co-worker in the Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. Grace Stafford; and

Whereas, we shall miss her sorely in the society she loved so well—we shall miss her faithful attendance at every stated meeting, her gentle spirit and quiet enthusiasm for the mission work; also her unfailing response to every call for service; therefore, be it

Resolved, that we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Court Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., bowing in humble submission to the Divine will, and knowing that she was prepared to meet her God in peace, desire to tender to her family our deepest sympathy in their bereavement, and to commend them to the unfailing grace and help of the God she served so long and faithfully.

Resolved, that we instruct the secretary to send a copy of these resolutions to the loved ones in her home; to the New Orleans Christian Advocate; and that a copy be kept in the minutes of our society.

"Not dead—no, no! but borne beyond the shadows

Into the full, clear light;

Forever done with mist and clod and tempest,

Where all is calm and bright.

Not even sleeping—called to glad awakening

In Heaven's endless day;

Not still and moveless—stepped from earth's rough place

To walk the King's Highway.

Not silent—just passed out of earthly hearing

To sing Heaven's sweet, new song;

Not lonely—dearly loved and loving,

Amid the white-robed throng."

MRS. W. A. BILBO,

MRS. D. S. HARMON,

MRS. I. H. C. COOK,

MRS. H. O. SIEBE.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY AND APPRECIATION

Whereas in His all-wise providence God has seen fit to remove from us our beloved friend and co-laborer, Rev. M. L. Burton, who for the past five years has served as president of our Board, and who has been a member of this Board for several quadrenniums; therefore be it Resolved, by the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, that in the death of Brother M. L. Burton, Millsaps College and the Southern Methodist Church have lost an eminent and devoted leader; the Mississippi Conference has lost an honored and godly member; and the State of Mississippi a noble and valuable citizen. Wise in counsel, safe and sane in judgment, strong in his convictions, and deeply consecrated to the Master's cause, he was faithful to every trust, and "stood four-square to all the winds that blew." It fell to his lot to preside over the deliberations of this Board and help to guide the affairs of Millsaps College and the other institutions of learning affiliated with it during the dark days of the depression—in perhaps the most critical and trying period of their history, and well did he perform the task.

He served our Mississippi Methodism with marked success in several different relations, namely: as pastor, presiding elder, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, Business Manager of Whitworth College, and later as President of the Millsaps Board of Trustees, and Business Supervisor of the Millsaps College System. Self-sacrificing in spirit, and courageous in the performance of duty, he kept his face to the future, and rendered heroic service in spite of long and serious bodily affliction. We shall greatly miss the genial presence and efficient leadership of our lamented friend and brother as the days go by.

Resolved, secondly, that we hereby tender the bereaved wife, son, and other relatives of the deceased our sincere sympathy in this great sorrow, and earnestly pray that God may be their Refuge and Strength.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be furnished the family of the deceased, and also that copies be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Jackson dailies for publication.

Signed: M. M. BLACK.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE SHOULD BE LIQUID

(Ask any doctor)

For your own comfort, and for your children's safety and future welfare, you should read this:

The bowels cannot be helped to regularity by any laxative that can't be regulated as to dose. That is why doctors use liquid laxatives.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative dose gives the right amount of help. When repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. Every druggist has it.

MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION IN APPEAL FOR ALCOHOL EDUCATION FUND

cotic which slows reactions, deadens judgment, weakens self-control, releases man's emotions and lower impulses and impairs bodily functions.

Two recent happenings in our state illustrate: On the coast a Negro was arrested for an attempted crime, another in the northeastern section killed a white man—both had been drinking. The killer was himself lynched by white men who thus defied law, and placed another blot on our state's reputation, already dyed deep with the stain of lynch murders. Every day records some crime committed by those under the influence of drink, but no record can be made of the children robbed of their rights, and men and women weakened by alcohol in their fight for clean and comfortable living, or of the sober and careful driver and his passengers who meet injury and often death, because of drinking drivers.

Can anything be done? Yes. Education on the effects of alcohol can save many lives and turn the tide of popular interest away from the use of alcoholic beverages.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has spent years in gathering material and perfecting methods for this education and today is engaged in raising the sum of $500,000 to be used for this purpose. Mississippi W. C. T. U. is now in a campaign to raise $1,000 of this sum by May 1, three-fourths of the amount to remain with us for use in the state.

In 1934 our State Legislature passed a temperance education law. If our overburdened teachers are to carry out this law, they must have reference helps and special lectures. Since we can provide these if given the help asked for, we are appealing to our friends who believe in alcohol education to help us. How much do you believe in it? Ten dollars will buy a "share" of stock in this enterprise; for those who cannot give so much, any amount will be gratefully received. Treasurers of local unions, or any of the undersigned officers will rejoice to receive your gifts.

The Pending Return of the Exiles

Prepare, O Church of Christ! A weary world
Tomorrow turns to thee; around her lie
The broken fragments of an ended age,
Prepare, prepare!

Prepare thy pulpits for her physicists,
Thy walls for her bright artists, stung to faith,
Thy choirs for her music and her songs,
Prepare, prepare!

Behold her statesmen's feet are toward thy courts,
Her soldiers hesitate, and scan thy spires,
Her pale economists turn the Gospel page,
Prepare, prepare!

The flight from God is over, fatal hour!
Lo, in the darkened skies the spread wings pause,
They wheel, the hosts divide, the flight is set,
Prepare, prepare!

The spiritual flight is set, not now
A thousand warring hosts: Satan and God
Take each their men; awake, Church Militant,
Prepare, prepare!

Prepare! For now the world must set her feet
Within thy walls: tomorrow she will come
And worship there, and look to thee for help,
Prepare, prepare!

Annul internal war, and cleanse thy ways
Of all injustice, turn from worldly pride,
So shalt thou have good room for those who come
Prepare, prepare!

—EDITH ANNE ROBERTSON.

Wallet of the Week

THE CELEBRATION OF THE TWELVE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY of the passing of the Venerable Bede will be celebrated soon. He died on Ascension Day, 735 A. D. As the Christian scholar heard from the lips of his scribe that the last sentence of his translation of John's Gospel had been completed, he said: "You speak the truth, all is completed now." He then chanted the Gloria and passed into the presence of his Lord.

DR. G. CAMPBELL MORGAN, well known in this country as a Bible teacher and preacher, recently reopened Westminster Chapel in London. For seven years, the building had been closed for renovation; and Dr. Morgan chose for his suggestive and appropriate subject, "Moses finished the work," using Exodus XI, 40; and 2 Corinthians IV, 6. He dwelt upon the fact of the constant adaptation of the house, but the abiding and unchanging message of spiritual reality.

INCIDENTS AT CONGRESSMEN'S PARTY, according to a Universal Service dispatch, described by Congressman Gassaway thus: "I shouldered in as peacemaker when a stranger planted a lulu on my mouth. I understand they had to take him to a hospital. I saw Hook coming toward me around a table. A bus boy, or a house detective, stepped in. I boot-ed him down stairs." Mr. Hook is quoted as saying: "A few of us boys were kidding around after the banquet. Judge Gassaway stumbled over a chair and fell. I ran into a doorknob. That's all there was to it." And the self-respecting public looks on in humiliation and disgust.

ANOTHER STEP TOWARD THE CENTRALIZATION of business and industry is proposed by a bill introduced in Congress prohibiting questionable insurance companies from operating in the different states. We have no question to raise as to the suppression of weak and fraudulent enterprises; but there are certain non-profit enterprises like the National Mutual Church Insurance Co., of Illinois, and some others of like character which should be excepted from the provisions of such a measure. The Company referred to insures only church properties, it has never failed to pay a claim, it is perfectly solvent, and without it many of our churches would not be insured. For thirty-six years this Company has made rates and extended terms which have been of inestimable value to struggling churches all over the country.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY will celebrate its centenary of service to the blind this month. During the last century 116,000 volumes of the Bible have been distributed among the sightless. In addition to the Braille and other raised alphabet editions of the text, the Society has introduced a slow-moving "talking book"—a phonographic reproduction which runs for a quarter of an hour. The scriptures for the blind have been published in twenty-five languages and systems.

THE CITY TEMPLE IN LONDON, the historic church of Dr. Joseph Parker, is to be reconditioned and reconstructed at a cost of something more than $50,000. The plan proposed by Dr F. W. Norwood, the present pastor, contemplates the spreading of the obligation over a period of five years, and a modernizing of the building that it may continue to serve as a spiritual force in that section of the great Metropolis.

SOME YOUNG EGYPTIAN GIRLS, according to the New Outlook of Canada, have just asked permission to attend the courses at the Moslem University. They have requested a Minister of State to instruct the rector of the University to grant their wishes. Considerable interest is being taken in the matter and the Minister's answer is eagerly waited. The action of the Egyptian women is the more noteworthy considering the fact that the feminist movement in Egypt is only fifteen years old. It was in 1919 that women first left their homes in Egypt without veils. They were mobbed in the streets. The present advance on the sanctuary of Moslem learning is as astonishing to Egyptian men as it is gratifying to enlightened minds throughout the world.

SIR ERNEST BENN, in announcing the discontinuance of The Independent, a London publication, made a very graceful statement concerning the failure of the enterprise: "But we have no regrets about the last seventeen months. We have enjoyed every moment of our time upon a task which has brought so much satisfaction to a small band of faithful Individualists. We have written another brilliant chapter in the long history of Man versus the State, or common sense against politics. We have spent our money and had our run for it. We have the satisfaction of knowing that, while we have been able to carry on, we have exercised a very considerable influence upon public affairs, and, being realists, we make our bow and pass on to the next task."

THE BENEVOLENCES

By action of the Annual Conference, a moral obligation rests upon every pastor and church to make an effort to raise at least one-half of the Benevolent apportionment by the time of the District Conference. To this official pronouncement should be added the urge of need felt throughout the various enterprises of the church. Many of our pastors are making headway toward the attainment of this goal; and this will prove a very helpful step toward making effective and popular the new financial plan of the Church. If this new plan is to be more than a gesture of ecclesiastical liberality, it will be because the pastors shall accept it as a personal responsibility. The following out of this new plan, we believe, will enable the church to rediscover its possibilities; and it will result in a measure of immediate financial relief for every great connectional interest of the denomination, and it will ease our problem even to the smallest detail of the program of the local church. We appeal for a one hundred per cent response to this recommendation of the Annual Conference.

CRIME IN WASHINGTON

The Menace of criminal activity in Washington has led to the appointment of a congressional committee of investigation, according to the Christian Century. The Capital city is said to have two and a half times as many murders in proportion to population as New York, and forty per cent more than Chicago. The gamblers are declared to have a strangle hold on the city, and grand juries are loath to indict them. Mr. Wilbur La Roe, Jr., a member of the parole board, expressed the opinion that there was collusion between the police department and the gambling and liquor interests. And, as was to be expected, the underworld is also a threat to the moral life of the national Capital. We hope that the committee headed by Representative Randolph will be honest and courageous enough to publish the facts, as they are, to the world. We do not like to speculate about such things; and we believe that truth, however bad it may be, will do much to conciliate public feeling where concealment would only arouse suspicion.

THE CHURCH AND THE PRESENT CRISIS

It is always easy to find some person or class upon whom one may lay the sins and wickedness of a particular time—a scapegoat to be driven into the wilderness while the cancerous seeds of evil continue to incubate and destroy the moral and spiritual life of the people. The one thing that the church needs to realize, however, is that neither the origin of evil nor its intensity make any difference in the responsibility of the church for promoting its cure. The fact that the Saviour of men held back nothing, but made a sacrificial offering for sin which was without exception or reservation, removes the possibility of any apology for the failure of the church in that direction. Even the enemies who milled about his cross were included in his compassionate yearning for souls. Surely we can not be true to our commission, if for any reason we shall fail to seek earnestly and unceasingly for all souls. It is not out of place for the church to plan for its evangelistic effort and to talk about its missionary enterprises; but it must not forget that profound spiritual preparation which alone can win souls. True evangelism is vastly more than organized effort and religious propaganda. It is not enough to augment our own flame with fire borrowed from another altar. Evangelism at its best is the dramatization of the passion of Christ in the soul of the church. That means that the bearer of the message is as dependent upon the Holy Spirit for power and wisdom as the sinful soul is dependent for the experience of salvation. The church should be upon its knees until it receives a degree of preparation sufficient for these days of moral chaos and spiritual destitution. When that experience is attained it will go forth to its evangelistic task in confidence and faith, and no intrenchment of evil purpose will be able to stay its victorious conquest; for the promise to the church abides, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

THE RURAL CHURCH COMMISSION

The General Conference which met in Jackson, Miss., in 1934, very wisely created the Commission on the Rural Church. Dr. J. F. Ormand, of Duke University, is the Secretary of the Commission, and is sending an important communication to all Presiding Elders and to every pastor related to the work. The Commission desires the most accurate and careful information upon which to order its proceedings. The response should be prompt and thorough in its tabulation, and all receiving the Questionnaire will serve the Commission as well as the whole Church by co-operating fully and cordially.

ONE HUNDRED PER CENT FAILURE

Under the above caption, the Religious Telescope, General Organ of the Church of the United Brethren, discusses in a forthright and forceful editorial the "unprecedented let-down in the morals of the mass of American people," because of which the "nation has been living in the realm of failure." The editor thinks that "Repeal" has been followed by a brood of "evils equally low and vicious which are striking deeper into the very heart of our civilization," than they did when they flowered under a less cultured and a less highly organized state of society. The success of the Repealists is charged to three classes: propagandists who were both selfish and devilish, allies recruited from the "moral twilight zone" of American life, and a class of unwary and deluded citizens. "Repeal" itself, the editorial holds, has been a total failure, except from the viewpoint of those who have financial interests as brewers and distillers, and from the viewpoint of the denizens of the underworld. Those who have been compelled to labor in the back-wash of the moral and social chaos of the last few years will find in these utterances much that is confirmed by their own experience. Surely the minds of those, who have it in their power to direct affairs to better and more constructive ends, need to get out of the vicious circle of the thought which has been responsible for the unwholesome trends of the last few years. Money is not the only thing that people need. It is even doubtful if the multiplied millions that have been distributed with such prodigality have left an appreciable residue of prosperity among those who are supposed to have been the chief beneficiaries of the national program; and it is not conceded by those best informed on labor conditions and employment that there has been any overwhelming increase in either the length or the volume of pay rolls. We do not even discuss religion in this connection; but we have a fixed conviction that the first step toward social peace, economic security and national progress will be the recovery of the moral equilibrium of the whole citizenship of America.

"I'M TOO BUSY"

By J. O. Emerich

Man is the only animal that makes excuses. Animals fail only when all nature has deserted them.

Birds migrate over mountains, seas, and swamps to build their nests and raise their feathered families. Beavers build dams; bees make honey. Man is not so consistently dutiful.

With man an excuse is usually an alibi for not doing what ought to be done, and many men—most of us—have a pet alibi for every responsibility.

Some men have faced infirmities and refused to see the need of being excused. Such was the case with Beethoven with his deafness; Homer with his sightless eyes; Lord Byron, the swimmer, with his club foot; and Julius Caesar with his epilepsy. But ordinary men look upon trivialities as calamities.

Particularly in Church work are we confronted with that pet alibi of a million churchmen—"I'm too busy." All of us are too busy to do anything but the things we want to do.

Fishermen find time to fish. Baseball fans take time for the games. Today some busy business men even have leisure for aviation as a hobby, and in aviation hours genuinely count. Of course, if we are not interested in our church, then we are faced with a cold and cruel fact—not an excuse. If we are concerned, then there is no excuse for an excuse.

There must be some unit for measuring church power such as the kilowatt in electricity, the cubic foot in space, and the agate line in newspaper advertising. How many millions of these units of church power are wasted annually on this simple, empty, needless alibi, "I'm too Busy?" Speculation on this thought is revealing.

What is our individual and personal contribution to this loss?

REGISTER NOW

Rev. Leon W. Sloan, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, calls our attention to the fact that many citizens have so far failed to register, and the "dead line" is approaching. The matter of registration is important, as there will be many local option elections and the failure to register now may defeat the cause of temperance.

MY METHOD OF OBTAINING SUBSCRIPTIONS

By Rev. L. D. Hamer

Dr. Lawton has asked that I write something concerning my method of obtaining Advocate subscriptions. I appreciate the honor he confers on me. With his request I comply with the hope that something I say may be of help. What has been done on my charge can be done on others.

First, may I say how I did not reach my goal? I did not use a committee. I feel that the Advocate campaign is peculiarly the opportunity of the pastor to acquaint his people with good literature. I mentioned the Advocate from the pulpit, and got one subscription directly in that manner. I wrote no letters, though I feel that they may be of service, if used as Ross Johnson used them at Hartsville, sending them attached to copies of the Advocate, and having a real follow-up system, such as he has.

Push, pep, and perseverance brought us to our goal. We have a real Advocate to push. It is worth pushing. But I had to bring it to the attention of my people. Some had previously subscribed, but had permitted their subscriptions to lapse. Others knew little or nothing about the paper. Pushing the Advocate included making it known.

The Advocate helps sell itself, but it must be given a chance. It can't unaided walk up to a man and win him. There must be some introductions made. But the Advocate helps. I shall give an illustration. One of my brethren, whom I went to for a subscription, had two or three days previously got a copy by mistake, through similarity of names. He wanted to know who was giving him the paper, and when he found out the mistake he very readily subscribed.

One tremendous help I had was Brother Sam Ledbetter. Our presiding elder has so encouraged us, so inspired us, that we just had to get out and work for him.

And it is worth a lot to have a Bishop who pushes things and pushes us. Bishop Kern has inspired and encouraged us, and made us feel that we could do something after all. God bless him! He is a real leader.

But the job isn't over. We must look after our renewals. They just won't take care of themselves. Lots of our folk will take the Advocate and want it, but will let their subscriptions lapse, if we don't go to see them about the matter.

If the renewals are not obtained, most of the good accomplished in our campaign will have been lost. We are building, not for a day, but for years to come, and we want these new subscriptions to be permanent.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Pageland, S. C.

WARNING TO THE PUBLIC

Whitmore and Smith, in an advertisement appearing elsewhere in this issue, call attention to solicitors who are taking orders for Cokesbury and other song books. The Publishing House has no connection with the solicitors, is not a party to their advertising scheme, and is not responsible for the delivery of the books ordered through them. Our preachers and people should take notice of this statement and help our agents to suppress such exploitation of our churches and people.

ARCADIA HIGH SCHOOL INAUGURATES UNIQUE FEATURE

The Arcadia High School has inaugurated an unusual plan to give instruction to all of the school children coming to that school.

The plan followed is to have the two local ministers, Rev. Mr. Caldwell, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. J. H. Bowdon, of the Methodist Church, come to the school each Wednesday morning and take twenty-five minutes of the regular chapel period to lecture on some phase of religion of a non-denominational nature. The two ministers alternate each week between the high and elementary school. This plan has been followed now for nearly two years, and it is highly successful. Many children never hear any kind of religious discussion except these. One high school boy has been called to preach since the start of these discussions. Others have become deeply interested in religious matters.

In a survey conducted some two years ago it was found that many children in high school had not heard a single sermon preached that year. The survey was made near the end of school. This alarming disclosure led the principal to inaugurate the plan outlined above.

appears in the official records of the church; but Nathaniel Bangs says they were made at the request of Mr. Wesley; and it is at least possible that they were made in furtherance of the plan to have Richard Whatcoat elevated to the Superintendency of the Methodist Church. At any rate, the Conference of that year took action which humiliated every person involved in that plan. The appointment of Whatcoat was refused; the action of the Christmas Conference declaring loyalty to Mr. Wesley was rescinded, and his name was left off the Minutes; and Dr. Coke was rebuked by the Conference for assuming to rearrange the schedule of the Conferences, and he was required to sign an agreement which practically divested him of all authority as a bishop of the Methodist Church.

A fundamental fact of Methodist polity is its connectionalism. But, in the haste of the Christmas Conference, no adequate provision was made for the direction of its course, the control of its activities, or to meet the complications of its growing work. Through this lack of constitutionally established machinery, the bishops and leaders of the church were soon brought face to face with the problem of devising some plan for regulating the affairs of the connection. If it were to be connectional, some authoritative agency of control must be established. Accordingly, the Bishops submitted to the Conferences of 1789, a plan for the Council which was intended to supply that need. Dr. Coke, who was present at the Conferences, did not favor the plan for the Council. According to the resolution adopted by the Conferences, the reason assigned for this extraordinary measure was the impracticability of calling a General Conference; its membership was to be composed of the bishops, the presiding elders or their alternates, providing that fewer than nine members should not constitute a quorum, and that in the absence of a quorum elders should be appointed to complete it. The powers were defined thus: "These shall have authority to mature everything they shall judge expedient. 1. To preserve the general union. 2. To render and preserve the external form of worship similar in all our societies through the continent: 3. To preserve the essentials of Methodist doctrines and discipline pure and uncorrupted: 4. To correct all abuses and disorders: and, lastly, they are authorized to mature everything they may see necessary for the good of the church, and for the promoting and improving our colleges and plan of education." The plan provided that the first Council should be held at Cokesbury, December 1, 1789, and should be summoned thereafter at such times and places as the bishops should judge expedient; and any action proposed must receive the unanimous consent of the body itself, and should not be binding in any district until agreed to by a majority of the Conference which is held for that district.

The objection raised against the plan was that it placed too much power in the hands of the bishop and the presiding elders who were his appointees. But the organization was so completely handicapped by its own constitution as to make it impossible. The first Council met at Cokesbury College, Thursday, December 1, 1789. Those present were: Bishop Asbury; Reuben Ellis; Edward Morris; Philip Bruce; James O'Kelly; Lemuel Green; Nelson Reed; Joseph Everett, alternate for Richard Whatcoat; John Dickins, alternate for Henry Willis; James O'Cromwell and Freeborn Garrettson. Dr. Coke was in England and only one presiding elder was absent and unrepresented—John Tunnell who was dying with consumption. The session sat for six days; adopted some resolutions relating to union, and for the raising of a fund to care for the poor preachers on the frontiers; and Asbury raised twenty-eight pounds for suffering preachers in the West.

Within the Council, there seems to have been complete satisfaction and unity of sentiment regarding the plan. The only voice raised against it came from far-away New England, and was that of Jesse Lee. Even James O'Kelly signed the reply which rather threatened Lee for his "objections to the very fundamentals of Methodism." Some historians are inclined to give O'Kelly credit for the assembling of the first General Conference; but it was Lee who made the first protest against the Council, and who urged also the calling of a General Conference; and it was the insistence of Dr. Coke which finally achieved it. Immediately following adjournment of the Council, O'Kelly developed a violent antipathy toward it, and he became its most vigorous antagonist; but in this he completely reversed his form.

During the year which followed the first session of the Council, it was the subject of much adverse criticism, both in the Conferences and in private conversation. Within a month after its adjournment, Asbury received a threatening letter from James O'Kelly. At the Conference held in Charleston, South Carolina, February 15, it was debated and the body took action to limit its pronouncements on canon changes to mere "advice." Asbury says that the Virginia Conference, under the influence of the presiding elders, "turned it out of doors." Notwithstanding the opposition, the second Council met at the home of Philip Rogers in Baltimore, December 1, 1790; but this time only ten of the twenty presiding elders responded to the call. The Council decided that it had full authority to manage the temporal concerns of the church; and it advised a loan of one thousand pounds, payable in two years, for Cokesbury College; but declined sending out any recommendations. The session lasted nine days.

A third meeting was appointed for Baltimore, December 1, 1792. But the resistance of Jesse Lee, the agitations of James O'Kelly, and the opposition of Dr.

himself on the canvas of Methodist history is that of inordinate ambition and unrealized aspirations.

Asbury, as was his habit, recited but few details of the controversy, and Dr. Coke may have over-estimated the opposition; but there can be no doubt that things had reached a serious crisis in the affairs of the church. Dr. Coke wrote, concerning this period, to the General Conference of 1808: "I had, indeed, with great labor and fatigue, . . . prevailed on James O'Kelly and the thirty-six traveling preachers who had withdrawn with him from all connection with Bishop Asbury, to submit to the decision of a General Conference." One can

Coke were too great to be overcome. Asbury showed a determination to perpetuate his creature, and the relation between himself and Dr. Coke, on account of the Council, became quite strained—they even chose to be entertained at separate places during the Conference at Petersburg, Virginia, April 20, 1791. At that Conference, the preachers and people were much exercised over it, and Asbury's entry is: "The affair of the Council was suspended until a General Conference." Thus the Council, as an institution for the control of the Methodist Church, died. Nathan Bangs described it as an ephemeral institution, and so it was in years; but its baleful influence as a cause of dissension and strife continued through two decades. James O'Kelly made violent attacks upon the autocracy and even the integrity of Asbury; but the portrait which he drew of scarcely refuse to believe that this statement represented the true situation; for it was written to the very preachers who were involved, one of them William McKendree; and it is borne out by the course of events following the first General Conference. In the letter just referred to, Dr. Coke says that at the first General Conference: "I proposed and obtained that great blessing to the American connection, a permanency for General Conferences, which were to be held at stated times." Asbury's Journal indicates that he was never in worse mood than at this time; and Dr. Coke was evidently much concerned for the future of the church. Two days after the adjournment of the Virginia Conference, at which it was agreed to suspend the Council, Dr. Coke was in Richmond, and it was Her Chinese pupils, whom she had taught during these fifty years, had bought a lot and built and completely furnished for Miss Atkinson a two-story house in the city of Soochow, and when November 17 rolled around—the date marked the fiftieth anniversary of her landing in China—crowds of Chinese friend, fifteen hundred or more in number, thronged the house, to pay their respects to this splendid missionary who had given a lifetime of service to China.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. H. McMullan

Mrs. R. E. Johnson, district secretary of Seashore District, says: "The Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, has a Woman's Missionary Auxiliary in every charge with the exception of Americus and Oloh, while some of the other charges have several auxiliaries or circles, making a total of forty of these organizations in the district. The young matrons realizing the importance of the woman's work, are rallying to this responsibility. Gulfport First Church, Biloxi Main Street, Epworth, Lumberton, Poplarville, Picayune, Moss Point, have young women's circles and several circles have been organized this quarter. Last year, four life members were added and several auxiliaries are now accumulating funds for a like purpose this year, having realized the personal joy of conferring this honor on a beloved member. The number of subscribers to the World Outlook has far exceeded the quota assigned the district which is a hopeful indication that our women are realizing the importance of keeping in touch with our work. We are confronted with the question, 'Have we been true to the Maker of all mankind,' when we have allowed our gifts to diminish as indicated in our financial reports? When the Woman's Missionary Council discontinued dues, it was with confidence in our loyalty to the church, that each woman would at least pay the $3.00 we had given for so many years, but an experience of three years, shows a distressing falling off, even among auxiliaries who have not suffered from the depression, as have some of the auxiliaries who still feel the financial burdens. Gifts to our auxiliaries should be a happy privilege and not a sacrifice. The woman's work is dependent on the women in the home and our efforts should not slacken until every church member is a member of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary and our gifts are commensurate with the money we spend for personal gifts and pleasures."

"Duties of Christian Women as Citizens" and "Are Missions Worth While" were the leading topics of the program. A playlet, "Value of the World Outlook" was given and beautiful music, both piano and vocal was rendered.

Special emphasis was placed on the announcement of a joint meeting of the young people of the Mobile and Seashore districts to be held at Moss Point, March 30. A vote of thanks was extended to the Lucedale auxiliary for its hospitality and an invitation from Escatawpa was accepted for the place of next meeting. Mrs. W. M. If you are newly elected to the office of Christian Social Relations superintendent you may like some suggestion:

First: You must see that your name and address are sent to Mrs. Lester Greer, Potts Camp.

Second: You must secure a copy of the hand book for superintendents and committees of C. S. R.

Third: You must read the first and second quarterly letters sent with the regular literature to your auxiliary. Ask whoever receives the literature to turn these letters over to you.

Fourth: Then you must report on these letters to your auxiliary. At each meeting of your auxiliary have something interesting and terse to bring before your auxiliary. Endeavor to make the auxiliary feel how very important this C. S. R. department is.

Fifth. Secure a committee to help plan the work you select from the many suggestions in both hand book and quarterly letter.

Sixth: Attend executive committee meetings and send off report the first of January, April, July and October.

Seventh: Make a careful preparation for the presentation of topics allotted you in the April and May year Book.

Eighth: Co-operate with every agency engaged in social welfare. Encourage federation for Christian Social Relations activities.

Ninth: Check your activities by the Council Standard for Efficiency in Christian Social Relations.

FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

(An expression of gratitude)

As we look on the restless world about us we realize more and more the need of a firmer faith in God to lead us safely in preserving the faith of our fathers. In all probability theirs was a more consecrated church than is ours today.

We behold with amazement the rapid transition in every phase of human life, economic, social and religious. The "land mark" Christians of half a century ago are few and far between. Yet the resoluteness of their faith is indeed an inspiration to us upon whose shoulders their mantle is cast.

Infrequently, in the passing of one of our saints of the church we go to great length of laudation, and they deserve it all and more; but how much better it would be if we would try more to brighten their pathway toward the setting sun by telling them how much we love and appreciate their long years of tireless effort and their great consecration.

Following is a brief account of two such characters: Brother L. P. Bailey and his lovely companion, of historic old Green Leaf Church, in Tate County, North Mississippi Conference. They are 80 years of age, and still active in the church. Both were converted and united with the church 67 years ago. For 57 years they have been together. When they married there was erected a family altar, and as their children came along they were dedicated to God in babyhood. While Mother Bailey kept her home and reared the children, Brother Bailey tended his farm and looked after the business of the Great King. As a reward for their faithfulness, the Lord called two of their noble sons into the ministry, both serving in the North Mississippi Conference at present. "Like father, like son." These sons show the fineness of the Christian training of their parents.

Brother Bailey has been on the board of stewards 47 years. He has been superintendent of Sunday school for more than 40 years, and is still serving in that capacity. They have taken the Advocate continuously for 45 years. He has all the Conference Minutes dating back probably 40 years.

Brethren, we owe a great deal to these dear "old fashioned" saints, who still drive to the church in their buggy to help out in the duties there. Nearly 70 years of unbroken love and faith toward their Redeemer, they bestow upon us a priceless heritage. Let us cheer them on their way, express to them our genuine love and devotion for their inspiration to us. Those of their kind are scarce. May the Lord spare them for many more years of fruitfulness in His Kingdom.

LESTER M. JAMES.

SERVICE

Near my desk in my office hangs a card upon which is written this poem:

BUT ONCE

I shall pass through this world
But once.
Any good therefore that I can do,
Or any kindness that I can show
To any human being,
Let me do it now. Let me not defer
Or neglect it—for I shall not pass
This way again.

This little poem keeps me orientated, for every time I read it, there comes the reminder that our greatest duty here is service, doing what we can daily for our fellow men. In the Christian life service naturally follows the growth in reverence for God; for as the spiritual life develops in each of us, our ability to serve is increased and thereby we are able to lead others into a deeper appreciation of the Christian life.

The Church today needs the best service that its members can offer. The financial crisis that now prevails has had a most depressing effect upon all the activities of the Church. There was too much prosperity during the boom days. Vast sums of money came easily to the congregations and the idea that everything must be done on a grand scale became fixed in the minds of too many members of our churches. When the hard times came there was first consternation, then despair and finally apathy. But all of our worries seem now to be lightening and many of the churches are once more working with their old spiritual vigor. Today there seems to be a great spiritual revival throughout this land. Men everywhere are feeling the need of God. They realize that religion and morality go hand in hand and without morality character does not develop, and when character is lacking honesty is lacking, and without honesty all of our industrial activities suffer and crime flourishes.

What a fine opportunity for the men in our churches today to show the world the value of the Christian life and its influence for good in the affairs of life. If civilization needs religion as a foundation for morality, morality as a foundation for honesty, honesty as a foundation for commercial relations, then our country should have religion and it should be given her by the men and women who today profess to be Christians. This is a challenge that should be met by the churches today.

Probably the best opportunity to accomplish this aim is with the young people of the various churches. Training its successors is probably the greatest responsibility that any generation feels. If there is to be progress then the generation that succeeds this one must be better trained, otherwise we can hope for no improvement. Young people are naturally religious and grow cold spiritually as they pass the adolescent age largely because their elders in the church have failed to show them the real value of the Christian life. Once they are inducted into the active charge of the church their interest grows as they assume the duties of church management. Our problem, then, is to keep these young people active on worthwhile work as they grow into useful active members. That is our job in service today. The future of the church depends upon our success. WARD ANDERSON,

MILESTONES OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By Rev. H. M. McCormack, Jr., District Reporter

For over 6,000 years men pulled their shirts on over their heads until someone happened to think how much easier it would be to open them all the way down the front. Who but our "elder" would have thought of a combination group quarterly conference and picnic? He is modern enough to believe that one can be religious even on a picnic.

The idea is this: Several charges will group their third quarterly conferences—having them at the same time and in the same place—the presiding elder will preside, and there will be a secretary for each charge. When the questions are called, each secretary will record his respective charge's answer.

But the most impressive part of the whole thing is that great meeting of the officials of three or four charges meeting together. And they will be there. Officials will actually attend such a quarterly conference. Proof: They have done it before for this same "elder." Then, too, it has received a ready response among them this year.

What an inspiration for good reports! Can you imagine an official allowing his charge to make an incredible report in a meeting like this? These Delta folks are not given to making "shabby" reports, anyway. They have a wholesome pride in making their churches do things in a big way.

The Greenwood District had over twenty of its twenty-five pastors at the state-

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, APRIL 7.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD

The glory of God the Creator is declared by the order and beauty of the heavens as well as by the utility and fructivity of the earth. The glory of God the Father is implicit in the making of man in his image and explicitly manifest in his Son, Jesus Christ. Dimly foreshadowed in the Old Testament, his fatherhood becomes the radiantly basic theme of the New Testament. From the idea of sonship by race we come to the ideal of potential universal sonship through kinship with Jesus. Not the strain of Abraham but the spirit of the Christ makes men eligible to the family of God.

In Jesus the word "God" is made flesh. We need no other definition, as we need no dictionary definition for the word "mother." The holiness of God is manifest in the moral perfection of Jesus; the power of God in his work; the love of God in his compassionate ministry to the broken and suffering; the mind of God in all his attitudes and activities. In him we find identity of nature and purpose. Men noted the likeness and asked about God. No request could be more natural than Philip's "show us the Father." Jesus was pained that it had been so long in finding utterance. Slow of understanding, Philip had enjoyed the blessed shade of the trees without seeing the forest. It had not dawned upon him that God could be so near, so gracious, so companionable. Those who had eyes to see and ears to hear had seen and heard God as Jesus spoke God's words and wrought God's works. If we cannot find God in Jesus it is vain to "look for another," or to go elsewhere for the "words of eternal life." Humanity may fairly hope to produce somewhere sometime a greater than Paul, but one greater than Jesus—never!

The disciples were heartbroken that just when they understood the significance of Jesus he declared that he "must" leave them. His going released him from the bondage of the local so that he might be everywhere present with his own. It released the disciples—learners—to become teachers. Henceforth the command is not "come, follow me," but "go, teach." It is somewhat as when, the college course completed, the teacher dismisses the last class and departs. "Commencement" is celebrated, and the "greater works" begin. When this does not follow, the training is not worth its cost. These disciples richly vindicated the faith and forecast of their Teacher whose own preaching never produced a Pentecost, nor brought such numbers into sonship as the message of Peter at the house of Cornelius. In truth, no great teacher ever goes away. Though dead these thirty years, our own great teachers are with us still. Much more is Jesus with his own. Absent in the flesh, he abides in spiritual reality, enthroned in the hearts of the faithful. He was not to leave them orphans. Having wrought out the fundamental facts and principles of the Kingdom, he sent the Comforter, the Advocate, to abide forever and make all necessary interpretation and application. He is the supreme court of the Sermon on the Mount.

Christianity reaches its climax in its teaching concerning the divine fatherhood, but there is no fatherhood without sonship and no sonship without obedience. Jesus gives promise of the coming Spirit, of answered prayer, or the Father's love, of his abiding presence, of comfort, peace, knowledge, all on one condition three times repeated in the brief lesson text—"that ye keep my commandment." Obedience, not magic power nor emotional ecstasy, is the test of sonship. Sonship is revealing—the Father is seen in his children. Sonship is sharing—the true son is not exclusive; he seeks others. Sonship is service. Every life is suggestive. One suggests scholarship, one wealth, one pleasure, another holiness. When men saw Jesus they thought of God. What do they think when they see us?

They drive them to hell like sheep. And what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men? Who, then, would envy their large estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them. The curse of God is in their gardens, their groves—a fire that burns to the nethermost hell. Blood, blood is there! The foundation, the floors, walls, the roof, are stained with blood." ### MEDITATION

John 20:21: As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

Jesus sustained a very unique relationship to the Father. We also note that He identified Himself with the disciples.

Consider what is involved in this commission of Jesus.

The disciples are invited into partnership in world redemption. The believers have been taken into confidence. They are no more servants, but friends, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth. He shared many things with the disciples.

tastes good, acts quickly and safely

Every Christian is commissioned. This is a task that calls for universal enlistment. It is a call to the colors.

There is a vital connection between radiant Christianity and Christian service. Pentecost came when the disciples faced the Pentecostal task. The Christians gathered in the upper room and tarried in prayer because they were facing a challenging task in carrying out the Great Commission. They chose Matthias as the successor of Judas, for they were organizing to publish the glad tidings.

In this passage we note that when Jesus revealed himself to the disciples "He showed unto them His hands and His side. Then were the disciples glad they saw the Lord." Jesus spoke words of cheer to them. "He saith unto them, Peace be unto you." What comfort to those distressed hearts. Jesus "breathed on them, and saith unto them, 'Receive ye the Holy Ghost!'" They were spiritually empowered.

How busy were the early Christians in carrying out this commission? Paul was not swerved from this task even by imprisonment and earthquake. Amid the dust and wreckage of the earthquake which set him free we hear him saying to a penitent jailer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Tossing in the fierce Euroclydon that swooped down upon his little ship in the Mediterranean, or making a fire in the chill of the island on which the boat was finally wrecked, we hear him leading men to Christ. No wonder he could write of the glorious life that is hid with Christ in God. No wonder he knew the power of a conscious filial relationship to God. No wonder he experienced fellowship with the living Christ.

PRAYER

Gracious Father, many Christians are beholding the scarred hands and wounded side of Jesus. May we also hear Him speak the message of peace. May we hear His commission to us. May He breathe upon us and may we receive the Holy Ghost, that we may passionately plead with men to turn from dead works to serve the living God. May we be clothed with a measure of His authority. "As the Father hath sent me, even so I send you," said Jesus. In His name we offer our prayer.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

In Memoriam

REV. D. N. FOOSE

Rev. D. N. Foese, who met such a tragic death, at the railroad crossing, near his home in Tchula, Sunday afternoon, was born in Vicksburg, December 24, 1846, the son of Peter Cooper Foese, of Pennsylvania and Caroline Moser Foese, of Alsace Lorraine. When he was one year old they moved to Lexington, where he resided until 1886.

He entered the Confederate army, though a mere lad, the last year of the war and made an enviable record. He attended national, state and county reunions where he enjoyed the fellowship of his comrades and filled some important offices.

He was a valued member of the Methodist ministry, with eight years of active service in his earlier days, after completing his ministerial studies at the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala. Since then he has held local connections with the North Mississippi Conference and deemed it a great joy to serve his fellowman. He has been superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school for forty years and as a token of love and appreciation of his services, so freely given, a beautiful memorial window was presented and dedicated to him, by the Sunday school, soon after the Methodist Church was completed.

He married Miss Hettie Jackson, daughter of John Anderson Jackson and Susan Zellicoffer Jackson, of Kosciusko, and to this union were born eight children. Mrs. W. N. Duncan, of Tunica; Mrs. Joe Brewer, of Kosciusko; Mrs. J. T. McCafferty, of Lexington, and S. J. Foese, of Tchula. Mrs. Bessie Whitehead passed away in 1926 and three children, Maud Adelle, Dan N. Jr., and Floyd Zellicoffer, died in early youth.

Mr. Foese has been connected with the hardware business for years. While living in Lexington the firm was known as Foese and Hooper. He moved to Kosciusko in 1886 and resided there until 1898, when he moved to Tchula. During all these years, he has taken an active interest in church, social and civic affairs, holding important places and being associated with his son, S. J. Foese, in the hardware business in Tchula.

His death removes the last charter member of the Tchula Masonic lodge.

Surviving are his children, Mrs. W. N. Duncan, of Tunica; Mrs. Joe Brewer, of Kosciusko; Mrs. J. T. McCafferty, of Lexington; S. J. Foese, of Tchula, and a brother, Charlie Foese, of Louisiana. Also fifteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Two of his sons-in-law, Revs. W. N. Duncan and J. T. McCafferty, occupy prominent places in the North Mississippi Conference and were present at the funeral, which was held at the Methodist Church, Monday afternoon. Rev. J. J. Baird local pastor had charge, assisted by Dr. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Greenwood District. Dr. J. W. Ward, of Greenville offered prayer and a short eulogy was paid by a comrade in arms, Gen A. F. Howell, of Durant. Other ministers in attendance were: Rev. A. R. Beasley, of Minter City; Rev. J. M. Bradley, of Greenwood, Rev. W. B. Baker, of Durant; Rev. A. J. Henry, of Sunflower and several laymen. The pall bearers were: Carl Fincher, Dudley Morgan, Wilbur Marshall, Guy Sharpe, Frank Gwin and Courtney Perry. Interment was held in Kosciusko, by the side of his wife, who passed away in 1903. Truly a good man is gone.

As a mark of respect the city school was dismissed at noon and the business houses were closed during the hour of funeral services.

MRS. J. M. BEDWELL.

A TRIBUTE

Our Heavenly Father called to her eternal home Feb. 27, the sweet spirit of Mrs. Velma Fulton. She was born in 1891. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Miller. She was married in 1913 to Mr. Buford Fulton; to this union were born eight children, six still living. She joined the Methodist Church in early girlhood, remaining a consistent member these many years of mortal life allotted her.

She was a woman of winning personality, to know her was to love her. She was a devoted mother, her Christian life a blessing to her household, and to those with whom she was associated. During the long days and months of suffering her deep faith in the abiding presence of her Lord, enabled her to endure excruciating pain, gave strength to greet friends and loved ones with smiles and tender words.

She was ever a faithful member of the Woman's Missionary Society, inspiring and enriching other lives because of her earnest and loyal service. We shall miss her as we work together, trying to fulfill the last command, "Go tell the glad tidings to others." We extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy in their bereavement—we, too, sorrow with them. We believe she has entered into a realm of bliss, where there is no more pain, sorrow, tears, no more death—only "Life Eternal!"

"There is no death—what seems so is transition;

This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portals we call death.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
We bear our best loved things away,
And then we call them 'dead.'

And when he sees a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light.
To dwell in Paradise.

Born into that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them, the same.
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread!
For all the boundless Universe
Is life—there is no death!"

A GOOD PRE-EASTER BOOK

By J. L. Decell

Weeks immediately preceding Easter are of great spiritual significance to all Christians. Passion Week holds particular values for our study and meditation.

Dr. Edward J. Rees, B.D., Boston University, now pastor at Washington, N. C., has written an excellent study on "Christ Speaks from Calvary." The Voice that speaks through these ten chapters is no uncertain or confused voice. Christ on the Cross has a message for the individual, and the social, moral and spiritual life of our day.

There are ten helpful chapters in the book. We start with "Christendom Looks Toward Calvary," and "Palm Branches or Crossbeams;" and these are followed by seven chapters on "The Seven Words of the Crucified One," which were spoken "above the clouds of horrors and sorrows" of the destiny-laden hours of His sufferings on the Cross. In the last chapter we are left with a Reigning and Immortal Christ.

The Cross of Christ radiates currents of life which course the centuries. Therefore, apt illustrations may be found within the present which enforce the meaning of His Words, Will and Ways. Dr. Rees makes his reader realize that the Cross of Christ is a vital force in the life stream of the world today by his interesting interpretations, and appropriate illustrations from current life.

Perhaps the fifth chapter on "The Soul of Sonship and Mirror of Motherhood" touches a tender chord of Calvary not so generally emphasized. Young people who contemplate marriage, new home makers, and others, will do well to study this "Voice."

The book is a worthy devotional study of a great theme. Its reading will bring inspiration and guidance for life and an enlightened understanding of "The Man of Sorrows" and "The Lord of Life." Its price being only $1 places it within reach of clerical and lay hearts who wish to listen anew to "The Voice of Christ Speaking from Calvary." Order from Whitmore and Smith, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

wide evangelistic rally held in Jackson recently. There was also a large representation from the laity of the district. One of the secrets of the success of this great rally is the popularity of our beloved bishop. No bishop has ever more completely won the whole-hearted esteem and co-operation of our people up here than has Bishop Dobbs. He is every inch a gentleman, and, mark you, there are lots of inches of him.

Brother W. J. Dawson, our pastor at Itta Bena, is in the midst of a most successful year. He is having unusually large audiences at both morning and evening services. Itta Bena is one of our choicest small stations, and this prophet, recently from South Mississippi, is filling it with honor.

The charges of the Greenwood District are making an effort to raise half of their benevolences by Easter. Several have already made great headway, with Brother S. A. Brown, of Drew, very probably in the lead. Brother Brown has a fine knack for collecting the claims made upon his church. This is due, at least in part, to the esteem in which he is always held by his people. We shall endeavor to give a list of the charges succeeding in their benevolence campaigns in our next report.

No finer four years' work has been done in the district than that of the last quadrennium at Inverness and Isola, where Brother W. I. Henley is pastor. Brother Henley is one of our very strongest and most popular young pastors, and we are hoping that he remains in our district next year. He would do credit to any pulpit in the Conference.

SIR JOHN SIMON WHO HOLDS OFFICE in the present English Government, said recently that the cause of the rearmament of the world is due to an impaired international confidence, and that it is absolutely necessary to increase the sense of security among the nations. He said: "I am under no illusion as to the difficulties of our task (his mission to Berlin), but any measure of success would be not only a contribution to the appeasement of Europe, but would be the opening up of renewed possibilities for that arms agreement for which we have striven so long."

IS HIS HAT IN THE RING? is the caption of a news comment in Zion's Herald for March 27. The comment says, in substance, that Mr. Hoover's persistent emphasis upon individualism has made him utterly oblivious of the fact that we have arrived at a collective type of society whether we like it or not. The concluding statements are: "But Mr. Hoover is a man of yesterday. However much of a gentleman he may be, or however skillful in engineering, he lacks the capacity for progressive thinking in economics. No greater calamity could befall the Republican Party than to nominate him again for the position of chief executive of the nation."

THE TENANT FARMERS of Arkansas have recently found their way into the headlines, on account of troubles growing out of an organization of the share-croppers for resisting, as it is said, exploitation by plantation owners. A Federal Government official is quoted as making the statement: "Conditions among the share-croppers are the worst I have seen anywhere in the world, except in certain parts of Russia." It is probable that much that is being said is untrue, and some of the moves on both sides may be unwise; but it is certainly a time when sober thinking and a just and discriminating attitude towards the whole problem can render real service to society where these issues have been raised.

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, according to the Scottish Rite News Bureau, is bringing various advertisers to book for false and fraudulent statements tending to deceive buyers of their products. It appears that when complaints are made, the Commission investigates the case and, if the charges are sustained, a "Cease and Desist" order is issued to the Company so charged. It is likely that such activity might be made embarrassing and even oppressive, particularly if the complaint originates with a competitor; but we believe that the effect of such censorship honestly exercised should be wholesome and helpful in many directions. We do not believe that the use of the public prints, the radio, or the mails should be permitted to those who wilfully undertake to mislead the people.

THE CONVICTION OF DOCTOR MACHEN by the Brunswick Presbytery has been announced in press dispatches. While we have no ecclesiastical responsibility for either Dr. Machen or for the verdict, we do have, we trust, a Christian interest in the question of justice for a fellow minister and a sister church. We have not the information for a constructive criticism; but we do feel regret that the question of the Christian experience and loyalty of the great missionary enterprise of the church should be subject of public discussion, even though it be upon a basis which is not true. The conviction of Dr. Machen, as we understand it, is upon the question of his insubordination to his Presbytery; and the missionary is only an incident in the trouble.

THE CASE OF THE SCOTTSBORO, ALA., NEGROES has been sent back for a new trial again. This is the second time that the Supreme Court of the United States interposed and both times on account of the violation of the Constitution in arbitrarily and systematically excluding Negroes from jury service. This case has achieved a nation-wide interest as a racial contest, and quite a little feeling North and South has been aroused. It seems that whatever may have been the facts in the case, that they have been overlaid by the controversy and its publicity. We do not pretend to counsel anyone as to the facts of the case, for we do not know them; but it seems to us that it is likely that feeling has reached such a stage on account of the agitation, that it would be wise to try it next time on a change of venue—move it to some place where it can be tried on the merits of whatever the facts are.

SACRED FIRE OF METHODISM

In Doctor Scott Lidgett's impassioned plea for an adequate response to the effort to secure the permanence of Wesley's Chapel in London, he made a statement which is not more applicable to that historic shrine than it is to the whole Methodist movement throughout the world. He said: "A temple like this means a perpetual hearth upon which the sacred fire glows. Methodism is nothing unless it is aglow, not only with fervor, but with the unalterable certainties of the Gospel." In the last sentence of this statement, one may find the explanation of the rise of the Wesleyan movement; the interpretation of Methodist progress; and the guarantee of Methodism's future. The movement inaugurated by Mr. Wesley has undergone many modifications in the course of these two centuries of its existence. Many of these changes have resulted from an almost unbelievable economic and social progress, by which the plane of thought and action throughout the entire world has been raised. Some may think that the Church has clung to a primitive type of revivalism to the defeat of its own popularity and power. But Methodism is not just another form of ecclesiastical administration, or body of doctrinal teachings. It has a distinctive message and it occupies a unique place among the ministries of the Christian Church. Mr. Wesley described it as a "strangely warmed" heart, and the repetition of that experience in others millions of times since, has brought the church its prestige, its power and its outlook. The glowing heart is a chapter of Methodist history which has been translated into the experience and must be written into the biography of every true follower of John Wesley. It may be old-fashioned and primitive, but it has not lost its power to help the soul in its struggle toward God. Out of that fact, has been developed the certainties which have made us a great people; and without the glowing heart, the radiance of our crown will soon disappear. As followers of Wesley, let us see to it that the sacred fire is not extinguished on our Methodist altars.

STABILIZING THE ADVOCATE

One-third of the Conference year has gone, and we are now at the period which will determine the success or the failure of the Advocate cause for this year. In the next few weeks, many pastors will be presenting the appeal for the Advocate; and they will need to know the facts. At the present moment, the situation is as follows: Fifty charges and one individual have pledged a total, through their budgets and otherwise, of $1,739.50. Of that sum, $594.50 has been paid already. One hundred and two subscriptions were received from pastors from December 1 to 5, at one dollar each. Since December 5th, 158 subscriptions at $1.50 have been received. That gives us a financial total of $2,078.50, on which we have received $933.50 in cash.

We are doing our best to make the Advocate serve every interest of the church, and we are sparing no effort to lift it above a commonplace rank in its quality. We are confidently expecting a great response in behalf of the Advocate; that every dollar of indebtedness will be wiped out; and that the current expenses for the year will be met in full. To that end, we feel sure that we are going to have the absolute loyalty and support of every pastor in our three Conferences: It is often said that "comparisons are odious" and it may be so, but they are also informing and inspirational. The Southern Christian Advocate, organ of the South Carolina Conferences, is in the midst of a campaign for approximately 9,000 subscribers. The figures of March 22, showed that five of the twelve Districts had already secured their allotments, and a total of 8,444 subscribers had been sent in from the two Conferences. South Carolina has 151,183 Methodists, while there are 210,059 Methodists in our constituency, and the price of the two papers is the same. A similar campaign is being conducted for the North Carolina organ, with the slogan, "Every Board of Stewards 100 per cent Subscribers to the Advocate." On March 28, 114 of the 518 pastoral charges were able to qualify under the slogan. A campaign for new subscribers was conducted throughout the State, and every District had a campaign leader. Subscriptions were taken for half a year where a whole year could not be secured. On March 28, 3684 new subscribers had been reported. These are simply indications as to methods for making the campaign effective. We know that such interest and effort in our territory would result in giving a tremendous impetus to the Advocate cause; and we believe that 10,000 subscribers could be added in thirty days. The price of the North Carolina Advocate is $2.00 per year; 97 charges reached their quotas; 29 charges doubled the quota; 15 trebled it; six quadrupled it; and one secured seven times its assignment. We would like to see every District appoint a captain; assign a quota to every charge; and for once do a thorough piece of work for the rebuilding of the fortunes of the paper.

THE DANGER OF A SOFT RELIGION

By Rev. M. M. Black

Perhaps there has never been a time when the temptation to live a life of ease and self-indulgence was greater than it is today. We live in an age of marvelous progress in the way of material inventions and scientific discovery. Comforts and luxuries have multiplied, and the ordinary working man of the present enjoys manifold advantages and blessings which even kings and princes in other days would have coveted.

One result of all this multiplication of material satisfactions is the development of an attitude of softness-avoidance of anything involving hardship or sacrifice. Such an attitude, if persisted in, produces weaklings in business and in society, in Church and State. Men and women who are not willing to bear any crosses, or suffer any losses for the sake of righteousness and truth and justice and brotherhood will never build the Church on enduring foundations, or advance the cause of Christ.

The Master makes it clear that self-denial is one of the fundamental laws of discipleship. It is not an obsolete virtue, but a necessary element in all Christian living. The first meaning of self-denial is renunciation of our own will for the will of Christ, however much that may involve. It means acceptance of his rulership and guidance in all the affairs of life. We belittle the meaning of self-denial when we think of it merely as doing without a few luxuries, or leading a strict manner of life for a few days, or a few weeks, as for example, during the forty days of Lent. Christian self-denial means far more than fasting on Friday, or doing without a few glasses of soda-pop for the sake of the orphans or the mission cause. It involves nothing less than the complete dedication of our powers and talents to the service of Christ.

Men and women of the world and also pleasure-loving church members want their own way, and multitudes are going in the broad road that leads to destruction. They want to spend money on themselves and their families. They say: "Why should we give our money to the Church, when we would rather spend it on picture shows and dances, or autos and bridge parties, on wine and beer, and the best the market affords in the way of food and clothing?" "Why should we go to Church and Sunday school, when we would rather lie in bed, or go fishing and picnicking, or joy-riding?" Thousands follow this course, and since they are not willing to forsake pleasure or gain, and put Christ first, they drift on downwards without ever learning the meaning of vital religion, or without contributing anything worth while to society. They are little more than useless parasites, and when the end comes they will be weighed in the balances and found wanting.

Various inquiries have been made as to the possibility of fastening the sheets of the Advocate together. We are glad to say that we have received the invoice of the part and we hope that even the issue in which this notice appears may be a better answer to the many inquiries that have been made.

INDIFFERENCE

By Judge Percy Bell

Among the many problems which today confront the Church and those interested in its welfare, whether occupying the pulpit or the pew, one of the most outstanding is that of the indifference of the church members as well as the general public towards the church, its institutions and its work.

Active opposition stimulates effort. There is a certain zest in combating an open, avowed and active opponent, but a contest with absolute indifference is one of the most baffling of all human endeavors.

There is no active opposition in our country to the church as an institution. No one fights it, no one advocates doing away with it and by that same token no one seems impelled to fight actively for it. In the United States as a whole less than one-half of the inhabitants are nominal members of the church; judging by observation not one-half of the nominal members attend church and not one-half of those attending are sufficiently interested to support it financially or do any work for it. In other words, assuming a population of one hundred and twenty million, not sixty million belong to the church, less than thirty million attend a church at anytime, and less than fifteen million actively support it. Put it this way: seven out of eight people are apparently unconcerned as to whether the church is supported or attended or not.

The remarkable thing about it is, that most of those comprising the seven-eighths of the population, if approached, will promise to come to church and then dismiss it from their minds. This is especially true concerning those who are nominally members.

Most people find money for their automobiles, silk stockings, tobacco and moving pictures or the other things which they want and are really interested in, but it is pathetic to see how few members of the church are contributing to its support.

Such indifference is the deadliest foe to the church, but as to its existence there can be no question. Indifference like a dewless night hath gripped the land from sea to sea.

The statement of this condition suggests two interesting questions; first, Why the indifference exists? second, How can it be overcome? Speaking for myself only, I believe that the indifference exists because of the great attractions that more worldly matters have for the average citizen and from his lack of conviction that the church really offers much to him. If he believed, from his observation of the lives of members, that the church was giving them great happiness and great peace of mind and materially affected their lives for the better, and if he found attendance pleasant he would very probably attend.

Men pay for the privilege of attending a luncheon club. It is a remarkable fact that during the period of this present depression the luncheon clubs are about the only things that have held their own on membership and attendance. The programs of luncheon clubs are evidently interesting to them who attend and the companionship must be pleasant or the clubs would die out.

There is a certain perfunctoriness about church attendance and a certain lack of vitality among those who do attend which, coupled with the fact that it is very difficult to distinguish between average citizens who are church members and average church members so far as daily life is concerned, seems reasonably to account for the public indifference. It would certainly be worth trying to cultivate a spirit in the church which would sharply distinguish it, and to insist more than we do insist upon the maintenance of proper standards by the members. Possibly if this were done we might make the institution seem so desirable that many of those now outside would feel that it would be worth while to join and share in its privileges.

This is suggestively written and purely as the views of the writer and with the earnest hope that anyone who may have a solution for this perplexing problem will present it.

I have arranged for the preachers and those in the car with you to cross the river at Pascagoula on April 24 and 25 without cost to any of you. Just write your name on a slip of paper, you need not write the names of those in the car with you, hand the slip of paper to the man on the bridge and wait for him to find your name on a list I will give him and he will pass you over free.

HEFLIN METHODIST CHURCH DEDICATED

In 1920 Rev. A. L. Harper, then pastor of the Ringgold, (La.) charge, began an afternoon appointment at the Village of Heflin, Louisiana.

With careful attention, untiring efforts upon his part, and zeal and determination on the part of the local citizens, a Methodist Church was organized, with 18 members.

Mr. and Mrs. Derrell Goodwin, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Bacon of the Heflin community being the oldest members of the church at its beginning.

Brother Harper was succeeded in this work by Rev. David Tarver, for one year; Rev. T. J. Holladay, four years; Rev. W. W. Perry, two years; and Rev. P. B. McCullen, three years. It was in November, 1934 that the writer was appointed to the charge and under his leadership the church was cleared of debt.

The church is a modern little Chapel, and has four Sunday school rooms, with a lovely auditorium, seating about 250 people. The organization is complete in every detail, and carries on its work according to rule, paying all of its obligations when due and never running behind with any part of the program of the church.

This is made possible by the unified effort upon the part of the local congregation under the very efficient and effective leadership of the local Board of Stewards, composed of the following: E. Thomas, Superintendent of the Sunday school, D. H. Pace, L. F. Pace, and Harold Smith. They are assisted in this fine work by all the people of the community.

The church was dedicated on Sunday, April 7, by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, assisted in the service by Rev. T. J. Holliday, Rev. W. W. Perry, Rev. P. B. McCullen, and the Presiding Elder, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir.

L. F. Pace, chairman, on behalf of the Board of Stewards, presented the church for dedication.

SEASHORE PASTORS' SCHOOL

The date of the Pastors' School to be held at the Seashore Methodist Assembly Grounds, Biloxi, Miss., has been set for July 1-6, 1935. The change from the original date was caused by the inability to get the faculty desired at that time.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, Shreveport, La., and Dr. Edwin Lewis of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., will be the platform speakers.

The faculty and the courses to be offered are as follows:

"The Teaching of Jesus"—Dean R. E. Smith.

"Church Finance"—Dr. Boyd M. McKeown.

"Program and Administration of Circuits"—Rev. Horace M. King.

"Leadership of Mission Study Classes"—Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb.

No undergraduate courses will be offered this year.

Will all interested please put these dates in their calendar and plan to attend. We are confidently expecting the largest attendance we have had in years.

Sincerely,

REV. IRL H. SELLS.

Jackson, Miss.

CHANGE OF DATE

On account of local conditions at Leland, the date of the Greenville District Conference is changed from May 9, 10 to May 7, 8.

J. R. COUNTISS, Presiding Elder.

APPORTIONMENTS ACCEPTED

The North Mississippi Conference, through its individual charges, has set for itself a worthy goal of progress. While figures are sometimes dry, they seem to me to be most interesting in this case when they indicate to us a spirit of progress, faith and a new morale among our people.

The charges of the Conference have assumed a quota for General and Conference work of $52,840.50. This represents an increase of $16,990.71 over the total payment last year, which was $35,849.79. In percentage the increase in the assumption for this year over the payment of last year is 47.3 per cent.

Aberdeen	$2,927.42	48.7%
Columbus	2,731.22	49.6%
Corinth	2,284.88	36.6%
Greenville	2,496.50	32.5%
Greenwood	4,377.76	80.6%
Sardis	2,172.93	43.4%

While the percentage of increase is large, the goal is not an unreasonable or impossible one. The presiding elders, without exception, report that the charges have accepted their self-assumed quotas seriously, and with seeming determination to pay in full. It is beginning to look like financial recovery and advance in our benevolent work. Let us hope so.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

there that he wrote the ill-advised confidential letter to Bishop White of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in Pennsylvania, in which he proposed the uniting of the Methodist Church with the Episcopal Church.

It may be admitted that the correspondence with Bishop White was a piece of tactless presumption and unwisdom upon the part of Dr. Coke; but it is in exact harmony with a similar correspondence which he had with the Bishop of London, March 29, 1799, in which he proposed the reuniting of the Methodists of England with the Church of England. Dr. Coke was always attached to the Established Church; but his own interpretation of the correspondence with Bishop White is: "I did verily believe then, that, under God, the connection would be more likely to be saved from the convulsions by a union with the old Episcopal Church, than by any other way." The negotiation with Bishop White was not known to the Church until nearly twenty years afterward, and then it came out as an attack upon Dr. Coke. Such was the situation which the Methodists of America faced as they approached the first General Conference in 1792.

This brings us through the organization period of the church, and to the beginning of an era of strife which marked the years to follow. The ecclesiastical sky of the church was already overcast; but the organization and its leadership were fairly well established in the confidence and esteem of the people despite the hue and cry raised against Asbury and the Council. The Church that began as an organized revival in 1784, had witnessed a wide extension of its geographical boundaries; and the eight years of its existence had netted a gain in the membership of more than fifty thousand, three and one-third times the original foundation of fifteen thousand with which it began.

CHAPTER IV

ADJUSTMENT AND POLICY

The Wesleyan movement, as we have seen, originated within the Church of England, and it was developed without denominational appeal or purpose. In its inception it was an evangelistic enterprise undertaken by Mr. Wesley, on behalf of the poor and the unchurched folk who were not included in the program of the existing churches. Following the quickening of his own spirit, his soul yearned for the salvation of the religiously destitute people of London; and the movement soon grew into a concerted enterprise which covered the whole of the British Isles. The movement in America came into being through the labor of uncommissioned and unrelated individuals; but it was simply a transfer of the aims and methods of the Wesleyan Revival. In 1773 the American societies voluntarily placed themselves under the direction of Mr. Wesley, and they formed a part of the Wesleyan movement until the outbreak of the Revolution made the continuance of that relation untenable. When it became necessary for Mr. Wesley to set up an independent ministry for the American Methodists, he made it plain that he desired no more ordinations than were absolutely necessary to meet the emergency which had arisen on account of the war. One may venture the assertion, therefore, that from 1739 to 1784, a period of forty-five years, no great body of Christians was ever more nearly without a denominational tie, or was more dependent upon a spiritual bond for its unity.

It was manifestly the wish of the Methodists to maintain the spiritual ideal with which they began, and to escape as far as possible entanglements which might militate against their evangelistic effectiveness. But no sooner was an organization effected than they found themselves forced into a defensive position. Every instance of opposition, the larger sense of social responsibility, and the new incentive to spiritual adventure—all conspired to establish a denominational consciousness, and to give the new church a direction which its very independence made inevitable. The preachers left the Christmas Conference with a sectarian feeling which had not been possible before; and the desire for ecclesiastical independence, which brought affairs to the crisis of 1784, was naturally reflected in the progress of the church. The attacks which had been largely directed against persons and methods became attacks upon the church. A few days before the opening of the Christmas Conference, Dr. Coke was in Cambridge, Maryland, and he says: "In this town, which has been remarkable above any other for persecution, there arose a great dispute whether I should preach in the house or not. The ladies in general were for it, but the gentlemen against it, and the gentlemen prevailed. Accordingly the church door was locked, though they have had no service in it, I think, for several years; and it has frequently been left open, I am informed, for cows, and dogs, and pigs. However, I read prayers and preached at the door of a cottage, to one of the largest congregations I have had in America." Such affronts would necessarily accentuate the denominational feeling of the Methodists and would array them against all exhibitions of bigotry and conceit.

Another factor which contributed to this trend of feeling was furnished by the more definite social responsibility of the organized church. This was brought forward at once by the struggle which arose over slavery. In this connection, the minds of the people turned to means for making their social ideals more effective. In Dr. Coke's American Journal, we find: "Many of our friends and some of the great men of the States, have been inciting us to apply for Acts of Incorporation, but I have discouraged it, and have prevailed. We have a better staff to lean upon, than this world can afford." This probably means that there were those who felt that a measure of legal establishment would advantage the Methodist cause, but Dr. Coke wished to avoid such entanglement. This same social issue led the bishops to make a personal appeal to General Washington at Mount Vernon; to interview the Governor of North Carolina; and to formulate petitions to be presented to the legislatures of both North Carolina and Virginia. Dr. Coke gives the name of Mr. Finney who was one of the committee to form the petition in Virginia; and he says that it was to be presented in the House of Delegates by Harry Fry, a member from Culpepper County. The feeling of social responsibility inspired the address, also, which the Conference of 1789 directed the bishops to convey to President Washington and the new Government.

The almost passionate devotion of the people to the democratic philosophy of the new Nation made them sensitive to even an appearance of encroachment upon their liberties, or to the least intimation of autocracy. This sensitiveness came out in connection with an incident at the time of Mr. Wesley's death. Dr. Coke's devotion to Mr. Wesley was shown in many ways; but particularly in the tenderness and exquisite grace of the dedication of his American Journal: "Honoured and very dear Sir, PERMIT me to lay at your feet the first publication of any magnitude that I have ventured to the public eye. In you I have for thirteen years found a Father and a Friend, and I feel a peculiar happiness on every opportunity afforded me of expressing my obligation to you.

"I know that you hate Flattery, and therefore I must avoid all panegyric. To say but little of you, would derogate from your due; and to do you justice would offend you. I must therefore only subscribe myself, with great respect, Dear Sir, Your Dutiful, Affectionate, and Most Obligated Son, THOMAS COKE."

When Dr. Coke was shown the account of Mr. Wesley's death, as published in a Philadelphia paper, he entered in his journal: "I evidently saw by the account, that it was too true that I had lost my friend, and that the world had lost a burning and a shining light." But when Dr. Coke preached in Baltimore and charged the American Methodists with "an almost diabolical act" in leaving Mr. Wesley's name off the Minutes in 1787, and with thereby hastening his death, the statement aroused church-wide resentment. It is true that they were such strong words as might not have been used under ordinary circumstances; but the Methodists made no allowance whatever for the sincerity of his sorrow, nor for his personal attachment to his friend. These facts show how quickly the church had acquired a pronounced denominational feeling.

The Christmas Conference failed to anticipate the rapid development of the denominational life of the church; and entirely too much was left to the determination of its leaders and to the benevolent-mindedness of the preachers and people. Within a short time, therefore, the church found itself in the grip of internal troubles which soon reached a critical stage. The slow and cumbersome process of submitting every matter to the Annual Conference for adjudication led to the formation of the Council which failed. The first General Conference assembled under circumstances which caused it to be a distinct reaction against the Council and the bishops—particularly Bishop Asbury. The outlook for the meeting was made all the more ominous because agitation had reached a stage of malignancy and bitterness which might easily bring about a reactionary and a ruinous course for the church. Asbury was apparently in no mood for supplying the leadership which the situation demanded, and he was the chief object of attack besides. Dr. Coke was expected, but he had not arrived and no word had been heard from him. So, at that critical moment, the prospect for the church could scarcely have been less reassuring. We learn from Dr. Coke's journal that he arrived at the home of Philip Rogers in Baltimore, about nine o'clock on the evening before the opening of the Conference, where he found Asbury and some of the preachers. Then follows one of the most striking instances of innocent and unintentional humor to be found in the literature of the church: "They had almost given me up, but intended to spend ten days in debating matters of smallest importance, in prayer, and in declaring their experiences, before they entered on the weightier business, if I did not sooner arrive."

The First General Conference assembled in Baltimore, on the morning of November 1, 1792. Unfortunately no official record of its proceedings was preserved and we are wholly dependent upon rather sketchy unofficial records—the journals and diaries of those who were in attendance, and upon Jesse Lee's History of the Methodists. Rev. William Colbert, who was a delegate, says that the rules of order were accepted with very little debate, on the first day; but the tremendous importance of that action is not even hinted at in his placid statement. The masterful strategy of that entire Conference was stamped upon the

The Calendar for First Church, Corinth, Miss., lists 17 new members on the last Sunday in March. Rev. E. H. Cunningham is the pastor.

Rev. B. C. Taylor sends a cheering report from Natchitoches. He says that he has a night congregation equal to his morning attendance.

Rev. and Mrs. Roy Wolfe, of Saucier, Miss., are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon the arrival of a son, Roy Wesley. The happy event occurred March 28.

Rev. W. C. Galceran, pastor at Hollandale, has good prospects of paying off the debt there, when Bishop Dobbs will be asked to return for the dedication of that building.

Brother R. E. Rushing reports a fine meeting just closed at West Monroe, La. Rev. Martin Hebert, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. D. L. Coale, one of our general evangelists.

According to Dr. Countiss, installments have been paid at Indianola, Leland, Greenville, and Cleveland; and Clarksdale is at present in a campaign to raise a substantial sum to apply on its indebtedness.

The Epworth League at Weir, Miss., is doing splendid work. The League at that place will be the host of the next Union meeting, according to Curtis Nabers, and the local League will furnish the program.

We regret to report the illness of Dr. Briscoe Carter recently. The information reached us indirectly and we do not know the seriousness of his attack, but we hope that he is well on the road to recovery by this time.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, pastor of Epworth Church, New Orleans, announces a revival meeting for the two weeks following Easter. Rev. D. L. Coale, one of our general evangelists, will arrive April 22 and will assist in the campaign.

Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., is happy on account of the payment of all indebtedness against the church at Dublin, the church being dedicated by Bishop Dobbs on the evening of March 31. The parsonage has been reroofed and redecorated also.

Boyle, Arcola and Duncan have caught the stride of improvement in decorations and new roofs, which seem to be the order of the day in that section. Yet, the intoxicated reporter says, "We have nothing to cover up in the Greenville District."

Dr. Countiss says of Bishops Dobbs' recent visit to the Greenville District: "His utterances were worthy of the man and his office. He called at the homes of some of our choice laymen and will find cordial welcome from all when he comes this way again."

Mrs. Walter Towner accompanied Dr. Towner on his visit to New Orleans this week, to the great delight of the young people and the friends of Dr. Towner. We regret that the pleasantness of her stay was somewhat interfered with by the illness of Dr. Towner, which happily was not of a serious nature.

Rev. L. C. Wilson and family, recently appointed at Alco charge, have been received in the good old-fashioned Methodist way—a pounding in which one hundred and twenty-five people participated. It was a joint reception of the Simpson Church and the town of Alco. The information was sent us by a member of the church there, who modestly says, "Please don't."

The Young People's Training Conference for New Orleans was held at Rayne Memorial Church during the past week. Fifty were enrolled for class work, and 32 credits were earned. The teachers were: Dr. Walter Towner, of Nashville; Mrs. Joe Brown Love, of Baton Rouge; Rev. R. R. Branton, of New Orleans; and Rev. A. K. McLellan, of Alexandria, as "pinch hitter."

Rev. G. A. Morgan, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, has been transferred back to Louisiana and appointed to Jonesboro charge, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. W. S. Henley. This announcement comes from Bishop Dobbs who states that he is to send a man to Bishop Boaz from Louisiana at the next Conference. Brother Morgan will receive a cordial welcome back to Louisiana, where he is greatly beloved.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs dedicated the church at Heflin, La. Rev. J. F. Dring is the pastor, and Heflin is part of the Rochelle charge. A historical sketch of the church appears in this issue.

According to the calendar of the church at Tupelo, Miss., 75 people attended the Standard Training School held there recently. Thirty of them were from the Tupelo church from surrounding towns—Fulton, Mooreville, East Tupelo, Verona, Guntown, Saltillo and Shannon.

The Leadership Training School recently held in Shreveport was a great success. It combined both young people and adults; nine courses were offered; the enrollment reached 350; and 272 credits were given, 83 of which were for young people's work. The instructors were: Dr. J. M. Williams, of Hendrix College; Rev. J. E. Cooper, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Mrs. John Harter, Marshall, Tex.; Mrs. Guy E. Browne, Houston, Tex.; Rev. and Mrs. R. R. Branton, New Orleans; Miss Myrtle Charles, Hendrix College; Miss Elizabeth Brown, Nashville, Tenn.; and Mrs. J. L. Carter, Crystal Springs, Miss.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

On the morning of March 9, in the beautiful Fullilove-Lyons living room of Keener Hall, Mildred Thibodaux, a former student of MacDonell School, was married to Elzey Matherne, a young man residing in the city of Houma. Miss Thibodaux has been at the MacDonell School for four years. She graduated from the high school department last May and was assisting with the teaching at the time of her marriage.

Elzey Matherne is a member of the Methodist church at Bayou Blue. His mother is an active member of the same church and a leader in the missionary society.

These young people have started a real Christian home and will be of untold value to the work of our church in that field. Incidentally it was the first wedding to take place in the new building.

In the afternoon preceding the day of the opening of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference at DeRidder, a retreat was held for officers, district secretaries, committee chairmen and spiritual life leaders of the various districts. Too much cannot be said concerning the value of such a meeting. There was no rush, no business to be transacted and all hearts and minds were free to dwell wholeheartedly on the spiritual. It was a time of thoughtful meditation and heart searching. Mrs. R. E. Smith, in her worship periods; Miss Grace Gatewood, in her message from Dr. Weatherford's book, "Discipleship," and Mrs. Sexton, leading group discussions, were at their best. It seemed as if old times had returned as nearly every one present told of vital experiences in their relationships to their Lord and Saviour. Truly we lived on the mountain-tops during these sacred hours. It is hoped and urged that this retreat will be followed by others, at least one in each district, so that all missionary women in the Conference may have the opportunity to share in these rich experiences.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Mrs. J. B. Haman from Vaiden sends in the following report of a recent meeting at Kilmichael:

The zone meeting convened in the Methodist Church at Kilmichael, opening with a short talk by the new chairman, Mrs. Harold Flowers. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Taylor Everett as retiring chairman.

The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Mounger of Winona, using the sixth chapter of John and bringing to us the thought that even our very small gifts are blessed in the Kingdom.

Mrs. C. G. Boyett of Vaiden told us our duties in a paper on Christian Social Relations.

Mrs. Taylor Everett of Columbiana read a paper on Officers' Training Day. Stewardship was presented by Mrs. Trapp of Duck Hill.

A solo, "Open Mine Eyes That I May See," was rendered by Mrs. Minga of Winona.

A playlet, "The Million Dollar Family," was put on by seven League members of Kilmichael, advertising the World Outlook.

The Spiritual Life Service was conducted by Mrs. J. Perkins of Kilmichael, using Matthew 6:24-31. The theme was: "To Serve Only One Master."

Rev. Mr. Mounger of Winona closed the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. Wall writes of a recent business and social meeting of the Rosedale Auxiliary.

The usual business routine was taken up and many interesting reports given. These showed that the work is progressing, growing and proving both interesting and helpful. Much comment and praise followed the splendid report of Mrs. Whiteside, the superintendent of Christian Social Relations. Through her untiring efforts programs to promote good Citizenship have been put on in the public school. One Sunday school has been organized among the Negroes at Star Church. A Woman's Missionary Society among the white people on the Goza plantation has been organized. Numerous letters in behalf of world interests have been written. Our W. M. S. is proud to claim one of the most wide awake C. S. R. superintendents in the entire Conference.

As many of you are going to study "Orientals in America" I am giving you the benefit of a letter from Mrs. Bradley, who has conducted a very successful class during recent months:

"I bought the Manual For Leaders and modified and abbreviated the plans suggested to suit our own group, but perhaps the most good I derived from it was the long list of available leaflets from which I chose, for instance, the Chinese and Japanese Year Books, published in New York City. I received a big lot of free literature that was helpful. Then I went to the library. The one I especially enjoyed was 'The Paradise of the Pacific.'

"We always began the lesson with current events from the class, which were not at all hard to get and helped to tie the subject to today. No need to tell you how much grown folks are like children in that a beautiful description arouses interest always. We even indulged in love stories to make us understand the Oriental conception of life and duty. 'A Japanese Nightingale' admirably illustrates the way they cling to the past—yet are ready for adventure.

"The lesson itself was assigned to one or two members and an open discussion followed. We had Methodists, Christians, Baptists, Episcopalians and Catholics to join us and take a part. Immediately after we finished the book, the Baptists women bought it and studied the whole book. It is a fascinating story."

PASTORS-LAYMEN MEETING OF CORINTH DISTRICT

The pastors and laymen of the Methodist church of the Corinth District, zones one and two, met on April 2, at Ashland, Miss. All the charges in the two zones were represented except two. There were forty laymen and twelve pastors present.

These monthly meetings have a two-fold purpose: the promotion of Christian fellowship among the pastors and laymen of the district, and the sponsoring of such programs as will aid the pastors and laymen in the carrying out of the program of the church in each charge. The program for the month of March dealt with the organization and administration of Christian education in the local church, with special reference to the setting up of the local board of Christian Education, and the promoting of young people's work. The program for April considered the working of the new financial plan in the Methodist church, and the promoting of children's work.

Rev. R. G. Lord, who is the Executive Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, ably discussed the working of the new financial plan. He also called the attention of the pastors to the observance of Church School Day, on the 7th of April; the Pastors' Conference and Training School, to be held at Grenada, June 10th-15th.; the Young People's Assembly to be held there June 17th-22nd; and he stressed the importance of observing the fourth Sunday of each month as Home and Foreign Mission Day in the Church school. Brother Lord made the statement that when the church ceases to be missionary-minded it will cease to be Christian.

Miss Freddie Henry, who is connected with the General Board of Christian Education as children's worker, was present and presented the children's work in the local church. Miss Henry gave a challenging address on the promotion of Christian Education, in the local churches, for the children. She made an appeal for the placing of the children in a central position in the church, for, says she, "they are the life of our church tomorrow, and the future citizens of our state and nation." Miss Henry challenges the church and its workers to recognize the great opportunity and responsibility that lies in their field of service. Her challenge rings with the clearness of Christ's statement, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

RUSTON DISTRICT NEWS

The Ruston District Institute for the Stewards held by Dr. Julius Earl Crawford was a great meeting. The Institute was held in the Arcadia Church with a very splendid attendance on the part of the district. There were eighteen charges represented with a total attendance of one hundred and seventy different men and women. The messages of Dr. Crawford were of a very high order and the discussions were very helpful. This Institute ought to result in renewed interest on the part of the laymen and a more intelligent understanding of what a steward in the Methodist Church ought to do. We heard a great many expressions of approval from the laymen who attended. The Jonesboro Church deserves special mention for having a splendid representation over both nights in spite of the fact that they are temporarily out of a pastor.

The evangelistic meetings have already begun in the Ruston District. The presiding elder, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, was the preacher for the services at Farmer-ville. In spite of several things which interfered the meeting did great good. There were five additions to the church, besides many of the church members were helped by the very fine messages of Brother Hoffpauir. Rev. W. H. Royal, pastor of our church at Haynesville, was the preacher for a meeting which came to a close at Simsboro this past week. We have not heard from Brother Smith about how things went on. There are several meetings scheduled to be held between now and Easter. The presiding elder will be with Brother McLean at Gibsland for two weeks prior to Easter.

The Ruston District has agreed to pay about thirty-nine per cent more on the benevolences this year than it paid last year. Two churches in the district agreed to pay more than assessed. To our church at Minden and Ruston goes this honor. All the work of the Ruston District moves along smoothly under the leadership of our splendid presiding elder.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CONFERENCE LAY LEADER TO THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: There is a brief but timely editorial in the last issue of the Advocate, April 4, emphasizing the importance of recognition by the church of its obligation to make a faithful effort to secure one-half of the accepted apportionments for Benevolences in each district by the time of the district conference. Every steward and interested member of the church should fully appreciate the value of such an effort and co-operate to achieve the goal set by our Annual Conference. Lay leaders of great faith and zeal can inspire and stir boards of stewards to new vision and determination as they realize their responsibilities and duty in leading the congregation to recognize its obligation for a full and proportionate provision of the benevolent claims as voluntarily accepted.

If the new financial plan is to be a success, it is already evident that it will not be by the former or increased budgets, but by such genuine loyalty in meeting obligations voluntarily assumed that one hundred per cent collections will be the rule rather than the exception. Why should not the lay membership of the Mississippi Conference stand out as an example to the entire church in a stewardship type of giving as a result of evangelistic fervor and spiritual power?

The treasurer's report on remittances received for benevolences up to April 1 is as follows:

Brookhaven District

A STEWARD GETS CONVERTED

Dear Sir:

I have been a steward of the Methodist Church for fifteen years, and regret to say that I have just recently been converted as to the duties and responsibilities that must be assumed and lived up to if we are to be numbered as one of the Master's servants.

It is usually conceded that we stewards are the living example of the "truly converted." I hang my head in shame when I think of the precedent I have established through these long years of spiritual blindness wherein I could have done so much had I not been so dumb.

"The still, small voice" whispered a few questions, "Son, are you loyal to my cause, are you 'really and truly' entitled to call me Father?" I felt a sense of guilt, as if I had been weighed in scales and found wanting.

"Do you co-operate whole-heartedly with all that goes to build up the spiritual life of not only your local church, but the whole body of this institution to which you belong?" "Do you always work with the Shepherd of your flock, or do you judge him according to your limited standards? and try to dictate his policies and criticize his methods? If you do, resign, repent, and pray for a new vision, for you are not worthy to even belong to the church, much less be a steward, for if you haven't enough Christian charity to be loyal to the Church to which you belong, to support any pastor the Conference sends regardless of your judgment as to his qualifications, and though he might appear weak or lacking it makes the obligation more binding and gives you all the more reason to love and support him, in the name of the Master!" We must not forget that our preachers are only men as we are.

"The preacher has to depend mostly on you stewards for the material necessities of life. Are you doing your very best towards getting the salary your Church has obligated itself to pay him? Are you interested in the up-keep of the parsonage, and do you help in promoting interest in the missionary work that is so vital?" "You say you can't do very much in the way of public speaking or praying, you can at least see that the Church is kept clean, heated, and lighted on time before services?"

"Eat freely of the 'bread of life' the pastor may break for you, but do not become a parasite by depending on him altogether, get the bulk of your food from the Bible, after reading always be still, retire into yourself, so to speak, surrender your will in so far as you can, with a sincere desire to know and love God, and I am convinced the still, small voice will speak to you."

May we love God more, and our neighbor as ourselves, remembering Jesus' chief mission to us was to reveal the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. These revelations are linked together with a universal chain, and if that chain is not completely connected our pretended Christianity is lifeless, and without meaning.

MeLeod, Miss.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, APRIL 14.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

CHRIST OUR SAVIOR

"When God loved, he loved a world; when he gave he gave a Son." He loved without limit and gave without reservation. Parents, patriots, friends sacrifice for those esteemed worthy. Jesus loved and sacrificed for the unworthy. Culture seeks culture, the rich seek the rich. Jesus seeks the lost. He died for the disobedient. The saved seek to save. Christianity is no self-centered group of pious snobs, feasting and rejoicing while outsiders starve and weep. The "Good Shepherd" seeks the lost sheep; the loving Father seeks the lost son. The chief interest of the Kingdom lies beyond the border.

Salvation is both a gift and an achievement. Life is a gift; living a process. We no more have self-made Christians than we have self-born men. The pride which would refuse salvation as a gift, forgets that it has already accepted life on the same terms. However desirable it may be, there is no more necessity of a theological explanation of how God saves us than of a scientific explanation of how he gives us life. Salvation is knowing the Father and we know the Father only through the Son. To accept Jesus is to accept sonship. To be saved is to have the mind, the spirit, the disposition of Christ. Salvation is attained by faith and evidenced by works.

The tense in which we think of salvation patterns our theology and colors our conduct. If we look on it as an accomplished event and say "we are saved," we tend to disregard duty and devotion. If we say "we shall be saved," we miss the joy of present fellowship with God and loving service to men in our idle gazing toward a distant horizon of realization. If we say "we are being saved," we walk in blessed fellowship, trust God, and work out our own salvation in joyous service. Each type is represented among us. The Bible, reason, and experience abundantly testify which is correct.

In our teaching concerning the death of Jesus, let us not lay this crime to the will of God, even though he used it to forward his purpose, making "the wrath of man to praise him." The voice that cried "Crucify Him!" was not the voice of him who said, "This is my beloved Son; hear him." The heavens frowned on Calvary and the earth shook. Not the shame of the cross but the glory of the resurrection pleased God. The only joy of that hour was the joy of hell and its satellites. The Father of Jesus is not blood-thirsty. It is sin that craves and costs blood, both of the guilty and innocent. The blood of Jesus is part of what it cost God. Love must go as far as sin, and that is to the uttermost. The Son was sent to seek till he found and the gates of death built by sin could not resist him—"He became obedient unto death." Nor should we teach the bold substitution of Jesus for sinners. It seems as repugnant as to substitute John the Baptist for Herod, Barnabas for Ananias, St. Paul for Nero, or George Washington for Benedict Arnold. Nor should we set up a legal or judicial fiction by which guilt is transferred and the bad pronounced good. In the atonement sin is forgiven, the heart is cleansed, and the bad are made good—"new creatures in Jesus Christ." If the Bible is a bloody book, it is largely because it deals with a bloody subject—sin. Jesus, the sinless, died on account of sin and on behalf of sinners. His utter humiliation disclosed his complete humility. He divested himself of rank and glory, of name and fame, was buffeted and spat upon in shameless scorn. His exaltation by the Father is in keeping with his humiliation at the hands of men, "and every tongue shall confess him Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Sin won a short-lived triumph at Calvary, but met its Waterloo at Easter.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING, SEASHORE DISTRICT

Approximately seventy-five young people gathered at the Moss Point Methodist Church on Saturday, March 30, in response to an invitation from the Seashore District director of young people's work, Miss Josephine Lewis. According to original plans they were to serve as hosts to the young people of the Mobile District; however, due to the following reason the original plans failed to materialize. Miss Lewis could not be present because of conflicting engagements and she notified all concerned to this effect. All of those in the Mobile District received their notifications in time, but many in the Seashore group failed to receive theirs until after the meeting and consequently were present at the appointed hour. Some had come fifty and seventy-five miles at no little expense and were greatly disappointed when they heard that there would be no program. Something had to be done! Those young people could not be sent home in this state of disappointment.

The three pastors present, Miss Kuntz, an effective worker with young people, and several other adults present, placed their heads together and arranged an impromptu program: The Rev. Mr. Blackwell of Ocean Springs led in the

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Eph. 3:10—To the intent that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places might be made known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God.

This amazing assertion help us to see the value of the Church. "The Word became flesh" and therefore draws the eyes of all personal beings to this earth. St. Peter wrote that "angels desired to look into" the things revealed in "the preaching of the Gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." If Christ be with His Church to the end of the world, it can but reveal the manifold wisdom of God.

"We have this treasure in earthen vessels," but let us remember that "the excellency of the power is of God, and not of us." The Church is the "bride of Christ," "the pillar and ground of truth." One of the most meaningful figures is that of "the body of Christ." The "body of Christ" is the instrument through which Christ works. Mistreatment of the Church becomes a serious offence in the light of this truth, for Christ has identified Himself with His Church. "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion." They also bring woes upon others and grief to our Lord.

Inasmuch as the Church is the medium through which God reveals His manifold wisdom, it behooves us, as members of that body, to be "stewards of the manifold grace of God" and transmit His sympathies and His truth.

A Vegetable Laxative That Thousands Like

So many men and women have proved their preference for Thedford's Black-Draught, by buying it as needed, that you ought to try it if you are not really enthusiastic about the laxative medicine you have been using. Far and near, for nearly 100 years, Thedford's Black-Draught has been the standby of thousands of families as a laxative for the relief of constipation and many bad feelings due to faulty elimination. Surely it must be very good in its way to have had such long, widespread use. Let Thedford's Black-Draught help to bring you better health when you need a reliable, purely vegetable laxative.

Church, we should cause the Church to be impotent. How sorely this world needs Thee.

Grant that we may realize the privilege that is ours as members of the body of Christ. Reveal Thy will through us. May we "publish what wondrous things the Lord hath done" for us. Freely have we received, may we freely give.

In complete consecration, may we dedicate whatever powers we have to Thee. Our prayer is offered in the name of our Savior.

Jackson, Miss.

FROM OAK RIDGE CHARGE

Dear Dr. Duren:

One-third of the Conference year is gone. Our second quarterly conference has been held. Our "district pastor" came and delivered a most helpful and inspiring sermon. About twenty per cent increase was made on assessments for ministerial support and the benevolences.

We have had twenty-five additions to the church to date, ten by vows. Have paid $125.00 on parsonage debt and made other needed improvements and furnishings.

We have been received most cordially by the excellent people of this charge. Brother Milton bequeathed to us one of the most comfortable and lovely parsonages we have ever lived in.

Have held two revivals—at Fairbanks and Swartz. At the latter we had a great victory. Did the pulpit work and choir directing, and my voice went back on me the closing days of these meetings. But thanks to my fine neighbor pastors: R. M. Bentley, Martin Hebert, and Jimmie Harris. Also to the great kindness of Brother H. L. Johns. The last service, at which time we received the new members, we had the old time power with us, and it was good to be there!

We will entertain the district conference May 15-16, and the Editor has an invitation to be with us. Bishop Dobbs will be with us and bring a message at eleven o'clock Thursday the 16th. We expect a full attendance of the pastors and a good representation of the lay delegates, and, of course, the "connectional" officers.

We have three Woman's Missionary Societies, one having recently been organized.

Cordially,

J. M. ALFORD, Pastor.

song service and acted as chairman of the entire meeting. After the song services a prayer was offered by Rev. J. D. Slay of Logtown. This was followed by a sermon delivered by the Rev. Mr. Arnold, a superannuate of the Kentucky Conference. The sermon was based on the parable of the talents and was worth a seventy-five mile trip to anyone. Immediately following the inspiring address, Miss Kuntz led the group in a round table discussion, bringing out the Epworth League motto: "All for Christ" as it may be applied to the various departments of the League: devotional, recreational, social service, etc. After the singing of another hymn, the morning session was dismissed with a prayer by Brother Arnold.

The group went from the church to the picnic grounds and after a delightful and refreshing picnic lunch, played games, sang songs and entertained themselves in various other ways. All seemed to enjoy themselves very much. Finally they sang, "It's a Good Thing To Be a Leaguer" and after the song dismissed themselves with the League benediction.

FRANCES E. WILLARD

Although Frances E. Willard (1839-98) is known to the world for her activities in the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union with which she was connected from 1874 until her death, it is not so generally known that she wanted to be a preacher. In 1884 she published a book, "Women in the Pulpit," in which she gives some of her own experience: "Even my dear old mother-church, the Methodist, did not call women to her altars. I was too timid to go without a call; and so it came about that while my unconstrained preference would long ago have led me to the pastorate, I have failed of it, and am perhaps writing out all the more earnestly for this reason thoughts long familiar in my mind."

"Let me as a loyal daughter of the church, urge upon younger women who feel the call, as I once did, to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, their duty to seek admission to the doors that would hardly close against them now in any theological seminary . . . and let me pleadingly beseech all Christian people who grieve over the world's heartache, to encourage every true and capable woman, whose heart God has touched, in her wistful purpose of entering upon that blessed Gospel ministry, through which her strong yet gentle words and work may help to heal that heartache and to comfort the sinful and sad "as one whom his mother comforteth." . . .

"When will blind eyes be opened to see the immeasurable losses that the church sustains by not claiming for her altars these loyal, earnest-hearted daughters, who rather than stand in an equivocal relation to her polity, are going into other lines of work, or taking their commission from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union?"

RESOLUTIONS

Our hearts are bowed with sorrow at the death of our beloved friend and co-worker, Miss Mary Lee On Feb. 2, 1935; and we hereby express our sincere grief at her passing from us.

It would seem that her death was untimely amid the useful years of service. She has passed from our midst, but we can say, "She is not dead, she is only away."

We know her to have been contrite in spirit, in dominant purpose pure, in consecration courageous and loyal in life, and from day to day her life revealed her heart's philosophy, she showed to all who knew her, that unselfish service is the key to happiness.

There was no worthy cause, no sympathetic task, but that she had a part in it. In every charitable task she spent herself so freely. She was quiet and gentle, and her friendship was highly valued. Her greeting cheered us along life's way.

In nothing that she did was there a trace of selfishness or self-glory, and after many years among us, she had not an enemy.

Resolved; First, that the Woman's Missionary Society of Nebo Methodist Church, South, has sustained a great loss in the passing of this our dear member, and we, the members of the society, bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, and we shall miss her sweet face, and gentle spirit.

Resolved; Second, that we do hereby express our grief because of our loss, and extend sympathy to the bereaved family and pray that as they pass through this darkened valley of bereavement the light of God's love will be their comforter. We have the assurance that her soul, triumphantly crossed the river of death into the city of God.

Resolved; Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Nebo Missionary Society.

MRS. WM. A. COLEMAN.

FROM OCEAN SPRINGS CHARGE

Dear Brother Duren: Perhaps a few words from this pastor as to how our work is progressing would be of interest to some of the readers of the Advocate. So, here goes.

Since coming to this charge four months ago, we have been kept busy at the work assigned us as a pastor. Results have been real encouraging, to the end that we have received 12 on profession of faith, four by letter, baptized eight infants, and thus we have been building up the kingdom.

As to finances, we have made good headway, I think, especially when we think of the disturbed and despondent condition the people have been in and are living under, even yet, in spite of the word floating around that times are getting better. But I am happy to say that our finances are fairly well up. Two of the churches on the charge have paid their benevolences in full, which is a little better than 100 per cent more than these same churches paid last year. We have already sent to the Conference Treasurer $45 and are hoping to send some more soon. The support of the pastor and presiding elder is nearly paid up in full to date.

The young people's work is well in hand and the Woman's Missionary Society is doing a splendid work for the church and parsonage. All told, I think we have collected from all sources somewhere near $500 or more during the past four months.

We feel very much encouraged, and expect to make a good showing when we meet in our Annual Conference next November. Sincerely,

W. L. BLACKWELL, P. C.

W. E. LAMPTON HONORED

The celebration of Church School Day at the First Methodist Church, Columbia, Miss., on Sunday, March 31, 1935, will long be remembered.

At the conclusion of a very interesting program, the Sunday school presented to Mr. W. E. Lampton a gold watch chain and medal for his forty-five years of faithful service as superintendent. The presentation speech was made by Mr. C. V. Hathorne.

Miss Rosa Carley, on behalf of the Sunday school, presented Mrs. Lampton with a corsage as a tribute to her Christian influence in her home and in the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Lampton have long been leaders in every civic movement.

A Prayer for the Peace of Unity

By Wilson G. Cole

"For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us."—Ephesians 2, 14-22.

Our Father, we thank Thee that peace and poise of our souls are possible through the unity of Thyself revealed and made accessible in the unity of Christ. Oneness seems so foreign to our chaotic selves and our tangled and confused world. We are pulled by multifarious forces and called by numberless voices. Not only our temptations, but our duties crowd upon us and threaten the composure of a unified self, without which there can be no peace. But in Thee, eternal variety is under the dominance of an eternal oneness. Thou art the same yesterday, today, and forever, yet ever expressing Thy unity and continuity in the creative beauty of the flower, the surprise of every dawn, and the enrichment of every human personality made in Thine image.

Help us to find peace in such singleness of nature and purposeful activity. When the times are dark, the burdens are heavy, plans frustrated, and ambitions fruitless, teach us the peace that is not dependent upon the timely, but partake of the nature of the Universal and the Eternal. May we, like Christ, possess our souls by centering all experiences in Thee, O God, the only power adequate to bring coherence and clearness to our minds.

Yet we ask, not for a peace that gives us rest when hard work is required, gives us quiet indifference in the presence of injustice and injury to human lives. Awaken us to marching, fighting, if necessary, when such orders come from our loyalty to ourselves, to truth, to human helpfulness. But in battle or in building, keep before us the vision of Thyself, and thus keep a oneness within ourselves the peace of our masterful Saviour and Friend. Amen.

TOYOHICO KAGAWA, the great Christian statesman and social leader of Japan, has been threatened by the military authorities of the Empire, according to statement of the Christian World, London. The editor thinks that the banning of the writings of Kagawa is imminent, as the Japanese Press is now almost completely controlled by the militaristic party. We are constrained to say that such a turn of affairs would be a blow to the peace movement which has been growing in Japan; but it would be an infinitely greater calamity to Japan itself.

HONORABLE WILBRA CROSS, the Governor of Connecticut, is said to have discovered an unpublished epigram of Mark Twain's, and is using it as his office motto. The saying is: "Always do right. This will gratify some people and astonish the rest." We would like to nominate that slogan for a good many other offices which handle public affairs. It might appear to be in strange company, but that would be a part of the astonishment.

THE CARNEGIE CORPORATION of New York has appropriated the sum of $55,000 for the production of African "sound pictures," with an African setting and an all-African cast of performers. The purpose of the project is less commercial than an experiment in psychology and sociology—a study of the African, uncorrupted by the ideas imported with films made abroad. Major L. Norcutt, a sisal planter, has been chosen for the task of developing the casts and the pictures; and Mr. G. C. Latham, formerly director of education in Northern Rhodesia, will show the pictures and study the reaction of African audiences to movies which are of Africa and by the Africans.

THE AVERAGE ANNUAL CURRENT EXPENSE per pupil, in average daily attendance, of public and secondary education for the United States in 1931-3 was $87.67, according to the Supreme Council Bulletin (Masonic). In the lowest bracket, from $31.70 to $49.42; and in the order named are: Arkansas, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky and Louisiana. Twenty-five states are below the average and twenty-four are above. The states where the average cost is highest ($102.62 to $152.85) are Montana, Delaware, Illinois, Michigan, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Arizona, Connecticut, Colorado, Wyoming, District of Columbia, California, Nevada, New Jersey, and New York.

JEWISH IMMIGRATION INTO PALESTINE affords an interesting side-light on the disturbed condition in Germany. In 1933, Jewish immigration into Palestine was 40,000; in 1934 it was 60,000, of whom about 20,000 were German refugees; and at present the average is about 5,000 per month. Over one hundred Jewish settlements have been established; the majority of the population of Jerusalem is Jewish; hundreds of new industries have been started; and the land is fast becoming a factor in the citrus fruit industry.

THE TORNADO WHICH STRUCK GLOSTER and Gillsburg, towns in Mississippi, recently was the most severe storm of many years for that section. It was attended with heavy property damage; considerable loss of life; and a long list of injured crowded the hospitals in Centerville and McComb. Photos of the wreckage present a ghastly sight, and one wonders that the list of casualties did not run into hundreds. The Governor of Mississippi took immediate steps to care for those who were rendered homeless and destitute by the catastrophe.

THE POWER OF SUGGESTION is effectively and beautifully used in the programs of the Woman's Missionary Council, and the Conference organizations this year. In celebration of their twenty-fifth birthday, the "Silver Anniversary," bulletins and programs are printed with silver borders; and the cover of the Council Bulletin is adorned with the likeness of their great leader who was long the inspiration and the guiding spirit of the work—Miss Belle H. Bennett. The Council Bulletin is itself worthy of the great history delineated on its pages.

THE TRAVELERS' AID SOCIETY of New Orleans has organized a department through which it is undertaking to administer government relief for transient boys sixteen years old and under. Effort is being made to discover homes that have been successful in the management of their own boys, and to enlist them in a philanthropic service for the recovery of this army of transient youths. It is the plan to place not over two of such boys in any one home and to provide about four or five dollars per week for the support of each person. It will probably be quite difficult to obtain ideal homes for all of these wandering boys, but it strikes us as being a move in the right direction.

EASTER

By every token, the first Easter morning marked the dawn of the day of immortal hope for the individual, and the birth of the spirit of conquest in the Christian Church. There is no more thrilling story of human interest, or gripping record of the transformation of human lives than is to be found in Luke's account of that first Easter day. The story of the two, engaged in melancholy reverie as they walked to Emmaus, is a dirge of human despair which ends in a paean of immortal hope. "We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." The atmosphere of gloom could scarcely have been deeper. "Certain women also of our company made us astonished." The broken hopes of their bosoms were struggling to be recreated, but their minds staggered under a load of doubt. "Did not our hearts burn within us, while he talked with us by the way?" Once again their eyes were beginning to be fixed upon the hidden and the unseen, and the somber realities of the cross and the tomb were swallowed up in the radiant expectations of the new morning that had dawned. Then there broke from the lips of the disconsolate disciples a confession: "The Lord is risen indeed," the note of faith which answers to the cry of every aching heart. In that confidence, a band of humble peasants with a song of hope in their hearts went forth to win the world in the name of Him who went to the cross to redeem Israel. The record of the early church indicates that the disciples retained the thrill of that first Easter morning. In every time of peril, it brought them courage; in times of discouragement, it revived their ebbing spirits; and when the sunset hour of life had come, it rested like a halo upon the brow of the night of death. They had henceforth and forever a religion with a ring of victory in its heart. The church undaunted and unafraid is still the church with the abiding joy and the victorious faith of the Easter day. We need the temper and the tone of certainty born of the Easter morning—not the understanding of either the miracle or the theology of the resurrection. If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above—the joy, the hope and the strength of the Easter day, which changed a company of routed peasants into an army of conquering saints.

A RETOUCHE MASTERPIECE

In an article carried in the Methodist Recorder, London, for March 14, Dr. T. Reaveley Glover gave an illuminating discussion of the "Influences that have been Adverse to Faith." The study exhibits all the vigor of thought and the felicity of statement which characterizes Dr. Glover at his best, and we wish that it were possible to give the article in full to the readers of the Advocate. But it is too lengthy and is too British in its address. The clue to his thought is the statement that, in the eighteenth century, morality replaced grace; a generation ago an effort was made to substitute science for faith; and now it is proposed to displace the Christian teaching of salvation by a scheme of social justice and economic righteousness. We think it not necessary to deny the values in the things offered as substitutes; nor can it be said that they do not point out evils that are real and situations that are desperate. But the remedies which such schemes propose are vague and negative—a mere outcry in the night. They produce a religion of hypocrisy and cant; a pulpit which dispenses warmed-over social and economic theories instead of the Gospel; and a view of life as partial as the problem of a particular moment. One becomes weary of such terms as "psychopathic" as an explanation of human depravity, and as an apology for a crime record without a parallel in the history of the courts. But many are they who pipe such weird and fantastic theologies to the hungry hearts of men and women today. There never was a time when it required more real courage to preach than now. Men take their social, economic and wage theories into the pew and there they sit like bristling porcupines, and woe betide the preacher who falls upon those vicious barbs. Timid and shrinking souls, conscious of the difficulty, compromise the truth and camouflage the Gospel to such an extent as to leave in the wake of their ministry a trail of disappointment—"a way strewn with wrecks of manhood, fallen adventurers, with characters lost and natures ruined." We believe that Christian people are too ready to give to popular movements the validity of Gospel truth, and to hang the tinsel of worldly adornment upon the altars of the Church of God. The very effort to retouch the Gospel masterpiece is a blasphemy; a virtual surrender of all that it claims and all that it contains; and it involves the abandonment of the fortunes of a sin-ruined world. Alas, a tragedy too often produced in the name of civilization and under the guise of progress.

"PARASITIC" EDUCATION

Not long ago Dr. Robert H. Duel, a minister of Kellogg, Minnesota, wrote an open letter to The Nation in which he said: "To a large extent our present system develops a parasitic psychology." The editor of The Journal of the National Education Association wrote Dr. Duel to know the reasons back of the statement, and what he would do to correct the condition. Dr. Duel's elaboration of his thought loses nothing of the impressiveness of his original statement, and it reveals a clear comprehension of the problem which he had in mind. He defined "parasitic" education as that which tends to submerge the individuality and to defeat creative independence and productive service. He thinks that the time element of school preparation may be responsible for some of this tendency, since it defers too long the practical experience which is the necessary complement of academic training. Only a few days ago a very intelligent woman said to us that she had sometimes felt that her brother, who had an unusually brilliant mind, went to school too long. That statement is exactly in line with Dr. Duel's thought. Parasitism was further described as the development of an attitude of expectancy in the pupil, and a faulty attitude toward society and citizenship. The child is led to be unappreciative and to feel that everything is "coming to him" as of right; and he loses the proper valuation of the factors in his education. Dr. Duel thinks that social attitude is more important in a teacher than scholastic record; for, in the long run, smartness is less important than social constructiveness. He believes also that to say that the school exists for the children is to misplace the emphasis—it rather exists for all society. He thinks that children should have their initiative and originality developed through independent research and writing, and that the ability to balance a personal and a family budget is not less important than a good grade in mathematics. Whether one agrees with all that was said or not the study is crammed with food for thought.

WHY SUPPORT THE ADVOCATE

By JNTYBNJ

If our Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi feel that the New Orleans Christian Advocate has a necessary function to perform in the more successful running of our Church, no church member (who can afford the $1.50), can argue himself into believing that it isn't his duty to subscribe for it.

Here is another way to approach the subject: If a member accepts the fact that the teachings of Jesus Christ are true, and the church is man's most sincere material expression of his belief in those teachings, then he draws much more from the church than he can possibly give to it.

As a matter of fact, a member says to himself, "I will support the church materially, and it, in turn, must give me back peace of mind, a sense of harmony, and the nearest approach that mankind has yet discovered to what is known as happiness. Viewed from this angle, mankind does not support the church, nor its institutions; but simply patronizes them. If the church were to disappear, those things which go to make a man's life worth while would go with it. No other institution exists which has so helped man to answer that eternal question, "What's the use?" And without a satisfactory answer to this question, the Golden Rule is a joke, life approaches chaos as its end, and its only reward is the satisfaction of animal instincts.

If our Church, in its wisdom, asks support for the New Orleans Christian Advocate as a necessary adjunct to the service required of it, the co-operation of every member should be given, even though some individual may not have reached the stage of development where he can digest the spiritual food and inspiration found in its pages.

THE ORPHANAGE COLLECTION

Dr. Robert W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, has sent to every pastor and church a letter in which he makes a strong appeal for our orphanage. For the first time in many years, the institution has been forced to borrow money for current expenses, and as Easter approaches, its treasury is empty. Dr. Vaughan is our servant, and no more faithful man ever served a great cause. Those are our children, and we can not let our Conference family suffer. We feel sure that there will be a great response from every church in Louisiana; and that the work which was organized and promoted by our sainted Brother Wier, and which has been carried forward so nobly by Brother Vaughan will be given a maintenance worthy of the Methodists of this great State.

A PLEA FOR THE OLD PATHS

By Hon. J. E. Rankin

We are told in Holy Writ that the Savior was once asleep upon the Sea of Galilee when there burst forth a great storm. It seemed for the time as if heaven and earth and sea and sky were mingled in one implacable chaos. The terrified disciples awoke the sleeping Savior and told him they were lost—when he turned and spoke to the troubled elements and said, "Peace, be still." Then "the winds ceased and there was a great calm."

The trouble with the world today is the abandonment of those fundamental principles of Christianity upon which our civilization is built. When I say our civilization, I mean the Christian civilization—the only civilization that has ever existed worthy of the name.

The ancient Egyptian civilization was nothing more or less than the domination of an inferior race, lording it over the children of Israel.

The civilization of Greece was the rule of a few intellectuals without regard to the rights of the average individual.

The civilization of Rome was based upon the doctrine that might makes right. Her policy was to destroy every country that did not bow to her imperial will.

During the last nineteen hundred years, the Christian civilization, based upon the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule, has brought to humanity the greatest degree of human liberty and human happiness ever known in all the history of mankind.

That civilization is now seriously threatened throughout the world. The doctrine that "might makes right," or, as Napoleon once expressed it, the theory that "God is on the side of the heaviest artillery," seems to have become dominant in the philosophy of the dictators of the world.

Note the results of this deadly doctrine. Twenty years ago it plunged the world into the greatest war of all time, which forever swept from the face of the earth, so far as this generation is concerned, the once beautiful art-crowned, garden-cultivated, happy-homed Europe of a few years ago. It sent to untimely graves ten million young men, the very pick and flower of the world's best manhood; disturbed the economic structure of every nation on earth and left the world reeking with bitterness and hatred that it will take generations to overcome.

Greed and selfishness and every other vice that the savage doctrine of "might makes right" breeds and encourages, has gained in ascendancy until today they seem to dominate even at the international council tables; all because of the abandonment of those great fundamental principles of life laid down by the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule. In other words, the people of the world and the nations of the earth, are being tossed upon a sea of uncertainty, by the waves of bitterness, prejudice, selfishness and hate. Even in our own land—the richest country in all the world, where we have more wheat, more corn, more cotton, more manufactured articles, more of everything necessary to sustain and contribute to the needs and comforts of mankind than was ever known before, and in a land where advancing science has given us the greatest ascendancy over the forces of nature, and the greatest command over our surroundings, ever attained in all the ages of recorded time—even here we are groping in the uncertainties of that storm which the abandonment of our fundamental ideals of civilization has brought upon us.

There can be but one cure; it is the same cure to which the disciples resorted on the Sea of Galilee—to wake the sleeping Savior in the hearts and minds of men, reinstate Him in our daily lives, set him at every council table in the world, and in every legislative body, as well as every executive office, and return to those fundamental principles upon which two thousand years of Christian civilization was built—that He may speak to the troubled elements of mankind, and say, "Peace, be still." The storms of discord will then be assuaged and the world will enter a new era of the most glorious civilization mankind has ever known.

THE POOR EDITOR

Consider the editor! A child is born unto the wife of a merchant in the town. The physician getteth 10 plunks. The editor writeth a stick and a half and telleth the multitude that the child tippeth the beam at nine pounds. Yea, he lieth even as a centurian. And the proud father giveth him a Cremo.

Behold, the young one groweth up and graduateth. And the editor putteth into his paper a swell notice. Yea, a peach of a notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman and of her exceeding comeliness.. Like unto the roses of Sharon is she and her gown is played up to beat the band. And the dress-maker getteth two score and four iron men. And the editor gets a note of thanks from the sweet girl graduate.

And the daughter goeth on a journey. And the editor throweth himself on the story of the farewell party. It runneth a column solid. And the fair one remembereth him from afar with a picture postal card that costeth six for a jitney.

Behold, she returneth, and the youth of the town fall down and worship. She picketh one and lo, she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our promising young men and getteth away with it. And they send unto the editor a bid to the wedding, and behold the bids are fashioned in a far city.

Flowery and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth 10 bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a 12-months subscription.

All flesh is grass and in time the wife is gathered unto the soil. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head and the darned thing cometh out, "Gone to Her last Roasting Place."

And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps. And they pulleth out their ads and canceled their subs, and they swing the hammer even unto the third and fourth generations.—Pathfinder.

THE FRENCH FIELD

(Report from the French field to the General Board of Missions).

From the very beginning of the missionary organization of the Methodist Church, the French field has been the center of a romantic interest; but for the toiling missionary, it has ever been a grinding task and a field of drab realities. The charm of the Evangeline country belongs wholly to literature; and work on the French Mission field is the most unromantic and difficult to be found. The people are ignorant, poor, and unschooled in the worship and way of Protestantism. The missionary must create both a culture and an atmosphere for the message of the Methodist Church. And, aside from the economic and social factors—the backgrounds of the people, is the difficulty of interesting people whose relation is that of furnishing a clinic, rather than that of having a bond of understanding and conscious investment in the enterprise.

The growth in membership has been discouragingly slow, and even the lack of loyalty and appreciation is sometimes painfully real. But the hopefulness of the situation lies, not so much in numerical growth or even well-established loyalties, but in an increasing self-reliance and self-respect. Such development is a primary indication that the plane of thought and feeling is being raised to the point where Protestantism can make its appeal effective. There is evidence of a greater interest in self-support, than has characterized the work in the past. At St. Mark's in New Orleans, the congregation trebled its contributions for ministerial support, and the advance has been maintained despite serious membership losses. At Golden Meadows, our newest undertaking on the French field, the progress toward self-support has been the most rapid of any point where we have gone. The payments of the building debt have been anticipated by more than a year, and a larger sum was contributed for ministerial service than in any other distinctly rural section. All in all, we are making some substantial gains; but the struggle in the conquest of the French field is just begun.

rules of order, and the final results were largely assured. One of the rules was, "It shall require two-thirds of all the members of the conference to make a new rule, or to abolish an old one; but a majority may alter or amend any rule." Our Methodist forefathers may have been remarkable for piety; but they were certainly not unacquainted with shrewdness and worldly wisdom; and there is in all probability no more remarkable exhibition of foresight and generalship in the history of any church than that exhibited in the organization of the first General Conference of American Methodism.

The one real issue of the Conference was the "Appeal" measure which was introduced by James O'Kelly on Friday morning, the second day of the Conference. It provided that: "After the bishop appoints the preachers at the Conference to their several circuits, if any one think himself injured by the appointment, he shall have liberty to appeal to the Conference and state his objections; and if the Conference approve his objections, the bishop shall appoint him to another circuit." William Colbert says that the Appeal was defended by James O'Kelly, Richard Ivey, Hope Hull, Freeborn Garrettson, and Richard Swift; and that it was opposed by Nelson Reed, Henry Willis, Thomas Morrell, Joseph Everett and others. It was debated for three full days and when the vote was taken the Appeal was defeated by a large majority. During the remaining ten days of the Conference, the time was occupied with revisions and explanations of the Discipline. There were more modifications of existing laws than were made at any Conference for fifty years following; but the two-thirds rule reduced new legislation and repeal of old laws to a minimum. Dr. Coke says that it was determined to hold another General Conference at Baltimore, November 1, 1796, the membership to be made up of every traveling preacher in full connection. In the meantime the Districts were to hold Annual Conferences. The Conference of 1792 enacted a law creating the presiding eldership and fixed his term for any one District at not exceeding four years. The preachers were required to make an accounting of all marriage fees received before they might receive anything on salary deficiency; and they were forbidden to accept presents for baptisms and burials.

So far as the mere record shows, the Conference of 1792 was a great victory for Asbury; but those who were informed knew that breakers were ahead. The morning after the vote on the Appeal measure, James O'Kelly and some of his supporters addressed a letter to the Conference in which they said they could no longer retain their seats in the body. The Conference appointed a committee to confer with them; and Dr. Coke had a personal interview with O'Kelly; but they refused to be conciliated and left for home. Following the withdrawal of O'Kelly, the Conference enacted a measure for dealing with those who might sow discord and dissension in the ranks; but the church sincerely desired to avoid a rupture. At the Virginia Conference in November, "Bishop Asbury introduced the case of Mr. O'Kelly, and it was resolved, in consideration of his age and services, to allow him his annual salary of 40 pounds, as when he traveled in the connection, provided he was peaceable and forebore to excite divisions among the brethren.

After a little while, O'Kelly declined to accept his salary, and in 1793 he organized an independent church which he first called the Republican Methodist Church; but in 1801 he re-christened it the Christian Connection. The preachers refused to follow him into a new enterprise which proposed chiefly an administrative distinction from the church to which they already belonged. Nevertheless this proved to be the most disastrous schism of early Methodist history. The Minutes of 1793 show only a small decrease in the white membership, but it appears that some of the charges did not report and the figures of the preceding year were entered in the record for that year also. This was true of Mecklenburg, Amelia and Banks circuits, all of which had been in James O'Kelly's District in Virginia. The losses continued from year to year until 1796 when they reached a total of more than ten thousand—in a single quadrennium, the church had lost one out of every six of its membership. In the quadrennium preceding the O'Kelly trouble, in spite of the agitation, 177 preachers were admitted on trial, 3 withdrew and 32 located. But from 1792 to 1796, 161 preachers were admitted on trial, eleven withdrew and 106 located; and the next quadrennium even a smaller number were admitted on trial. These figures give some idea as to the extent of the disturbance, but they were not produced by the O'Kelly troubles alone.

The O'Kelly struggle arose at a time which was well suited for the promotion of a revolutionary movement in the church; for there was a manifest loss of the fervor and enthusiasm which had characterized the early days. It followed a long period of agitation against the leadership of the church, because of the Council and because of the autocracy of Bishop Asbury. The seriousness of the disorder is told in a letter written by Rev. Devereaux Jarratt. When the spirit of division was at its height in 1794, he wrote: "O'Kelly does great things in the divisive way and I dare say he will make Asbury's Mitre set very uneasy on his head. . . . The divisions and animosities now subsisting are greater, perhaps, than you can conceive, and yet all these may be but the beginnings of sorrow." Jarratt's unfriendly feeling toward the Methodists is unmistakable in this letter; but there can be no doubt that the party spirit was rife and that the situation among the Methodists was lamentable indeed.

After 1796, small gains were recorded, but the membership losses were not fully regained until 1801, when the great revival beginning at the end of the century was at its height. It is not necessary to deny the bitterness of O'Kelly, nor the feeling of the church against him—such are the certain and lamentable results of ecclesiastical controversy, which only time and the grace of God can heal. James O'Kelly was in his prime and he was no ordinary man, as may be judged from the course of events following his withdrawal from the Methodist Church. Although he was deserted by practically all of those who shared his opinions on church administration, he brought about the greatest upheaval of the early years, and he maintained an unequal contest for an amazingly long period of time. He was a good fighter, but he was a bad loser. He lived until 1826—thirty-four years after he withdrew from the Methodist Church; he saw practically all the members of the first General Conference in their graves; and, although outside the church, he made a mark upon its progress which no historian can overlook or fail to record.

More than a hundred years have passed since the death of James O'Kelly, but they have not relieved his career of pathos. He was a man conspicuous for brilliance and real ability, but he failed to keep his abilities in constructive channels and that failure largely neutralized the potentiality of his great endowment. He was at one time the equal of any man in the ranks of the American Methodist Church, and by all indications he should have been one of the towering figures of its history. Almost single-handed and alone, he fought the church to a stand for a whole decade, but his was the genius of resistance and attack—not that of a builder. His impact upon his age, therefore, is preceded by a minus sign; and his life-work is a pathetic subtraction when God manifestly made it possible for him to become a prince among the builders of Zion.

There were other instances of revolt about this time, but none of them became serious and troublesome. In 1787 the Negroes of Philadelphia withdrew and formed a separate society for which Bishop William White, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Pennsylvania, ordained a minister. In 1816 this movement was organized under the name of the African Methodist Episcopal Church; and Richard Allen, whom Asbury ordained a deacon in 1799, was elected Bishop. In 1791 William Hammett, an Irish orator-preacher who claimed connection with the British Conference, created dissensions in Charleston, South Carolina, and organized the Primitive Methodist Church, which was as short-lived as its rise had been spectacular. And in 1796, the Negroes of Wesley Chapel in New York withdrew and formed a separate congregation. They built a church in 1800 which they named Zion. Under agreement, the Methodist Episcopal Church furnished its ministry until 1820 when they became dissatisfied on account of some action of the General Conference of that year, and in 1821 they organized themselves as the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

The years between the first General Conference in 1792 and the second General Conference in 1796 were largely occupied with the O'Kelly contest which we have already discussed. Asbury, in order to meet the convenience of the preachers scattered over the wide territory occupied by the church, greatly multiplied the number of Annual Conferences. In 1793, the number reached nineteen and Jesse Lee, who believed that the Annual Conference was the bulwark of Methodist liberty, was strongly opposed to this increase of the yearly conferences. He held that the effect was to reduce the importance of the Conference that was nearest to the membership; and that it eliminated the rank and file of the people from all active and direct participation in the control of the church. Asbury was too sagacious and the memory of the O'Kelly trouble was too fresh in his mind for him to risk another schismatic movement, and by 1795 the number of Annual Conferences had been reduced to seven. The number did not exceed that for several years.

Asbury's mind returned in 1793 to his original idea of promoting education upon the plan of Mr. Wesley's Kingswood school; and he issued an address to the church on that subject. The affairs of the church were not getting forward, and the Conferences of 1794 passed a resolution designating the last Friday in February, 1795, as a day "of solemn fasting and prayer," and the last Thursday in October as a day "of solemn and general thanksgiving" throughout the church. On the seventh day of December, 1795, the church suffered a great loss in the burning of Cokesbury College. It was a total loss and the Methodists were greatly stunned by the catastrophe. Through the zeal of Dr. Coke and the interest of the Methodists of Baltimore, the College was relocated in that city in 1796, but in 1798 the new plant shared the fate of its lamented predecessor. The bishops and the people were too much discouraged to undertake a revival of the ill-fated enterprise. On August 4, 1796, Benjamin Abbott who was one of the most effective evangelists

Mississippi and Louisiana

The charges of the Lake Charles District have accepted the sum of $6,411 for Benevolences, an increase of $1,341 over the total amount paid last year.

Rev. Ivan O. Donaldson sends us his bulletin in which he announces special services for Easter week to be conducted each evening by himself.

Rev. A. W. Townsend, Jr., is conducting a revival in McDonoghville, assisted by Rev. J. B. Grambling of Epworth Church, New Orleans. The services are to continue several days.

We regret to note the illness of Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor at Brookhaven, Miss. The Lincoln County Times indicated that he was better, and we trust that he may be entirely recovered at this time.

The church building at Zwolle has been repaired and painted. Every phase of the church program is intelligently promoted by the aggressive pastor, H. A. Rickey.

Mr. H. R. Thompson, chairman of the board of stewards of Claiborne charge, Shreveport, sends a goodly list of subscribers, and our pleasure is increased by his thoughtful greeting and word of encouragement.

Mr. W. L. Freeman, of Pleasant Hill, La., remembers the Advocate with a fine list of subscriptions, and we will endeavor to give full satisfaction to all by the quality of the Advocate that may go to them each week.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, pastor at Kosciusko circuit, North Mississippi Conference, writes appreciatively of his people. He has already received several members on profession of faith, and he expects a good year in all respects.

There is a fine interest in the work of the church at Leesville. J. W. Faulk is in great favor with the people and both pastor and people are happy. Leesville assisted DeRidder in entertaining Woman's Missionary Conference.

Rev. David Tarver, pastor of Morgan City charge, reports hopefully for the little cities along the Atchafalaya and down the bayous. He has been there only a few months, and he expects a good response to the program of the church.

A communication from a layman of Galloway Memorial Church in Jackson, says that, in addition to being busy otherwise, Dr. Theodore Copeland has him going to church. Dr. Copeland is assisting Dr. J. L. Decell in a series of meetings.

Rev. John A. May, of Montevallo, Ala., P. O. Box 185, says that he is anxious to be of service in the evangelistic field. Brother May has held some good meetings over the church, and those needing his help can reach him at the address indicated above.

Dr. George S. Sexton sends the "round" of quarterly conferences for his District, and with it a cordial invitation to the editor to visit his District Conference at Bossier City, April 17. We may not be able to accept, but we genuinely appreciate the invitation nevertheless.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor at Charleston, Miss., has just closed a successful revival in which he was assisted by Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala. Brother Hanes is one of our General Evangelists. There were 22 additions to the Methodist Church, and 6 to the Presbyterian Church.

Brother E. H. Cayard, long a member of the board of stewards and one of the most faithful men in Algiers Methodist Church died on April 9. He had been fatally ill for many months and his going was a great release from the long and dreadful suffering which he bore with great patience.

Southern Methodist University, of Dallas, Tex., is planning a great Twentieth Anniversary celebration, beginning May 9th, and continuing through the 12th. The University has had a phenomenal growth in all departments; the student body has increased from 706 to 2,500; and it has total assets of $6,000,000.

First Church, Shreveport, of which Dr. Dana Dawson is the pastor, had 115 members to take credit in the recent city-wide Training School held in that church. The list seems to include all departments from the nursery to the board of stewards and the choir; and it is a record which reflects great credit upon the church and its leadership.

The work at Many, under the wise leadership of W. T. Gray, prospers. Plans have been made for a great revival, beginning the latter part of May. Evangelist George Tucker will do the preaching. New Sunday school rooms will be provided, the money having been raised by the missionary society. One-half of the benevolences for the year in hand.

Hornbeck charge, composed of Hornbeck, Prospect and Holly Grove, is wide awake and co-operating splendidly with the pastor G. H. Corry. Several acres of cotton will be planted for the benevolences. The church at Hornbeck will be repaired and new church school rooms provided. Revivals are planned for all of the churches. Salary increased $150.

The revival just closed at First Church, Lake Charles, was conducted with Evangelist Harry S. Allen, assisting the pastor, Rev. E. C. Gunn. Reports indicate that it was a time of real refreshing; forty were received into the church, thirty of whom were on profession of faith. The board of stewards passed resolutions of appreciation, and highly commended the work of Brother Allen.

Louisiana State University included in its seventy-fifth anniversary program a conference on the problems of religious education on the campus of a state university. Among the speakers for the occasion were Bishop Dobbs of the Methodists; Bishop Morris of the Episcopal Church; Dr. M. E. Dodd of the Baptists; Rabbi Binstock of the Hebrews; and Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe of Duke University.

DeRidder and the Pomeroy are proving to be a fine combination. Congregations large. Church school attendance greatly increased. Pastor's salary increased $300. New members being received. Good choir with a fine leader, Mrs. Roark. Entertained Woman's Missionary Conference royally. Church building repaired and parsonage made more attractive with new furnishings.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The editor received a report last week of a zone meeting in which twelve Missionary Societies participated. The meeting was held at Scooba, and Mrs. V. M. Creekmore was the secretary-reporter. We vary from our rule and make this mention here, because we did not know where to send it, on account of the change of editors. Mrs. H. McMullan has resigned the place which she has filled so long and with such great acceptability to the Advocate. The new editor is Mrs. Stanley Wilson, 2221-15th St., Meridian. All matter intended for the Mississippi Conference column of the Woman's Page should be sent direct to her, otherwise it will be delayed by our having to send it to her. It is our wish that the editor for each Conference shall digest all the material and put it in the most interesting and helpful form possible. You can help us and you will make the task of your editor much easier by sending all material to her. Please place her address in your memory book, and remember that she wants the news.—(Ed.)

Wednesday was Children's day at Conference. Forty-two boys and girls from the Methodist Home at Jackson came to visit the Conference. They sang for twenty minutes so sweetly, so happily, so unaffectedly that not a dry eye was to be found in the house. Especially did the Octagon song stir the listeners. That drop from 18,000 to 2,000 came back into memory as a big WHY?

Miss Mary Skinner came down from Nashville to lead in an open forum on Children's Work. Not all problems were solved but many workers were given a vision of the possibilities of the New Co-operative Plan.

Mrs. Hinchcliff's report showed Grenada not only the winner of two loving cups for work well done under the old plan but a leader under the New Co-operative Plan. We shall watch Grenada.

Two items of a Batesville, Miss., auxiliary report show they are at work with the children. It reads thus: "Mrs. J. Wesley Whitten was appointed Superintendent of the Baby Division. Mrs. Will Marshall gave a report of the organization of a Children's Society on last Sunday night with thirteen members."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society which was held recently in the little city of DeRidder marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of a united Conference Society. Prior to 1910 there were two distinct organizations known as the Foreign Missionary Society and the Home Mission Society.

The meeting opened with a luncheon and birthday party to commemorate this anniversary occasion. The dining hall was a bower of spring flowers. Silver candlesticks, holding tall white tapers and a huge birthday cake bearing twenty-five lighted candles, ornamented the table. The honor guests for this occasion were Mrs. John Foster, Mrs. J. G. Snelling, Mrs. Briscoe Carter and Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, all of whom had served as Conference officers at the time of the union. Only those who had been members of the Woman's Missionary Society for twenty-five consecutive years were invited to participate in the cutting of the birthday cake.

Too much cannot be said concerning the able manner in which Mrs. Charles Sills and Mrs. William Pomeroy and their committees cared for the large number of delegates and visitors attending the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society. Everything that could be done was competently arranged for the comfort and happiness of their guests. The report of the committee on registrations showed that one hundred and seventy delegates were placed in DeRidder and Leesville homes and many visitors were taken care of daily.

Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, of Nashville, treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Council, was the Council guest. This was her first visit to the Louisiana Conference. It is with a feeling of pride that missionary women look upon the women who head their work. Their able leadership is outstanding. Mrs. Fulton handles about one million dollars annually, and during these years of depression not one dollar was lost and all missionaries were paid their salaries in full.

Mrs. Fulton, the speaker of the evening on Wednesday, used as her subject "Transmuting Missionary Dollars." All hearts were greatly stirred as she told how missionary dollars are transmuted into beautiful buildings, varied work and a more abundant life in many lands.

THE DISASTER AT GLOSTER, MISS.

By Henry G. Hawkins

Man realizes his helplessness in the presence of lightning and storm. I spent Saturday night, April 6, in the town of Gloster, and witnessed some of the devastation wrought there by the tornado of that date. I was guest of Rev. P. H. Grice, at the Methodist parsonage, which is in the southeastern section of the town. The storm played its havoc chiefly in the northwestern part, north of Main Street, and on both sides of the Y. & M. V. railroad, north of the depot.

The night was stormy; and from about 9:30 the lightning glared in the distance, west, north, east, angry, but rather quiet. We watched, and wondered what was happening in those directions. About 10 we decided to retire and leave the storm to its will; but, before doing so, it was upon our house with such violence that its destruction would not have surprised us.

The ferocity of wind, lightning, rain continued about ten minutes, but the havoc was wrought in three minutes. Cries were heard in the distance; and a telephone inquiry brought the information that the depot was partly blown away and many houses, and that some were killed and others injured. The town water tank which hitherto had been plainly in the view when the lightning flashed, was no longer visible, indicating its destruction, with the consequent loss of water supply. Next telephone connection was cut off. We were told that a Mr. Gallagher, of the power plant, cut off the power just in time to prevent disasters from shocks and fires. Only one small house burned.

The part of the depot destroyed was the freight storage room; but the freight lying in storage was not great. Three empty box cars were blown over. Filling stations were wrecked, and a warehouse, exposing many bales of cotton. The chief damage to the stores was the blowing away of all the metal and other awnings. The Presbyterian church and one or two Negro churches were demolished.

The mayor reported 87 dwellings completely destroyed, and 69 others damaged. The opinion prevailed that tornado insurance carried was slight.

Over a hundred boys from a C.C.C. camp, four miles distant, were brought in to assist; the Red Cross and other agencies were preparing for relief. Over a hundred were injured, of whom 36 were placed in the hospital at Centerville, 10 miles south. The dead were 10, five white and five Negroes, among the latter being Rev. Joe Brown, Methodist pastor. Remarkable incidents were being related of narrow escapes from falling trees and timbers. Even in the sections not in the main destruction area trees were uprooted. Possibly half the inhabitants were made homeless. It is an awful disaster.

Brother and Sister Grice were busy encouraging and helping.

GREAT REVIVAL AT HODGE, LA.

By Rev. Harvey B. Hysell

The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. When I say "great things," I mean just that. There was great effort on the part of people and evangelist. There was great effort in prayer and preaching and the outcome was one of the greatest one-week meetings that the pastor or evangelist ever witnessed.

We secured the services of General Evangelist Harry S. Allen from April 1 through the 7th. The Lord used him in a most unusual way. His messages stirred the people to action. There are always results that we cannot see, that are intangible, but there were results that caused men and angels to rejoice that could be seen by all. I suppose there were more than a hundred whom we would call "seekers." They came to the altar to find Christ or be reclaimed. There were forty-five accessions to the church. Thirty-one of these came by baptism or profession of faith. The end is not yet, in this respect. I expect to see others coming as a result of this meeting.

God has poured out His blessings upon us like a refreshing shower upon a dry, thirsty land. It will take eternity to disclose all the good done. I think, if we could ever exultantly sing the Doxology from the depth of our hearts it is now. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

I heartily recommend Brother Allen as genuinely spiritual, remarkably sane and graciously effective. This servant of God possesses a meekness and gentleness that is rare. Some of his words would fall upon the audience like the strokes of a great hammer and others like oil upon troubled waters. May the gracious God whom he loves and serves continue to bless him in the future as He has in the past, is our earnest prayer.

The Methodist Layman

REPORT OF FINDINGS COMMITTEE

The ministers and laymen of the Monroe District are deeply grateful to Dr. J. E. Crawford for the efficient manner in which he conducted the Stewardship Institute at the First Methodist Church, Monroe, La., Mar. 25 and 26. He gripped his hearers at the first session, and held them with increasing interest and enthusiasm to the end of the Institute. He spoke as one who was not only master of the subject, but as one whose subject had mastered him. He impressed one as having a message he was bound to deliver, because his mind, heart, and whole personality were on fire with it, and he delivered it with eloquence and conviction, with passion and fire. Christian Stewardship is not his hobby, but his passion. In his treatment of this subject, through the open forum and personal addresses, the speaker very wisely and artfully left out everything of a trite, mechanical and legalistic nature, and emphasized the broad and comprehensive spiritual basis of Stewardship.

We are convinced that every layman and minister who attended the Stewardship Institute will be better qualified to give his church an intelligent and consecrated leadership.

Throughout the Institute several major suggestions gripped us, and we are asking our leaders in the Kingdom of God to carry them back to their churches and put them into action. They are as follows:

1. "Qualifications On Stewards." A. Genuine Christian character. B. Qualities of Leadership. C. Dependability. D. Loyalty to the Church, and its program. E. Willingness to study. F. Fidelity. G. Hard work.

The Board of Stewards should be carefully organized for effective service. Granted that the personnel meets every qualification suggested above, there is need for careful selection of the Stewards for various features of service to be rendered. Let us organize our boards in keeping with suggestions set forth in the booklet "The Board of Stewards."

Too long it has been taken for granted that the Board of Stewards was somehow magically possessed with ability with reference to the several phases of its task. This never has and never will be true. In order to function effectively the Stewards of the Church should be willing to study subjects within the range of their functions.

No man can succeed as a Steward who is not loyal to his Church and its program, that is the entire program of the Church.

We make the following suggestions: A Christian budget. Cultivation program. Weekly payment of church dues. An accurate record of the finances of each member of the church. Training of financial officers. Prompt payment of bills for local budget items, and monthly remittances on benevolent budget items. To aim at getting each member to be a contributing member.

Let each Steward have the spiritual oversight of the members of the church. To cultivate a close and friendly contact with them. To win back to the church the careless and indifferent and re-enlist them in the services and activities of the church, especially attendance upon church services.

J. E. POOLE, Chairman,
S. M. McREYNOLDS, Sect'y.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

But godliness with contentment is great gain. I Timothy 6:6.

GET A TRANSFER

"If you're on the gloomy track,
Get a transfer.

If you're inclined to fret and pine,
Get a transfer.

If you're on the worry train,
Don't stay there and complain—
Get a transfer.

Get off the track of gloom and doubt,
Get on the sunshine train—there's room!
Cheerful cars are passing through,
And there's lots of room for you—
Get a transfer!"

A transfer is an awfully nice thing to get and I do not know how it is in other places, but in our own city it is one thing we get for nothing. We simply pay our fare and go as far as we wish on one line, and then a slip of paper is handed us and we can go just as far in another direction.

Maybe we have been going through an old part of town where the houses are dingy and the streets littered with trash, but our transfer can take us down wide avenues, past shady trees, by blooming flowers. It is just so with other transfers we can get if we will. If we are in gloom and despair, if all the world seems against us, if our outlook on life is monotonous and dreary, we can get a transfer and it won't cost us a cent. We need not stay on the worry train where there is gloom and doubt and despair for there are sunshine cars filled with cheer and gladness and best of all there is lots of room. We do not have to stand and jostle and crowd and hang on the straps, but simply step into roomy, sunlit cars and away we go over fields of living green of joy and love and cheer. We just have to quit thinking of the things that oppress and of our own heart aches and sorrows and misunderstandings and disappointments and help those who are far more down and out than we, who have less of this world's goods, fewer friends, and opportunities, and without knowing it we have transferred and left gloom and doubt far behind us. "We can do all things through Him who strengtheneth us" and He has bade us rejoice and be glad.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, APRIL 21

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

LIFE IN THE LIGHT OF ETERNITY

When the disciples took the initiative and attempted to instruct or go ahead of Jesus, they invariably missed the way, as when Peter forbade the trip to Jerusalem, resisted arrest in the garden, asked to remain on the Mt. of Transfiguration and desired to call down fire on inhospitable villagers. Had "wish-fulfillment" characterized the story of the evangelists, there would have been no manger, no flight into Egypt, no Gethsemane, no Calvary, no Resurrection. Surprise and paralyzing amazement marks every step of their discovery of the fact of the resurrection. Expecting difficulty with the stone at the tomb, the faithful women found it rolled away; expecting to encounter the Roman guard, they found heavenly sentinels; expecting to amount a dead body, they were greeted by a living Lord; expecting gloom, they beheld radiance. Disappointment and fear gave place to inexpressible joy. If doubts arise with us, let us not forget that Thomas was a tester, Peter an agnostic, and all the disciples loath to believe. We are properly slow to follow those who are easily led, or to believe those too easily convinced. Happily for us, the disciples doubted and questioned and confirmed the acts of the resurrection and of the identity of Jesus while the evidence was fresh and the data available. The resurrection of Jesus is one of the best attested facts of history. His resurrection is scarcely more marvelous than the regeneration it wrought in his disciples. It was a revelation and a confirmation of all that preceded in his life and teachings.

Immortality is to be desired or dreaded, according to the character and quality of life. Endless existence can be no boon to carnality, selfishness and greed. Everlasting companionship with such associates must be a prospect to shock the soul and startle conscience into activity. Some lives seem to invite death; others to defy it, as did that of the Master. We know lives today of such spiritual quality that material dissolution cannot seem even to threaten their interruption, much less their extinction.

"Let not your heart be troubled; Where I am, there ye may be also." How these sincere and simple words have calmed the boisterous waves of sorrow and bereavement through the centuries. Many mansions afford abundant room. His presence guarantees permanent happiness and peace. Where Jesus is, is heaven. Gorgeous oriental imagery, golden streets, jasper walls and pearly gates can add nothing to this simple unfolding of the life immortal. Let us live here that we may conquer death and live forever. To be with Jesus and to be like him is life eternal.

A NEW EDUCATIONAL SERVICE OF THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM

In response to an increasing number of requests from all parts of the country the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union announces a new feature in its educational service of information and counsel on the alcohol problem for churches, Sunday Schools, and other interested organizations.

This service is based upon the conviction that the liquor traffic owes much of its power to lack of knowledge even among otherwise educated people—a situation that accounts for the many temperance disappointments in the past, and if not remedied, will certainly long postpone any satisfactory or permanent solution of the personal, social, or economic questions involved.

Teaching the simple facts about what alcohol is and what it does, is, after all, not quite such a simple thing as it might seem. Many ministers, Sunday School teachers, and church officers are handicapped because they have not made a special study of this subject in the light of modern science, and because they have not had the pedagogical training to enable them to "teach" it. The educational service carried on by the National W. C. T. U. is based upon the conviction that while it is one thing to tell a child, or an adult, something which you know; it is often quite another thing to make it a part of his thinking, i. e., to sow in his mind and heart a fertile seed of intelligent sympathy with, and appraisal of the important truths of the beverage alcohol problem.

A new feature of personal counsel and suggestion is now being offered those interested, by the various departmental directors of the National W. C. T. U., and particularly, at this time, by Miss Bertha Rachel Palmer, head of the Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction, and Miss Lenadell Wiggins, General Secretary of the nationally known boys' and girls' education movement, the Loyal Temperance Legion. Miss Palmer, for many years an educator of recognized standing, formerly state superintendent of public instruction in North Dakota, and who, because of her training, personality, and ability as a teacher is widely regarded as one of the most successful counsellors and instructors in this field, is helping Boards of Education and church groups in the preparation of wise and up-to-date courses in this subject, and will be glad to offer suggestions to any persons or organizations writing her.

Miss Wiggins, for a number of years a most successful specialist in educational club work for boys and girls and in activities which tend to build Christian citizenship, stressing the thought of total abstinence, will also be glad to personally aid and counsel along these particular lines in wisely correlating study of the alcohol problem by children of the younger grades with church and Sunday school programs.

Miss Palmer and Miss Wiggins will be glad to answer any inquiries and send any information desired along these lines to those who will write to them for it in care of National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Illinois.

MEDITATION

By Rev. J. M. Hunt

John 1:42—And he brought him to Jesus.

Each word carries meaning.

1. AND he brought him to Jesus. The conjunction connects the experience of Andrew with his experience of sharing his knowledge of Christ. To keep life we must give life. Andrew wanted his brother to know Jesus. That impulsion is felt by everyone who really knows Christ. The experience of a full heart overflowing is irresistible.

2. And HE brought him to Jesus. Andrew was a personal worker. He was a faithful man. He was a seeker after truth. He had left his nets to hear John.

WHEN QUIVERING NERVES WON'T LET YOU SLEEP

Doesn't the night seem an eternity? You toss and turn—try to find a cool spot on the pillow—hear the clock strike downstairs. Today's excitement and tomorrow's worry are beating through your brain. You count sheep frantically—but outraged nerves refuse to relax.

Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly for a while. It quiets quivering nerves—induces restful sleep—makes life a little easier.

"It Seemed As If Morning Would Never Come"

says Mrs. Emma G. Batchelder of 32 Heard St., Chelsea, Massachusetts. "I was so nervous I could not get to sleep. My husband works hard at engineering and needs his sleep but I kept him awake too. I heard about the Vegetable Compound and tried it. Now I sleep better than I ever have and I feel fine."

He was ready to hear and follow Jesus.

Andrew discovered the lad with the five barley loaves and two small fishes when Jesus needed him. Phillip regarded the situation as hopeless. If he had two hundred pennyworth of bread the supply would be exceedingly limited. But the resourceful Andrew found a lad and brought him to Jesus.

Certain Greeks "would see Jesus" during that last visit to Jerusalem. Phillip told Andrew and Andrew told Jesus. Andrew was the man who brought them to Jesus.

3. And he BROUGHT him to Jesus. He did not "telephone" them or send word to them. He did not send him to Jesus. He BROUGHT Peter.

Peter was also a busy man. Peter had a mind of his own. Peter was no easy mark. But Andrew BROUGHT Peter.

Andrew and Peter had been reared together. Peter would not hesitate to differ or express his doubts or say that he was too busy. But Andrew brought him. The two brothers were partners in business. Peter would not be loath to speak his mind freely. But Andrew BROUGHT him. Andrew did not spend useless time in argument. Andrew brought him.

4. And he brought HIM to Jesus. Peter had a will of his own. He was a wholehearted man. What a tower of strength he became. Simon became Peter. This impetuous disciple did become a rock. He sealed his faith in his blood.

We think of the great preacher of Pentecost who stirred the multitudes. But back of Pentecost was the personal work of Andrew. Back of our great preachers today is the nurture of Christian parents, teachers, pastors.

5. He brought him to JESUS. Andrew carried him not on an idle errand. He ushered his brother into the presence of the Savior.

Jesus made this fisherman a fisher of men. Jesus changed his name and his character. His destiny was therefore changed. What a marvelous transformation can Jesus bring to pass.

PRAYER

We thank Thee for the faithful men. May we be diligent in season and out of season. Those who reap are those who are not weary in well doing, who faint not.

We thank Thee for the personal workers who tactfully and persistently and earnestly plead with loving hearts, May we be such personal workers.

We thank Thee that Jesus can change Simons into stable characters. May we become all that Thou wouldst have us to be. We ask in the name of Jesus.

SEASHORE DISTRICT

By Roy Wolfe, Reporter

Under the splendid leadership of Rev. L. J. Power, P. E., the work of the district is moving forward. He reports that Wesley and Epworth churches in Biloxi paid their apportionments for General and Conference work in full at the second quarterly conference, March 26. A large number will report fifty per cent by the meeting of district conference.

The revival meeting at Saucier conducted by Rev. P. M. Caraway, March 10-17 was indeed a blessing to the community and church. There were nine additions to the church. The meeting at Lyman closed Sunday night, March 31, with twelve additions to the church. O. C. Hull, lay evangelist did the preaching during this meeting. Both of these brethren proved themselves true evangelists of God. Two other meetings have been planned for the Saucier charge, one at McHenry the last of May with Rev. L. J. Power doing the preaching and the other at Nugent in the fall with O. C. Hull assisting.

A Standard Training School was conducted at the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, March 17-22, with three courses offered. A course on children's work was taught by Mrs. J. L. Carter; a course on Young People's work was taught by Miss Thomas, dean of Grenada College and a course on the Life of Christ was taught by Rev. George W. Shearer of Arlington, Texas. Forty-five credits were issued. Long Beach, Coalville, and Saucier co-operated in the school.

In Memoriam

MRS. CARRIE PARTIN

Mrs. Carrie Partin was born in Marshall, Texas, in 1862. In her childhood she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and ever after that was a loyal member. Her husband was Dr. E. B. Partin, whom she married when only fifteen years of age. The Doctor himself was not only a very useful man in his community following his calling as a physician, but he was a consecrated Christian. He gave himself and his service to the Lord. Mrs. Partin was a very industrious woman. Often by very force of will power she forged ahead when her physical strength would not justify it. She always was faithful to her Woman's Missionary Society and was glad of any cheering reports from the church after her health would not permit her to attend the meetings. For several years she swept the church and got it ready for the services, and then taught a class of boys in the Sunday school. To Dr. and Mrs. Partin were born five children, two boys and three girls, all of whom have gone on except Miss Ruby, a teacher in the Junior College at Decatur, Miss. Besides Miss Ruby, she left twelve grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren. Fred Partin, a son who died last year, was a prominent business man in Meridian and a member of the Board of Stewards of the East End Methodist Church. Mrs. Partin spent her last years living sometimes in her home in Chunky and then at Decatur with her daughter. I was her pastor four years and during that time I never heard her speak disrespectfully of any person. I also heard her neighbors say that they had never heard her speak evil of anyone. She departed this life February 23, 1935, and her body was buried beside that of her husband in the church cemetery at Chunky, Miss.

G. A. BROADUS, Pastor.

WILLIAM MARTIN ARMSTRONG

William Martin Armstrong was born in Attalla County, Mississippi, October 14, 1863, and died in Flora, Miss., March 3, 1935. He was the son of J. Flint and Mrs. C. Tyler Armstrong. When he was but a child the family moved to Kil-michael, Miss., where he grew to manhood. He later came to Vaiden, Miss., where he was married to Miss Laura Cain of that town. To them were born two daughters: Louise, now Mrs. Paul Stephenson of Flora; and Wilhelmina, who is Mrs. Howard Martin of Jackson.

Brother Armstrong served as steward and Sunday school superintendent of the Methodist Church at Vaiden, for nearly twenty years, and he filled both offices in the church at Flora, after his removal to that place. A service was held at his home in Flora, but the funeral was held in the little church at Vaiden—the church at whose altar his years and his best service were given. The pastors of the churches at Flora and at Vaiden officiated, and burial was in the family plot. He lived out his allotment of years, but life at its longest is but a span in length. It begins with a song of hope and it ends with the sob of breaking hearts. Our only hope is in the blood of him who died to save us from sin and death. Only that can enable us to sing again the songs of Zion and lift our faces toward the dawn of God's eternal morning. One glad day we expect to be reunited with our loved ones on the other side.

W. L. DUREN.

"A SCRAP OF PAPER"

Next time you pick up a piece of good-quality paper to write a letter to a friend, try to guess the amount of water used in making a tone of similar paper. You are unlikely to guess aright, for it is difficult to realize that 80,000 gallons would be needed!

Rags, grass, and wood are all used in paper-making, according to the kind of paper that is wanted. Further variations are obtained by mixing dyes, china clay, and size with the pulp from which paper is produced.

Paper made from rags is tough, but it is rarely as cheap to make as the kinds made from wood. The paper on which these very words are printed was probably at one time part of a tree in a forest!

No matter whether wood, rags, or grass is used, the first step is to turn it into pulp. If rags are being used, they are first dusted and sorted, and are then cut up and washed. A visit to a paper factory would show you that the next stage is to steep the rags in a solution of caustic soda.

Wood for paper-making arrives at the mill in the form of thin sheets, so that it can be steeped at once. If grass is being used, it arrives in bundles, usually from Spain and Africa. After steeping, machinery beats the rags, grass, or wood into pulp. The water is added.

The next stage is probably the most interesting of all. You will wonder how the sheets are produced from this pulp. An ingenious machine is used. First the pulp is run on to a tray with a bottom constructed of wire mesh. The mesh is so fine that the water drops through but the fibres in the pulp do not. To enable these fibres to make a more solid sheet, the tray is jogged sideways—in much the same way as a sieve is shaken. Then the paper passes forward to a series of drying rollers, and it finally emerges as a rough sheet.

There are still a number of further processes, however, before the sheet can be called suitable for use. These operations differ according to the way the finished paper is to be used. Some papers are passed between warm rollers running at different speeds. This gives a gloss to the surface. Others may be run through baths of gelatine to improve the quality.

If you want to know how cardboard (or "paste-board" as it is really called), is made, the answer is that it is formed by a machine which pastes several rough sheets of paper to a middle sheet. Tracing paper is made by soaking some kinds of ordinary paper in a solution of Canadian balsam and turpentine.

No doubt you have sometimes held a sheet of paper to the light and have noticed the watermark—words and designs in the paper itself. The effect is obtained by the paper-maker passing the sheets between rollers bearing the words and design, before the paper is quite dry. —Methodist Recorder.

"Before I took Cardui," writes Mrs. G. W. Akin, of Somerset, Ky., "I would be weak and nervous and could not rest at night. My back would ache so much. As soon as I began taking Cardui, I would rest better and feel so much stronger, and my back would stop hurting. I highly recommend Cardui to other ladies." . . . Thousands of women testify that Cardui relieved their pains at menstruation time, and that by continued use of it for a reasonable length of time, their strength has been renewed and general health improved. ## History's Sublimest Victor

By Frank Kingdon

The strangest story Christianity has to tell is of One who was so gloriously alive that death was but an incident in His experiences.

That men should dare to proclaim that there lived a Man who rose from the dead has won them an audience wherever they have declared it. The assurance of Jesus' resurrection was as wings on the feet of the great apostle carrying him to the limits of His world as an ambassador of the Cross.

This Jesus whom we preach is history's sublimest victor. He never shed a drop of blood nor brought a tear to suffering eyes; no foot of territory did He possess among all the world's proud acres; yet neither statesman nor soldier has ever gained from life such laurels as are His. He won a victory for love over all hate both within Him and outside. The marshaled hosts of falsehood opposed Him; but through them He walked unscathed, secure in the blameless raiment of truth. When all men doubted, He kept the faith and won its fight. In the end, when hatred, slander, and skepticism allied themselves with death, He was not afraid, but marched, face forward, through the dark shadow into the light of life's morning that passeth not away.

One doubt only stirs in our minds, that we shall be unworthy to tell such a story as it might be told. But worthily or no, once having seen His glory, we must declare it with all the skill we have. No man ever stammers that name in love but that his speech seems richer and he is nobler.

MUSSOLINI HAS WRITTEN TO ALL THE SCHOOL leaders in Italy, according to the Religious Telescope, recommending the use of the New Testament as follows: "All professors and teachers shall read the New Testament, shall explain the divine Book to the children, and see to it that they memorize the best passages. This Book shall not be missing in any school library, for it is ever new throughout the centuries. It is the greatest of all books, the most necessary of all books because it is divine."

GOVERNMENT TRADE AUTHORITIES have been investigating certain firms as to false and fraudulent statements made by certain advertisers, and in some cases "cease and desist" orders have been issued. We do not think that those authorities should overlook such publicity as, "Not a cough in a carload," "Stimulating—but never irritating," and "They satisfy." We believe that "imported" is not the worst misrepresentation to be made concerning advertised products.

THE ANCHOR OF MORALITY is the caption of a striking paragraph by Dean Inge, formerly of St. Paul's, London. He said: "I believe that no morality based on secularism can be satisfactory. It is through the divine life in men, the Christ in us, that ethics belong to the eternal or spiritual world and that moral conduct becomes as it were the sacrament, the outward and visible sign of faith, hope, and love directed to a Being who in His nature sits above the conflict of right or wrong. What is relative and subjective in morality is thus anchored to absolute truth and goodness. Christianity is a divine life, not a divine science."

HON. C. H. CAHAN, SECRETARY OF STATE in the present Canadian Government, took it upon himself recently to deliver a rebuke to the clergy of the Dominion. He said they were too much inclined to meddle with politics "of which they know nothing." The Citizen, of Ottawa, replied on behalf of the ministers, that they might be ignorant of the brand of politics that elected the present House of Commons in Canada; and they might not understand the manipulation of economic factors which had brought about a poverty and privation rapidly growing worse; but that they did know the home problems of the more than a million people now on the Canadian dole. The designing politician is usually more exercised on account of the knowledge of the electorate than on account of the ignorance.

The present volume gives a complete roster of the names and addresses of the officials of all the denominations, and much other valuable reference material. It is published and sold by the Federal Council.

MICKEY MOUSE, the most popular of all movie heroes to the children, has not been used to advertise either tobacco or liquor, although it has been reported that the brewers, distillers, and cigarette manufacturers have offered Walt Disney fabulous sums for the right to use them. Union Signal, in a recent article on Mickey Mouse, the children's friend, reported that Mr. Disney is said to have stated his purpose never to permit the use of these characters for any commodity of which parents might not approve. He is said to have refused to comment on a story that "a liquor firm had offered $150,000, and a tobacco manufacturer $35,000 for the use of the Mickey cartoons."

THE DUST STORMS, so prevalent and of such a serious nature in the West, have little meaning for the average person until the alkali-laden clouds descend out of the blue, as they did upon Mississippi and Louisiana a few days ago. At first a decided haze filled the afternoon sky, and by nightfall a fog of blinding and irritating dust enveloped the land. Driving was made difficult on account of poor visibility, and the dust was extremely irritating to the eyes and to the nasal passages. Since the visitation, we can better understand the problem of the people who dwell in that arid section. We do not see how it will be possible for them to endure such a scourge for any considerable time.

"THE INTERNATIONAL MIND"

The movement for world peace is doing much to call our attention in a very forceful and concrete way to the sources from which any great enterprise or humanitarian movement is developed. We are gradually coming to realize that, while the germinal concept may have originated within a small group or even in a single mind, it never becomes effective as a world enterprise without the support of the "International Mind." That mind may function through an international court, or through international diplomacy; but it is essentially a reflection of the feeling of good will evolved out of the individual and the collective thinking of all the units in the family of nations. It is not necessarily true that all the nations have reached a common point of advance in that regard; but rather that the conclusions reached are so largely shared as to be irresistible. Before such a mind, the frontiers of selfishness are dissolved and the peoples of all the earth are fused into a great brotherhood. The International Mind may formulate its pronouncements through any agency that may be adopted for that purpose, but its authority and commission represent the sweep and the compassionate yearning of the Son of God, as embodied in and propagated through his church. No single enterprise that the Church has undertaken has contributed more to this consummation than its missionary endeavor. The missionary is the pioneer of the international mind throughout the world. He has instructed the peoples of the earth in the fundamental principles of international obligation and good will—a Gospel inconsistent with a policy of national isolation and selfishness. He has stimulated the commerce and travel which make for international understanding. While he has been primarily the interpreter of a Gospel seeking the souls of men, he has been a no less faithful interpreter of the mental attitudes and feelings of widely separated peoples and apparently warring civilizations. He has been an outpost of world peace in the very ends of the earth; and has done more to remove the frontiers of race prejudice and to break down a selfish nationalism than everything else. He reflects the "International Mind" which is today inspiring a new hope in the world.

AFTER LENT?

When the Lenten period is past the resumption of social gaieties and frivolities, and the abandonment of repression is so marked that the fact is noted in the society columns of the daily press. People return at once to their old selves, and there has been no perceptible change in social attitudes or in moral practices. This causes one to wonder if a spurt of devotion and fervor leaves any permanent residue in the lives of such people. To put the matter directly and bluntly, does a spasmodic piety add anything to the spiritual estate of the individual by whom it is practiced? Is a person who goes from a prayer-meeting to a cocktail party any different from what he was when he went from the cocktail party to the prayer-meeting? Does formal direction determine spiritual values? For answer to these questions, let us recall the unclean spirit, disembodied, walking through dry places and finding no rest; it returned to its former habitation. It re-entered the swept and garnished house with a seven-fold re-enforcement. Jesus says the total result was an aggravated case of wickedness. Peter, on the same point, says that one who escapes the pollutions of the world through knowledge of Christ, if he return to the polluting habits, is like a dog turned to his own vomit; and the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire. If this be true of one in whom a real work of grace was wrought, can it be less true of one who, for a fixed period, bargains to observe a shallow and formal allegiance? The answer of the Scripture is too obvious to need elaboration. Where Lent ends, what we really are is revealed. Faith is not made real by an intrigue of sackcloth, and sacrifice is not the virtue of a season. They are the abiding realities of the soul that has experienced salvation. They are not the flowers of a season, but the constant adornments of life. The religious calendar is not nearly so important as is the obligation to keep one's self unspotted from the world.

THE GOLDEN CROSS

The Hospital Week, by which the Golden Cross Society and originally organized, does not exist any more, but the Golden Cross Society can not lose its identity or its appeal as long as there are people who suffer affliction of the body without the means to obtain treatment. The Society has been made auxiliary to the Home Department of the Board of Missions, and the enrollment is to take place during Hospital Week. That period has been fixed by the law of the Church to include the second and third Sundays of May. But the fixing of a day and the election of a Golden Cross Director will not accomplish what the Church has in mind. The legislation in the discipline will be without meaning until we shall have a ministry and a people committed to this very worthy undertaking. Hitherto little has been accomplished outside of certain hospital centers; but we believe that the time has come when every pastor and every church should put forth consistent effort for the Golden Cross. Let our people make the enrollment and give our sick and dependent people a new ray of hope.

CHAPEL WORK AT SANATORIUM

By Rev. W. M. Williams

The Annual Conference in session at Portland in 1922 decided to send a pastor to the Magee Sanatorium charge. I was appointed to this work and served five years. At the expiration of that time the Conference realized the need of full-time service at the Sanatorium and I was again appointed to this work. For three years the Conference Board of Missions made an appropriation for its support, and then, finding itself unable to continue the support of the work, decided to adopt some other plan, realizing the Church could not afford to discontinue a work so worthwhile. At the request of the Board of Missions the Conference unanimously adopted the plan of a free-will offering in every church for the support of the work at Sanatorium. This plan has met with hearty approval and co-operation by both pastor and people. At the Sanatorium we have an average of three hundred patients in addition to the staff and employees. I spend seven days a week visiting the sick, and performing other helpful duties, holding services with bed patients, cheering the discouraged, homesick and broken-hearted men and women. I have been able to provide religious literature, tracts, Bibles and portions of God's word in booklets, etc. Several districts in the Conference furnish copies of the Christian Advocate, and the Boyworth League contributes copies of the High Road. I visit the Preventorium where we have an average of forty underweight children. A wonderful work is being done there by a corps of Christian women. At the infirmary for colored people I hold services and distribute religious literature. The Bible class in this department is in charge of Mrs. Henry Roswell. The pastors of the Baptist, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches of Magee preach once a month each, and the chaplain preaches the other Sundays or supplies a visiting preacher. Preaching services are held at 6:15 p. m. in the chapel. Our Sunday school is well organized and we have an average attendance of one hundred, with a corps of well equipped teachers. The bed patients are provided with literature and study the lessons, many patients sending in written interpretations of the lessons to the Adult Bible Class. The superintendent, the staff and employees co-operate with the chaplain in making his work indeed a labor of love.

STEWARDSHIP

By Miss Effie Hughes

(Sent for publication by Mrs. Ernest Moore, Editor, North Mississippi Woman's Missionary Page)

Christian stewardship must be universal in its service. It is the recognition and acknowledgment of all life, with all its vast and varied contents, of which money can represent but a minor part. When we acknowledge God's ownership, and take His Son Jesus Christ as our Redeemer, and accept the responsibilities of Christian stewardship, we are then enjoying life in its highest level. Stewardship is God's way of preparing men for partnership with himself. It is a regrettable fact that so many Christians fail to recognize stewardship as a positive duty enjoined in the New Testament. Many people think "stewardship" and "tithing" are one and the same, but stewardship is a much more comprehensive conception of life than that which is included in the practice of tithing. It is easily possible for us to be "tithers" all our lives, and yet never have even a glimpse of the beautiful and wonderful things which are assured for those who have entered into the larger fellowship of the stewardship of life. Christian stewardship is first characterized by faithfulness. "It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." Life is a unit, and every element in that unit is entrusted to man for certain great purposes. It is not possible to substitute one element for another. A proper balance of life can be secured only through a well rounded stewardship. The faithful steward, in order to fulfill his obligations, must match God's plan with the one for his own life. It is not a matter of individual belief or like or dislike, but is an essential part of a Christian life. In all the teachings of God's word it is plain that in acceptance of the Saviourhood of Jesus it is essential that we accept His plan of Christian stewardship. God plays no favoritism in the creation of man. He makes the sun and the rain to shine and fall on the rich and the poor alike. He confers no patent or nobility but the right to labor and to love and offers no privileges save those of opportunity. Our birthright is not the crowning power of man, but the grace of God given through His Son our Lord and Master Jesus Christ. Christian stewardship identifies us with God and holds us in fellowship with Him. In fellowship we lay ourselves upon the altar of service to our Master, and in so doing we lay the sweetest hopes of life and without these hopes we have very little to live for. As we band ourselves together around this precious altar of service, there comes to our hearts that knowledge of the presence of God talking to us and guiding us. From that beautiful song, "In the Garden," comes the remembrance of that sweet refrain:

"And He walks with me, and He talks with me, and He tells me I am His own
And the joy we share, as we tarry there, none other has ever known."

THE METHODIST MEETING-HOUSE AT WASHINGTON, MISS., IN WHICH STATE OF MISSISSIPPI WAS ORGANIZED

By Henry G. Hawkins

The little Methodist Meeting-House, at Washington, Miss., in which the Constitutional Convention was held in 1817, organizing the western half of the Mississippi Territory into the State of Mississippi, was demolished by the storm in 1873. It had not been used for church purposes for about forty-seven years. On the spot where it once stood is being erected a monument, which is to be unveiled May 14, 1935, with ceremonies, in which Rev. H. M. Dobbs, Presiding Bishop of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Hon. M. S. Conner, Governor of Mississippi, and others, take part.

We do not know with certainty the date of the construction of this meeting-house. The deed for church purposes signed by Lorenzo Dow and his wife, Peggy Dow, is dated November 20, 1811. Ordinarily in our time a building is erected after the title papers to the land are written; but in this case it may be that Dow had several years previously secured the land for a church, and that the house of worship was built thereon, and that the technicality of writing the deed came later. In this document, which belongs to Jefferson College, and is also on record in the Adams County Court House, the residence of the Dows is given as Claiborne County, Miss.; and it was during the period when they were living in considerable destitution in a lonely cabin, a few miles from Port Gibson. Their more permanent residence was in Connecticut.

The above theory accords with the tradition so prevalent that it must have been so, that the preliminary trial of Aaron Burr for treason against the United States began in the Methodist Church and was continued under the big oak tree near. This trial was in 1807. It is possible, however, that an earlier church building was on this, or some nearby spot. An exhaustive search of the Adams County records, or of the William Winans papers might clear up these points.

This Convention building is said to have been partly brick, partly wood. It ceased to be used for worship about 1826, when the congregation constructed a more commodious brick house, in which they have worshipped ever since, standing today right on Highway 61. The church trustees sold the building and lot, 70x100 feet, in 1830, to Jefferson College, which used it for literary purposes until 1873, when it was blown down.

We get some idea of the building from a report read by B. L. C. Wales, for a committee appointed on repairs, to make the building "suitable for accommodation of the primary department of Jefferson College," costing $761.15, as given on page 17, Vol. III, Minutes of Trustees: "The roof to be newly shingled. The ground floor, including gallery, to be laid in brick. The upper story to be floored, and to be supported by a range of pillars from below. Both the lower and upper room to be plastered, and the lower one to be ceiled. The old stairway to be taken down, and a new one constructed on the exterior of the building; and the necessary doors and windows to be opened. The lower, or principal room to be fitted up as represented in the accompanying drawing, with seven ranges of desks of ten each, together with the necessary benches, with intervals for passing between and around them; and to be accommodated with a suitable stage for the professor."

The Constitutional Convention of 1817 was in session, with some recess for committee work, and on account of Sundays, for forty days; and before they adjourned they voted to the Trustees of the Meeting-House one hundred dollars for use of the building.

The Trustees of Jefferson College, on August 20, 1934, deeded the original lot, and thirty feet additional, to the State of Mississippi for the purpose of this two thousand dollar monument, commemorating these events and achievements.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Vicksburg District Conference will open at 10 a. m., Tuesday, April 30, Fayette, Miss., and the purpose is to close early Wednesday afternoon.

The report of the pastoral charges will be made chiefly by verbal answers to questions covering finances, Church schools, subscriptions to Advocate, members received, etc.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Corinth District Conference will convene at New Albany, Miss., May 9 and 10. The opening session will begin at 9 a. m. Thursday, May 9. We are hoping that each member of the Conference will be there on time.

Each pastor should hold his church conference or conferences as soon as possible and elect his delegates. Then, of course, send a list of the delegates to Rev. N. G. Golding and myself.

Persons representing the various interests of the church will be welcome at our conference. It will be well for all those intending to attend our conference in such capacity to let both Brother Golding and myself know it. Please tell us when you expect to arrive that entertainment may be provided and a time arranged for you to speak. For your information I feel that I should say that, at present, it is our intention to give a large part of the first afternoon to education and evangelism. The second morning lay activities will be given an hour, and missions will have a place on the program the second afternoon.

The pastors will please work hard on District Goals from now till May 9 and 10.

J. D. WROTEN, P. E.

The hospitals of the Congo Mission might seem strange to people accustomed to the fine buildings and splendid equipment of hospitals in America. In Africa the hospital buildings are for the most part of mud and grass, while the hospital beds are made by placing four poles in the ground with smaller poles over these held tightly together by a native vine. These are covered with palm branches and a native mat laid upon them and the bed is ready for the patient. Some of the patients object to the beds at first because they are so high from the ground, and after the doctor and nurse have left the building, these patients get out of bed, place their mats on the floor (or rather the ground, for the ground forms the floor) and sleep there. Another difficulty that the missionary doctor or nurse has is to keep other members of the patient's family out of his bed.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

of the church died, and on December 20, of the same year, Captain Thomas Webb died in Bristol, England.

Probably no quadrennium in the history of the church ever made a poorer statistical exhibit than did this; but the measure of the achievements are not discovered through the tabulated results. It was a period in which the Methodist organization was discovering and developing its own strength, and was laying the foundation for the substantial conquests soon to follow. As the quadrennium drew to a close, the storm which broke in 1792 was somewhat abated; the preachers came to the General Conference with an intelligent understanding of the need; and they addressed themselves to the task of making laws that were constructive rather than defensive. They were probably chastened in spirit by the consciousness of the barren years of controversy through which they had passed; and they were, therefore, amenable to spiritual appeal as they had not been in the heat of battle. Certainly the great ministerial losses must have admonished them of their need for recovering the fervor and devotion of the days of their beginning.

The second General Conference met in Baltimore, October 20, 1796, and it continued in session for fourteen days. No roll of the Conference was kept, but Bishop Asbury says that there were about one hundred preachers present. That estimate is confirmed by the manuscript journal of William Colbert who was a member of the Conference. Only about half of the number qualified for membership were present; and the lack of full representation indicates one of the problems which grew with the extension of the borders of the church. The distance to the seat of the General Conference made the frontier preachers unwilling to attend, and so whole sections of the church were without representation. Attendance upon the Conference deprived the circuits of ministerial supply and service during the time of its sitting; and the journey to and from the Conference made this absence cover a period of two months in some cases. This became quite a problem for both the preachers and the people.

The objection raised by Jesse Lee and others to the multiplying of the Annual Conferences led to legislation fixing the number of such Conferences and their boundaries. It was provided that there should be six Annual Conferences: The New England, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Virginia, South Carolina, and Western. Provision was made for some elasticity in caring for new circuits. The membership of the Annual Conferences was to be made up of all the traveling preachers within their boundaries, who were in full connection, or were to be received into full connection. This is still the rule for ministerial qualification, but there has since been the introduction of lay delegates also.

Among other things, the General Conference adopted a uniform Deed of Settlement containing the "Trust Clause" under which properties are acquired and held for the uses of the church. The time of probation for an elder was fixed at two years after he becomes a deacon; and regulations were made for the licensing, ordaining and trial of local preachers, but they were not admitted to elder's orders. No books were permitted to be published without the consent of a bishop and two-thirds of the Philadelphia Conference. The Methodists were prohibited from marrying unbelievers unless they were seekers after salvation. There was talk of electing another bishop, but Dr. Coke offered himself for full time and residence in America. Only a small minority of the Conference opposed it and the offer was accepted. There was a move to repeal the law creating the presiding eldership, but it did not prevail. The wives of preachers were allowed $64, the same salary as their husbands; and the frightful losses by location brought the Conference to realize that something must be done to relieve the anxiety of married preachers for their families, and to relieve the preachers on account of age and impaired health. One of the most important acts of the Conference, therefore, was the measure creating the "Chartered Fund," for the care of worn out preachers and their dependents. This Fund was chartered under the laws of Pennsylvania and its offices were located in Philadelphia; and no single move of the church has done more to reassure the traveling preachers, or to save their loved ones from actual suffering and humiliation.

Two of the most important matters before the Conference were slavery and the sale and use of spirituous liquors. On the subject of slavery the action did not go further than earnest caution concerning those admitted to official station, and that in admitting slaveholders to office in the church the preachers should "require security" of them to emancipate their slaves whenever the law and the circumstances might admit. No slaveholder might be received into the church until he had been spoken to freely on the subject of slavery, and any member who might sell a slave was to be expelled immediately. Touching the sale and use of intoxicating liquors, the Conference said: "If any member of our society retail or give spirituous liquors, and anything disorderly be transacted under his roof on this account, the preacher who has the oversight of the circuit shall proceed against him as in the case of other immoralities; and the person accused shall be cleared, suspended, or excluded, according to his conduct, as on other charges of immorality." After providing for the next quadrennial Conference, the session adjourned.

Although the General Conference voted to accept the offer of Dr. Coke to be Bishop Asbury's associate in America, the plans which Asbury drew for their joint operations practically eliminated Dr. Coke from every semblance of episcopal prerogative and authority. Dr. Coke says that it was proposed to send him off to spend the winter in New England as a mere preacher while Asbury was to hold the three southern conferences entirely by himself, and that he was not consulted concerning any appointment whatever. Asbury's greatness and service can not be accepted as an apology for his treatment of Dr. Coke, and with that simple statement of opinion, we dismiss that phase of the subject. A short time before the Conference adjourned, the British Minutes arrived and Dr. Coke was appointed to preside in Ireland. Accordingly he secured a temporary release from his engagement until the Irish Conference was over. He sailed from Charleston early in February 1797; and he returned about the middle of November, in time to attend the Virginia Conference at Lane's chapel. He found Asbury's attitude unaltered; and he says that when Asbury was too weak to attend the session of the South Carolina Conference at Charleston, he ignored him completely and appointed Jonathan Jackson to station the preachers and Jesse Lee to preside at the sessions.

Early in 1797 Asbury became ill with "intermittent fever." He attended the Virginia and the South Carolina Conferences; but he did not undertake to go to Kentucky; and in September his body became so swollen as to indicate a very serious condition. He made an effort to go to the New England Conference at Wiltbraham, Massachusetts, but he was too ill to continue the journey. He wrote Jesse Lee asking him to attend and he presided by the election of the Conference. At that Conference Asbury launched another of his unconstitutional schemes. He nominated Richard Whatcoat, Francis Poythress and Jesse Lee for "assistant bishops in the United States;" and he proposed that they should be elected by the Annual Conferences. The New England Conference, under the presidency of Jesse Lee, rejected the proposition, it "being thought contrary to the form of Discipline."

After the General Conference of 1796, the church began to make slow but substantial recovery from the O'Kelly troubles. The membership increase was not great at first; but by 1802, as we have already stated, the total number of members in 1792 had been reached again. The losses through locations in the ministry, however, continued for a number of years longer. On September 27, 1798, John Dickins died of yellow fever in Philadelphia. He was English born and was one of the ablest and most constructive of the early preachers, and he was father of the Methodist Book Concern. Ezekiel Cooper was chosen to succeed Dickins in the management of the Book Concern. The four years following the second General Conference were made memorable by visitations of yellow fever which laid in desolation the northern cities; but they were, notwithstanding, years of substantial growth in all particulars.

The manner in which the Methodist circuit rider followed the trail of the pioneer settlers over the mountains and into the very heart of the great American wilderness is one of the most thrilling stories of religious adventure on record. The names of Jeremiah Lambert on the Holston, James Haw in Kentucky, Tobias Gibson in Mississippi, Elisha Bowman in Louisiana, John Kobler in Ohio, Benjamin Young in Illinois, and John Travis in Missouri will be treasured recollections of Methodist history as long as there are those who appreciate the sacrificial spirit in men. They represent the vanguard of the Methodist itinerants in the winning of the West; and in their light there shine the names of such consecrated pioneers of the local ministry as Francis Clark, Francis McCormick and many others, who without official recognition or hope of personal reward laid the foundation for the spiritual empire of the Methodists in the valley of the Mississippi and its eastern tributaries.

The settlement of the western country was made extremely difficult by the Alleghenies—a great mountain wall extending from north to south almost the entire length of the Atlantic seaboard. And added to the other handicaps was the peril of Indian hostility which was a constant threat to the march of civilization. The settlement of the West came about through the constant extension of the Virginia and the North Carolina frontiers. The hardy pioneers pressed over the barriers into the richer farm lands and the men of the Daniel Boone type followed the game trails deep into the great forests. They often followed the water-courses into the interior until they were quite detached from the older settlements. Many an adventurous man fell before the fury of the savage; but others were lured on by his footprints, and the trail was constantly lengthened until the rude huts of the backwoodsmen were to be found in hundreds of clearings which dotted the valleys beyond the mountains.

Wherever the settler's cabin was to be found, thither the itinerant preacher made his way, there was heard the voice of those consecrated servants of the church, and there was the beginning of a Methodist circuit. The preacher shared the hospitality of the frontiersmen, he left with them the treasures of his

Dr. Brooks, pastor at Tupelo, Miss., is engaged in pre-Easter services; and beginning on April 22, Dr. George Stoves of Memphis will assist him in the revival campaign from which he expects great things for his people. The service of song will be in charge of Mr. George Kester.

Rev. J. E. Williams, of Poplarville charge, reports a fine revival in which he was assisted by Rev. A. P. Williams, of Richmond, Virginia. There were about

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference was held in the Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., April 2-4, 1935.

The general theme of the conference was "The Christ of Every Road," and the opening address was delivered by Dr. W. L. Duren, on the subject "Christianity at the Cross-Roads."

Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, president, presided in her usual gracious manner and in her annual message reviewed the outstanding achievements of 1934. The reports of officers showed marked progress over those of last year.

Mrs. Helen Bourne, secretary of Education and Promotion Council, brought the Wednesday evening address, and also the noon meditations which were most inspiring. Mrs. Bourne stirred the hearts of the entire group each day with messages on "Man in God's Image" and "God in Man's Image."

Miss Mary Skinner, of the Board of Christian Education, spoke on "The Beginning of the Road" with reference to the new co-operative plan for missionary education of children.

Among other interesting speakers who brought messages during the conference were the Wesley House workers. Mrs. Eurie M. Weston and Mrs. L. W. Alford.

The music, under the general direction of Miss Ethel Pöwe, organist, was a source of real inspiration during the entire session of the conference.

Much credit for the success of the conference is due the president of the Main St. Auxiliary, Mrs. J. T. Wallace; Mrs. D. O. Segrest, secretary of Hattiesburg District; Rev. J. T. Leggett, pastor of the Main St. Church, and other local chairmen who had given much careful attention to every detail.

Mrs. Joseph A. Smith, recording secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

It was with deep regret that the Louisiana Conference Missionary Society accepted the resignation of Mrs. F. H. Bradshaw, of Mansfield, Conference Superintendent of Bible and Mission Study, Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, District Secretary of the Ruston District, and Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, District Secretary of the New Orleans District. All had made splendid contributions to the work of this Conference and their valued services will be greatly missed.

At the recent session of the Conference, Mrs. S. M. Collins, of Monroe, was elected to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Bradshaw, and Mrs. R. B. Knott, of Ruston, to fill the place left vacant by Mrs. Dawson. Since the adjournment of the Conference, Mrs. J. W. Warren, 470 Audubon Boulevard, New Orleans, has been selected as the secretary of the New Orleans District. Mrs. Warren comes into the work highly recommended as a capable, enthusiastic and consecrated leader.

A most beautiful and Christlike spirit has frequently manifested itself in this Conference when former Conference presidents have shown their great love, devotion and zeal for the work by filling offices of lesser rank. Mrs. Collins, who served as Conference president for two years, is now assuming the duties of Superintendent of Study. Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, who for ten years served this Conference as its president, served as secretary of the New Orleans District this past year and is now taking over her duties as zone leader for the New Orleans zone. Mrs. O. S. Spinks, another capable Conference president of past years, is heading one of the most important standing committees of the Conference. With such a fine spirit as this among the leaders the work cannot help but go forward.

* * *

A touching moment of the Conference session came when Miss Clara Chalmers, Louisiana Conference Missionary daughter, was called to the platform and presented with a life membership by the women of the New Orleans District and a few other friends. It was not only an expression of love and esteem the missionary women of Louisiana hold for Miss Chalmers, but an appreciation of the outstanding work she is doing in a far-away land.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI—OUR MISSION SPECIAL

Our Conference at its last session in Indianola formally adopted as a mission special for the Conference, the building a hospital in the heart of Africa to enable Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, our missionaries from North Mississippi to more effectively do their work. Dr. and Mrs. Lewis are supported by the church at Amory, Miss.

The Conference has invited the state, both Conferences, to join in this great enterprise.

At the Christmas time an appeal was sent out by the Board of Missions for contributions to this worthy cause. More than a thousand dollars came in. Many churches did not respond. We are sending this call at this Easter time for contributions. Will not many churches give the people a chance? Let our pastors announce it and explain the great need. There will be many who will be glad to help.

Send all contributions to Rev. R. G. Moore, treasurer, Leland, Miss.

J. H. HOLDER,

President of Board of Missions,
North Mississippi Conference.

INTERMEDIATE ASSEMBLY-CAMP

After many years of saying "Mansfield Assembly" it will seem strange to change to "Shreveport Assembly." From experience it has been proven that work among intermediates can best be done with the camp type of program. Therefore in Louisiana this year we are going to have an assembly-camp at Centenary College from June 10 to June 15, that will be open to delegates from Shreveport, Ruston, and Monroe Districts. A program has been outlined that will vary somewhat from the Mansfield program, but which will be just as interesting, instructive, and enjoyable.

Your church needs to be represented whether it has an organized intermediate department or not. If you are of intermediate age, 12 through 15, you should be in a camp this year.

You folk in Shreveport, Ruston, and Monroe Districts start planning to attend. We are expecting you. The expense of the assembly-camp will be $10 this year, which includes board, registration, books, and supplies. Bring your Bibles, kodaks, linens: such as sheets, towels, etc., pillows. (to rest your weary head on, not to fight with)—and swimming suits.

Remember the North Louisiana Assembly-Camp place and date. You intermediates in other districts, find out about your camp and plan to be there.

ALVIN P. SMITH, Dean,
Shreveport Assembly-Camp.

RESURRECTION

By Frances Minor Crymes

When birds from the northland are flying southward during cold autumn days and nights, and those that have tarried with us through spring and summer, having reared their broods to maturity, join the migrating throng, we feel a genuine regret to see them go. Without the well founded hope of their return, how much sadder our hearts would be!

When autumnal flowers fade, and nothing is left of their splendor, we could hardly endure looking upon their withered stalks were it not that we are sure of a renewal of their beauty in good time. Who would cast a second look at a bulb, were it not for the sure belief that, folded within it is the promise of next season's bloom?

Without the knowledge that the bare twigs of every rose bush hold the beginnings of next year's roses, how could we remember their former loveliness without tears?

Bare branches clash in the blasts of winter, snow-laden or swathed in ice, as if cold Death had claimed and shrouded them; did we not know that deep underground, awaiting the approach of sunny spring, lies a network of dormant roots, ready to convey new life to every twig, to swell every bud, to clothe every tree anew in glorious array, how frightful a world would we expect to face, after winter has gone, leaving naked skeletons standing stark against the sky!

But when we remember that spring is surely coming, bringing new beauty, we can marvel at the exquisite structure of bare trees, the grace of vines.

Thus, seeing and feeling the miracle of resurrection anew each spring, and recalling the solemn, beautiful, hope-inspiring, God-given words: "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept:" we find it easy to understand that the grave could not hold Him, "Lord of Life, who was dead, and is alive forevermore," and we are thrilled to realize that the grave cannot hold awakened life, which breaks through the muck of earth to evince the performance of the ever recurring miracle.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, APRIL 28.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

INSPIRATION AND AUTHORITY OF THE BIBLE

The Bible is the message of God in the words of men. The writers were inspired in a manner and to a degree not found elsewhere. It furnishes a cross-section of human life and experience for 1,500 years, forty-five generations. This alone would make it a book of inestimable value as human history, especially so since it relates to that part of the race with the deepest yearning to find and know God. It is light, and light is revelation. Research discovers facts, revelation discloses meanings. Beginning with a primitive people, truth is gradually unfolded till men "behold the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Because men were "hard of heart" and "slow to believe" it required centuries for that "fullness of time" to come in which God could speak by his Son. Every writer spoke for his time and to his people, some of whom were but kindergartners whose sand piles and building blocks seem childish enough if we forget that we have all been children, and that even God accommodates himself to people and their conditions in his teaching. Most assuredly, the Bible reveals the will of God, the purpose of God. We are not left in doubt as to the crime of murder, theft, violence; nor as to the sin of covetousness, selfishness and secret lust. Our difficulty with the Bible is not that of understanding its mysteries, but living its clarities—the great commandment and the Golden Rule. John Welsey says: "The Spirit of God not only once inspired those who wrote it, but continually inspires, supernaturally assists those that read it with earnest prayer." The Bible will infallibly lead the seeking soul to God. What more can we ask or desire? Tear-stained pages and thumb-worn leaves furnish conclusive evidence as to whether our mothers esteemed every part of it equal in value.

The law, precepts, commandments, fear (awe), and judgments of God are perfect, sure, right, pure, clean, righteous. They restore, make wise, rejoice, enlighten, endure and perfect his followers. They are more precious than gold and more satisfying than honey, giving timely warning to those passing through the jungle of life beset with dangers and snares on every hand. All find difficulty in understanding their own errors, because they are their own—errors of race, family, training, environment. They are close to us, fitting like the skin; dear to us, rooted in our hearts. Then, there are secret faults, hidden even from ourselves. Like malignant tumors, they breed poison in the soul. Were they exposed, others might help us conquer them. If we know them without effort at correction, we become hypocrites. Presumptuous sins we know and nurse as pets. They are recognized but not renounced. We condemn pride, arrogance, intemperate temper in others, but "we are just built that way." We go from small to great, from sin to vice, from vice to crime. A little wholesome introspection may save us from great transgression. Sin always precedes crime. Christians are to work at the heart, which is the heart of all social ills and evils.

Happy are those who have known and loved and used the Bible from childhood. It is our greatest book—great in its origin, great in its history and preservation, great in its effects on human life and character—taught to us by the wisest and holiest persons we have known. It is profitable for all who would be made complete in personality and efficiency. May the "words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in the sight" of that God who through the Bible has revealed himself as the Lover and Redeemer of humanity.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION AT L. S. U.

A Conference on Religious Education was one of the distinctive features of the Diamond Jubilee celebration of Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, La., April 4-13. The conference on Religious Education was held on Thursday morning, April 11, under the auspices of the Religious Council of the University. The general theme of the conference was "The Peace and Responsibility of the State University in Religious Education." Dr. James Monroe Smith, president of the University, and Dr. M. E. Dodd, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, delivered the principal addresses of the morning. Among the other guest speakers and participants of the conference were Bishop James Craik Morris, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Louisiana; Father M. ### "A MODERN ENCYCLOPEDIA"

By Rev. Jno. D. Ellis

I took a trip recently through "The Modern Encyclopedia," (Wm. H. Wise & Co., Publishers, New York), and read every word of the twenty-two thousand articles.

Like Alexander Humboldt, who traveled in South America, I came out of the four-months' journey with a great mass of new knowledge, in science, invention, discovery, art, history, mythology, et aliae.

As I read, I marked a sentence here, a paragraph yonder, and retraced my steps to re-read, and digest: In this way, much of the information has become a quality of mind, and permanent.

Whatever be a man's information, "The Modern Encyclopedia" will add to it, and fill in some gaps.

It is like unto a motion picture which causes objects to appear before the eye in variety of form, and pattern: Page after page of information in that variety which obviates the monotonous, and which broadens.

The advantage of "The Modern Encyclopedia" is, that its articles are so succinct and adequate a man is enticed to read everything in it, and in doing so, he finds much entertainment, as well as new knowledge.

As Glenn Frank says: "Educated men have never stopped their pursuit of information and insight."

Men who still pursue, will find many facts, and much information in "The Modern Encyclopedia." Larger works are valuable for reference, but they are too voluminous to read all the contents.

"The Modern Encyclopedia" should be in every home, and in the curriculum of every high school or college.

It is a one volume edition of 1327 double line pages, and the price is $3.50.

It can be ordered from the Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

It is especially valuable for up-to-date information about persons, places, and things; and it carries the reader into more than 20,000 topics of the universe, without being ipse dixit.

THE GOLDEN CROSS SOCIETY---METHODISM'S HAND OF HEALING TO THE WORTHY POOR

Once each year the Church calls upon her faithful people to extend the healing hand to those in need. The annual enrollment of the Golden Cross Society is the Church's response to her Lord's admonition—"And as ye go, heal!"

"A Golden Cross Enrollment shall be undertaken annually in every congregation," and it "shall include the second and third Sundays in May" (Discipline, 540, 541). The membership fee is 25 cents for those under fourteen and $1.00 or more for adults.

At least ninety-five cents of each Golden Cross dollar must be used to provide hospital care for the worthy poor in the Annual Conference where it is raised. If the Conference owns no hospital, it may designate other institutions to render this service. Golden Cross provides the ministry of healing to those in your own midst.

"Every Church school, Missionary Society, and Board of Lay Activities shall be a recruiting station for the Golden Cross. The pastor, the Lay Leader, the Church school superintendent, and President of the Woman's Missionary Society shall be recruiting officers of the Golden Cross and they shall render the Director and his committee all reasonable assistance in the work of the enrollment." (Discipline, 543).

Let us all move together in so worthy and holy an enterprise. Surely no pastor will fail to perfect the Disciplinary organization and present the Golden Cross appeal to the people! Surely no member able to do so will fail to enroll—for the sake of the suffering sick.

Write to the Board of Missions, Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tenn., for suggestions, literature, posters, buttons, and all available materials—if you have not already received them.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

John 12:32, 33: And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me. This He said, signifying what death He should die.

The Greeks would see Jesus. He told them that the hour had come for Him to be glorified. How was He to be glorified? "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."

Jesus "spake as never man spake."

But it takes more than a presentation of truth to win depraved hearts. "Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." Jesus taught that His words would judge men, but it would be His lifting up that would draw men.

Jesus wrought many mighty works. The great Physician soothed the fevered bodies of men. But Jesus preferred that his miracles be not noised abroad. He wanted more than curiosity. It takes more than a desire for loaves and fishes to change lives.

But Jesus did teach that His death would draw men. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me, This He said, signifying what death He should die." Also verse 27: "For this cause came I unto this hour."

Note the other teachings of Jesus concerning His death in this context:

Verse 31: "Now is the judgment of this world."

Verse 31: "Now shall the prince of this world be cast out."

Verse 25: "He that loveth His life shall lose it; and He that hateth His life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." Truly "our old man is crucified with Him."

Verse 32: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw ALL men unto Me."

Note also the teaching concerning His Person. Note who is to be lifted up. Two crucified thieves drew no one. But the holy, loving, suffering Christ would draw all men.

PRAYER

We thank Thee, O Heavenly Father, that Jesus taught us concerning the meaning of His death. Even after His resurrection "He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself" as He walked the Emmaus road. And today our hearts burn within us as He unfolds to us the full significance of His sufferings. "He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them and rose again." So may the love of Christ constrain us that we may live for Him each day. We ask in Jesus' name.

Dear Brother Duren: Just a word about the wonderful revival held at Long Beach.

Brother Charley Schultz, pastor at Court Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, came to us on Friday, April 5, and preached for us through Friday evening, April 12. The revival spirit was manifest from the very beginning. The church was full and often overcrowded every night, and our morning congregations were far better than we had expected. Brother Schultz was at his best, and he held the people's attention and interest to the last. His messages had the old time revival fervor, and one could feel the very presence and power of the Holy Ghost. People got happy and some actually shouted at one great service.

There were several conversions and reclamations and several came forward for church membership; there were ten who came up on the last night of the revival, and several more since then. At this writing we have 17 on roll to be received on Easter Sunday, and we are expecting more to follow.

The Church was greatly revived, and the community was made better because of the revival. Brother Schultz did good work for the Lord and our church here. He is a good evangelist. May God bless him and spare his life many years to be a blessing to others.

JAMES M. LEWIS, Pastor.

It is just as natural for the digestive system to respond to the laxative action of Thedford's Black-Draught as it is for the body to pick up energy from foods from the garden. Both are vegetable products of Nature. Black-Draught is composed of laxative herbs, selected in the course of long medical experience. And in Black-Draught they are prepared by simply drying and finely grinding them so that the human digestive system can most easily absorb the medicine needed to relieve constipation. When you need a laxative, get acquainted with Thedford's Black-Draught.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolution by the Missionary Society,
Pearl River Avenue Methodist Church,
McComb, Miss., March, 1935.

"We are weavers and each day
The threads of life we spin,
And be the colors what they may,
We still must weave them in.
Sometimes He gives us threads of gold,
To brighten up the way.
Then again He gives us colors so dark
They turn the gold to gray."

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to give us some dark threads to weave into our pattern in the calling away of one of our beloved members,
Mrs. Harry Marsalis.. Be it Resolved:
First, that we are thankful for the friendship and association of this good woman who was a faithful member of our society for so many years.

Second, that we are grateful she lived so conscientiously, making sure through prayer that each undertaking was under God's guidance, that her courage is still an inspiration to each of us.

Third, that we are constrained, because of her deeply consecrated life and the constant witness of her Christian experience, to emulate her example.

Fourth, that because of her going we are sad, not being able to understand why the call should come just at the prime of life, but we are submissive to His will knowing "He doeth all things well."

Fifth, that we extend to her loved ones our very deepest sympathy in this hour and commend to them the One who says
"My grace is sufficient for thee."

"Not till the loom is silent,
And the shuttles cease to fly,
Shall God unroll the canvas,
And explain the reason why.
The dark threads are as needful
As the weaver's busy hands,
As the threads of gold and silver
In the pattern He has planned."

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. OLIVER FELDER,
Chairman,
MRS. SYLVESTER COTTEN,
Secretary,
MRS. ROBT. J. WALKER,
MRS. T. H. SHACKELFORD.

AN APPRECIATION OF MRS. RUFUS W. PEEBLES

After a life of useful service, God called Mrs. Rufus W. Peebles home that she might receive the crown which is awarded the faithful.

Resolved, that the Missionary Society does feel a great loss in the departure of our dearly loved friend and co-worker.
Since coming into our midst in 1928, she has endeared herself to each and everyone of us. We shall miss her faithful attendance, her gentleness in spirit, and her enthusiasm in responding unfaillingly to every call of service. Be it further

Resolved, that we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Philadelphia, Miss., hereby extend our deepest sympathy to the grief-stricken family and loved ones of our beloved friend. It is our prayer that the faithful training of a devoted mother will guide her small daughter all through life.

Resolved, that we instruct the secretary to send a copy of these resolutions to her loved ones, to the Neshoba Democrat, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Winona Times, and that a copy be kept in the minutes of our society.

New Orleans Christian Advocate Circulation Campaign

During the period from May 1, 1935, through and including July 1, 1935, all pastors are urgently requested to devote at least one week towards securing his charge's quota of Advocate subscriptions in accordance with the unanimous pledge made (by rising vote) at the late sessions of the patronizing Conferences.

QUOTAS

Each District is assigned a minimum quota of 3½ per cent of its membership as reported in Table 1 of the 1934 Conference Minutes. (This quota is only one-half the percentage used by most of the other Conference organs and calls for only one subscription for every 30 members on the roll of each charge at the close of the last Conference year). Each Presiding Elder is requested to appoint a District Captain whose duty will be to see that the campaign is conducted in every charge in his district and to do everything possible to see that the District raises its quota before July 1.

PRIZES

Each District raising its quota in full by July 1, 1935, will receive a cash prize of $100. This prize will be turned over to the Presiding Elder to be used in any way he and the pastors of his district decide. Thus, by raising the District quota in full, you accomplish three things: 1. The fulfillment of your Conference pledge to support the Advocate; 2. Open a wider field of service to the Conference Organ; 3. Secure the sum of $100 for some District enterprise or charity.

RULES

1. Both renewal and new subscriptions secured by pastors or their representatives will be counted. Subscriptions sent direct to our office by subscribers in response to renewal statements will not be credited to charges on quotas.
2. Only subscriptions received in our office between May 1 and July 1, inclusive, will receive credit on quotas.
3. Six months subscriptions will be counted as half subscriptions. No subscriptions for less than six months will be credited on quotas.

CO-OPERATION

The Business Manager will gladly co-operate with pastors and their helpers by sending expiration dates of present subscribers; sample copies, and in any other way that he can be of service. Requests for samples must be made one week in advance.

PRICE

The subscription price of the Advocate is $1.50 per year. Remittances must accompany lists when sent.

Religion and Politics

Wherever the voice of the church is heard on a great moral issue, we are sure to hear the cry that "the church should not meddle in politics." So strong is our American tradition of the separation of Church and State that this charge of political meddling is often effective even with churchmen. Resolutions in our church assemblies on peace, the liquor traffic, unemployment, and other social questions are generally no more than pious affirmations because of the widespread belief that to do anything about them would be meddling in politics. It is this conviction on the part of thousands of our church members that religion is purely a personal other-worldly matter with no relation whatsoever to our baffling social and political issues that is keeping it from playing an effective part in bringing in the new day.

In thus divorcing religion from our economic, social, and political life, we have not been faithful to Bible teaching. Throughout the Old Testament story there is a complete tie-up of the daily round of life and the religious faith of the people. The magnificent ideal of the Hebrew prophets, which they called the kingdom of God, was in very essence the realized rule of God upon earth. In the New Testament it is no different, for at the heart and center of the Master's teachings there is the good news of the Kingdom. And He makes clear that this Kingdom is not something far off in the sky awaiting us when we have passed through the portals of death, for He taught us to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." The great issues facing men today in economics and the political issues which are based upon them are at bottom religious issues. As Christians we are faithless to Christ if we fence them off and say to our Master, "In these fields you shall not enter."—From "The Presbyterian Tribune."

Wallet of the Week

HAUPTMANN, NOW UNDER SENTENCE OF DEATH, is once again before the public in the selfish and unseemly squabble of the defence attorneys over the divisions of the spoils. Fawcett and Reilly, discharged attorneys, are asking for approximately $30,000; and, according to press dispatches, they charge the head of the defence counsel with failure to account for the funds available for that purpose. The condemned man probably realizes by now that the way of the transgressor is hard. At least he seems to have gotten the worst of it in more ways than one.

* * *

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL SUMMARY of the British peace vote affords an interesting study of the opposition to war. Up to the present time 3,000,000 ballots have been cast. Of this number 97.2 per cent favor retention of membership in the League of Nations; 92.8 per cent favor reduction of armaments by international agreement; and 93.3 per cent favor taking the profit out of war. One ballot has been sent to some person over 18 years of age in every British family. The vote is said to be causing considerable bitterness among those interested in the promotion of war, but we greatly prefer that to the bitterness of the world since 1914.

* * *

DOCTOR PEEL, EDITOR OF THE CONGREGATIONAL QUARTERLY, of London, sounds a note of warning to practitioners of psycho-therapy in the ranks of the ministry of England. According to the Christian World, he thinks that with perfectly good intentions they are dabbling with something that they know nothing about except its vocabulary; and that they are playing with fire—burning others as well as themselves. Even worse than the perversion of their ministry to such a use, is the unethical and hurtful publicity which some of the practitioners give to the faults and deficiencies of some of those involved.

WE TAKE FROM THE RELIGIOUS TELESCOPE the following: "Prof. Rexford Tugwell, master mind of the brain trust, in imitation of some eminent statesmen, occasionally tries to draw on the Bible for some of his illustrations. He had an extended article in the Atlantic Monthly recently in which he allegorizes the Ark of the Covenant as 'stranded on the Mount Ararat of arid facts.' He seems to have gotten his arks and mountains mixed. Some Sunday-school pupil might inform the learned professor that there is a difference between the Ark of the Covenant and Noah's Ark. This is the same Tugwell who about a year ago expounded the abundant Life in terms of 'wine, women and song.' We have been quite convinced that a little more familiarity with both the letter and the spirit of the Scriptures might prove helpful to some of the folks who are trying to direct the policies of our Government."

DR. THOMAS COKE, as those familiar with Methodist History know, was curate of South Petherton Parish Church in Somerset, England. In 1775 or 1776 he was expelled from his curacy, and was chimed out of his pulpit by the ringing of the bell of the Parish Church. But, after more than a century and a half, that trusted lieutenant of John Wesley is to have a memorial in the very church that thrust him out. On May 2, the Bishop of Bath and Wells will dedicate a memorial to Dr. Coke, in the South Petherton Parish Church. The virtues of God's nobleman, unappreciated in his day, will be sung at the very altar from which he was ejected.

* * *

FILM STAR MORALITY is a picturesque phrase recently coined for describing the empty, loveless and scandalous romances of Hollywood. Those "meteors of a season," gathered from the ends of the earth and bent upon a theatrical fame, live together in an unrelieved atmosphere of physical and commercial glamor until the natural instincts of their souls die. Normality can not survive such an atmosphere. They contract marriage, for no sufficient reason, either human or divine; and then in the divorce courts, they shock the sensibilities of the nation with the revelations of the sordid and shameless life that lies back of the silver screen upon which they have won their way to fame.

* * *

THE EARNEST AND CONVINCED DOGMATIST, KARL BARTH, is having a great opportunity according to a writer in the Methodist Recorder of London. German rationalism has bombarded the evangelical tradition of England and the West since the publication of Strauss' Life of Jesus, which appeared one hundred years ago. The first literary venture of George Eliot was the translation of that work into English, and it marked her reaction against the Evangelical tradition in which she was brought up—a subtle influence from which she never recovered. Today Germany is again the seed-plot of ecclesiastical and theological revolution, perhaps less wholesome in its aims and purposes than any of its predecessors.

THE ADVOCATE

We are not trying to save the Advocate, but we are trying to make a place for it in the homes of Methodist people in Mississippi and Louisiana. It is no use to preach against the empty vanities of the movies, or the coarse irreverence of public prints unless we are prepared to put something worthwhile in the place of them. Thought can not be suppressed but its value depends upon that which inspires it. We are sparing no pains to make the Advocate a wholesome and helpful journal of family and religious life. But, no matter what its merits may be, its quality and worth can not be appreciated where it is not known. One hundred and seventy-five thousand Methodists in Mississippi and Louisiana never see the Advocate, and we can not hope to win them through "absent treatment." It isn't the Methodist way. Your church paper is dependent upon you for a loyal and enthusiastic introduction to Methodist people. It is sometimes said, "The people do not care for it, and they will not subscribe." We have in mind a group of preachers who never fail in their Advocate campaign—they will not fail now. The reason for their success is that they believe in the paper; and they present it, not as a perfunctory item of Conference requirement, but with conviction and enthusiasm and they win. They really introduce it to the people and the people catch the enthusiasm of their leader. One who is personally indifferent provides an excuse for his people and serves it to them on a silver platter. All the Advocate desires is a chance to win the loyalty of the one hundred and seventy-five thousand Methodists who are today outside its circle of friendships. We will try to hold them, once we have access to their hearts. We do not publish the many very appreciative and complimentary words that come to our desk, for we do not wish to promote ourselves. We are trying to build a paper to feed the souls of the people. We plead for a whole-hearted support at the hands of every pastor and church in our three Conferences. Let's begin the work today.

NATCHEZ TRACE

The Proposed Natchez Trace National Park is a scheme which will be of general interest to the people of Mississippi. It exhibits the daring peculiar to the economic thinking of the present time, and it proposes to include the treasures of American romance and development in a vast national project. At one end of the Trace is the Hermitage—the home of that stern and fiery chieftain of Democracy. At the opposite end is the little city of Natchez, Mississippi, probably one of the richest and most interesting fields in the story of the early days. Thereabouts Aaron Burr plotted the dismemberment of the Union. In that same locality was located the first chartered institution for the higher education of women in the world—Elizabeth Academy, whose ruins stand beside the national thoroughfare. There was the home of Sargent S. Prentiss whose immortal eloquence will always be one of the glorious traditions of Mississippi and the Southwest. Natchez is also a center of the river romances of steamboat days on The Mississippi. Along the entire course of the Natchez Trace, a thousand legends will be revived. War dances of the Chickasaws and Choctaws, whose career of war and the chase came to an end in 1830 by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek, in Noxubee County, Miss.—a transaction which we do not think was to the credit of those who engineered it, or those who profited by it. The exciting forays of the highwaymen who fell upon the rumbling stage coach, and disarranged the program of the passengers by their primitive but thoroughly effective share-your-wealth practice, will be recalled. The oft-repeated story of the spectacular march of the gallant and intrepid adventurer, De Soto, will be retold along with the traditions of the more invincible legions of Old Hickory. And last but not least, at Muscle Shoals, the ford of The Tennessee on the route of the historic highway, the sound of tramping legions, the wild war-whoops of the savage, and the gentler romances of the past will be heard in the hum of the machinery that sends light and power throughout the region. Thus will be presented in one gigantic pageant, the drama of human progress, from the rude savagery of the American Indian and the robber hands, to the well-adjusted social and economic relations of civilization.

WINONA

The editor's visit to Winona, Miss., for the session of the Greenwood District Conference, was for him a most happy occasion. The Conference was held in the church which stands upon the site of the old building in which he was licensed to preach. Rev. J. B. Stone was the Presiding Elder, and Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb the pastor-host. Our host was Captain C. D. Kelly who was the Mayor of the town. Among the incidents which we recall, was one in connection with a local preacher and fellow guest in the home of the Mayor. This preacher had the misfortune (?) of having his hat exchanged at church one night. He brought home an expensive and a correctly styled derby which was practically new. We tried to comfort him by suggesting that he might at least let the other fellow share his distress; but, like the psalmist, "his soul refused to be comforted." He slid in behind the bed and deposited his clothing in the most inaccessible corner of the room, then crawled under the bed and stored his shoes in a similar place of safety, and lay down to troubled dreams. At the crack of dawn, he was up and off to the church to seek his hat. He returned for breakfast, his face a-beam; he had found his hat—a dollar derby, of volume not inferior to that of a certain Western Congressman's hat today.

GENTILLY CHURCH SITE

The question of securing a proper site for the Gentilly Methodist Church has been the subject of interest and agitation for several years. The process of financing the enterprise has not offered more difficulty than has the securing of a location which might serve the needs of the congregation and at the same time be free from legal entanglements which might endanger the progress of the work. At last we have secured a site at the corner of Wisteria street and Franklin Avenue, the title has been passed, one thousand dollars in cash has been paid, everybody is happy and the way is open for a forward movement in that very promising field. We hope in a very short time to be able to pay off the remaining balance on the lot and then to begin definite plans for the construction of a building.

DR. HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's wide circle of friends throughout the United States and in all churches will be rejoiced to know that he is making good recovery following a serious major operation, in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. It was feared that he might be suffering from a malignancy, but that fear was happily groundless. He will probably be out of his pulpit until the autumn. One of the preachers at Riverside Park during the summer will be Dr. F. W. Norwood, of City Temple, London.

BISHOP DOBBS

By Hon. Thos. L. Bailey

Dear Brother Duren: It has been my purpose for some time to write you a word of commendation concerning the "Advocate." I have found the "Advocate" to be a most interesting and helpful publication. Especially is the column of our old time Millsaps friend, J. R. Countiss, good. I see a great number of commentaries on our Sunday school lesson but as a thoughtful, to-the-point commentary, none of them are more helpful to me.

Things here from the Methodist point of view are in splendid shape. The Rev. Joseph A. Smith is making a splendid presiding elder. All of our ministers are active and doing good work.

Bishop Dobbs closed a week's meeting at Central Methodist Church on Easter eve. He had splendid congregations and early in the meeting it assumed community-wide proportions. People of every creed joined in wholeheartedly. The results, of course, were of greatest benefit to our city.

Bishop Dobbs' messages were gospel messages. A real messenger bearing good news has been in our midst. We shall be better Christians and better citizens since his visit. He gave to the entire community a priceless gift as a token of his visit—a new and deeper understanding of the beauty and winsomeness of the Christian way.

The simple dignity with which he presented his messages possessed a charm seldom seen in the pulpit or on the platform. The messages were unerringly driven into the heads and hearts of hearers. No one who had the privilege of attending these services will soon forget that Christianity must live in the lives and deeds of men, if men are to enjoy the full blessings of Christianity.

When Bishop Dobbs came he was only known to our community by reputation, but he left our community known and loved as a great and gracious personality.

(The above was not written as an editorial. Brother Bailey is Speaker of the House of Representatives of Mississippi, and his letter is in every way entitled to the place we are giving it.—The Editor).

RECENT CHILD LEGISLATION

A review of the legislation enacted by the nine States whose legislatures held regular sessions in 1934 indicates that relatively little attention was devoted to children's problems in that year, according to a summary of child-welfare legislation compiled by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Attempts to raise the minimum age for full-time employment from 14 to 15 or to the code age of 16 failed in Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, and Rhode Island. Kentucky raised the educational requirement for children leaving school to go to work from completion of the fifth grade to completion of the eighth grade if the child is 14, and to completion of the seventh grade if the child is 15 years old. Massachusetts provided double compensation for minors injured while illegally employed and enacted a new mandatory minimum-wage law. New York passed a new act extending control of the State department of labor over industrial home work in single-family and 2-family dwellings in cities of 200,000 or more population. Formerly the department had jurisdiction only when the work was done in tenement houses of 3 or more families.

Six States—Massachusetts, Ohio, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia—passed laws increasing the penalty for kidnapping and similar offenses.

Little attention was given to provisions for dependent children. Virginia authorized the State to contribute to the financing of mothers' aid administration to the extent of one-half of the county expenditures instead of one-third as formerly. Bills to liberalize mothers' aid laws failed in New Jersey and New York. New Jersey prohibited issuance of birth certificates revealing illegitimacy, and Kentucky passed a new law providing that in certain instances after an adopted child has reached the age of 17 the adoption may be annulled on consent of all parties to it.

Virginia abolished its independent juvenile and domestic relations courts and made these courts branches of trial justices courts which were made mandatory in every county. New York created the Woodbourne Institution for Defective Delinquents to receive by transfer from other State institutions mentally defective male delinquents over 16 years of age.

Iowa made it an offense to operate, participate in, advertise or attend endurance contests such as "marathons," "walkathons," and "skatathons." Maine passed a law prohibiting similar competitions except on favorable vote of the people in the city or town in which they are to be held. Wisconsin raised from 16 to 17 the minimum age at which unaccompanied children may attend public dances.

In the field of maternal and child health, Iowa, Kansas and Michigan liberalized provisions for care of indigent persons.

Under a reorganization act reducing the number of state administrative departments and agencies, Kentucky abolished its children's bureau and transferred its functions to a new division of the department of public welfare.

Special legislative sessions were held in a number of states in 1934 but in these the subjects considered were mainly limited to taxation and relief.—U. S. Children's Bureau.

MISSIONARY COLLECTIONS IN CHURCH SCHOOL NOT TO BE INCLUDED IN LOCAL BUDGET

Some confusion seems to have arisen in some local churches regarding the manner whereby the offerings of the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise and the offerings of the church schools on Church School Day are handled in relation to the Budget of the local church.

None of these offerings are to be included in or considered a part of the local church budget. They are special collections, designated for special objectives and cannot be used or applied to any other budget or purpose.

For purposes of clarification we can perhaps best cite the following paragraphs in the Discipline of 1934 regarding how these special offerings are to be handled.

In Chapter 5, Financial Plan, 1934 Discipline:

"Par. 282.—The receipts from the collections in the church school on one day in each year, known as Church School Day, and the receipts from the collections on the Fourth Sunday Missionary Offering shall be sent to the Conference Treasurer or Treasurer of the Conference Board of Christian Education to be applied according to Paragraphs 428 and 455 of the Discipline . . . ."

The cross references in Par. 282 are as follows:

"Par. 428.—All money raised in the church schools on account of the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise, including the offerings taken at the extra session for the missionary education of children, shall be remitted monthly through the Annual Conference Treasurer of these funds to the Treasurer of the General Board of Christian Education, who shall keep a record of the same by Conferences. Proceeds from the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise shall be used as hereinafter indicated and shall be distributed by the Treasurer of the General Board of Christian Education as follows: (Here follows detailed instructions as to the division of this fund.)

"Par. 455 (5):—To see that proper emphasis is given in all the work of the church school, including suitable missionary programs in all the classes and departments, and that opportunity is given in the Sunday school and Epworth League meetings at least monthly, preferably on the fourth Sunday of the month, for the missionary offering to be taken for the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. The missionary offerings of the church school shall be directed in accordance with the provisions of Par. 428 of this Constitution and in keeping with the regulations of the General Board of Christian Education."

In view of the above facts we believe that it would be out of harmony with both the spirit and letter of these provisions of the Church to disregard the Disciplinary provisions quoted in these statements and to channel the fourth Sunday missionary offerings through agencies other than those mentioned in Par. 428, or to apply either in whole or in part their proceeds to local budgets. Any unified plan for financing the local church expenses which may be adopted by the Board of Stewards, or the church conference, can not include the returns from these special offerings. To do so would be to contravene the express plans of the General Conference.

ON PAYING ONE'S DEBTS

It is generally accepted as a quite reasonable proposition that a man should, sooner or later, pay what he owes. We grant moratoriums sometimes in these difficult days of ours, but that only postpones the day of reckoning. Nations, it would seem, are sometimes justified in repudiating their debts, or at least they decide to do so, but the individual has difficulty in taking the matter in his own hands after that fashion. It is impossible to see how business could be carried on at all if the requirement that one pay debts was not accepted as a binding obligation.

All that applies to the money debts we owe "for value received." But there is another kind of debt whose obligation we ought not to refuse to take into the most serious kind of consideration. The Apostle Paul speaks of it in his letter to the Roman church.

"I am debtor both to the Greeks, and the Barbarians; both to the learned, and to the ignorant." And Paul took that debt so seriously that it kept him toiling for twenty years as few men have toiled in the whole history of the world to pay it. Never once in that whole twenty-year period did he think of accepting a moratorium. Heroically, persistently, patiently, he worked away at the tremendous task of paying off that mortgage which he assumed when he committed his life to Jesus Christ.

On the mere basis that we are members of the human family we ought to see life and all its opportunities as a trust committed to us, but if we profess to be Christians in that human fellowship the obligation would seem to be multiplied many times. Jesus certainly taught, both by example and by multiplied precept, that in all a man has, whether he has inherited it or won it by his own toil or by any other way, he is under the strictest kind of obligation. The Christian man is debtor to the whole world, just as Paul was "to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; to the learned and to the ignorant."

If Jesus hadn't taught the lesson so plainly we still ought to have seen that in the name of a common humanity we didn't quite own ourselves or anything that we possessed. If we had strength we were in debt to weakness. If we were fortunate, and life had dealt kindly with us, we were debtors to those upon whom it seemed to lay a heavy hand. If we had knowledge, even though we had won it at cost and sacrifice, we were under a tremendous responsibility to those who were never able to win it. If God dowered us with genius, it was not for our own selfish use and enjoyment. In the name of a great human brotherhood all that should be plain enough.

But we are not only men, we claim to be Christian men, and that places much more than the common human obligation upon us. The whole Christian teaching stresses most emphatically what Paul states so plainly, "Ye are not your own." The debt rests on us in the name of a common humanity, but also in the name of Him who was Brother to all men and who came among us as One who served.

In all honesty it is probably time that we began to pay our debts to the world about us. We may have accepted a moratorium too long. The world of our day seems to be in great need of some of the things that we might be able to do for it. What they are we will have to discover for ourselves, but a willingness to do them is what we need most. In these Lenten days, when we are naturally thinking a little more than usual of what Jesus did in His great service for the human race, it might be a little easier for us to see our own obligation and to consecrate ourselves in a new way to a service for the world in His name.—The New Outlook.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

own experience, and he awakened in their minds and hearts the joys and the fellowship of his immortal hope. In 1783 Jeremiah Lambert was assigned to the Holston—the first assignment to a work beyond the Alleghenies. The name, Holston, as the head of a circuit appeared in the minutes continuously from 1783 to 1826; from 1802 to 1825 it appears as the name of a District; and in 1825 it was honored with a place in the roll of Annual Conferences, a distinction which it retains to the present day. Holston circuit was served by some of the most devout and capable men of the church. Among them were Henry Willis, Jeremiah Mastin, Mark Whittaker, Stith Mead, Tobias Gibson, William Burke, Thomas Wilkerson and John Sale. Among the presiding elders were John Kobler, Francis Poythress and William McKendree. The membership of the Holston circuit grew from the unimpressive 76 reported by Jeremiah Lambert in 1784, to more than sixteen thousand members and forty-six preachers reported at the end of the first years as Holston Conference; and the territory became one of the great Methodist strongholds.

On the last Sunday in April 1786, Asbury says: "I preached three times, and made a collection to defray the expenses of sending missionaries to the western settlements; I spoke twice on the same subject through the course of the week." At the Conference beginning May 8, he appointed James Haw and Benjamin Ogden to Kentucky. Haw did not attend the next Conference; but he reported by letter that ninety members had been received; and he made a strong plea for reinforcements. To this plea he added that none should be sent who were "afraid to die." Thomas Williamson and Wilson Lee responded and were sent forth to their chosen task. Kentucky at that day was typically frontier, both in location and in reputation. The story of "Rogue's Harbor" in Logan County is graphically described in the Autobiography of Peter Cartwright. He says that it was the retreat of thieves and of other desperate characters who were fleeing from justice; and that it was the rendezvous of apostate ministers who found there a congenial atmosphere. He tells of meeting and ministering to Beverly Allen, then a practicing physician, whose ministry came to a tragic end, and who was a fugitive from justice for the killing of Major Forsythe in Georgia. He mentions also a Baptist minister who took to drink. In that same section William Burke says that in 1795 he found James Haw who had located and embraced the views of O'Kelly, and that he was a great disturber of the peace of the church, which he had helped to plant. But despite the handicaps, Methodism grew and prospered; and under the leadership of such men as Francis Poythress, Peter Massie, Barnabas McHenry and Wilson Lee, at the end of the first five years the new mission reported five circuits, ten preachers and nearly two thousand members.

In 1798 John Kobler and William Burke were assigned to Cumberland circuit; but Kobler left William Burke on the circuit alone and he went over into Ohio and established a circuit, "Beginning at Columbia, and running up the little Miami and Mad River to Zanesville, thence down the Big Miami to Cincinnati." Henry Smith was assigned to Miami in 1799, and he formed Scioto circuit which he served together with Miami circuit for the next two years. In 1802 Benjamin Young and Elisha Bowman were the preachers; and two years later the work was formed into the Ohio District with five circuits, eight preachers and over twelve hundred members. About the time that John Kobler began the work on Miami circuit, Philip Gatch, once an itinerant preacher, but now a local preacher, moved into that section and he and Francis McCormick helped to make the ministry of Kobler and his successors effective. From Ohio Benjamin Young crossed over into Illinois and began work there.

In 1799 Tobias Gibson, a native of South Carolina, went to Natchez, Mississippi, and began work in that section. The Minutes of that year show his appointment as Little Pee Dee and Anson; but Nathan Bangs says that he was "released from his regular work in consequence of ill health," and an article on "Early Methodism in Mississippi" says that in 1799 he came on a visit to relatives at Natchez, and that he was assigned as a missionary in 1800. This date of beginning is supported by the fact that sixty members were reported to the Conference in 1800 when the name of Tobias Gibson first appears in the Minutes in connection with that mission. Gibson served this circuit in the far south for three years without assistance, except such as he found on the field. In 1802, although he was in an extremely feeble state of health, he attended the session of the Western Conference at Cumberland and made an appeal for help, which was answered by the appointment of Moses Floyd to assist him. The next Conference added H. Harrison to the force, while Tobias Gibson and A. Amos were listed as supernumerary. Learner Blackman and Nathan Barnes came in 1805, and in 1806 the Mississippi District was formed. The new District extended into Louisiana, it consisted of four circuits and was served by six preachers, including the presiding elder. Asbury wrote Dr. Coke that he had sent six preachers into this section; and later in the year he wrote again: "Our Mississippi missionaries are pushing on southward toward the Pacific Ocean." These devoted apostles of early Methodism were given but ten dollars each for their long and perilous journey. Such is the story of the expansion of the church in those difficult but heroic days.

The General Conference of 1800 met in Baltimore, May 6, instead of October 20, as originally fixed. This came too late for him to make a great contribution to the history of the church—he was already an old man. The number of Annual Conferences was raised from six to seven.

The slavery issue was discussed and a number of futile efforts were made to control it. The preachers were required to emancipate their slaves; but for the membership at large, only an address was sent to the societies on the subject of slavery, and an address to legislatures asking for the enactment of laws looking to gradual emancipation. The Conference gave author-change was made in order to avoid the dangers incident to the scourges of yellow fever which befell the coast cities at the later season. The interest of the church is shown as much by what the Conference undertook, as by the legislation enacted. Among the efforts which failed, was a move to make the office of Presiding Elder elective; a move to require the bishops to accept the counsel of a stationing Committee in making appointments; and an effort to secure a delegated General Conference. The O'Kelly defection was on the wane, but that which led up to it was still an issue in the church. The Conference decided to elect one bishop and that all the bishops should have equal authority. On the first ballot Richard Whatcoat and Jesse Lee each received the same number of votes, but on the second ballot Whatcoat was elected. This election ity for the ordination of properly recommended colored preachers. Richard Allen, who later became the first bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, had been ordained a deacon by Asbury in 1799. The African brethren in New York were urged to incorporate, as the African brethren in Philadelphia had done and the name African Methodist Episcopal Church was proposed. For the first time in the history of the church, effort was made to secure a systematic regulation of the financial affairs of the societies. The support of the preachers was increased from sixty-four to eighty dollars each for the preacher and his wife, with an allowance for dependents—children under seven years were allowed sixteen dollars each, and those between seven and fourteen were allowed twenty-

Rev. J. B. King, pastor of Fannin Charge, combined his Easter and Church School Day services, in a program which was greatly appreciated by his people.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor at Lucedale, will conduct special revival services for his church, May 1-12. The preaching will be done by Rev. L. J. Power, the Presiding Elder of the District.

We have another evidence of the interest of Rev. J. C. Wasson and his people in the Advocate, not only in support but in appreciation of what it is, and the ends it is seeking to serve.

The calendar of Tupelo, Miss., Methodist Church, where Dr. H. F. Brooks is pastor, carries an Easter letter to his people; and also a very attractive program for the services of the Easter Day.

The business office is in receipt of a note from Rev. G. A. Lagrange, of the Marksville, La., charge. The Editor shares with the Business Manager the cordial support and interest of which it gives evidence.

Rev. G. H. Corry of Hornbeck, La., charge is having fine congregations. He had 115 at a recent mid-week service. On Easter Sunday night, he preached the commencement sermon for the Hornbeck High School.

The business office is in receipt of a much appreciated communication from Rev. W. J. Dawson, Itta Bena, Miss. That was the first appointment served by the editor, and the very name holds a sacred place in his memory.

Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb, who now makes her home with her daughter in Lexington, Miss., conducted the devotional meditations of the District Conference at Winona. She used for those studies the general theme of "Fellowship."

President Roosevelt and Governor Allen have each issued proclamations declaring May 1, as Child Health Day; and agencies, organizations and individuals are urged to consider seriously the purpose for which the day is set apart.

We were glad to see Brother J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, in attendance upon the District Conference at Winona, and in his usual health. The church has no more faithful man anywhere than he.

Rev. E. S. Lewis had a great service Easter Day in Pascagoula, Miss., where he is pastor. Thirty-nine were received into the church, bringing the total new members up to forty-nine this year. More than half of his benevolences have been paid, and the Church school reached a high-water mark.

Brother J. H. Johnson, a faithful layman of the church at Clarksdale, Miss., we regret to learn, has been ill for some time. The message which we received from him was dictated from his bed. We hope to hear soon that he is well on the road to complete recovery.

Rev. T. J. O'Neill, pastor of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, was his own evangelist in the meeting which culminated on Easter Sunday, when 19 members were received into the church. Captain Van Egmond, a local preacher and captain of the local post of the Salvation Army, led the singing.

Mrs. C. M. Martin, the efficient and faithful superintendent of the nursery department in East End Church, Meridian, held an Easter service appropriate for her department. She was assisted by Mesdames Lawrence and Burrow. The department raised $41, on an apportionment of $30 for the church debt.

Rev. W. H. Mounger, assisted by an able committee of the good women of Winona, seemed to be making a good job of entertaining the Conference. We had to catch a train, so did not get to share the delightful lunch which was served in the educational building of the church.

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, of Mansfield, La., delivered an address before an audience of more than a hundred, at the banquet of the inter-denominational Men's Bible Class at Gilliam on Thursday evening, April 26. It was the seventh annual banquet of this fine class, which is taught by that earnest and efficient layman, R. T. Douglass.

As the result of the Personal Evangelistic campaign conducted by Dr. Dawson in First Church, Shreveport, 194 persons were received into that church on Palm and Easter Sundays. This was a record service for that church, according to a clipping sent us by Mr. McKennon, Business Manager of the church. First Church now has more than thirty-nine hundred members.

The Noel Memorial Methodist Church, of Shreveport, La., is enjoying a marked growth and revival of interest under the leadership of Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen, the pastor. Since Conference 225 new members have been received; 75 have been received on profession of faith. Approximately one thousand dollars was raised on Easter Sunday for the General Benevolences and the Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, La.

Dr. A. M. Shaw, of Belcher and Gilliam, Louisiana Conference, is a busy man. He conducted the Passion Week union services at the Presbyterian Church in Belcher, had two great Easter services at Gilliam, and immediately began giving the course in Bible in the inter-denominational Teacher Training School in Belcher. Dr. Shaw has accepted an invitation to preach the commencement sermon for Belcher High School, May 26.

Tallulah Methodist church held its first standard training school this month, which resulted in the awarding of 22 certificates of credit and one office credit to be received. The course on "Organizing for Christian Education in the Local Church" was taught by Rev. A. K. McLellan and "Building the Program for Seniors and Young People" by Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder of the Monroe District. Rev. C. K. Smith was educational director. A sum of $500 was paid this month on the church debt. A beautiful and impressive pre-Easter play, "The Disciple Who Understood," was presented at the church the Sunday night before Easter, and the Easter Cantata, "Day of Triumph," was rendered on Easter night by members of several church choirs of Tallulah.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Mrs. J. N. McDonald, District Secretary of the Lake Charles District, brought to the Annual Meeting of the Conference a handsome hand-made Korean vase which had once been owned by Miss Pauline Randle, a Louisiana girl and missionary to Korea.

This elegant vase had been given to Miss Randle by the women of Korea as a "love gift." But with a great enthusiasm for the cause of missions in her heart, Miss Randle felt she could not keep it but would like to offer the vase to the Woman's Missionary Council to spur the Conference on to greater efficiency by a friendly contest. Lo! and behold Louisiana Conference won the vase and it was presented to Mrs. C. F. Neibergall, Conference President at the Council Meeting in Mobile, 1923.

From that time on the vase has been won on various occasions by the Lake Charles District for the largest gain in Young People's Work, by the DeRidder Young People's Society for splendid work accomplished and by the Junior Society of Leesville for attaining the Honor Roll.

And now that the work of young people and juniors is no longer under the Woman's Missionary Society, after careful and prayerful consideration, it was voted that this exquisite ornament be placed in the Fullilove-Byron Living Room of the MacDonell School in loving memory of Miss Randle. In presenting this vase to Miss Hooper it was asked that she tell the boys and girls of MacDonell School frequently of the beautiful and useful life of Miss Randle, hoping that some day in the future one from this school might take the place of Miss Randle on the field of service.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

This was not the year for election in the Mississippi Conference, but because of resignations, three vacancies were filled: Mrs. Eurie M. Weston, 947 Morningside, Jackson, Miss., was elected Superintendent of Christian Social Relations; Mrs. T. H. Fore, 105 Arlington Avenue, Natchez, Miss., Secretary of the Vicksburg District and Mrs. L. J. Power, Gulfport, Miss., Box 234, Secretary of the Seashore District. Auxiliaries please note the changes.

The Missionary Society of Lake met with their president, Mrs. W. B. Johnson, in March. The social feature was the celebration of birthdays of the members occurring during the months of January, February and March. After program original poems were read, telling how the dollars were earned during the first quarter of the year. Mrs. C. C. McClennahan appeared wearing overalls covered with numerous patches, under which were offerings donated by members. Cutting the patches for the proceeds caused a bit of excitement. Mrs. Jim Clark, who plans to join Mr. Clark in North Carolina, answered a call at the door, receiving a package of lovely handkerchiefs. On the table was a tempting angel food cake with lighted candles. Punch was served with the cake.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The following report of a zone meeting in the Greenwood District shows how a zone meeting can be a miniature District Meeting.

A joint meeting of the first and second quarters was held at the Methodist Church Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. J. M. Bedwell, chairman and Mrs. J. E. Cunningham, Secretary. Mrs. W. V. Balley, a former District Secretary, gave a devotional on Stewardship.

After roll call, reports and other business, Mrs. Lowe, Greenwood District Secretary, took the chair and called on Mesdames J. J. Baird, H. B. McGee and J. C. Cannon to tell of the things that most impressed them at the recent Greenwood Conference.

Mrs. F. W. Gwin, Superintendent of the Tchula Children's Group told of her work. Mrs. Lipscomb explained fully the new co-operative plan and the use of the fourth Sunday Offering. She also explained the Baby Special and Efficiency Aim which takes the place of the Standard of Excellence.

Mrs. Lowe emphasized the importance of putting on a Daily Vacation Bible School for the children.

This being the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the organization of the Council, Mrs. Lipscomb told of a dinner given at St. Louis during the March Session. The decorations were carried out in the silver design and the program featured events and history of the twenty-five years. All auxiliaries are asked to have similar celebrations not only to celebrate our Silver Anniversary but to serve as an opportunity for inviting all Methodist women to share in their Heritage. Free leaflets for this occasion can be obtained from Literature Headquarters.

Mrs. Lipscomb spoke of the Spiritual Life Groups. She asked these questions: "Where Will the Power, Strength and Wisdom to Do This Work We Are Undertaking Come From? How Are We Spiritually Prepared?"

Rev. J. O. Dowdle closed the meeting with a short prayer.

SARDIS—GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Sardis-Grenada District Conference met in the Methodist Church of Lambert on April 17-18. The local pastor, Rev. Wm. L. Robinson, and the people of Lambert very graciously entertained the Conference. Nothing was left undone that would add to the comfort of the delegates and visitors. Another thing that made the sessions of the Conference enjoyable, was being in the town in which Mr. Shipman makes his home; and his wisdom and wit added to the inspiration of the devotional and business sessions during the two days.

Rev. W. L. Stormont, our Presiding Elder, called the Conference to order promptly at 10 o'clock on Wednesday. He had a well prepared agenda to guide the work. Without undue hurry the business of the district was dispatched quickly. The reports to the Conference revealed the fact that he had conducted thirty local church institutes in addition to holding the Quarterly Conferences.

The preaching was done by the following: Rev. N. N. Maxey, of Coldwater; Rev. A. C. McCorkle, of Senatobia; and Rev. C. L. Rogers, of Sardis. The devotionals were led by the Reverends: W. S. Shipman, W. F. Howell, S. P. Ashmore, and W. H. Heath.

It was encouraging to the Conference to hear the message of Dean W. C. Newman, of Grenada College. He stated that Grenada College would close the present session with all the running expenses of 1934-35 session paid. Announcement was made that arrangements were practically completed by which the city of Grenada would donate $10,000 to Grenada College, and the North Mississippi Conference is expected to match that sum. Brother Newman also announced that the registration for the next session of the College was ahead of what it was in August of last year. A resolution was passed by the Conference expressing appreciation to Grenada for its gift to Grenada College and to the Dean for his fine management in this difficult period.

The reports of the pastors, as compared to a year ago, were very favorable. The whole program of the Church was being followed in many of the charges. The collections on Conference Benevolences were in advance of a year ago as well as the salaries. The District Conference rejoiced with Rev. J. D. Simpson, pastor at Olive Branch, in that he successfully led the members of the Olive Branch Methodist Church in the complete settlement of the $13,000 debt on their church building.

Dr. H. Hedden, Superintendent of the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tennessee, gave an account of the work in our Hospital. We were glad that he was able to report that the Methodist Hospital owed no past due bills.

The following were elected delegates to the next session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference: J. W. Kyle, R. W. Sharp, Mrs. J. F. Barber, Herbert Holmes, Dr. L. L. Minor, J. B. Nelson, Mrs. J. F. Cooper, Mrs. H. P. Lewis, Mrs. G. P. Cooper, Mrs. W. W. Hartsfield, Dr. D. R. Funderburk, and J. M. McClure. Alternates are: Miss Tryphena Rogers, E. C. Black, H. G. Johnson, Mrs. A. W. Stokes, S. H. Gaines, and E. W. Varner.

J. W. Kyle had charge of the Laymen's Hour on Thursday. The report of the Committee on Laymen's Organization was filled with the spirit of optimism as to the condition of their work in the district.

Charleston, Senatobia, and Byhalia extended invitations for the entertainment of the Conference in 1936. Senatobia was selected.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 5.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE FORGIVENESS OF SIN

Here are three parables in one—the wayward son, the forgiving father, the unforgiving son. The prodigal had many attractive qualities. He was in love with life and with people—social, generous, impulsive, expansive. He desired to see and share the world. His short and sordid career has been duplicated in millions of homes. It is, indeed, history rather than parable. Always the adventurer appears to be the only person surprised at the outcome. All others know the end from the beginning. The prodigal starts with the slogan: "Watch my Smoke." He ends with: "Behold my Ashes." The nectar of youth turns to gall in manhood. Before middle life he is "in the sere and yellow leaf." Inner hunger meets outward famine. In his hour of distress no boon companion offers food or employment. Gaiety has no mind for charity. Vice drives a non-stop car. Its wreckage is left to the mercy of the righteous. The cold world is coldest to the rage and wretchedness of the poverty it has created. Its sign reads: "Come Here to Drink and Be Merry; Go Elsewhere to Suffer and Die." Dissipation perverts and conceals the true self. Its life is superficial and artificial. When the show is over, the confused and crippled victim comes to himself. The forsaken house of the father offers food and shelter. The menial toil and meager wage of a servant there are ease and affluence compared to his place and station.

tion. Affection and restoration are more than he dares ask or hope. Ragged, barefoot, disillusioned, penitent, he set his face toward home. Not even remembered kindness could foretoken the welcome awaiting him.

The breadth, the height, the depth of the love and forgiveness of God no man has measured. Judas might have plumbed its depth had he thrown himself in penitence upon it instead of leaping from a precipice at the end of a rope. The biggest mistake a sinner ever makes is to think himself too big a sinner for God to forgive. The stain of sin is no match for the solvency of divine love. The drama of salvation can never be interpreted in terms of courts, precedents, exact penalties and judicial decisions. The realm of God is a family; the King, a Father; the subjects sons. Love loses no time considering formalities and weighing deserts. In even an ordinarily good home, no child ever earns what he gets or merits what he receives. With God all may receive what none can deserve. With him it is not merit but mercy, not reward but redemption, not salary but salvation. Gracious and generous as is the welcome described, ten thousand fathers would joyously strive to excel it could they but discern the forlorn figure of a penitent prodigal son returning for paternal companionship and blessing. "Much more your heavenly Father."

In many respects, the elder son presents the sorriest figure in the parable. He was selfish and successful; unloving and unforgiving. Sheltered under the father's roof, he lived a million miles away. Not all prodigals leave home. His father was generous; he was greedy. He might often have feasted with friends—all the paternal fortune was his. To him, it would have been a calf lost from herd and purse had a neighborly feast been spread. Now he saw the fatted calf slaughtered for a wastrel brother returned to share what he desired for himself alone. No missionary was he. The far and famined country was good enough for "this thy son." Let him stay and starve. Smug, self-content, what mattered else if he could be lord of the house, "belong to the dominant race," and rule the world? Did not his known disposition and attitude long delay the prodigal's return? Do not cold, selfish, haughty church members today keep millions from finding welcome in the Father's house? Jesus condemned sin everywhere, most of all amongst those who professed to be saints.

To the New Orleans Christian Advocate:

An inspiring and impressive Easter service was held in the Methodist Church here at 6:30 o'clock, Sunday morning, the program having been arranged by Rev. and Mrs. A. A. Collins—our pastor and his wife—with Miss Rosalie Young, as pianist.

The worship consisted of appropriate songs, prayers, an Easter message by the pastor, and the Sacrament, as a rededication of our lives.

We were glad to have many of our Baptist friends with us.

Truly it was a spiritual feast and our souls caught a new vision of our Resurrected Lord.

MRS. W. R. WHITAKER.

EASTER SERVICES AT OAKDALE, LA.

Our Easter services this year were preceded by a week of prayer prior to the preaching services held by the pastor during Holy Week.

This Sunrise Communion service has been held for a number of years and has become almost a tradition with this congregation. The electrically lighted cross decorated with flowers up on the back wall facing the audience with the seven candlestick electric candelabra on the Communion Table behind the chancel, the two white candles on the piano and two on the pulpit furnished the light. Vases of roses were artistically arranged and placed on the altar elsewhere.

Shortly after 5:15 A. M. the people began quietly to slip into their seats until the crowd had gathered. Everything was still. About 5:30 the pastor announced the hymn "Take Time To Be Holy," after the singing of which all bowed for prayer. Then a graphic word picture was given of the events following the Crucifixion to the Ascension as related in the Four Gospels. A solo, "Into the Garden My Master Went" followed and then the invitation for the Sacrament was read and the Communion was served. The ten children who were received into full membership on Palm Sunday were invited to take their first Communion at the first table. Many communicants brought their Blessing Boxes containing their Lenten sacrificial offering for Missions up to the altar with them. It was a most beautiful and worshipful service and some said that more than the usual number attended this year.

Sunday School

Our attendance reached a new high-water mark and the Orphanage offering for the day amounted to over $35.00.

Preaching Services

At eleven the pastor preached and at the conclusion of the service received two members on profession of faith and four by letter.

At 7:30 instead of the preaching service the Oakdale Philharmonic Club very beautifully rendered their Easter Cantata "The Song of Triumph" to a large appreciative audience. It was a most fitting way to close this glorious Easter in Songs of Triumph.

The ministry of healing is exercised through the hospital service of the Church. Its helping hand is extended to the worthy poor through the Golden Cross Society. The annual enrollment is at hand. Every congregation that presents the appeal and carries out the enrollment—every person who enrolls and pays the small membership fee—does the thing Christ most loved to do.

Your Golden Cross money is spent in your own Conference. It is spent for the sick poor in your own midst. If your Conference has no hospital it will designate others to render this service.

The Church contemplates that every charge will participate. It is expected that all Methodists able to do so will enroll. Surely none will neglect—hold back—allow anything else to crowd out the Golden Cross. This is the most Christ-like action you will take this year.

Literature, posters, buttons, and other materials will be furnished free by the Board of Missions, Doctors' Bldg., Nashville. They have probably been received in your church. Organize according to the plan in the Discipline (536-549).

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

1 Corinthians 12:31—Desire earnestly the best gifts.

1. Paul has been speaking of gifts. It is well to remember that every talent is a gift of God. Naturalism certainly cannot explain the spiritual gifts mentioned. These bestowments come from God. And "every good and perfect gift cometh from above."

2. We should desire the BEST gifts. How often is the "good the enemy of the best." And a great deal depends upon our definition of the best. "Man can not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness." The Christian desires God's best for himself, for his home, for his church, for his community, state, and nation, and for the world.

3. DESIRE earnestly the best gifts. Mrs. Browning said, "Every wish is like a prayer—with God."

Could See Cardui

Was Helping Her From the First

"I have found Cardui a great help to me," writes Mrs. G. W. Bennett, of Biloxi, Miss. "During change of life, I was weak, nervous and run-down. I knew I must do something or get down in bed, for I was just dragging about. When I first began to take Cardui, I could see it was helping me. By the time I had taken five bottles of Cardui, there was a great difference in my condition. I was so pleased with Cardui I wanted others to try it." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Many of the ills of our time are due to base desires. Why is much of the modern literature so vile? Why are the commercialized movies often so sensual? The producers must bear their share of the blame. Yet the base desires of multitudes must share in the censure. Low desire is destructive of everything fine.

When our people desire statesmen in office instead of time-serving politicians, they will get them. When our people desire law enforcement, they will have it.

All life is governed from within. May our desires be Christian.

4. Desire EARNESTLY the best gifts. The Laodiceans were neither cold nor hot. Because of their lukewarmness, Christ would "spew them out of His mouth." Desire as used in the text means more than vaguely wishing for. It means seeking after. "Earnestly" is added for emphasis to show the intensity of the desire. God's promises are to those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness;" to those who are "not weary in well doing;" to those who are faithful; to those who "desire EARNESTLY the best gifts."

PRAYER

Our gracious Heavenly Father, Thou hast shown us how important is the right desire. "Out of the heart are the issues of life." May we hunger and thirst after righteousness, then shall we be filled. Spiritualize our affections. May we love Thee with all our minds, hearts, and strength. We ask for Thy abiding presence in the name of Jesus.

REVIVAL IN SOUTH JACKSON

The Ministerial Students of Millsaps College, under the presidency of the Rev. Andrew F. Gallman, held a revival in the "Bessie Nugent Shands Mission," in South Jackson, from March 10 through March 31. This was a demonstration of the "Old Time Revival." Drunkards, gamblers, adulterers, and what not, came and fell on their faces at the altar crying out unto the Lord to have mercy, and rose giving thanks unto Him for saving their souls. Children prayed for their parents, who were at home committing sin, and saw them gloriously saved the next day.

At least fifteen who had never known Christ found him as a real personal Saviour, and at least fifteen others who had drifted were reclaimed.

The Spiritual plane of South Jackson has been elevated to such a height that even the Chief of Police has been enquiring "What has happened in South Jackson?"

Prayer services were held each evening for a week preceding the revival and each day before services in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sant. Several nights there were prayer services held in different homes, after services at the church, lasting as late as two o'clock in the morning. Did the people get tired? No. The Lord was with them and souls were being born anew.

We wish to express our thanks and appreciation to Mesdames Smith, Adams, Langley, and Miss Brashear and the many other friends who have worked so faithfully in that district and who did so much in making the meeting a glorious success.

May the Lord send many other such revivals.

J. NOEL HINSON.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND CALL YOU GROUCHY?

Mrs. Barbara Spears anything he could to help you. If he knew how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was, he'd go straight to the nearest drug store and buy you a bottle.

"My husband says I am my old self again," says Mrs. Barbara Spears, 799 Elma Street, Akron, Ohio. "I was tired and all in with no appetite. Had no pep and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling."

Don't try your husband's patience too far. Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. It probably will help you, because nearly a million American women know from personal experience that it helps them.

DR. CHARLES COPELAND MILLER

As high noon drew on in the morning of March 8, 1935, the spirit of Dr. Charles Copeland Miller was borne away to the bosom of the Heavenly Father in whose Kingdom he had labored so long and so faithfully.

Stricken in the early days of November of last year, Brother Miller suffered great agony for weeks without any relief. With the passing of the pain he was left a mere shadow of his former self and death came with a final stroke to loose his weary soul from its earthly ties and into the fullness of Christ's presence and power.

He was buried March 10th, in the old cemetery at Jackson, La., among the scenes hallowed by the memories of his youth and early manhood.

Brother Miller was born near Jackson, La., December 22, 1860, and grew to manhood through the stirring experiences of reconstruction days. His father, Dr. A. G. Miller, was originally from New York, and was a man of singular worth and character, contributing in large measure to the development of Christian education in Louisiana through his relation to Centenary College. His mother was a Miss Blunt, of Natchez, Miss.

Educated at Centenary College, Brother Miller went out to teach in the public schools of the state, serving in this capacity for some time in East Carroll Parish. He also served, to the best of our knowledge, in the preparatory department of Centenary College.

His public service covers a long term of years, beginning, perhaps, when, at the age of eighteen years, he undertook, with the help of one or two like-minded friends, a campaign against the liquor traffic among the Negroes of East and West Feliciana Parishes. It is interesting to note that his final appeals to the public were in this same field when last October he appeared in his pastor's pulpit a few minutes at a morning service and then closed his pulpit ministry that evening in the neighboring Baptist church where he was greatly respected and beloved, striving in both addresses to create a public conscience destructive to the liquor traffic. His last public address was in the Franklinton Court House discussing the same theme.

Admitted on trial into the Louisiana Conference at its session in Louisiana Avenue Church in New Orleans, December 5-10, 1894, he was appointed as Professor in Centenary College and served several years in that capacity and as pastor of the Wilson charge. He was admitted into full connection at Ruston in December, 1896, and ordained deacon by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. His ordination as elder came two years later at the hands of Bishop H. C. Morrison in the city of Mansfield.

His next appointment was Alexandria, First Church, where he served nearly four years (1900-1903), leaving before his time was out to take the presidency of Centenary College, where he remained until the College at Jackson was closed. Opposed to the removal of the College to Shreveport, La., Brother Miller remained true to his convictions, but when the removal was accomplished over his protest he gave his loyal support to the school in its new location and was later honored by the institution with the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The list of his remaining appointments follows: Baker, 1907; Lafayette, 1908; Presiding elder, Baton Rouge District, 1909-12; First Church, Monroe, 1913-15; Lake Providence, 1916-17; Morgan City, 1918-21; Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge, 1922-24; Franklinton, 1925-28; Vivian, 1929-30; Kentwood and Tangipahoa, 1931. He was superannuated at the Monroe Conference, November 18-22, 1931, and removed to Franklinton, La., where he spent the remaining three years of his life.

During these years he was a challenge and an inspiration to his pastor and a joy to his multitude of friends.

Brother Miller was an outstanding man and minister of the gospel. He loved men and knew how to make them his friends. He was equally at home among men of high or low degree, for his culture never marred or glossed over his humanity. A friend of men, he has fought their battles when they could not fight for themselves. Many there are, both living and dead, who have occasion to bless his memory because he entered the list on their behalf to help them secure what he believed to have been their rights.

His was a strength of intelligence; a keenness of wit; a sense of humor; an ideal of integrity; a wealth of sympathy; an independence of spirit; a quality of loyalty and courage; a sincere faith in God and a resolute purpose and capacity to serve rarely seen combined in such liberal measure in any one life.

Of faults he confessed a share. But though we be critical and extravagant in weighing his faults, and niggard in assessing his virtues, his manhood still towers high for our admiration and emulation and helps our selfishness to dissolve into more worthy thoughts.

Brother Miller is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian H. Miller, of Franklinton; by one daughter, Mrs. Harold Demande, of Lafayette; and one son, Mr. R. M. Miller, of Gilliam; and a half-sister, Mrs. Hattie Kean, of Baton Rouge, with whom a great host of friends in several states join in cherishing the memory of one whose loss falls upon us all alike.

We do not expect to see his like again.

PURVIS—HOLY WEEK

Beginning Sunday, April 14th with a message by the pastor on the "Triumphant Entry Into the Holy City," we began a series of services each evening celebrating the days and experiences of our Lord's last week before His crucifixion. Monday evening Bro. Charles Schultz of Court Street Church, of Hattiesburg, delivered the message. He came in the place of Bro. T. O. Prewitt, of Broad Street. The message delighted, edified and inspired the congregation and left a good impression.

Tuesday evening Bro. G. H. Thompson came up from Lumberton and left us glad and rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God and that Gospel is the power of God unto Salvation.

Wednesday evening Bro. Clifford, Presiding Elder of the Hattiesburg District, was with us. His message measured up to his usual high mark as a good, sound Gospel preacher. Having been pastor of the Purvis church for the two years preceding this, he had endeared himself to the people. His visit and message met with high appreciation.

For Thursday evening, Dr. W. H. McIntosh, pastor First Presbyterian Church finding it impossible to meet his promise to be with us, Bro. L. M. Reeves, our pastor at Sumrall came down. We hear many appreciative expressions of the fine message he brought.

Friday evening Bro. D. A. Hogan, pastor of the Baptist Church in Purvis, capped the climax in bringing a strong, appropriate message on the Crucifixion.

Easter being Commencement Sunday for the city schools, the eleven o'clock hour was spent at the School Auditorium.

Easter evening, Brother T. O. Prewitt brought his delightful choir down, rendered a most delightful and inspiring musical program — "Cantata" — "The Lord of Life."

The impressions of these services and associations we hope and pray will be a lasting means of grace to the churches and people of Purvis.

A course of study had preceded these services for several weeks, the "Stewardship of Life," which was intended to prepare the ground for this week, was especially helpful.

MRS. W. L. TABB PASSES AWAY

The many friends of Rev. W. M. Tabb, of Homewood, Miss., deeply sympathize with him in the loss of his mother, Mrs. W. L. Tabb, who passed away on April 6th at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Barber, of Water Valley.

Mrs. Tabb had been sick for a little more than two weeks and suffered much, but the end came as peacefully as a child going to sleep in a mother's arms.

After a rainy, gloomy spell on Saturday night just at twelve o'clock, as her spirit took its flight, the sky brightened up with a bright sunshine and all the birds around the house began chirping, and the little canary in the house sang till the end came. Rev. Tabb and all the other children were called to her bedside many days before the end but she only knew them a few minutes at times.

She was a loving mother, a devoted wife and a faithful friend to all who knew her and she will be greatly missed by friends and loved ones.

Her body was laid to rest in Pearl River cemetery, near Canton, now known as Lambuth Memorial Church, on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with the Rev. J. H. Morrow, of Madison, officiating. The grave was banked with beautiful floral tributes, one being sent by the Woman's Missionary Society of Rev. Tabb's church people of Homewood. The flowers showed of the high esteem in which she was held by all. She was a good Christian woman and will be missed by her heartbroken children and husband and loved ones, but she has gone on to a better home where there will be no more suffering or pain. She is survived by her husband, W. L. Tabb; four daughters: Mrs. Earl Barber and Mrs. T. D. Ricketts, of Water Valley; Mrs. Annie Ray, of Canton, and Mrs. Edd Munchenburg, of Hobert, Ind.; three sons: Rev. W. M. Tabb, of Homewood; T. H. Tabb, of Ridgeland, and C. E. Tabb, of Canton; ten grandchildren, two brothers, two half-brothers and four half-sisters.

Her daughter-in-law,

MRS. W. M. TABB.

FROM VIVIAN, LA.

Mr. Editor: The Vivian Methodist Church is very much on the map. Our pastor, Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, is very much alive and thoroughly consecrated to his exalted work. Easter was a great occasion, with fine congregations and excellent services. There were some one hundred and thirty persons participating in the "Holy communion," ranging in age from childhood to the aged. A nice ample Bible class room has been built and there have been four members received on profession of faith and otherwise. As high as one hundred and fourteen have attended a mid-week prayer service. We praise God for His continued blessings upon pastor and congregation.

F. T. REAMES.

TROUT AND GOOD PINE

The pre-Easter services of the Trout and Good Pine Methodist Churches were conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. D. Milton.

The first meeting of the series was held at Good Pine on Saturday night, April 13, and each night following until Wednesday night, April 17, when services were continued at the Trout Methodist Church through Easter Sunday.

Each sermon centered around some event in Jesus' life as He approached the crucifixion and the resurrection, and were so linked together as to make a vivid rendition of the Easter story.

All services were well attended. Each message was delivered with such beautiful sincerity that every one who came was really inspired with the true spirit of Easter.

MISS BUCKELER.

At a revival held during the past winter at the town of Changchun in Korea the daily program was as follows: Morning prayer service at 5:30 a.m.; Bible study from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.; song service from 6:30 to 7 p.m.; preaching services, 7 to 9 p.m. Good crowds attended, although the thermometer registered around 12 degrees Fahrenheit. Each morning by five o'clock forty to fifty people were in the church engaged in silent prayer; fully sixty attended the study periods; at night 140 to 180 assembled for the preaching services.

The Keynote

By Merton S. Rice

FRANCES ASBURY struck the keynote not only of his own great life, but of the whole great life of the church, when he wrote in his diary the familiar words, "I am going to America to live to God and to bring others to do so." That sentence is fundamental Methodism. It is the calling need of this hour, unto which the whole passion of our great church should be turned. The human problem has become demanding. There must be found some way for us all to live together in a great common brotherhood, which will justify our claim of being common children of our common heavenly Father. Before every rising threat! Out of every tangled relationship! Solution of every bitter strife! There stands the sublime, commanding figure of Jesus Christ. It is Christ or chaos. The very same thing that brought John Wesley and the passionate Methodists first upon the scene to face the problem of an age that was red with the ravages of unbelief, and vile in the stories of its own sinfulness, is again the need of a Methodism that will once more burst into the flame of evangelism that will sweep our day with a profound religious conviction. I am convinced that we are arrived at another clearly drawn crisis in evangelistic emphasis.

For a great and powerful revival of religion we surely stand in suppliant need. I wonder if we have not had fully enough Christlessness to be ready to appreciate what Christ would mean to us all. Jesus Christ came to pledge a new world in Him. If we are ever to find a new world, it will be arranged around His will and not around economics or politics. The hope of the world is religious.—The Pastors' Journal.

TRAGIC EASTER FOR CARROLLTON is a headline in the Carrollton, Miss., Conservative. The first paragraph says: "It was a tragic Easter Sunday for Carrollton and vicinity. Automobile wrecks, drunken driving and cutting scrapes marred the day of the Resurrection for Carroll County citizens." We are persuaded that if the public might be brought to realize the tragic effect of introducing legalized liquor into the traffic stream of American life, the end for rum would be in sight. But the truth will not be told by a press which, for liquor advertising, obeys its master's voice.

DOCTOR JOHN A. HUTTON, the author of several books and the editor of the British Weekly of London, has been invited by the English-speaking churches of Geneva to preach the Annual League Sermon at the opening of the Assembly, on September 8, 1935. The sermon will be delivered in St. Pierre Cathedral, Geneva, on Sunday evening of that date. Dr. Hutton's predecessors in this distinguished service include Lord Davidson of Canterbury, Dean Inge, Drs. W. P. Paterson, Norman Maclean, H. E. Fosdick, and Harold Lynn Hough. Dr. Hutton is a great friend of Peace, a man of real ability, and he will maintain the traditions of those who have preceded him as League preachers.

THE SITE OF ANCIENT LACHISH in Palestine is the center of archaeological interest just now. After 2500 years, the tragic story of its fate in the struggle between Egypt and Babylon, is about to be made available to men of this day. It was the strongest of the Jewish fortresses in the period of the kingdom of Judah. Its massive stone walls enclosed an area of thirty-six acres, and the foundations are well preserved. "The first handwriting of the Gospel of John has been discovered;" and the excavations are expected to disclose the secret of the tragic fate of the kingdom of Judah. The wall has been uncovered sufficiently to show the repairs that were made following the siege by Sennacherib in 712 B. C. The expedition, now in its third year, is under the direction of a Mr. Starkey.

MR. CLARENCE DARROW, the once famous criminal lawyer and long a pronounced agnostic, announces that he is a materialist. At the age of 78 years, he says that he has found out beyond a doubt that there is no God and no future life. He adduces no proof of his find—he just says he can't prove the facts to be true and he denies them. St. Paul said: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Mr. Darrow may prize the congratulations of a felon whom he defended; but we imagine that it would be infinitely more satisfying if he could feel that his great gifts had been employed in the noble task of turning the feet of men and women from the felon's way.

HONORABLE WILBUR L. CROSS, Governor of Connecticut, in his veto of a racetrack gambling bill, said, "The motive behind this bill is clearly not the improvement of the breeding of horses for speed, nor is it the promotion of horse racing as a sport. It appears to be primarily a mechanized gambling scheme on a large scale for exploiting all classes of the people, the poor as well as the rich, for the benefit of a few, with the state as a partner. From no point of view would the bill be conducive to the moral and economic welfare of the people." If the country had more men of that caliber in political life, we would soon be out of the moral slump which made possible the return of the saloon and is pressing for the re-establishment of many other forms of vice and breeders of crime.

SLAUGHTER ON THE HIGHWAYS is the caption of an article in the New Outlook, Canada, containing these words: "The constantly mounting toll of automobile accidents is becoming a matter of very serious concern to the authorities in Canada and in the United States. The figures of the present moment are almost staggering and they are increasing at an alarming rate. Few people have any doubt as to the major cause of this widening trail of death. The drunken driver is unquestionably the chief contributing factor in the matter of motor killings and maimings.

"The fact is that on either side of the border, such killings are no longer news, and for that reason—as well as others, less reputable—the casualty lists are submerged in obscure corners of the newspapers."

MOTHER

The human attachments of Jesus could not be crushed by the pain and the humiliation of the cross, as is evidenced by his tender thought of his mother when he said to John, "Behold thy mother." These words have been called the shortest will ever made. In that brief speech the Son of Man transmitted to the beloved disciple, the only possession which he left on earth. This utterance was vastly more than a classic of legal or literary brevity. In those words he paid eternal tribute to the personality that is the most precious inheritance of the race. As Jesus looked for the last time with human eyes upon that sorrow-laden face and the solitary and stricken figure that lingered at the foot of the cross, there must have come to his breaking heart the haunting melody of a mother's song and a mother's prayer in Nazareth; and the hallowed recollection of her tender solicitude and care throughout the years. In the softened light of an hour that sifts all that is theatrical and conventional from human relations, he placed an immortal halo upon the brow of motherhood. As the light of earth faded out, mother was his most precious human treasure. He was literally writing the last chapter of his redemptive work in the blood of his breaking heart, but next in meaning to that divine achievement was his mother. She was the perfect human symbol of the sacrifice which he was making for mankind, and in her heart she carried the passion of his quest for a lost race. In that tender and loving bequest he lifted the fireside of the Christian home to the very gates of heaven. At the close of his life, as at its beginning, motherhood shares in the radiant glory of the divine conquest of the world. At the beginning in Bethlehem, he accepted her part in the incarnation; and at the close he acknowledged the debt of mankind to the heart most like the heart of God. Surely heaven must bend low today as our lips utter in sacramental meditation that precious name, "Mother."

THE ABILITY TO BOB UP AGAIN

This homely and arresting phrase is a variation of an expression often used to describe the courage which refuses to be conquered. "No man has lost anything until he has lost heart," and "It is difficult to whip a man who does not know when he is whipped," express the same thought. They all mean that the maintenance of faith and an unbroken spirit is a priceless virtue in times of personal trouble, or in periods of national distress. For five years now, people have talked "depression" until the whole world has seemed to be deluged in a sea of ink. A fleck of cloud appears upon the religious horizon and men with the grass-hopper spirit are thrown into a panic of fear, and the spirit of praise is turned into wailing. The inevitable consequence is a stampede of the milling hosts of colorless souls who are as unconstructive as the camp-followers of Caesar's army. Gideon's band was reduced until its numbers represented a mere shadow of power; but the enemy host fled in wild confusion before the daring and dauntless heroes. It was easy for the obsequious half-breed, Tobiah, to taunt those who labored to rebuild the ruined Jerusalem; but he was soon to know that those toilers possessed a power which no plummet of his could measure. The great mass of the church in the land of the Reformation is today in retreat before an ambitious and ruthless political autocrat; but in the depths of a crucible of suffering and humiliation is a group of men whose faith and iron determination will yet bring the dispersed sons of Luther to victory. The anti-God movement in communistic Russia has been as brutal as the rush of the lions upon the defenceless victims in the Coliseum in the days of Nero. But a few men and women of dauntless faith and with the spirit of the martyrs still keep the flame of Christian devotion alight. Such heroic spirits always are and always will be the torch bearers in the desperate hours of human progress; and theirs are the hands that lift the curtain of the dawn for God's returning hosts.

CHRISTIAN ASSURANCE

A great deal is being said today upon the subject of evangelism, and no theme is more important at this critical hour of our history. Some of the discussion seems to be critical rather than constructive, and some of it seems to incline to a mechanical regimentation of the church more than to the development of a passion for souls. An attitude expressive of the thought and the conventions of a particular time is apt to be revolutionary, and to offer little advantage over even a reactionary method. To be sure, effective evangelism can not be divorced from the thought and the problem of its day. But it can no more break with the past without sacrificing the prestige of the church and much that is vital in its history. It may be admitted that certain types of evangelism are open to question, but such criticism should be offered upon our knees and should have no reference to popular clamor. Progress "toward a better world through the elimination of industrial and economic greed, war and race prejudice" may be preached without doing violence to the evangelistic aim of the church, but only as a secondary achievement of the gospel. To impose such limits upon the evangelistic appeal tends to a conventionalized, a one-sided and an inadequate gospel. Evangelism should stand ready to adopt any approach or process that may establish contact between a sinful soul and the Spirit of God. Such was certainly the attitude of St. Paul. When John Wesley said to the Bishop of London, "Church or no church, we must tend to the work of saving souls," he gave pitch to the movement which produced the Methodist Church. When that note of urgency shall be lost from our evangelism, it will mark the dawn of a new day and the beginning of a wholly different ecclesiastical body. The Methodist Church is irrevocably committed to belief in salvation as a personal reality, and its great interest in social questions is a consequence of the irresistible urge of that experience. Those who lift their faces to the sky in earnest pleading for the descent of the Spirit upon the people will always be a greater asset in the building of a Christian community than those who seek to direct the power and prestige of the organization for the promotion of social enterprises, or those who seek to shape the processes of evangelism to meet popular clamor.

COSMETIC RELIGION

Cosmetic Religion is the striking caption of a paragraph in which the Gospel Advocate, Nashville, arraigns the superficial practices which are often accepted for faith. "Pharisaism," says the article, "was cosmetic religion—an effort to hide a depraved heart with outside holiness. It was a failure. The effort to appear better than you are is artificial and fraudulent. It is a counterfeit in religion, and is ordinarily an awkward one. Sweet water does not come from a bitter fountain. Genuine religion is not a cover up proposition. Mote hunting and faultfinding are in most instances an unholy ruse to divert attention from the real sinner. When a talebearer looks into a mirror, he sees a hypocrite."

NOW IS THE TIME

By D. B. Raulins

Now is the time for people who believe in a God of goodwill to combine their forces and concentrate them upon major objectives.

Back of the economic and political collapse and chaos of our time is a moral and spiritual failure far more disastrous and tragic. The nervous uncertainty growing out of it all is bred of a dearth of soul, individual and social. Spiritual ideals and attitudes have not been wrought into the fabric of our lives. As religious leaders scan the ruins they may read in them a saddening commentary upon themselves and their leadership. The skeleton of this impoverished spiritual condition points its finger, saying, "You have been too blindly and selfishly concerned with your own affairs; you have failed to read your responsibility in terms of the whole of life."

The situation is saying to us, "Repent."

It is not in politics to redeem government. It is not in the schools to reform education. It is not in industry to remake our economic system. It is the human factor back of and in it all that must be redeemed. And that is the task of the Church.

Forgetting their minor differences, or leaving them for gradual and friendly liquidation, Jews, Catholics and Protestants should unite their forces behind the great spiritual values they hold in common and of which they should be the responsible custodians for mankind. Co-operation is a part of the price of the dissemination and preservation of these values.

The feasibility of such a combination is already proving itself. A Jewish rabbi, a Catholic priest and a Protestant preacher have toured our country together, living together and speaking from the same platforms to audiences of these faiths. Already, working together, they have made a distinct contribution to youth in a cleaner and better movie. Their world-wide organizations lend themselves to such a program.

World peace is our original assignment to these forces. It is their responsibility and impossible of realization without them.

Now is the time. On with the Renaissance.

A PREACHER PREACHES TO A PREACHER: HIMSELF

By Ivan O. Donaldson

Can a preacher know his own faults and still be a good preacher? Can a man who makes mistakes, and knows it, minister to individuals and a congregation? True, the blind can't lead the blind; but if one has faults and knows it is he blind?

I know I make mistakes—I have faults; I work on them, I pray about them, I repent over them; still I know I make mistakes and still I have faults—the same ones that I work on and pray about. Can I be a good preacher, can I minister to my flock?

I see faults in my fellow preachers; I do not know if they know they are there or not; I expect they do. I hope that even though we are preachers that we are also preachable.

In view of the fact that our weaknesses appear quite universal, it might be well to think them through together, and to give ourselves some good preaching.

Is our church organized around ourselves—or around an ideal? The program of Christianization naturally demands an organization. The power of the preacher can never be overestimated, and the organization plan does not minimize the position or importance of the preacher; rather it exalts it. The organization, rightly put into practice, frees the preacher from detail work so that there may be full concentration on building the spiritual life of the members. But many of us fail to see this.

In any number of cases we speak, with pride, of "my" church rather than "our" church. Some of us actually pride ourselves that "the church will go to pieces if I leave." That may be very satisfying to one's vanity—but not so satisfying to a congregation, and it is not a safe foundation on which to build a Christian church. The church rightly organized around the ideal of Christian culture, rather than around any personality (except Christ), no matter how wonderful, is on a far safer foundation. Then it is that preachers may come or preachers may go—but the power of the church will remain.

Do we cater to publicity and claim credit due the church? It is a subtle temptation which each preacher meets to take unto himself all the credit of the church's success. We do not do it intentionally—that is granted—even protest against it—yet all the time permitting it. In the announcements, in the reports made at Conference, in local newspaper publicity—how often it is the preacher's name that is given the preeminence rather than the organization.

The faithful committee worker, the officers, the ones who have "put over" a certain successful church affair are often "lost" in the praise bestowed upon the pastor. Oh, we may demur a bit—yet permit it to happen again and again.

Do we give way to jealousy? This may seem like a superfluous question. "Surely no preacher need do any searching to answer that question," you may say. It requires a little deeper searching, for it is not infrequent to find a spirit of jealousy rather than one of wholesome co-operation between two churches in the same town.

Sometimes this jealousy on the part of a preacher expresses itself toward a visiting minister or some popular church officer. It is always subtle. The preacher himself might be shocked at such a revelation and might resolutely refuse to admit it—but if it exists the congregation knows it. Jealousy often attacks Christian workers under the most alluring guises. Do you yield to it? I do many times.

Do we win loyalty to ourselves or to Jesus Christ? Every preacher knows all the temptations involved in this searching question. The more popular the preacher, the greater need the searching be.

Personality likes to be recognized. The human ego seeks confirmation of its own importance, or perhaps craves release from its inferiority complex.

Love and devotion and gallant attention—how satisfying these are to human vanity! It is the easiest thing in the world to "feed" on them—to one's soul's starvation, and still worse to the starvation of other souls. Many preachers with the best intentions unconsciously yield to this temptation.

There should be no minimizing of the tremendous power of an attractive personality to win love and devotion to Christ and his cause. It is the most powerful force in the world. Unless that personality is consecrated, it is fraught with danger and ends only in winning loyalty to itself. All human idols have feet of clay. To see young folks go through disillusionment over a fallen idol is tragic, indeed. This does not happen if the supreme purpose of the church is kept ever shining bright—that men are to be won not to self, but through self, to Jesus Christ.

It seems to me that the preacher who is most preachable is best able to approach. It is well at times to preach to our own selves that motives may be clarified, errors corrected, directions righted, purposes recentered and consecration renewed.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT

The monument at Washington, Miss., on the site of the old Methodist Meeting-house, in which the convention was held in 1817 that wrote the first constitution of Mississippi and chose the name, "Mississippi," has already been put in place, ready for the dedicatory exercises, beginning at 1 p.m., May 14. It is thought that the program will last about two hours, including a historical pageant. The ladies of the Washington Methodist Church have erected a commodious shed, under which they will sell the visitors all needed eatables and cold drinks.

SPECIAL DAYS

Days are the milestones in life's travel; they have always played a large part in the events of man's career. They are like people, so very different—some cloudy, others bright, blustery, quiet and peaceful. In all ages there have been some days that we have given more emphasis to than others so that they finally stand out on the calendar of time like mountain peaks in a range of mountains. May I mention a few of these Special Days? For God hallowed the Seventh Day and rested from all of his labors. How much more progress the world would have made had we always observed the spirit of these days? Of course, Christmas Day not only brings its revel of joy, but also reminds us of of Heaven's best gift to the world. Then the Resurrection Day, or Easter, as we call it, never fails to inspire in us new hope of eternal life. Among our national holidays we should always bless Thanksgiving Day and Armistice Day, for they both in a large measure stand for liberty. In our individual lives I suppose our birthdays are the most important until we are twenty-one. In our church activities we are exhorted to remember our college and orphanage days.

And now comes an important day set aside by the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences for the SECOND SUNDAY IN FEBRUARY, or as near thereto as practicable. This day is to be known as the Memorial Mercy Home Day. It is so new that I fear some have overlooked to observe it and we are wondering if Mother's Day would not be a most appropriate time to remember these unfortunate mothers and their little babies that our church is trying to protect and bless? In the beginning of time it is recorded that "the evening and the morning were the first day" and when our Master came on the scene of action in this world He said, "I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work."

May we not hope to hear from you very soon with reference to observance of our work of Mercy Day?

Yours in the Master's work,

J. G. SNELLING, Supt.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies, D.D.

There are some things so closely connected with one's religious life and experience that they become indispensable to its best and fullest realization. To me one of these factors is the failure on the part of scholars of this day to modernize Holy Scriptures. I fail to agree with many of our ministers that such translations as Moffatt's, Goodspeed's, or others of later date add a richer and fuller meaning to the original writings. As a classic in the great field of English literature the King James version in rhythm, beauty and expression is without a peer. The Canterbury version of 1880, and its American adaptation, best catches the vigor, spiritual beauty and expression of the older book. And the Canterbury group in studied admiration, laid their trophies at the feet of the elder brother—the Bible of the English-speaking peoples. All this claptrap about people failing to understand the language of the standard Bible of our fathers is deceitful and false. Most of them understand its message of life and spirit expressed in the classic styles that belonged to the age of Shakespeare and Johnson better than when written in modern ordinary newspaper columnist style. Moreover, the style and language of the standard version lends itself best to the expression of religious life and experience. For believe me, religion has its technique as well as science or art. Scholars tell us that many of Shakespeare's plays are adaptations or translations from other tongues, yet no one who has a taste for classic style and beauty attempts to revise or re-write the words of this master. Still I presume many will continue to use these modernized translations despite protests to the contrary. But after some fifty years of study and reading of the Bible I infinitely prefer the authorized version which was appointed by regal and no doubt parliamentary decree in old England, to be read in the churches. Its majesty, beauty and classic style carries its own appeal.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

four dollars each. The next General Conference was fixed for Baltimore, May 6, 1804, and only those who had been as much as four years in the traveling connection were to be eligible for membership.

The most remarkable feature of the Conference was the revival spirit which was manifest throughout its sessions, and which continued to spread until it pervaded the entire church. The years 1789 and 1790 had been great revival years; but, beginning with the O'Kelly agitation, a spiritual dearth cast its disheartening and deadening shadow across more than a quadrennium of Methodist history. We have already referred to the fact that the Conference of 1794 inaugurated a move for deepening the spiritual life of the church; and following the session of the General Conference of 1796 there was a distinct upturn in the fortunes of Methodism; but the movement did not attain the proportions of a general revival until the closing years of the century. It was at this time that some of the peculiar revival customs of the Methodists were developed, such as the "mourners bench" and the camp-meeting—an institution which attained great prominence in the evangelism of the church.

The revival began in Tennessee and Kentucky under the joint promotion of Presbyterians, Methodists and Baptists. Two brothers, William and John McGee; James McGready; and Williams McKendree were among the most prominent leaders of it. The revival at the General Conference continued for some days after the session had ended; and soon after, more than on hundred joined the society in Duck Creek, Delaware, as the result of the revival there. Virginia was greatly affected, tidings from New England brought news of a general revival, and Philadelphia and New York had a divine visitation also. In 1801 McKendree reported that 3,250 had been added to the church in the Western Conference alone. A flame of revival passion swept over the entire field, and the dawn of the nineteenth century witnessed a new demonstration of the power of Methodist evangelism. The origin of the camp-meeting is claimed for Carolina Methodism; but it was in Tennessee and Kentucky that its effectiveness was established, and it became an instrument which dominated the evangelism of the church for more than a quarter of a century. In 1811 Asbury said: "Our camp-meetings, I think, amount to between four and five hundred annually." He said also that they continued for six or eight days and it was not uncommon for them to be attended by ten thousand persons.

During the quadrennium beginning at 1800, the membership of the Methodist Church had a phenomenal increase—in round numbers, from sixty-four thousand to one hundred and thirteen thousand. There were no epochal events in the period. George Daugherty and John Harper were grossly mistreated in Charleston on account of the slavery feeling there; and Daugherty was thrust under a pump by a band of ruffians, and was saved from being drowned by the heroism and defiance of a Mrs. Kugley. Rev. F. A. Mood says that Daugherty never recovered from the ill-treatment of that terrible night, and that his death in 1807 was due to the exposure and abuse of that occasion. On January 29, 1801, Reverend Devereaux Jarratt, friend of the early Methodists and of true Christianity, died; and in him there passed one of the greatest forces for righteousness developed in the pioneer days of American Christianity.

The General Conference of 1804 marked the end of the first twenty years in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church; and the roll indicates that there were not more than eight or ten present who had attended the Christmas Conference; and only seventeen preachers on the effective list were in the ministry in 1784. The session of 1804, like many since, was more remarkable for its heated discussions than for substantial achievements; and we learn more about the situation in the church from what was attempted than from what was done. Immediately after the completion of the organization, the Conference resolved itself into a committee of the whole for the revision of the Discipline; and it read and revised section by section and paragraph by paragraph the entire contents. There were times of such heated debate that spectators were excluded and the Conference proceeded behind closed doors. Once the venerable Whatcoat arose to protest against the temper of the debates and to plead for the "rule of reason." Thomas Lyell moved to delete everything from the Discipline on the subject of the Presiding Elder; and a motion was made to prohibit preachers from using spirituous liquors, but both motions were lost. A two-year time limit for the pastorate was adopted, and the Book Concern was ordered to be moved from Philadelphia to New York. There was a spirited contest over the nomination of two trustees of the Chartered Fund. They were William Budd and John Wood, both of whom had withdrawn from the church. Their nominations failed of confirmation by a small margin. The slavery issue resulted in such disagreement that it was proposed to leave the entire matter to the bishops to fix a section to suit themselves; but Asbury refused to act under that resolution. Finally a committee was raised to prepare an Address to the church. The Conference adjourned on May 23, having been in session seventeen days. William Colbert observes: "In the afternoon ended our General Conference, which is the fourth General Conference I have been at, and I think the dullest of three if not of the four."

Richard Whatcoat died at the home of Senator Richard Bassett in Dover, Delaware, July 5, 1806. His death had been expected for some time; and more than two months before it happened, Bishop Asbury proposed another irregular and arbitrary scheme, which Jesse Lee says, "Would have upset and destroyed the rules and regulations of the Methodists, respecting the election and ordination of Bishops." He says further: "It was said that the plan originated in the New York Conference (May 16, 1806), which was as follows: To call a delegated conference of seven members from each conference, chosen by the conference, to meet in Baltimore on the fourth of July, 1807, to choose superintendents, etc. This plan was adopted by four of the conferences, viz. New York, New England, the Western and South Carolina conferences; and the delegates were accordingly chosen. But when it was proposed to the Virginia conference which met in Newbern, in February, 1807, they refused to take it under consideration, and rejected it as being pointedly in opposition to all the rules of our church. The bishop laboured hard to carry the point, but he laboured in vain; and the whole business of that dangerous plan was upset by the Virginia Conference. The inventors and defenders of that project might have meant well; but they certainly erred in judgment." It is to be hoped that the Conference used more diplomatic language than did the historian who records the incident, but there can be no doubt that the old warrior "bit the dust." The hand may have been that of the New York Conference, but the voice was that of the veteran Asbury.

The outstanding events of this period are soon told. They were the O'Kelly schism; the creation of the Chartered Fund for the maintenance of superannuate preachers and their dependents, widows and orphans; the arrangement of a financial plan for the church; fixing a two-year time limit for the pastorate; the conquest of the vast wilderness lying beyond the Allegheny mountains; and the great revival which swept the entire church in the opening years of the new century. Before the year 1808, the Methodist Church had entered practically all the territory east of the Mississippi River and had crossed into Missouri, where Joseph Oglesby preached about 1805, John Travis was sent as a missionary in 1807, and Jesse Walker established the church in St. Louis about 1820. The Church had reached a membership total of more than one hundred and forty-four thousand, with an active itinerant ministry of five hundred and sixteen. It had fought through its problems, had found its strength, and its sinews were hardened for the long stretch of years ahead.

CHAPTER V.

CHANGE OF LEADERS AND POLITY

When the Methodist Church was established in 1784 the primary object of the founders was to set up a ministry and to provide adequate means for the spiritual care of the people of the societies. The first Discipline of the Church was largely given over to directions concerning the spiritual agencies which were already in use, and there was little effort to develop the ecclesiastical machinery necessary to the direction and control of the organization. The Discipline was more a manual for evangelistic workers than a code of ecclesiastical law. Such regulation as had been developed was a kind of patch-work to meet emergencies; it reflected the personal views of the leaders rather than a well-conceived and consistent policy of administration; and it became more and more inadequate for meeting the needs of the rapidly expanding Church. Such was the situation at the end of the first quarter of a century of Methodist history.

The period beginning with the year 1808 was, therefore, an epochal time in the history of the Church; for it was then that the personal factors which had determined control were replaced by a regulatory scheme administered chiefly by those who neither sustained nor claimed a paternal relation to the movement. At this time, Dr. Coke was practically eliminated from consideration as a bishop; and while Asbury continued to be a potent influence, his age and declining health together with the election of the alert and independent McKendree to share his authority, lessened the absoluteness of his control. During this period also the stars that had shone so long in the Methodist sky were rapidly descending toward the horizon, and a leadership with the outlook and the ideals of a new era was pressing to the front.

The change was not more marked, however, in the personnel of administration than in the form of the government itself. At the beginning, every preacher on the continent was admitted to an equal share in the control of the Church, and those who had traveled four years and were in full connection were still entitled to that privilege. The unwisdom of such a scheme of administration became more and more evident as the numbers increased and the interests of the Methodists became more complicated. The General Conference became unwieldy and the territorial expansion introduced an even more serious difficulty. The preachers were unwilling to leave their circuits

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. S. H. Caffey, the efficient and faithful pastor at West Point, Miss., has received 46 into his church since Conference.

Rev. J. M. Guinn will conduct a revival in his church at Eupora, Miss., beginning on Mother's Day. He will be assisted by Rev. W. R. Lott, of Aberdeen, Miss.

First Church, Columbus, Miss., is organizing a campaign for funds to pay off the small balance on their building debt, and to redecorate the church and parsonage.

Rev. W. R. Lott, now in his fourth year at Aberdeen, Miss., received 25 members into his church on Easter Sunday. Twenty of them were received by profession of faith.

Another church in North Mississippi has been freed of debt. This time it is the attractive little church at Fulton, in Itawamba County, where Rev. W. L. Atkins is the pastor.

Mr. Beard read a history of Methodism at the dedication service of the church at Hamilton, Miss., which gave a detailed account of the church in that section for more than a hundred years.

Mrs. C. W. Avery, wife of the pastor at Duncan, Miss., is making satisfactory recovery following a major operation performed on April 23. She is in the Methodist Hospital at Memphis.

We regret to learn of the illness of Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., pastor at Dublin, Miss. No young man in the Conference is doing a better work than Brother Galceran, and we hope to hear soon of his complete recovery.

Easter was a great day at Cleveland, Miss., where Rev. J. H. Holder is pastor. That is one of the splendid churches of the upper delta, and it maintains a steady growth, as indicated by the class received at the Easter service.

Rev. Melville Johnson, pastor at Starkville, Miss., is making good progress in securing funds to apply on the indebtedness of his church. A satisfactory re-financing arrangement is in prospect, and excellent congregations wait upon his ministry.

Rev. W. R. Lyons is in his first year on Pearl River charge and in the ministry of the Methodist Church. He is doing a faithful work and is much beloved by his people. On Easter Sunday people were turned away from his service at Pearl River, La.

Rev. L. J. Power, presiding elder of the Seashore District, reports a great District Conference at Kreole. The editor had an urgent invitation to attend, but found it impossible to do so. But the Advocate is in no better hands anywhere than in the Seashore District.

Rev. W. H. Wallace, Jr., pastor of First Church, New Orleans, is maintaining his record for the financing of his church. His benevolences for the year have been paid in full, a sizable payment was made on his church debt, and 79 have been added to the membership.

Rev. A. T. Law, pastor of Felicity, New Orleans, is due great credit for the work which he is doing in that historic church. The collections for the second quarter of this year amounted to $1,000. He has raised $66 in cash on his benevolences, and 28 members have been added in the two churches comprising the charge.

We learn from the Abbeville Progress that Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Smith are at home to their friends in a spic and span new parsonage with new furnishings. The total cost of the home was in excess of $3,000; and the completion of the enterprise was celebrated with a great dedication party, more than 200 attending.

Rev. Porter M. Caraway, of First Church, Gulfport, Miss., reports good results from his two weeks' meeting culminating at Easter. There were 31 accessions to the church, bringing the total for the year up to 54. The Easter offering was in excess of $1,000, and one-half of the benevolences for the year has been paid.

Rev. M. T. Reams calls our attention to an error in the figures given for the Easter campaign of the Vivian, La., charge. The figures should have been thirty-four instead of four as printed in the Advocate. We are sorry for the error and make due apologies to all concerned.

We regret to record the death of Mrs. C. P. Varner, of Senatobia, Miss. She was the mother of Rev. Carroll Varner of Memphis, and lacked only two and a half months of being 84 years old. She leaves to her six sons and a daughter a record of consistent devotion to the Methodist Church and to the cause of Christ.

Rev. J. B. Grambling recently closed a great revival at Epworth Church, New Orleans. He was assisted by Dr. D. L. Coale, one of the General Evangelists of the Church. More than forty persons have given their names for membership; and that section of the city has been wonderfully aroused by the searching messages of Dr. Coale.

The many friends of Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, La., will sympathize with him deeply in the going away of his wife, which occurred about a week ago. She had been ill for a long time and was a great sufferer. Brother Mayo and his wife were truly friends of the church, and many a pastor has had occasion to remember them for their encouragement and loyal support.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, one of the honored superannuates of the North Mississippi Conference, is confined to his room and a rolling chair, but he has a keen interest in all the work of his Conference and of the church at large. The visits of his brethren are very much appreciated. Recently he had the honor of having his bishop, presiding elder, pastor and a steward call upon him at the same time. Let his many friends remember him in their prayers.

Rev. George Fox, pastor of Bonita, La., charge, sends us a dialect account of his work. He thinks the work will not be up to par until fried chickens and garden truck abound. On the fourth Sunday in June a centennial celebration will be held in Bartholomew Chapel. Dinner will be served and the Quarterly Conference will be held. The editor acknowledges an invitation to attend the celebration, and he would be glad to do so, if the way can be found. The preacher seems to be troubled about the unheralded visits of his elder.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

1574 Jefferson Avenue, New Orleans

Mrs. W. McG. Dollarhide, of Oak Grove, chairman of the Christian Citizenship and Law Observance Committee of the Christian Social Relations Department of the Conference, has written the following song which has been adopted by that department, to be used frequently at auxiliary, zone and district meetings:

BROTHERS ARE WE

O, God of Love, we beg of Thee,
To fill our hearts with sympathy;
Callous are we, and e'er have been,
To human ills, made by man's sin.
O, wake us up, we've been asleep;
Delve in our souls, O delve so deep;
Turn on Thy light—our aim shall be
To follow Thee.

Injustice here, injustice there,
Sorrow and pain, yes, ev'rywhere;
Lord, make us try, whene'er we can,
To lift the load, to understand;
Ease burdens borne, by young and old—
O, teach us, Lord, and make us bold
To do Thy will; our aim shall be
To follow Thee.

Hunger and cold, and cruel need,
Crush lives of men, their hearts do bleed;
Would all mankind resolve today,
New deals to give—to give fair play.
Brothers are we, in life, in death,
Loyal must be, with ev'ry breath;
O, God of Love, our aim shall be
To follow Thee.

Melody: "Open My Eyes That I May See."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,

2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The auxiliary of Silver City, Miss., held an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. R. L. Nelson, and daughter, Mrs. Stewart, on April 22.

Mrs. T. A. Moore, of Holly Springs, and Mrs. Bennett, who before her marriage was Miss Eurania Pyron, a former missionary to Poland, were among the visitors.

After a short business session and program, Mrs. Bennett gave a talk in a very able manner, describing first her trip to Poland, then Poland, its inhabitants and customs. She talked and sang several familiar songs in the Polish language. Having spent five years of service in Wilno, Warsaw and Katowice; she had many interesting and amusing things to tell.

The society of Silver City is steadily growing, having added a number of new members in the past few months.

Zone No. 2, of the Meridian District, held its second quarter's meeting at Quitman on April 29th. The program was given by the Fifth Street auxiliary, with Mrs. W. F. Buchanan presiding. Stewardship was the theme and the two numbers on this subject were given by James Quinnelly, who won first place in state declamation contest, and Lora Blanche Short, who won second place in the district contest. Mrs. Joseph A. Smith sang "Learning to Smile." During the business session Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Conference President, explained the new Council requirements, especially the new "Efficiency Aim."

The Woman's Missionary Society of Ackerman held its World Day of Prayer on March 8. Each member pledged herself to pray for certain missionaries. They were represented at both Louisville and Greenville. Their World Outlook programs for March and April have been well prepared and interesting because of that careful preparation. They found "Suzuki Looks at Japan" very inspirational and educational.

What Better Background Could a Laxative Have!

Civilized man has tried thousands of remedies for constipation, but comparatively few have held their place in reputable medical use and retained approval in medical literature. From among these few highly favored laxatives—favor established by many years of successful use in this and other countries—are selected the ingredients which are combined in Thedford's Black-Draught. Such a scientific, dependable background should encourage any one needing a laxative to try purely vegetable Thedford's Black-Draught. It is popular because it brings such refreshing relief without being expensive.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Seashore District Conference was convened at Kreole Church, April 24, at 10 o'clock a.m. After devotions, Rev. L. J. Power, the presiding elder, assumed the chair and at once proceeded with the organization, the roll call and the election of the writer as secretary, and Rev. H. W. F. Vaughan, assistant secretary.

The conference was well attended by the laity as well as by the pastors.

Rev. L. J. Power had mapped a smooth and comprehensive course for the conference, and with his courteous and watchful attention to all matters to be attended to, nothing seemed to be overlooked. Every phase of our work had been provided for in the program.

A finer spirit I have never seen than prevailed throughout the period of the conference. General progress was noted throughout the District.

The church at Kreole, its pastor, Rev. W. F. Baggett, with the pastors and membership of Moss Point and Pascagoula, gave us every courteous consideration.

The preaching, to which prominent place was given, was done by Rev. E. S. Lewis, H. A. Gatlin and Roy Wolfe. These brethren preached well, and their sermons were of a high order.

One fine young man was licensed to preach—James Donald Lamb.

Dr. G. F. Winfield was in attendance and represented the interests of Whitworth College. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, and Conference Lay Leader, was present and spoke, as he always does, most helpfully concerning the work with which he has been charged.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Secretary of the Conference Board of Missions, addressed the conference concerning this most important department of our general program of church life. Prominence was given the program of Christian Education.

Rev. J. H. Sells had charge of the program and many things were said by the above-named brethren and others which were truly inspiring.

REVIVAL AT FERRIDAY, LA.

Readers of the Advocate: We have just closed one of the best revivals at Ferriday that we have ever witnessed. Rev. H. W. Cudd, of Monroe, La., did most of the preaching and his work was of the highest order. We have failed to hear a single note of criticism of his ministry among us. We had known Brother Cudd a long time but had never heard him preach. He is capable of standing before any congregation in any church to deliver the message of Christ. Our brethren should give him a trial, and you will not be disappointed.

We had sixteen additions to the membership of the church during this meeting, thirteen of whom were on profession of faith. We gave the preacher a splendid offering for his services, and it was no trouble to raise at all.

We conceived the idea of having special nights during this meeting and it showed a wonderful effect in getting the people to come. We had a full house almost every night. On Monday night we had the Scouts as our guests. Tuesday night was Young People's night; Wednesday night, American Legion night; Thursday night, Lodge night; Friday night, Big Family night, all families sitting in a group; Saturday night was Church night. On Sunday at eleven we had an old people's service that brought a splendid climax to the meeting. There were eight people united with the church during this service. We have used this service in many places and it never fails to produce great results. One man said he cried so much he took the headache.

We have been doing other things at Ferriday. All our young people have been enlisted in the work of the church and they are doing fine work. We have organized a Young People's Union with Ferriday, Waterproof, Sicily Island, Vidalia and St. Joseph. We meet every fourth Sunday at 3 p.m.. We plan to have an institute for these young people at the 4-H Club camp near Sicily Island in the near future.

R. A. BOZEMAN, Pastor.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 12.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE NATURE AND WORK OF THE CHURCH

Marvelous growth of the Christian Church attended the earnest testimony of the disciples and the group, not yet having any portion of the New Testament record, continued steadfastly in the verbal teachings of the apostles. Awe and wonder came upon all who saw the results or felt the dynamic atmosphere charged with the spirit of Jesus. Some Christians had goods and some had need. Out of brotherly love—not by divine command—arose a partial and temporary communism, as those who had means sold all or a part of their possessions and shared the proceeds with others according as each "had need." This dole, as always, brought dissension rather than diligence and the experiment was soon abandoned. Not even apostles could distribute charity to the satisfaction of the beneficiaries. Greed smothered generosity.

Christians should prove worthy of their vows and vocation. Often one feels that the standard required for entrance to the church is higher than that demanded for remaining on its roster. Ministers sometimes manifest more zeal for enrolling members than for developing saints. Growth is the law of Christian life, as of all other. Cultivation of the graces listed in this lesson would take away the reproach of the church today. Selfishness and sectarian divisions hide Christ from the eyes of men. Nevertheless, there is a Christian unity and standard of conduct that put to shame all secular organizations, whether bound by oath or honor. The finest fellowship in the world is Christian fellowship; the greatest charity is Christian charity—the origin and fountain of other fraternities and benevolences. Church members get more for their church dollar than for any other—more protection than from the tax dollar, more fellowship than from the dollar spent on fraternities and clubs, in spite of the fact that these groups select and elect, charge admission fees, and collect fixed dues, while the church alone says, "Whosoever will may come," and records show that multitudes come and remain without money and without price. How long would the State or clubs and fraternities last if put on the same voluntary basis of support?

Most criticism of the church is unfair and unjust. It is composed of human beings taken from a cross-section of the races, much of it broken and marred beyond all hope of mere human reconstruction. It is a family consisting of helpless infants as well as of vigorous adults; it is a hospital caring for the confessedly sick and maimed; it is a school training all grades, from the kindergarten to the university. A stupid criticism asserts that some outside this school know more than some in it. Not all good people join the church; some bad people do. In the main, it is composed of seekers for sainthood. It is God's messenger carrying his word to the world. It is the body through which the Spirit of Christ effects his work. In its darkest hours it has never lost the vision of the perfect. In spite of its differences and diversities, it possesses a spirit of unity and tolerance probably unequalled since apostolic days. Gifts and offices differ, but all exist for "the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for edifying the body of Christ." Christian manhood is the goal of all God's children, "the stature of the fullness of Christ." Strange "isms" still deceive, allure and destroy, but the church of God remains.

BISHOP DUBOSE AT KINGSTON

For some reason you did not publish my last letter, nor did you make any mention of the coming of Bishop H. M. DuBose to Laurel, Miss., for a meeting in Kingston Methodist Church.

He began on April 14 with a stirring message on the Triumphant Entry. He preached and lectured daily, morning and evening, to large and appreciative audiences. His evening lectures on the Archaeology of Palestine were broadcast over WAML. Expressions of appreciation are reaching the pastor's desk.

Many were helped, some added to the church, infants baptized, etc. The meeting closed Sunday night, April 21, with the lecture on the Archaeology of Jerusalem, following the sermon on the Resurrection Sunday morning at eleven o'clock.

People were blessed and the church was greatly helped. All were surprised at the Bishop's mental and physical vigor. ALIS BURTON BARRY, P. C.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By M. H. McCormack, Jr., Reporter

Our District Conference at Winona, April 24-25, was the greatest district meeting the writer has ever attended. Every number on the entire program was of the very highest order. The preaching was done by Dr. W. L. Duren and Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs. These two sermons were the highlights of the Conference. Viewed from any point of ser-monic criticism, they were outstanding examples of truly great preaching. Both preachers gave emphasis to the reality of vital, spiritual power in the religion of Jesus. Dr. Duren gave warning of the danger of over-emphasizing one phase of Christianity to the neglect of the other. The mystical element, the practical element, the theological element, the social element, the individual—all are component parts of the Gospel, and when we specialize on one and ignore the rest, we become unbalanced in our thinking and living.

Bishop Dobbs gave us a new and splendid definition of faith: "Faith is the resolute determination to stand or fall by the noblest hypothesis." That is the most challenging definition of the true Christian attitude we have heard. Faith is not a blind credulity to prevalent traditions, but a vital allegiance to the sublimest principles we are able to conceive. Certainly this was the mind of Christ. It is easy to see the saving power of such a faith as this. It is not a mere intellectual assent to the truth, but a whole life dedicated to and engaged in the task of living by the truth. There is a great difference between the two—one is passive, the other active. The great need, says Bishop Dobbs, is the affirmative attitude toward life.

The devotional exercises of the Conference were conducted by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, of Lexington. She gave a series of fine devotional meditations. Mrs. Lipscomb is unusually gifted in presenting the devotional side of the Christian life. She spoke out of an experience of close fellowship with God and His children. The lay address was delivered by Judge J. M. Forman, of Jackson. He spoke in his inimitable style on "Evangelism and the Laity." Judge Forman is a speaker of great power. His message was equally as applicable to the ministry as to the laity. Additional speakers on the program included Dr. D. M. Key, Dr. J. E. Stephens, Dr. W. C. Newman, Dr. J. H. Holder, Dr. R. G. Lord, Dr. R. G. Moore, Dr. T. B. Thrower, Mrs. B. P. Brooks, Mr. Fred McDonald, and others. All brought inspiring messages.

Presiding over the Conference was Dr. A. T. McIlwain, whose pleasing and patient manner contributed much to the success of the Conference. It is a tribute to him that practically every delegate remained until the final benediction after

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Warden Lawes, in his book, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," wrote: "The records of Sing Sing show that ninety-seven per cent of our prisoners were never associated with any Boys' Club, or any of the juvenile associations where boys learn how to spend their leisure in wholesome recreation. Seventy-five per cent of our prisoners are not skilled or learned in the mechanics or trades. Ninety-nine per cent were not actively interested in church organizations.

"Persons between the ages of fifteen to thirty constitute fifty per cent of the population of the United States, yet they contribute seventy-three per cent of our criminals. The problem is, therefore, with the young. Unless society can show that it has done its full duty toward its youth and adolescents, it cannot be heard to say, 'We did not send for them.' Its hands are not clean. It is not free from guilt.

"America spends large sums on education. But its bill for luxuries is three times as high. It is niggardly in providing for social advancement which is left almost entirely to charity and private contributors."

The above quotation might well be pondered a long time. It shows the value of education.

In this connection, let us emphasize the character of training.

The Jackson Daily News of March 30, 1935, quotes Mr. Marshall E. Smith, county agent of Jefferson Davis County, Miss., as follows: "Hamilton seemed a devout church member, and remarked several times that 'The Lord will see me through.' Startled at such a remark, Mr. Smith asked a few questions and found that Mr. Hamilton was brought up a devout Catholic." Here we have a bandit, kidnaper, and desperado, having the effrontery to claim the presence of God in his career of crime.

Of course, we do not blame any Church with the intention of nurturing a criminal. But it is a tragic thing for any person in any church to be so blind to the character of God and to the nature of sin. Ray Hamilton's life was a denial of everything that God stands for. There was no love nor righteousness in his heart. He brazenly flouted every law of God and man. By this time Ray Hamilton may realize that "the way of the transgressor is hard." That sin destroys everything noble is proven by what it did to Ray Hamilton even before his capture by the officers of the law. He knew nothing of the ethical love of God. He was given to a delusion so that he believed a lie. Sin warped his judgment. Sin wrecked him.

May God forbid that any youth shall go from a Methodist altar with such tragic misunderstanding of religion. When we love God, we will keep His commandments. There is no need to cry, Lord, Lord, unless we are obedient to His will. Our religion is known by its fruits.

PRAYER

Our Father, may we realize our definite responsibility for the young. May we be able to guide them into a saving knowledge of God. May we lead them face to face with Christ. May we enlist them in the service of the Church. We pray for guidance ourselves that we may be used of Thee for the building of Christian personality. We offer our prayer in the name of Christ.

REVIVAL AT GRACE CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.

A splendid revival has just closed at Grace Church, with the Rev. J. H. Jolly, pastor, bringing the messages. The Lord used him in a most unusual way. Much effort was put forth to make the meeting a great success as the pastors and the people were much in prayer for its success.

Rev. Frank A. Dement, a young ministerial student at Millsaps College, assisted in the meeting, leading the singing. He also brought special numbers each evening and developed a good sunshine choir with the children. The services he rendered helped to make the meeting a success.

The meeting began on Sunday, April 7, closing on Easter Sunday night. Easter was a great day. The day began with a sunrise service sponsored by one of the young men of the church. This was a very inspirational service and was attended by a good crowd. At the eleven o'clock hour thirty were received into the church, twenty-seven on profession of faith. Four babies were baptised. At the close of this service a very beautiful ceremony was performed uniting two of the young people of the church in holy wedlock. We had a wonderful evening service. No new members came into the church, but the entire congregation was moved by the soul-stirring message that was delivered. At the close of this service Rev. Mr. Dement was presented with a beautiful brief case by the children with whom he had worked during the meeting. They shall not forget many of his remarks soon.

The meeting has ended here, but the results will be seen for some time and the good done will never be outlived. The prayers of the people will be that Rev. Mr. Jolly will bring many more such messages, and that Rev. Mr. Dement will grow richer in his religious experiences as he continues in his work.

M. L. CHILDRESS

Whereas it has pleased our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom to take out of this world the soul of our deceased Brother, M. L. Childress; therefore be it resolved by the Wesley Bible Class of the Como Methodist Church:

First. That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who is "too wise to err and too good to be unkind," we are saddened over the loss of a faithful and consecrated member, and we will miss his cheerful smile and warm handclasp.

Second. That a character so rich in Christian experience can but have a lasting influence for good on those who were associated with him.

Third. That we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathy, and that these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes, a copy sent to the family, also a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ROBERT W. PARKS

Mr. Parks was born near the present town of Schlater, then McNutt, Miss., and lived near McNutt and Minter City until 1898. In 1894 he was married to Miss Nannie Stancill. In 1898 they moved to Drew, Miss., and built the first residence to be occupied by white people in what is now the present town of Drew. At that time their daughter, Lillian, was the only white child here. For 37 years Mr. Parks has been active in church, civic and commercial life of Drew. He was a charter member of the Methodist Church of Drew and has been the chairman of the board of stewards of the Methodist church since its organization in 1898, until his death.

He was a Past Master of the Masonic Lodge, and has at different times been mayor of the town, a member of the board of alderman and school board. He was quiet and unassuming, but ever ready to do his part for his town and his church.

I am glad to have known him and been able to call him my friend.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Aberdeen District Conference convened in the Aberdeen Church at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, April 24. Dr. W. P. Buhrman, our presiding elder, had not overlooked any detail which would add to the harmony and efficiency of the conference. His ease, dignity and effectiveness in presiding over the conference endeared him to all present.

All the interests of the church were given due consideration. Millsaps College was represented by Dr. D. M. Key. Rev. W. C. Newman represented Grenada College. It is interesting to note the progress being made by our colleges. Rev. R. G. Moore, Conference Missionary Secretary, was present and spoke in the interest of Missions, making special mention of the Lewis Hospital Fund. Rev. W. R. Lott addressed the conference in the interest of the Memorial Mercy Home. Rev. T. B. Thrower, Conference Director of Golden Cross, and Dr. Hedden, Superintendent of Methodist Hospital in Memphis, spoke in the interest of the Golden Cross Society. Rev. W. R. Lott represented the Christian Advocate and presented to the Conference the plan for securing our quota of new subscriptions. The presiding elder urged all the pastors to make special effort to secure the suggested number of subscriptions.

The entire conference was delighted to have Bishop Dobbs present for part of the session. His earnest and soul-stirring messages were an inspiration to all who heard him. Many of the preachers and laymen came in time to hear him preach on Tuesday night preceding the opening of the conference on Wednesday morning.

On Wednesday morning conference ad-

Journal from 10:45 o'clock until 2 o'clock in the afternoon to go to Hamilton for the dedication of the Hamilton church. Here we had the pleasure of hearing Bishop Dobbs again as he dedicated the church. At the close of the service we were invited outside, to a long table near a beautiful artesian well, where we were served a delicious barbecue.

Visitors, other than those representing connectional causes, were: Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of Columbus District; Rev. S. H. Caffey, pastor of West Point; Rev. J. W. Robertson, pastor of Macon; Rev. B. F. Bullard, Conference Evangelist, and quite a number of the laity from the surrounding territory.

The following were elected as lay delegates to the Annual Conference: Basil Moore, Mrs. R. A. Tucker, C. C. Bennett, Judge J. G. McGowan, W. L. Elkin, A. R. Wiygul, Mrs. M. E. Scott, Dr. W. C. Walker, P. K. Thomas, A. V. Beard, C. A. Lamb, H. E. Maulding, Jr.; Mrs. J. V. Stewart, Mrs. J. R. Priest, Mrs. T. H. Lipscomb, Dr. E. K. Guinn, Dr. M. A. Cowden, Mrs. J. J. Garner, Mrs. W. F. Davis and W. G. Roberds.

The preaching throughout the conference was of high order and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Dr. C. M. Chapman, of Pontotoc, preached Wednesday evening. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of Water Valley, preached Thursday at the eleven o'clock hour.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Brother Lott and the people of Aberdeen for their most generous hospitality. Brother Lott and his people were untiring in their efforts to make us happy and comfortable. We shall not soon forget our visit to Aberdeen.

The next session of the District Conference goes, by unanimous vote, to Tupelo. W. M. JONES, Secty.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S INSTITUTE

The Sam Steele Union sponsored the young people's Institute, under the leadership of Rev. D. F. Anders, in Jena, La., April 26, 27, 28. Due to the lack of instructors, we only had two courses. Organization and Leadership course taught by Rev. D. F. Anders, with eight receiving credit; and the Worship course taught by Rev. W. D. Milton, with eight receiving credit, bringing the total credits to sixteen. The average attendance during the Institute was twenty-five.

Rev. E. C. Dufresne led the devotional hours with deep spiritual messages.

The hospitality and kindness shown us by Mrs. Anders and Miss Hearn added to our comfort and made us feel at home. They made the picnic a success with the delicious refreshments. Our young people wish to express their gratitude to Revs. Milton and Anders for their faithful work and co-operation.

Our churches were uplifted and our young people were brought to realize that they have a large place in the church, and that there is much they can do for the Master.

On Saturday evening, in the closing minutes of our worship, the entire group dedicated themselves to a larger service for Jesus.

the adjournment. Dr. A. R. Beasley completed his fourth year as the efficient secretary of the Conference. He had as an assistant Dr. J. J. Baird. The Conference was a success from every standpoint. Not only were we fortunate in having the high order we had in the sermons and addresses, but there was a note of spirituality about the Conference that impressed everyone. Bishop Dobbs made special mention of this fact. We are in the midst of a great year in the Greenwood District, and indications are that we will close out this fall with the outstanding report in the history of the District.

Reports from over the District show a deep, spiritual awakening in all the charges. The finances are better than they have been in years. The Drew charge, Dr. S. A. Brown, pastor, was the first in the North Mississippi Conference to send to the Conference Treasurer remittance covering over half of its benevolent assumptions. The District Quartette, composed of Drs. A. R. Beasley, J. J. Baird, H. R. McKee, and W. J. Cunningham, added much to the success of the Conference. That golden voice of Jeff Cunningham is surpassed only by his brilliant mind and attractive pulpit style. Much envious comment was occasioned by the announcement of a new, modern parsonage on the Ebenezer charge, where Brother G. R. Williams is pastor. The First Church, Lexington, is continuing a great work under the able leadership of that warm-hearted Irishman, Dr. J. T. McCafferty.

Everyone present at the Conference thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated the splendid manner in which Dr. W. H. Mounger and First Church, Winona, entertained the Conference. Bro. Mounger is scheduled to deliver the sermon at the next meeting of the District Pastors' Association, Itta Bena, May 7. Dr. W. W. Bruner extended a gracious invitation to the District Conference to hold its next meeting at Carrollton, which was accepted enthusiastically. Bishop Dobbs and Dr. McIlwain joined in the dedication and baptism of J. O. Dowdle, Jr., infant son of Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Dowdle, of Swiftown. All pastors of the District were present at the Conference except Brother W. T. Phillips, of Webb and Sumner, who was in attendance upon the Vanderbilt Rural Pastors' School in Nashville.

The Daily Vacation Bible School held in the church at Juiz de Fora, Brazil, during the month of January, 1935, enrolled more than 140 children, and the attendance was around 100 most of the time in spite of the fact that it was the rainy season, and much of the time both pupils and teachers had to go to school in the rain. Mrs. Jalmar Bowdon had a prominent part in the work of this school.

Heard A Lot About Cardui and Used It With Good Results

For over fifty years thousands of women have taken Cardui for pain, cramps and nervousness at monthly periods. A great many learned from their mothers to take Cardui, or heard of it from reports of its good use by others. . . . "I take Cardui for pains in my side and headache," writes Mrs. H. R. Hartson, of Nevada, Mo. "At times I felt like something was pressing on the top of my head. This made me very nervous. I had heard a lot about Cardui and decided to use it. I did, with good results. It certainly helped me in every way." . . . Try Cardui in your case. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The Church and the Church Paper

We cannot hope to maintain and advance the sense of our unity in the great tasks of the Church if the membership at large is uninformed about the life and work of the Church. Ignorance on such matters inevitably leads to indifference. Our Church paper is the natural and most effective medium by which to bring the members of the Church, not merely the facts, but the inspiration, the romance, the heroism, bound up with the service of the Kingdom. . . .

Your Executive sees in this whole question of the use of the Church paper the larger issue of the responsibility which rests on our ministers to cultivate in their people a taste for the reading that enriches the mind and spirit.

The Christian Church has always been the source and inspiration of the noblest culture among men. In our age of stress, of straightening, and of recovery, there is the more need that the Church should remind men of those resources of the spirit which strengthen them to endure, and to realize the values that abide. The Gospel in its full magnitude includes a ministry of literature. This whole question of the development among our people of the instincts for the best reading awaits the serious study of the ministry.

We take this opportunity to lay on the minds of the ministers of the Church their duty towards . . . the official organ of the life and work of the Church, urging them to become its agents, and by example and influence to make the paper the power it might be for inspiration and loyalty to the work committed to us.—From The New Outlook (Canada).

THE BRITISH BROADCASTING CORPORATION is said to have collected a library of 20,000 musical titles in the thirteen years of its existence. Those titles range from simple ballad for soprano and piano to a symphony in several movements. There are 100,000 vocal scores, covering the entire field from grand opera to musical comedy. It contains some music not to be found anywhere else, and from that studio ten million British homes are served. These facts indicate the importance of the radio industry in the life of the world, and they emphasize the necessity for a jealous supervision of its offerings.

THE PAN-AMERICAN UNION, consisting of twenty-one countries, recently signed a treaty for the protection of scientific and art institutions in time of war. We understand that it is a treaty binding the signatories to respect the institutions which are to be marked in some such manner as hospitals are marked. This treaty, which was signed in Washington, recalls the fact that the hospitals were not respected during the last war. But, after all, is the creator of art less important than the art produced? Such a farcical and obsequious bow to civilization is nauseating. Why not destroy war?

ARTHUR EUSTACE MORGAN, M. A., has been chosen to succeed the late Sir Arthur Currie as President of McGill University, Montreal. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin; was a professor at University College, Exeter, and later at the University of Sheffield; at present he is the principal of University College, Hull, England; he is a writer of English drama; served in the Royal Artillery during the World War; and spent two years lecturing in American Universities. The New Outlook says: "With a Welsh name, an Irish training, and English apprenticeship and a little American experience, Mr. Morgan should not be altogether unqualified to head a great Canadian university."

COUNT LUIGI CORNARO, a Venetian nobleman and a contemporary of Christopher Columbus, achieved unique distinction as a dietitian because he was himself an illustration of his own teaching. At thirty-five years of age, his health had become so impaired by the dissipations of his earlier years that his life was despaired of. He then executed an about-face, recovered his health, the vigor of his body was completely restored, he became the foremost authority upon diet and personal hygiene and he lived to be one hundred and two years old. His only rival for first place was the French scientist, Chevrue, who lived to be one hundred and three years old; but it is not recorded that his health was ever broken by dissipation.

THE RECENT MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS IN FRANCE, according to press dispatches, are calculated to give great comfort and satisfaction to the lovers of peace. It appears that the Country of Napoleon has decidedly reversed its long-established militaristic sentiment. It is indeed a heartening incident that more than eleven million French voters have deliberately declared against war. This result is the more interesting since French history revolves around its brilliant feats of arms and its great military commanders. Surely it must mean that people are tired and sick of war.

THE MORAVIANS OF BETHLEHEM, PENNSYLVANIA, have held an Easter service on the same spot for 194 years. The place is the historic "God's Acre," where, according to the Religious Telescope, their pioneer missionaries among the Indians lie buried. Thousands make long journeys to be present at the service commemorating the daring and the consecration of the brave pioneers who went to Pennsylvania from Savannah, Georgia, May 30, 1740. This long-continued service in honor of those sacrificial spirits is one of the highest tributes that could be paid to the human heart; and the torch that continues to shine after nearly two hundred years, is an indication of the grip which faith has upon our lives.

ST. MARTIN-IN-THE-FIELDS in London had for its broadcast service on Palm Sunday evening a preacher who used for his text, "The Lord hath need of him." The text belongs to the Palm Sunday incident at the close of the ministry of Jesus, and the address was a plea for even the smallest and the most disconnected service. Our British friends sometimes criticize the American preacher's choice of frivolous subjects and his undignified style. It is not often, however, that one finds an American preacher so lacking in a sense of humor as to make a plea to his congregation, which suggests, however gently, that they may be a herd of little asses.

OPEN LETTER TO THE JAPANESE PEOPLE

An open letter to the Japanese people by The Fellowship of Reconciliation was released on May 3. The letter bears the names of 301 religious leaders of the nation, and among them many whom we hold in great respect; and the address is couched in language worthy of the men who are its sponsors. The reason given for this unusual expression includes the words: "Such maneuvers will hardly escape misinterpretation by sensation mongers and individuals in each nation who are in position to profit from the creation of fear and suspicion." For our part, we believe that the words "an open letter" might be substituted for "maneuvers" without doing violence to the truth of the statement. We are inclined to believe that such a letter was not wise. If for no other reason, because it may assume too much as to the intention of the government; and especially in the face of the somewhat colorless letter sent out in answer to the protests made to the Department. We are of those who believe in peace, and we are opposed now or at any other time to military or naval demonstrations which may be interpreted as threats against any other power. We were among those who made respectful protest against the maneuvers; but we do not share the feeling that we have the right as a private citizen, with only partial knowledge of the facts, to issue an address calculated to inflame the feelings of another people. The interpretation implied may not be altogether just, and it can easily be misunderstood. These words, however, are not to be construed as offering comfort to any person who entertains militaristic ambitions. The politicians had as well realize that the peace move throughout the world has reached a stage where it can not be suppressed by the ipse dixit of those who may forget that they are the servants of the people. The friends of world peace were within proper bounds when they registered their protest with the government at Washington, and we do not like to take issue with any supporter of international good will, but we can not feel that the facts, so far as we know them, justify the unusual course adopted.

IS THE CHURCH BANKRUPT?

The financial bankruptcy of the Church has been quite freely proposed in recent years—a prophecy emanating from sources largely responsible for numerous instances of reckless church building and unwise bond issues. In some instances letters have been sent out which we consider to have been unwarranted, but we pass that over. The Yearbook of American Churches, recently published, shows that from 1926 to 1933 American churches made a net gain in adult membership of more than 5,000,000. As to finances, a few churches have found it necessary to abandon their plants to their creditors, but the vast majority of them are heroically carrying on either through a resumption of payments or through a refinancing of their loans upon terms which offer them a chance to meet their obligations. Of the Methodist churches in Mississippi and Louisiana, it can be said with confidence that every day is adding to their reputation for integrity and financial honor. Many debts are being paid through the sacrificial offerings of those with whom honor is a virtue—a passion. Many of the very best and most worthy men that we know are connected with great commercial enterprises; but one of the very best assurances that we could have would be that business, great and small, is approaching the church's money conscience. We speak as a sufferer, perhaps, but we believe that the restoration of confidence will be a necessary prelude of substantial business recovery. The regimentation of industry and trade doubtless served well in the emergency; but it is evident that the public demand is for business to begin to move under its own steam. In that respect, as in its own particular field, the church is leading the way.

SALVATION BY STATISTICS

Since the days of the Jukes and the Edwards families, the apostles of cultural salvation have brought forward again and again the figures of these two lines as proof of their theories. Recently three educators each independently produced an array of statistics to show the relation between crime and education; and they almost prove that, not to be able to read and write is the equivalent of a sentence to be shot at sunrise. We have no quarrel with the argument for education as a process for lifting the moral and social ideals of the people; but we believe that such emphasis upon statistics is misleading—it undertakes to prove too much. It seems to us to be calculated to create a kind of culture satisfaction, which falls far short of the needs of the human soul. Education is not redemptive—it is a means of making salvation more effective and more satisfying. There can be no doubt that it does serve to help prevent crime, as does anything that increases one's self-respect. We need to place major emphasis upon spiritual realities as the final word in the cure for crime and every form of delinquency. The Church with all its faults and its apostasies, affords ample proof of that. After all, education is largely a matter of earthly wisdom and understanding, and the soul needs to tap the resources of God in a definite and conscious experience of salvation.

DRINK AND DRIVING

Liquor-dazed people are becoming more and more a menace on the streets and highways of the country. A child, an old man, a woman is knocked down; and a man with liquor-laden breath is exonerated in the newspaper account of the accident. Loved ones watch anxiously the flickering spark of life in some hospital, and a victim writhes in pain. We believe that when the question of liquor is introduced, with a reasonable presumption that it was a factor in an accident, that the driver should get the limit in prosecution and in civil damages. The slaughter of people upon our thoroughfares is a disgrace to civilization. For our part we are going to come clean; in any accident that we have to witness or have to do with, no person who happens to have liquor on his breath need expect any sympathy from us. We will give the facts as far as we know them, but we are not going to furnish any cloves or onions to disguise the facts. We are against liquor!

Kwansei Gakuin University in Japan had last year the largest enrollment in its history, a total of 2,647 students being enrolled. This splendid missionary institution for the training of young men in Japan is supported jointly by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the United Church of Canada in cooperation with the Japan Methodist Church.

ARE THERE SUBSTITUTES FOR THE CHURCH PAPER?

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D. D.

With increasing frequency it is asserted by decent people: "I do not need to take my Church paper: I can get the Church news from other sources."

Certainly no man will depreciate the effort of American editors to furnish their readers with information about the Church. Often secular editors would be pleased to print more than is furnished them. For which facts we are grateful.

Yet few editors or reporters are thoroughly informed about the most important doings and attitudes of various Church organizations. Hence their reports are some times actually misleading. Occasionally it is true that there is positive hostility to the very spirit of Christianity.

In no case is it true that dailies give all the news and facts that an efficient Church member needs. Never does one get the most vital and intimate attitudes that characterize the Church paper. For lack of this people are often led into error and to wrong attitudes on great moral issues. There is a Christianizing and devotional value in the Church paper that is not even expected in other periodicals. It is also in the Church paper that we reach our brotherly agreements and come into the spirit of unity and to needed concert of action. It is a vital aid in every Church activity. It is also free from much that is objectionable and demoralizing to the home. Parents need it; children need it. In proportion as parents read it and discuss it, do children read and think about it and attach importance to the Church.

Years ago I heard an aged widow say: "I would split rails by moonlight before I would go without my Church paper and let my children grow up without its influence." No wonder her children honored the mother and gloried in the Church. Emphatically, I would not expect my children to love God or His cause if I served their souls as many parents do their own.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate has been worthy of support during my knowledge of it. It was never sounder in the faith than now and it is filled with matter worthy of reading and preservation for future use.

Lauderdale, Miss.

PRONOUNCEMENT OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS

Concerning the Attitude of the Church Toward War

No thinking man can contemplate what is going on in the world today without a feeling of deep humiliation. This war business has become extremely disconcerting to people of noble aims and high hopes for the human race. Militarism is rampant among the nations. Europe seethes with the war spirit. The Orient moves under the domination of its war statesmen. And here is our own country doubling its appropriations of two years ago and establishing justice and right relations in the world, and navy in its entire history. Our government is now parading its vast and formidable fleet in the waters of the great Pacific. Will all this make war appear impracticable and impossible? No; it will make it appear inevitable and put fear into nations that we call friends. History and human intelligence compel that conviction.

Is that the best we can do for a depressed and broken-hearted world? We are far from happy over such inhuman activities. They scandalize the human race. They excite the admiration and national pride in a noble-minded people. They belong to a low state of civilization and threaten the destruction of the best that man has produced, and lead to the ultimate degradation of humanity. The American people have established the belief that they were created for higher purposes and nobler ends than can be reached by any such darkening and death dealing methods.

What shall we do about it? We shall hold in contempt this entire nefarious war business. War as a method of settling international disputes has not one single defensible argument in its behalf. We reiterate what we said a year ago to the General Conference: "It is archaic, belongs to the jungle period of human development and should be branded as an iniquitous and inhuman procedure. Its triumph seldom establishes right and justice. It leaves in its wake destruction, sorrow, hatred, and crushed humanity. Every effort to wreck the entire war system is to be loudly applauded and vigorously supported. It is an unhallowed thing utterly contrary to the genius of Christianity. Patriotism should have a higher standard of testing than that which inhuman militarism provides. War should cease forever, because it is essentially wrong, and its instruments and agencies should be destroyed. Compulsory military training in any school or college, whatever its control or support, is out of harmony with the finest principles of a peace-minded people. The very atmosphere that allows war to be possible should be radically changed. Man is too great to be bound to such a vicious and inhuman method of settling disputes, making international adjustments, and establishing justice and right relations in the world. With peace-mindedness in the place of war-mindedness a new structure of human relations embracing all peoples will be created, and humanity may then employ all its capabilities and powers in movements that make for cooperation, advance, and the lifting of the entire level of human welfare."

The militarist may sneer at our idealism and laugh at our guilelessness. We are not chagrined by such an attitude. He will awaken some day to find those with us are more than those with him. There is nothing ideal or even practical about war. Peace is both ideal and practical. We are set for peace. The success of militarism would be for the eternal failure of mankind. The human race is too intelligent to continue the march to its orders, on to self-destruction militarism and the statesmen who support it are headed for an abyss or else the world is.

We are not preparing for the next war; we are mobilizing moral manhood to make the next war utterly impossible. We shall teach our children and youth to despise the unclean thing and to swear eternal loyalty to the ways of peace and to the sacred honor of their brother man.

BISHOP DOBBS PLEADS FOR THE GOLDEN CROSS

Bishops Dobbs says, "The work of the Golden Cross Society is worthy of our continued and prayerful support in every way. It is doing a work which is not duplicated by any other organization of which I have any knowledge. You may quote me everywhere as desirous of promoting the success of this great work. Most all our people will welcome the opportunity of making this modest contribution to so worthy a cause. We draw very near unto God himself when we relieve the suffering of our fellow-men."

Pastors and Church Directors of Golden Cross should advise the congregations everywhere that hospitals have signified their willingness to co-operate with us in caring for our sick poor, and are offering us liberal contracts for the same. It but remains for Methodism to make this service possible.

All Golden Cross funds for Louisiana should be sent promptly to Mr. Paul M. Brown, Conference Treasurer, Shreveport, La.

We ultimately plan to have an approved Golden Cross Hospital in every district in the Louisiana Conference, where the poor sick of the district may have hospital care, the same being provided out of the Golden Cross funds.

Let every church make a supreme effort to secure a large enrollment in the Golden Cross Society.

Faternally,

SIDNEY A. SEEGER,

Conference Director, Golden Cross Society.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Rev. A. Y. Brown

Chairman Budget Commission

As chairman of the Budget Commission of the North Mississippi Conference I have secured data on payments on the benevolences to May 1st. This date marks the end of the first half of the Conference year. The goal has been that each charge pay half its pledge during the first half of the year. It will be noted that the following charges have reached this goal:

Ackerman, Drew, Louisville, Hernando, Louisville Circuit (in full), Calhoun City, Noxapater, Okolona.

With our new schedule of pledges that each charge has assumed voluntarily we should have payments in full throughout the Conference. These pledges, however, represent larger amounts on most of the charges than they have been paying the last few years. Unless we are busy throughout the year we will be in danger of having our people pay just about the usual amount in the fall, which would mean a large deficit on the pledges.

We sincerely hope the next publication may indicate good payments from more of the charges, and at least some payment from every charge.

in remote sections of the country and make the long horseback journey to Baltimore where the Conferences always met. This caused influential sections of the Church to be left without representation, and gave to the section around Baltimore a preponderant influence in its legislation and control. These facts led to the introduction of a representative form of government, in order that every section might have fair representation and its interests be protected. Thus the era of a ministerial democracy came to an end, and a Conference of unlimited authority was replaced by one limited in its membership and operating under specific restrictions of its power.

The General Conference met in Baltimore, May 6, 1808; and the most important item of its business was the passage of a law for holding a quadrennial General Conference which should be a delegated body. According to Asbury's Journal, Jesse Lee proposed such a body, on July 7, 1791; and, as we have pointed out, Asbury sought to convene such a body on July 4, 1807, for the purpose of electing a successor to Bishop Whatcoat who had died. That proposal was defeated by the Virginia Conference; but the proposition now came forward in a regular manner, upon a memorial from the New York Conference in which the New England, the Western and the South Carolina Conferences concurred. The resolution for a delegated General Conference was introduced, and a committee of two from each of the seven Conferences was named to draft the plan. The committee named a sub-committee, consisting of Ezekiel Cooper, Joshua Soule and Philip Bruce, to frame a report for approval or modification. Cooper and Soule prepared separate drafts and that of Soule, with slight modifications, was adopted by the committee. When the committee report came to a vote it was defeated by a vote of 57 to 64. It was discovered that the measure had been defeated by the Baltimore and Philadelphia Conferences, the chief beneficiaries under the old system; and the dissatisfaction on that account came near to disrupting the Conference. The New England and the Western delegates prepared to leave the Conference, but Asbury, McKendree and Hedding prevailed upon them to remain. On a motion to reconsider, it was decided that the next General Conference should be composed of one delegate for every five members of the Annual Conference, to be sent by seniority or election as the Annual Conference might choose; and that it should meet in New York, May 1, 1812, and quadrennially thereafter, at such place as might be selected. The Conference then adopted what have since been known as the "Restrictive Rules," which limit the power of the General Conference in the particulars therein specified.

The discussion of the delegated General Conference was suspended for a debate on the subject of electing presiding elders. This debate consumed practically two days and the resolution was defeated by a vote 52 to 73. In the General Conference of 1812, a resolution to elect presiding elders on nomination of the bishop was defeated by the slender margin of three votes. In 1816 the same resolution was introduced with the addition that the bishop should make the appointments with the presiding elders' advice and consent," but it failed again. The General Conference of 1820 passed a measure requiring the election of presiding elders, the vote being 61 to 25; but its constitutionality was challenged and the opposition to the measure was so pronounced that the action was "suspended," and was finally rescinded in 1828.

A particularly interesting feature of the Conference of 1808 was the report of the "Committee of Review." This committee was composed of Samuel Coate, Martin Ruter, James H. Mellard, Jesse Lee, Nelson Reed, Joshua Wells and William Burke. Jesse Lee submitted to them his manuscript of History of the Methodists, with a view to having it recommended for publication. The committee achieved distinction for itself by the report: "We have taken a cursory view of a manuscript entitled, A History of the Methodists of the United States of America; but as the work appears, in their view, more like a simple and crude narrative of the proceedings of the Methodists than a history, they think it would be improper to publish it." Jesse Lee published the book himself in 1810, and it has long been regarded as an invaluable source of Methodist history.

An incident which greatly disturbed the minds of the members of this Conference was a recently revealed private and confidential letter which Dr. Coke wrote to Bishop White of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Pennsylvania. The letter was written from Richmond, Virginia, April 24, 1791; and it appears that Dr. Coke was seeking an interview with Bishop White relative to a possible merging of the American Methodists with the Episcopal Church. Nothing came of the suggestion, but it was certainly not prudent in Dr. Coke to have undertaken such an unauthorized negotiation, and the secrecy enjoined did not add to the prestige of the writer of the letter. Dr. Coke met the issue squarely and his frank explanation of the case, with the reasons which he gave for his action, were accepted and that was the end of it. William McKendree was elected bishop, and the Conference concluded its work on May 26.

The quadrennium following the General Conference of 1808 was a period of expansion and growth in the Church, but it was not remarkable for unusual or outstanding incidents. In 1803 the eccentric Lorenzo Dow is said to have preached the first Protestant sermon in Alabama, but no permanent work was established until 1808 when Matthew P. Sturdivant was sent to the Tombigbee circuit. The territory comprising the circuit was located in Alabama and Mississippi and was included in the South Carolina Conference. Sturdivant had the assistance of Josiah Randle, the presiding elder, establishing the work on the Tombigbee, and the next year Michael Burdge was sent to assist him. Bishop Asbury visited Canada in July, 1811, but the visit had no significance of importance either for the Bishop or the Church. During the four years there was a gain in the membership of approximately 40,000 and the Methodist Church could no longer be regarded as an ephemeral result of the great Revival. It is likely that the Methodist people were beginning to feel that their years of struggle were over and that the Church was to enjoy an uninterrupted march in the conquest of the continent; but ominous clouds were already upon the horizon, and the day of unimpeded progress was still far away.

According to the action of the Conference of 1808, the first delegated General Conference met in New York, May 1, 1812. There were 90 delegates present as against 128 at the previous session in Baltimore. There were only four names on the roll, besides that of Asbury, who are known to have been present at the Christmas Conference. They were Freeborn Garrettson, William Phoebus, Nelson Reed, and Thomas Ware. But there were present many sons of the Church whose names added strength and distinction to the councils of the Methodists for many years afterward. Such were Nathan Bangs, Elijah Hedding, Joshua Soule, Philip Bruce, Lovick Pierce, John Early, Enoch George, Robert R. Roberts, Ezekiel Cooper, Thomas L. Douglass and Thomas F. Sargent. Notwithstanding this large and influential group of men representing a new order in the life of the Church, the Conference was extremely cautious and conservative. More than three days were spent in organization and in the adoption of rules of procedure, and not a single epoch-making law was passed. The controversy over the creation of the Genesee Conference was settled by the adoption of a resolution which declared it legally organized. Local preachers were made eligible for the order of elder after four years spent as deacon. A law was passed making the stewards elective by the Quarterly Conference, on nomination of the preacher in charge, instead of being appointed by the preacher as had been the practice up to this time.

Some measures which failed to pass indicate the mind of the Church respecting social questions which were to come into prominence at a later day. James Axley of Tennessee made a motion to prohibit preachers, local and traveling, from retailing spirituous liquors; but for some unexplained reason the motion failed to carry. John Sale made a motion to prohibit preachers and members from buying or having anything to do with lottery tickets, and on that proposal, action was deferred for four years. Although these measures were not adopted, they show the nature of the problem which the Church was facing in that day, and they indicate no less clearly the social and moral progress of the Church in the bitter contest which it has waged against such evils.

About six weeks after the adjournment of the General Conference, the United States declared war on England, June 18, 1812. This led not only to the disturbances incident to military operations, as had been the case during the Revolution; but to complications with Canada which had far-reaching influence upon the history of the Church. In 1814 the British captured and burned Washington, and they made an attack upon Baltimore. This campaign carried the disasters of war into the very heart of Methodism, and there was a loss in the membership for that year of approximately four thousand. The war was not popular in New England, and in New York a group of clergymen went even so far as to refuse to pray for their civil rulers. The disruption of Canadian relations resulted in discrimination against American preachers assigned to the work in Canada, and in the final separation of that field from the Church which had pioneered and developed it.

Pliny Brett of the New England Conference withdrew from the Methodists in 1813, and formed a denomination known as "Reformed Methodists." The movement seems to have originated around Cape Cod and it appears to have been a holiness group. It never became of great importance and the remnant of the schismatics are said to have joined with Orange Scott and others in the organization known as "The Wesleyan Methodist Connection in America," in 1913. Other withdrawals at this time were "The African Union Church" founded by Rev. Peter Spencer in Wilmington, Delaware, in 1813; "The African Methodist Episcopal Church," Philadelphia, 1816, of which Richard Allen was the first bishop; the "Stillwellites," a band of about three hundred who withdrew from John Street Church, New York, in 1817; and "The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church," organized in 1820. The Stillwellites was an ephemeral organization named after their leader, William Stillwell who is credited with having inspired and promoted the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The final facts of interest in this quadrennium were

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. W. E. Thomas, one of the General Evangelists, is to begin a revival at Baker, La., the first Sunday in June. He will assist Rev. W. W. Perry, the pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coon of Monroe, La., spent a few days in New Orleans recently; but we failed to see them. They are among the new acquisitions to the Advocate family.

Rev. R. T. Ware, of Park Avenue, Shreveport, writes in commendation of Brother Harry Rickey as a song leader, and he says that everything goes well at Park Avenue.

Rev. H. L. Johns has issued an elaborate program for his District Conference at Oak Ridge, May 15-16. Bishop Dobbs will preach on the second day at 11 A. M.

We acknowledge a very much appreciated note from Miss Marie Bujard, of Vinton, La. We trust that she may continue to find the Advocate a source of comfort and help.

Rev. D. B. Boddie issues a monthly postal card calendar for his services at Lake Providence. We have good reports of his work in that beautiful little city by The Mississippi.

Dr. Dana Dawson baptized 62 babies on Easter Sunday. Shades of Thomas R. Malthus! Perhaps they were celebrating the centenary of his death, which occurred in 1834.

At the Vicksburg District Conference, Centerville, Fayette and Mayersville reported fifty per cent of the Benevolences paid. The District reported more than double the amount paid up to that time in 1934.

Rev. V. G. Clifford, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg, Miss., District, is keeping fully informed as to the details of his work through carefully prepared report forms which he has made for District and Quarterly Conferences.

Rev. J. Richard Spann, First Church, Baton Rouge, honored us with the beautiful bulletin and a letter which he issued to his people at the Easter season. We appreciate being remembered with these artistic and impressive publications with these artistic and impressive publi-

We regret to learn of the accident in which Mrs. G. O. Salassi, Mrs. J. A. Bousquet, and Mrs. James Levy were injured. We understand that the car in which they were driving was struck by a bus. All of them are members of our church at Slidell.

Rev. J. T. Campbell, pastor of First Church, Laurel, Miss., reports a Leadership school in which 42 credits were issued, the reception of a class of nineteen members by profession of faith, and a general improvement in the work of his church.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, Presiding Elder of the Baton Rouge District, very graciously invited the editor to visit his District Conference at Denham Springs. We appreciate the invitation and hope to be able to do so, but we dare not promise to be present.

Rev. V. D. Morris, of Columbia, La., has received 49 members into his church since Conference—33 of them were received at Easter. His collection for the Orphanage amounted to $193.96, and he is now pressing the campaign for the benevolences.

Dr. Theodore Copeland writes that he is in the midst of a real revival at First Church, Corinth, Miss., where he is assisting Rev. E. H. Cunningham, the pastor. No details were given beyond the mere fact of the revival, and we will probably receive details later.

The business office has an appreciated communication from Mr. W. H. Waggoner, of Columbia, La., where Rev. V. D. Morris is the popular and aggressive pastor. We feel sure that Columbia and Brother Morris are having a good year together.

Rev. Carl Lueg is in the midst of painting his church at Slidell, La., and he expects to go ahead with painting the parsonage as soon as that job is finished. He is doing a splendid work in Slidell, and the people are much pleased with both the preacher and his wife.

Rev. E. L. Cargill, an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, has been quite ill for three weeks, but hopes to be up soon. He resides with his daughter at 2335 Vance Ave., Alexandria, La., where he can be reached by his friends. We feel sure that there are many who will be greatly interested in his recovery.

Our good friend, Rev. W. N. Dodds, of Hernando, Miss., sends in 7 renewals and 15 new subscriptions; and, best of all, the assurance that he still loves the editor. We have great appreciation of Brother Dodds, and it is no disparagement of others to say that he is one of the most faithful men we have ever known.

Rev. W. L. Robinson, of the Lambert-Crowder charge, has just entertained the District Conference; has redecorated the interior of one of his churches, and plans to crown his success with a new parsonage. He has received 22 new members, and has six invitations to preach at school closings.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes, of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, had a very serious accident near Laurel, Miss., where their car was struck by a truck. Fortunately neither Dr. nor Mrs. Holmes were hurt beyond being badly shaken up and a series of minor bruises. The car, a new Ford V-8, was badly wrecked, but the truck was not seriously damaged.

The New Orleans District Conference, held May 7, had 90 delegates present. The Benevolences are far in advance of last year—about four thousand dollars against twenty-two hundred with one thousand dollars on Kingdom Extension in 1934. There has been a gain in additions, both on profession and by certificate. The receipts on salaries are more than two thousand dollars in advance of last year, and $7551 was reported as paid on debts. Delegates elected were as follows: Miss Ella K. Hooper, J. H. Carter, J. W. Reilly, Dr. M. F. Wilson, S. H. Radcliffe, Mrs. J. A. Pharr, E. H. Prescott, Mike Mickal, Miss Elizabeth Evans, C. J. Zatarain. The next session of the District Conference goes to Franklin on the Teche.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The Conference of Methodist Missionary Societies of Greenville District was held at Shelby with Zone Three—Shelby, Merigold, Gunnison, Duncan and Rose-dale—as hostesses. One hundred and thirty women were their guests.

After the usual preliminaries, Mrs. G. A. Brown, the district secretary, read her report of the year's work and called attention in a helpful way to phases of work left undone.

Mrs. Dan Comfort spoke on the importance of Young Women's Circles.

Mrs. W. B. Hinchcliff of Greenville, conference superintendent of children's work, made plain the children's work and made a stirring appeal that the auxiliaries give children's work more time, emphasis and its rightful place—to begin tomorrow's church now!

Time was allowed for presentation of a playlet, "Her Heritage," written by Mrs. Dan Comfort, and emphasizing the place and importance of the work of women in the church. Miss Ruth Agner, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Thompson assisted Mrs. Comfort.

The Council message brought by Mrs. Neblett was full of information and inspiration. The high point was the terse statement of the times, "It takes all of the men of all the ages to interpret the man Jesus" and the question to each one present was, "Take inventory of how you are interpreting the man Jesus in your life."

Mrs. Brooks' appeal for Scarritt Scholarship brought $24.00.

Mrs. Dan Comfort, the new superintendent of Christian social relations, discussed the work of her department, naming its five phases: (1) The World-International Relations, (2) Citizenship, embracing temperance and anti-lynching, (3) Racial Relations, (4) Industrial Relations; and (5) Rural Life.

Mrs. Lockman brought to the attention of the group the changes in the work of the mission and Bible department. Her report that from 28 auxiliaries in the district she had received 28 reports for this first quarter brought applause.

Mrs. Talbert stressed the importance of several small groups rather than one large Spiritual Life Group.

Mrs. Elam of Greenville urged the conference to add to its spirit of being Council-minded that of being Methodist home-minded. Emphasis was put on the value of coupons—an opportunity of doing much with little.

Valuable information was given by Mrs. Brooks on plans of finances. She reported North Mississippi Conference pledge for 1935 to be $20,000 and urged sacrificial giving to be able to meet the need of our work already established.

Mrs. Ernest Moore urged that auxiliaries tithe their local funds, the tithe to be invested in Life Memberships. All reports of Life Memberships are to be sent Mrs. H. B. McGehee of Tchula. All money for Life Memberships is to be sent Mrs. D. H. Hall of New Albany.

A Consecration service conducted by Mrs. Neblett closed the day's program.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson

2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

To the members of the Women's Missionary Societies: From different quarters of our church have come rumors that lead us to feel there is some confusion with regard to an interpretation of paragraph 281 of the Discipline regarding the New Financial Plan. This paragraph says: "The pastor and board of stewards shall secure the co-operation of all agencies (Church schools, Woman's Missionary Societies, Men's clubs, and other organizations of the local church) to aid in making an every member canvass of the local congregation to secure pledges for the support of the expenses of the local congregation and the amounts asked for General and Conference interests." Now this is plainly asking for help in getting the members of the congregation to make their pledges to the church budget. It is not asking that the Woman's Missionary Society pledge organization funds to this budget. Members of the Woman's Missionary Society as members of the Church, of course, assume their obligations, but the members of the organization cannot pledge their organization's funds for this purpose.

Read paragraph 519, Article VII, page 262 of the Discipline for the law concerning funds of the Woman's Missionary Society and you will find: "That the funds raised from these societies shall be appropriated to the work already established by them or hereafter to be entered upon by the Board of Missions. Section of Woman's Work."

Then read the law setting forth the duties of the auxiliary treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society, page 334, by-law 4 (1934 Annual Report): "The treasurer shall collect all missionary money of the auxiliary, keep an account of the same, and make an itemized report monthly to the auxiliary. She shall remit to the Conference treasurer on the first of January, April, July and October, giving an itemized statement of the amount, a duplicate of the same to be furnished the auxiliary corresponding secretary. The books of the treasurer shall be audited annually." If the auxiliary treasurer turns over this missionary money to any other person than the Conference treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society, she is proving untrue to her trust, and is liable to serious consequences; for her books are to be audited. No one has a right to tell an auxiliary treasurer that it is permissible to turn missionary society funds into the local church budget (for any purpose). The assistant treasurer shall not dis-burse funds collected for local work except by order of the president and chairman of local committee and that must be in accord with the vote of the society.

This letter is intended to set forth clearly the law with regard to Woman's Missionary Society funds and to call attention of the auxiliary treasurer to her responsibility in defending that law, and holding sacred the trust imposed in her. She cannot dispose of missionary money in any other way than herein stated. If a treasurer in any missionary society has agreed to turn over Woman's Missionary Society funds or is now turning them over to any treasurer other than the Conference treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society, she should take immediate steps to correct this error.

Please observe that our Woman's Missionary work has been given authorization by the highest authority of our Church and we are entirely in our right in guarding against misunderstanding concerning direction of its funds. You have been loyal and generous. We count on a continued expression of your true devotion to the cause so contributive to making Christ known in all the earth.

Faithfully yours,

HELEN B. BOURNE.

Evangelist Jimmie Smith, formerly of Mississippi, but now of Dallas, Tex., writes that he has just closed a great revival at Mutual, Oklahoma, in which there were 46 additions to the Methodist Church. He is now in a union tabernacle revival in Tulsa, in which eight churches are participating.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, Hazlehurst, Miss., says that he is having a very pleasant year, and that the people are making it easy for him both by their consideration and their loyalty. He had a splendid Easter service and the finances of the church are in good shape. Four members were added by profession of faith in the revival service which was held.

The Council appointments which affect St. Mark's, New Orleans, are as follows: Miss Hodkins goes to Danville, Va.; Miss Lundy to Kingdom House, St. Louis; Misses Bates and Webster are to remain here with Miss Julia Southard, Miss Julia Sargent, and Miss Margaret Young as Head Resident. Miss Stroup, the present Head Resident, was granted a furlough, for which she had asked.

Mr. John M. Robinson, of Shreveport, died on Sunday, April 28. He was one

Christian Education

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 19.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE MEANING OF BAPTISM

Baptism with water as a symbol of baptism with the Holy Spirit and as the door into the visible church is a command of the Master and universal practice of Christians except Quakers, who believe that the symbol is superfluous since we have the great spiritual reality in the cleansing of the Spirit. Its meaning, mode and subjects have provoked much discussion and acrimonious debate during the ages. Happily, a better day has dawned and Christians no longer consign others to perdition because of their interpretation of the meaning or mode of this beautiful symbol. When regarded as having regenerative power in itself, it has acquired an extreme value, and has been deferred to old age—even applied to the body of the dead—that the soul might go freshly cleansed into the presence of God. Viewed as a means of grace and a stimulant to faith, it is an act of worship that has brought a vivid sense of the presence and goodness of God. With some, the mode, not the motive, has measured the benefit and validity of the sacrament, its value accruing not from the faith of the recipient, but from the form of the service—the conscience of the candidate yielding to the authority of the church. For those who look upon it as a symbol of the out-poured Spirit, affusion seems a most fitting mode; while those who regard it as, a symbol of burial with Christ can be satisfied only with immersion. If it is an act of worship and dedication suited only to the individual believer, then must infants be ruled out; if it is a part of the "teaching" commanded, then it is a part of training and of parental duty, and infants are included. In a very real sense, parents carry the keys of the Kingdom for the child.

Baptism for Jesus was an identification of himself with humanity and a dedication to the Messianic movement preached by John. He ever walked the way he urged upon others. Our baptism is a symbol of our identification with him and of our dedication to his Kingdom. When the Ethiopian heard Philip preach Jesus from the text in Isaiah, he desired to make public declaration of his faith by immediate submission to the rite of baptism. Too much stress should not be laid on the meaning of the preposition "into," since it is used nine times in the Greek of this chapter, and is translated three times "to"; twice each "in" and "into;" once each "with" and "at." The important matter is not the abundance of water, but the supremacy of Christ in the life of the baptized. The record is that "he went away rejoicing," and tradition has it that he baptized his queen in Ethiopia and started a Christian church in the "Dark Continent."

Let baptism be orderly, seemly, solemn. Ushering a member into the Church of Christ is not a matter for haste or slovenliness. It should be preceded by preparation and prayer, so that with reverence and understanding the largest good may come to the church and the candidate. It should symbolize a cleansing, mark a separation, signify a dedication, register identification with God's people, and seal a covenant with the crucified and risen Christ.

The Methodist Layman

WILL YE ALSO GO AWAY

By T. C. Rhodes

These are the words Jesus addressed to His twelve disciples. These are the words He is addressing to the laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, today. Are we going away and fail to carry on the work that our Lord and Master has left for us to do? You know when He spoke these words to His disciples He had just delivered an address to a crowd of His followers. His teachings did not please His audience, for in the preceding verse it is written, Many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him. I wonder if we laymen have turned back on the teaching of our Savior and our church. When He saw the many turning their backs on His message He turned to the twelve who still lingered and said, "Will Ye also go away?" He prettily said the door is open if you want to go, it is your right to go, the door is open, I will not attempt to restrain you in any way. But brother laymen if we fail to carry on His work as we should He will send laymen from other denominations to carry on the work that we should be doing.

Jesus did not believe in using any sort of compulsion on people as a means of making them good. He always treated men as free moral agents. He respected every man's personality. He recognized the right of every man to direct his own life, and to make his own moral code. Character can't be formed by outside compulsion. Outside compulsion may be necessary to restrain men from disorderly conduct, but Jesus made it very clear that He did not care to hold any of His followers by compulsion, nor to exercise any sort of compulsion over them. To the extent that the church has resorted to force and compulsion, it has failed. Christianity does not move forward in this way. Christianity is an attracting, not a compelling force.

May we make this year one of prayer for our churches throughout the world? If we can just get our membership filled with the Holy Spirit we won't have any trouble with the finances.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Alexandria District Conference met in the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, La., on April 24-25th, 1935. The local pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, and the people of the city very graciously entertained the Conference.

Dr. Briscoe Carter, our presiding elder, called the conference to order promptly at 10:00 o'clock on Wednesday. Without undue haste the business of the district was dispatched quickly and nicely.

The reports of the pastors, as a whole were very favorable, the whole program of the church was being followed in some of the charges. From the reports of the pastors the Conference benevolence collections will be better than last year. Almost all the pastors reported some accessions for the year. It seemed that most of the pastors and laymen present had an optimistic spirit.

The preaching was done by Rev. W. R. Harvell and Rev. J. J. Rasmussen. Brother Harvell brought a great message at the morning hour, on the need of the Church, and Brother Rasmussen brought a great message for the night service.

Bro. John S. Smith of Glenmora was licensed to preach, also recommended for admission on trial in the Louisiana Annual Conference.

The following connectional men and women were present and brought their messages: Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. J. G. Snelling, Rev. A. W. Turner, Rev. S. A. Seegers, Mrs. L. A. Sims, Mrs. B. T. Gallaher. Rev. B. C. Taylor spoke in behalf of the Advocate.

The following were elected delegates to the next session of the Louisiana Annual conference: Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Mrs. J. W. Lee, Mrs. C. D. Atkinson, T. W. Holloman, Mrs. L. A. Sims, Rev. W. T. Woodard, Mrs. H. C. George, W. S. Mitchell, Judge R. W. Oglesby, H. V. Dunford. Alternates are, Mrs. B. T. Gallaher, W. D. Wadley, Mrs. W. I. Townsend, B. T. Gallaher, Mrs. W. L. Perry.

Judge R. W. Oglesby was elected district lay leader. W. W. Hixon and R. E. Galloway, associate lay leaders.

Trout and Boyce extended invitations for the entertainment of the Conference in 1936. Trout was selected.

J. E. HEARN, Secretary.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

"The deepest word in the New Testament respecting immortality is that word concerning God: 'He is not the God of the dead, but of the living.' A God that could at last leave men in the dust would not be the God whom Jesus knew. That the dead are raised up is for Him no longer a subject of inquiry. He speaks from certain knowledge, as certain as His apprehension of the Father.

"Can we overestimate the importance of this fact that He who knew God best, and most loved Him, was sure of the life everlasting?

"Divine love enables man to conquer death not merely by providing internal consolations, in virtue of which he dies bravely or uncomplainingly; it conquers death by lifting man beyond its sway. It overcomes the last enemy by inaugurating for those who die a new career.

"The second fact to tell on the apostolic mind is the resurrection of Jesus. Strictly speaking, the resurrection of Jesus is grounded in a reality still more ultimate. Long ere He died, Jesus knew He would rise again, and He knew this because of His relation to the Father. It could not be that God would leave His soul in the grave. The same thought reappears in St. Peter's speech on the day of Pentecost, 'God raised Him up, having loosed the pangs of death; because it was not possible that He should be holden of it.' Why not possible? Because God is what He is, and Jesus His beloved Son. Behind the character of Easter morning stands the character of God. Everything, including that last victory, comes out of Almighty Love." (H. R. Mackintosh in "Immortality and the Future Life.").

But we are profoundly grateful that Jesus rose from the dead. Had death silenced Him, all the rest of our trust in immortality would have been shaken. We would have been of all men most miserable, and dead in our sins. In the resurrection of Jesus we have a tangible defence for our belief. We know that men are brave, but to see an act of heroism wonderfully quickens the knowledge. So "the Lord's doing" is wondrous in our eyes. "It is one thing to believe that spring is coming because the almanac tell us so. Surely it means far more, some April day, to feel upon the brow a gust of vernal air, with its mystic fragrance, telling us that spring is here." (Mackintosh).

PRAYER

Our gracious Father, we thank Thee that Thou hast set eternity in our hearts. We thank Thee for the aspirations Thou hast created. But we thank Thee that Thou didst not leave us without a positive revelation. We are grateful that Jesus rose from the dead. Now we pray that we may live the risen life with Him; that our lives may be hid with Christ in God; that we may always set our affections on things above, and not on things of earth. In Jesus name we offer our prayer.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Vicksburg District Conference was held in the beautiful and historic town of Fayette, Mississippi, April 30, and May 1, 1935.

Rev. H. A. Wood, our pastor at Fayette proved himself a most thoughtful host. He and his good people had made ample preparation for entertaining the conference, and every minute of the duration of the conference, he was on the alert to see that all the needs of the guests were supplied as far as possible, and that every courtesy commensurate to the demands of the occasion was extended.

The mayor of the town, the Honorable R. E. Briggs, in a most felicitous vein welcomed the conference, immediately after organization Tuesday morning, turning over to the visitors the keys of the town with the announcement that the delivery of the keys meant carte blanche was extended to all the guests.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the affable and efficient presiding elder presided over the sessions of the conference in a most pleasing style. His experience in the work, and his mastery of assemblies made it possible for him to do the work expeditiously, and yet carefully, and orderly, seeing that no part of the work was neglected, nor discriminated against. This is Brother Hawkins' fourth year on the Vicksburg District. He and his lovely wife have very much endeared themselves to both preachers and laymen in the district, as is illustrated by the loyal support that all the people are giving them, and by appropriate resolutions of appreciation, enthusiastically adopted by the conference.

The conference was honored with the presence of the Rev. J. V. Currie, pastor of the Fayette Presbyterian Church, Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder of Brookhaven District, Dr. G. F. Winfield, president of Whitworth College. Dr. A. P. Hamilton, professor in Millsaps College, Rev. Ira H. Sells, educational extension secretary of the Mississippi Conference, Judge J. M. Foreman, district lay leader of Jackson District, Judge R. E. Bennett, Judge of the Circuit Court of Jefferson County, and the following visiting pastors: O. S. Lewis, R. H. Clegg, H. A. Gatlin, A. S. Oliver, L. P. Anders, and J. B. Holyfield.

All the pastors of the district except two who were detained because of sickness were present, and a large number of lay delegates were present, and took active part in the work of the conference.

The preaching was done by S. F. Harkkey and T. J. O'Neil. After the sermon, Tuesday evening, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the presiding elder, who was assisted by H. L. Daniel, P. H. Grice, S. N. Young and J. B. Cain.

R. R. LIDDELL

Whereas, it has pleased God in His wisdom and divine providence to remove from us our good friend, Mr. R. R. Liddell, who for many years served as steward in our church; and

Whereas, he was outstanding in his loyalty to the church, school and various interests that were uplifting, ennobling and elevating; therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the pastor and members of the Board of Stewards of the Fayette (Miss.) Methodist Church, bowing in humble submission to the Divine Will, tender to his family our deepest sympathy in their bereavement, and earnestly pray that God may be their refuge and strength.

Resolved, further, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our third quarterly conference, a copy be furnished the bereaved loved ones, and that copies be sent the Fayette Chronicle and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

(Signed)

H. A. WOOD, Pastor;
MRS. W. H. H. LEWIS,
Secretary Board of Stewards.

B. W. MOORE

B. W. Moore was born on September 5, 1869, and died suddenly April 18, 1935. The term comprises a human life—a life in which to show how to live and how to die.

In early life he was converted and joined the Methodist Church, and lived to do a great deal of good to his fellow-man—and was thus prepared for the life hereafter. If angels carried Lazarus to Abraham's bosom, I am sure they were in attendance here that night. We ought not to grieve, but how can we help it? A loved one is gone, and O how we miss him!

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His wisdom has removed from our midst B. W. Moore, a loyal member and a true friend, and

Whereas, by his going we have sustained an irreparable loss; therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the members of Mrs. Lipsey's Sunday school class, shall endeavor to emulate his example of faithfulness and sincere devotion to our church and all its varied activities, and

Resolved, further, that we, members of his class, extend to his bereaved wife and daughter our heartfelt sympathy, with the assurance that we feel keenly the loss which we have experienced in his going, and

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Seelbinder, and also copies to the Durant News and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

M. T. WILLIAMS.
F. V. McCULLAR.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The reports of the pastors show that 312 persons have been received into the church this conference year, 135 of these on profession of faith. Only three charges: namely, Centerville, Fayette, and Mayersville reported 50 per cent of Benevolences paid, yet, the total paid is more than 100 per cent in advance of what was paid this time last year.

Julius Allen McRany was recommended to the Annual Conference for Admission on Trial in the Traveling Connection.

The following were elected delegates to Annual Conference: J. M. Bush, M. M. Satterfield, R. T. Liddell, Mrs. L. E. Roberts, Mrs. Carl Lehman, Mrs. H. G. Hawkins, S. W. Sharbrough, Prof. J. F. Stafford, Mrs. P. H. Grice, Rev. R. E. Selby, Mrs. W. M. Sullivan, W. B. Adams with the following as alternates: J. P. Bennett, Mrs. G. P. McKeown, R. E.

Sullivan, J. L. Ballard, Mrs. T. J. O'Neil, W. H. Gibson.

R. E. Selby was elected district lay leader, with S. W. Sharbrough, and R. E. Sullivan, associate lay leaders.

The conference adopted resolutions, requesting the Mississippi Conference Historical Society to consider the advisability of erecting a modest marker on the plot of land near Fayette on which stood the home of the Rev. Newitt Vick, where the first session of the Mississippi Annual Conference was held in 1813, which plot of land is owned by our church.

A campaign was inaugurated, with W. M. Sullivan, as captain, and Floyd Lewis, and F. M. Casey as lieutenants to lead the campaign for the purpose of securing the district's quota of subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by July 1.

Yazoo City was selected as the seat of the next session of the conference.

After voting courtesy resolutions, expressive of the gracious hospitality of the pastor-host, and the good people of Fayette, the conference adjourned with a consecration service conducted by W. M. Sullivan.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, La.

Dear Brother Mayo:—At the suggestion of the Board of Stewards, First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we are writing to express our deep sorrow in the passing from our midst of your beloved wife, Mrs. A. M. Mayo.

We know that her death means a great loss to all the interests connected with her family, her city and her church, and that she will be missed with her wise counsels; her gentle personality, and her beautiful spiritual vision.

She has passed away from this vale of suffering into the fields of light and peace, and at last we expect to meet her again with those we loved and lost awhile.

The Church Press

(Editorial)

There has not been a time when the Church press was more necessary than it is today. It has ever been accorded preeminence as an advocate of righteousness and faith; but it is now coming to be the one untrammelled defender of the morals of civilization. The interests and activities of the Church have inconspicuous place in secular papers; and the volume of liquor advertising carried by many journals removes them from consideration as trustworthy interpreters of the moral and social questions in which the Church is vitally interested. It is not necessary to bring indictment against the secular press on that account, but it is too much to expect that such a factor in their support would not lend color to their opinions.

It is also true that the secular press is largely non-committal regarding World Peace. Some of the less reserved boldly denounce the efforts for peace as "pacifist" agitators, but the majority take the more diplomatic course of weaving a laurel crown for the victims who fell at the battle front. In minutest detail the gruesome horrors of the trial for the murder of the Lindberg baby was given to the world, but few have thought it worthwhile to publish the Senate arms and munitions inquiry. Yet, the business under investigation was little less than a plot to send hundreds of thousands of babes of today to ruthless slaughter in future wars. Plans for Memorial Day include a spectacular massing of colors at Washington Cathedral on Mt. St. Albans, where rest the ashes of Woodrow Wilson. The public prints will be filled with poetry dedicated to soldiers bivouaced on the battlefields of the War Between the States, and beautiful scenes from the city of our soldier dead over seas. But none will dare to point out the contrast between a beautiful graveyard on the Marne with its mass of white crosses, and a country of living men and happy homes in the peaceful valleys of a land of plenty. Back of every spotless cross on that melancholy plot of ground are broken hearts which no oratory can heal, and bloodstains which words of patriotic grandeur can not hide. It is the Church press that holds aloft the torch of Christian ideals, and that pleads consistently for the inalienable right of life, decency and moral progress.

Wallet of the Week

LAWRENCE B. SAINT, the famous American stained glass artist, has been at work for six and a half years on windows for the Protestant Episcopal Church at Washington, D. C., according to an exchange. He makes all his own glass, following closely formulas used by ancient glass makers. He has been able, after much research and experimentation, to approximate the texture and colorings of the ancient glass makers. It is only a window upon which he toils, but in it is to be written his message to the world.

MICHAEL FARADAY, the great pioneer scientist in electricity, chemistry and physics, was a Sandemanian preacher, and was no less devout in his faith than he was devoted to scientific investigation and research. The facts as to his ministerial connection are little known today, probably because he belonged to a small and little known sect; but the very church house in which he preached was said to be still standing a few years ago. Those who would divorce religion from science, should not forget that they were joined in that splendid pioneer and discoverer in the field of science.

THE GEORGIA REFERENDUM ON REPEAL which occurred on Wednesday of last week has every appearance of having been a real contest, if the returns mean anything. Out of a total vote of approximately 164,000, the dries seem to have won by the slender margin of 90 votes. The wets indicate their intention to contest it to the official count, but it is not likely that that will make much change either way. But such a victory as that certainly leaves the Georgia dries nothing to gloat over, and the advocates of temperance should realize the desperateness of the battle which is ahead of them.

ADMIRAL RICHARD E. BYRD and his men were welcomed home from their long sojourn in the Antarctic regions, at the Washington Navy Yard on May 10. The "Bear," supply ship of the expedition, brought the explorers up the bay to receive welcome from the President of the United States on behalf of the American people. This expedition will probably prove to be the most important and fruitful of south polar research expeditions; and in discovery second only to that of Sir James Clark Ross in 1841, who discovered Victoria Land, made explorations on Possession Island, Franklin Island, and discovered Erebus, an active volcano, and Terror, an extinct volcano, in that land of mystery and ice.

TWENTY MILLION PERSONS ON RELIEF is the significant caption of a bulletin just released by the Federal Council of Churches, Information Service. To analyze the figures given would require a little more information and time than we have; but three things strike us as of grave importance. First, practically one out of every six persons is on direct relief, including families, single persons, college students, teachers and others. Second, there has been no reduction in relief cases, except by transfer to the Civil Works Administration, since July, 1933. Third, since the beginning of 1935, there has been an increase of relief cases of more than thirty-three and one-third per cent—5,443,000 increase, according to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator.

DR. F. LUKE WISEMAN, a great student of Wesleyan hymnology, says that, like Romulus and Remus in the fable of the founding of Rome, Methodism's two founder-brothers were John and Charles Wesley. In a very unique statement, he said, "Methodism couldn't have been but for John; but Methodism wouldn't have been but for Charles. Charles was a great pilgrim, a great penitent, a great theologian, a great evangelist. The Methodist spirit has been maintained not because of John Wesley's Forty-four Sermons, but because of Charles Wesley's hymns, and as long as we sing those hymns we shall preserve that pristine Methodist flavor and fervor. John may be characterized as the 'land surveyor' of Methodism, but Charles was its 'landscape gardener.'"

AN ENVELOPE-FUL OF DYNAMITE is a phrase which Printers' Ink applies to the advertising policy of the American liquor dealers. Among other things it says:

"Not even enthusiasm, and certainly not good business judgment, can justify a frame of mind that conceives and enacts an 'assault' upon the market of non-drinkers.

"An assault is an act of violence. Inevitably it brings on reprisal. And public ill-will is a terrible kick-back.

"Here is a business intimately influenced by public reactions. It is a business to whose policies and practices the public is peculiarly sensitive.

"Right often, as the public well knows, that which is flattered by the epithet 'bad taste in advertising' really is a shadowing-forth of porcine greed—and for this adjectival association, we probably owe an apology to sus scrofa." (brood sow)

A FATAL BARTER

There is a very significant chapter in the history of the human race which needs to be lifted from its place in the musty archives and restudied as an economic and social background of our day and condition. It is the history of the Egyptians ground down by famine and frenzied by hunger selling themselves to be the chattels of the government. It begins with the story of a winsome Hebrew dreamer of insight and understanding, who proposed to a disturbed king an economic scheme for the regimentation of Egyptian industry. It included the establishment of vast royal grain stores into which was gathered the food supply of the nation. When the years of famine came and the people cried out for bread, their money was consumed and then they sold their cattle, their lands and even themselves into a serfdom from which that country has not been redeemed until this day. Even the chosen people of Jehovah were gathered into the toils of that iniquitous national program. In this day of wild and reckless pledging of personal properties upon alluring terms of government credit, there is, we believe, a serious menace to the social and economic stability of American life. Vast areas of farm lands have been abandoned to the government under Land Bank loans and the people, like the ancient Egyptians, are gathering in cities. Under seed loans the very crops are pledged before the sower goes into the field. Under Federal Housing loans, the roofs over the heads of thousands are pledged for security. The banking business is largely mortgaged to and controlled by the national government, and industry is complaining of governmental competition and the embarrassment of regulations not of its own making. As we see it, the time may come when a Federal mortgage will be one of the chief evidence of American citizenship that will be left. We question the economic soundness of measures by which the national government may become landlord, banker, power-merchant, supply-merchant and city realtor to the whole people. If ours is to continue to be a great country, the initiative and independence of the people must be preserved.

CALL OF THE HEIGHTS

Many years ago we listened with feelings of rapture to a sermon, by a veteran preacher of the North Mississippi Conference, which paid tribute to faith under the tests of human experience. The preacher was Rev. J. W. Honnoll who was then an old man, a patriarchal figure lingering in the shadows of two worlds. In his imagination he stood at the bedside of dying comrades of the years that were gone; and as he summoned their spirits from the sky, he heard again the testimony of faith in God from their dying lips. His rugged face was lighted with the inextinguishable confidence of the heavenly world, for those sainted heroes were reciting the truth upon which he rested his faith as the shadows gathered in his own path. We realize more and more that his was a pathway trod by all human feet, and that such assurance is indispensable to every man of every age. Without such faith, life's lengthening shadows and the somber reflections of broken health are as the approaching night of the soul. Men may forget for a time their deeper hungers and wander far from home, but when the clouds descend they lift their appealing faces and listen for the voices from beyond the heights. Happy, thrice happy those whose faith has an anchor within the veil—those who have heard from human lips testimonies that lift the soul toward God. And happier far that one who carries within his own bosom the reassurance of the Son of God: "Let not your heart be troubled." Though the tears may have coursed down our cheeks in experiences of great sorrow and the beauty that we prized been exchanged for ashes, a victorious faith inspires us to carry on. No truth is dearer to the human heart and no doctrinal tenet more jealously guarded than that which teaches that beyond life's last hilltop is God and the spirit world where dwell the saints redeemed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. Dr. Samuel Chadwick of England, not long before his death, said that he would never cease to be grateful that St. Luke declared that the Resurrection had been established by "many infallible proofs." There come times when the strongest feel out for the spirit world as a child feels for the hand of its father in the dark.

MONUMENT COMMEMORATING THE BIRTH OF MISSISSIPPI

May fourteenth was a great day in the history of Mississippi. It was then that the officials of church and state joined in the dedication of a monument on the spot where that Commonwealth came to statehood. The state government was probably more largely represented than at any other celebration of recent years; and with the officers of the state were joined the officials of the Church—a completion of the atmosphere of the occasion celebrated. The ceremonies were unique and impressive. They were held upon the campus of Jefferson College, an institution founded in 1802, and one of the oldest colleges of the South and Southwest. The monument stands upon the spot which was then the site of the Methodist Church in which the state government was organized in 1817. The speakers' platform was under the shade of the great oaks where the preliminary trial of that arch conspirator, Aaron Burr, was held, February 2, 1807.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Presiding Elder of Vicksburg District of the Methodist Church, and one of the staunch friends of historical research in Mississippi, was master of ceremonies. The invocation was made by Rt. Rev. R. O. Gerow, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Natchez. The address of welcome was delivered by his Honor, Mayor Laub, of Natchez. Hon. Walker Wood, Secretary of State, made the report of the Monument Commission. The deed to the site was delivered by Hon. Gerard Brandon on behalf of the Trustees of Jefferson College. Addresses were made by Hon. Dunbar Rowland, Governor M. S. Connor, and Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, of the seventh episcopal district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The monument was unveiled by Lady Rachel Connor, daughter of the Governor, and Miss Sarah Kennedy, whose lamented father was largely instrumental in making the memorial a reality. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. L. Norton, pastor of the Methodist Church at Washington. The day was concluded with a pageant, "The Birth of a State," under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Dunbar Murray.

UNDERGRADUATE THESES

The Committee on the Course of Study met in Nashville the first week in May and it was decided that all B.D. men in the Conference must prepare theses for the remaining years until the completion of the courses required. This means that those in the class of the fourth year must prepare a thesis in the area for that year; those in the class of the third year must prepare theses for Areas III and IV, and so for all unfinished work. They must register in the Correspondence school for undergraduates, and a syllabus for the course will be mailed upon the payment of the fee of five dollars. All B.D. graduates who have not finished the full four years in the Conference should register and begin work at once.

RELIGION AND BUSINESS

By H. H. Crisler

I am impressed with the idea of the Advocate carrying other things than religious matters. Long ago it seemed to me that our religious periodicals could be improved by a combination of the spiritual with the secular.

Every legitimate business should be carried on in the "What Would Christ Do" plan.

This is by no means fanciful; it is a proved fact. I have tried it with some degree of success myself. Forty years of newspaper experience convinces me that newspapers can be published this way, and if this is true of newspapers, I am prepared to believe that any other business which has the sanction of the moral code can be conducted in a way that would not do violence to one's conscience.

In adopting this course, I believe the Advocate can be a potent factor in bringing about a higher conception of business ideals, and at the same time enhance the paper in favor with Christian business men and women.

Many of the church non-essentials which usually appear in our religious papers may interest the clergy, but they do not appeal to the man of secular affairs. And, may I say, even though I might risk bringing down upon my head the wrath of the preachers, none of us can talk shop all of the time and expect to interest listeners outside of our own profession or calling.

Many times space is consumed in our church organ by some enthusiast who seeks more to keep his name before the church or exploit his ability as a writer than to further the interest of the cause he represents. Such articles tend rather to estrange the business man's interest in the paper than to encourage it. The editor cannot always be blamed for this, though I have sometimes thought religious editors might profit by getting "hard boiled," as secular editors often have to do, and increase the capacity of the waste basket.

Mr. Editor, I appreciate the effort you are making to make of the Advocate a Christian-business paper which will appeal to more business men and women.

BISHOP DOBBS VISITS IN THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT

By Rev. Henry G. Hawkins

Saturday afternoon, May 11, Bishop Dobbs and the writer motored to Natchez from Vicksburg. The first stop was at the grave of Tobias Gibson, on a wooded hill, four miles south. It was our guest's first visit to the sacred spot; and he is instinctively of the opinion that the monument should be moved to the ground of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg. We had worship of prayer.

Viewing, as we passed into the town of Port Gibson, the Ryan House, built in 1807 as a tavern, stopping place of robbers, as well as those on noble errands, and glancing at the Port Gibson Bank, which in one period was a bank of issue, we alighted at the Methodist parsonage, with its recent improvements, and were conducted by Rev. S. F. Harkey to the Irwin Russell Memorial. Mrs. Maggie Musgrove, who gave us a lecture there, is the best informed person living, on the life and relics of Mississippi's greatest post.

Short calls were made at Lorman, on Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Coker; at Fayette, on Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Wood; and at Washington, on Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Norton, passing enroute Springfield, where Andrew Jackson was married to Rachel Robard, and Church Hill, where was the earliest Episcopalian society of Mississippi, and other localities of interest.

Reaching Natchez, we were intermittent guests for three days of Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Sullivan, and their daughter, Miss Juanita. At nearly every meal our host informed us that friends and neighbors were assisting in making the table supply bounteous.

Sunday Bishop Dobbs preached at Natchez, 11 a. m.; Kingston, 3:30 p. m.; at Woodville, 7:30 p. m.; to the edification and great delight of the audiences at all three places. At Woodville both of us were guests of Capt. and Mrs. Geo. Argue. Mrs. Argue's sunken garden of shrubs and flowers is a show place. Before breakfast Monday we were guided by Rev. G. P. McKeown to Bowling Green, where a century ago Edward McGehee had Bishop McKendree as guest for days. The original mansion was burned by a regiment of Negro soldiers, under Union command, only the piano was saved, and is now in the present house built on much smaller plan than the burned mansion. Columns of the original mansion still stand, and also the brick carriage house.

Bishop Dobbs evinced great interest in the Bowling Green cemetery, which is indeed remarkable. There are about sixty expensive stone and marble memorials, marking the resting places of Edward McGehee, and others of his line, chiefly descendants, including that of his son, Micajah, who was one of the twenty survivors of the Fourth Fremont Expedition to California.

After breakfast we visited Rosemont, ancestral home of Jefferson Davis, where is shown the room in which he spent the first days after his release from Fortress Monroe. Close by is the little cemetery of about a dozen of the departed, among them the mother of Jefferson Davis, and a nephew, killed at Gettysburg.

After a short call at the home of Mrs. J. K. Sessions, and prayer there, and anxious inquiry as to the condition of our friend, that good and strong layman, J. M. Sessions, who is now confined to his room, we returned over the hills and winding road to Natchez. During the rushing intervals Bishop Dobbs saw in Natchez: the grave of S. S. Prentiss, Longwood, Concord, Rosalie, Gloucester, Stanton, Devereux, Melrose, Briers, and Homewood, the last mentioned being the residence of W. J. Kaiser, chairman of the Jefferson Street board of stewards. In part of the Natchez itinerary the guide was Charles Head, secretary of the board of stewards.

Bishop Dobbs attended the session of the second quarterly conference of the Jefferson Street charge Monday night, and at the close made a talk which was greatly appreciated. His visit was climaxed by a short, but masterly address on "Religion and Patriotism," in the hearing of thousands Tuesday afternoon, just before the unveiling of the Memorial that has been erected at Washington, Miss., on the site of the little Methodist Meeting House, in which the Constitutional Convention was held in 1817, for thirty-nine days, organizing the State of Mississippi.

It is worthy of mention that the amount reported for Capitol Street Church represents the full amount for benevolences for the entire Conference year. This splendid achievement should and no doubt will be a stimulus to others to discover that far more substantial payments are pos-

GREENWOOD DISTRICT

Dear Brother Pastor: You heard Dr. Duren present, and have read, the plan for the New Orleans Advocate campaign. The campaign begins May 1, and closes July 1—it is now on. At our Preachers' Meet, Tuesday of this week, it was decided to make a desperate effort to raise our quota and use the $100.00 prize as a scholarship at Grenada College, to go to some worthy girl from our district. I am sure this will enlist the interest of every church in our district to help raise our quota. At this meeting the following charge quotas were fixed:

Acona, 10; Belzoni, 12; Black Hawk, 15; Carrollton, 25; Drew, 15; Duck Hill, 18; Ebenezer, 15; Greenwood, 50; Inverness and Isola, 12; Itta Bena, 12; Kilmichael, 10; Lexington, 20; Minter City, 7; Moorhead, 12; Poplar Creek, 10; Ruleville, 12; Schlater and P. M., 10; Sunflower, 12; Swiftown, 8; Tchula and C., 18; Tutwiler, 15; Valden and West, 15; Webb and S., 18; Winona Station, 20; Winona Circuit, 15.

If you can secure more than your quota please do so as some places may not be able to secure their quotas in full. RENEWALS count same as new subscriptions. Brethren, let's secure our quota, establish this scholarship and circulate a good paper. Thanking you and with best wishes always.

sible early in the year than has been the custom. It will be a pleasure to include in the next report the names of any charges that may have paid the benevolences in full since May 1, and this information should be sent by the pastor directly to the Conference lay leader.

A few other facts may be of interest at this time. In 1934 the Mississippi Conference paid for General and Conference Work, $39,546.85 and for 1935 accepted through quarterly conferences $64,432, which is 53.6 per cent of the askings. The increase of amounts accepted over amounts paid last year for the benevolences, not including the offering for Kingdom Extension, is shown as follows:

Brookhaven District: Paid last year $6,712, accepted $12,489, gain 97%.

Hattiesburg District: Paid last year $5,205, accepted $7,698, gain 45%.

Jackson District: Paid last year $11,180, accepted $17,940, gain 60%.

Meridian District: Paid last year $7,176, accepted $9,464, gain 32%.

Seashore District: Paid last year $5,501, accepted $8,445, gain 53%.

Vicksburg District: Paid last year $4,061, accepted $8,386, gain 108%.

It is important that every charge pay the full amount accepted and as early as possible, for the needs are great. These will be realized by stewardship of life and interest in the evangelistic mission of the Church.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

the passing of both Dr. Coke and Bishop Asbury, to whom belong a large share of the credit for the establishment and the building of the American Methodist Church. Dr. Coke died May 3, 1814, as he journeyed to India at the head of a Methodist mission, enterprised by himself and financed out of his private funds—the last heroic venture of the great missionary statesman of Methodism, and friend of the whole heathen world. Just a month before the General Conference assembled in Baltimore the toil worn body of Francis Asbury gave way under the strain of his labors and sufferings. The end came at the home of George Arnold, near Fredericksburg in Virginia, March 31, 1816. Both Coke and Asbury died as they had lived: Coke on the bosom of the ocean bound upon missionary conquest, and Asbury at the end of an itinerant trail approximately three hundred thousand miles in length. When the General Conference convened, it was dominated by thoughts of Asbury, and the first action that was taken was on a resolution to remove his remains to Baltimore. This was carried out during the session of the Conference when the entire body joined in the melancholy march to Eutaw Street church where his remains were placed beneath the pulpit, but were later removed to Mt. Olivet cemetery.

The General Conference remained in session twenty-one days, but very little new legislation was written into the law of the Church. The allowances for the preacher and his wife were raised from $80 to $100; a law creating the office of District Steward was passed; and provision was made for the licensing of local preachers and exhorters. James Axley secured the passage of his resolution prohibiting the sale and use of spirituous liquors by preachers, which the previous Conference had defeated. The one thing which shows the trend of the thought of the Church at that time was the enactment of a law requiring a course of study for candidates for the ministry. As we shall see, this was an initial step which the next Conference extended by the legislation respecting the establishment of schools and colleges. The first phase of the long-drawn-out Canadian controversy was introduced at this Conference when the British delegates, on behalf of the London Methodist Missionary Society, sought to secure the withdrawal of the American Church from the Canadian field, in favor of the Wesleyan Connection. The reply of the Conference was: "We cannot consistently with our duty to the societies of our charge in the Canadas give up any part of them or any of our chapels in those provinces to the superintendence of the British connection." Enoch George and Robert R. Roberts were elected bishops, and the Conference adjourned on May 24, for lack of a quorum.

The next four years were without incidents of Church-wide interest, except that the "Tract Society" and the "Missionary and Bible Society" were organized. The Tract Society originated with a band of consecrated women of New York City in 1817; and the Missionary and Bible Society was organized in Forsyth Street church on April 5, 1819. Among the leaders in the founding of the Missionary Society were, Freeborn Garrettson, Nathan Bangs, Joshua Soule, Thomas Mason, and Laban Clark. Under the constitution which was adopted, Bishop McKendree was made president, and Bishops George and Roberts vice presidents. The Managers of the Society issued an address in which they said: "Our ultimate object is the general good of mankind, by the extensive diffusion of experimental and practical goldiness;" and the Indians, the Spanish in South America, and the French in Louisiana and Canada were mentioned as objects of special solicitude. Both of these newly organized societies were officially adopted by the succeeding General Conference, and their history has abundantly justified the foresight, the faith and the consecration of the founders.

On November 25, 1815 Richmond Nolley, missionary to Louisiana, died from cold and exposure after he had crossed a swollen stream. In crossing he got separated from his horse and undertook to walk to a settlement, but he sank down upon his knees and died on the way. About this same time, Learner Blackman, another name associated with Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana, was thrown from a ferry boat in the Ohio river and lost his life. On March 11, 1816, George Shadford whose great ministry, as a missionary sent over by Mr. Wesley, did much to establish Methodism in America, died in England. He was a man of God and he died with shouts of victory upon his lips. On September 12, 1816, the Church lost another of its stalwart sons—Jesse Lee: Virginia cavalier, Revolutionary soldier, Apostle of New England, chaplain of Congress, and first historian of Methodism. He was one of the most colorful characters of the pioneer days and one of the ablest men in the building of the church. He died in Hillsborough, Maryland, where he was attending a camp-meeting.

The General Conference of 1820 met in Baltimore, May 1, and this was the first Conference under the new form of government to set itself to the legislative task in a great and constructive way. It adopted, with a revised constitution, the Missionary and Bible Society which had been organized in New York the year before. From the outset the missionary endeavor of the Methodists had been a matter of sporadic and personal interest, and was without either organized or constructive purpose. A collection was raised here and there to meet an appeal that was made in behalf of some local situation, and it was in no sense a comprehensive and intelligent recognition of the missionary obligation of the church. But, by this action, the Conference set up machinery for a steady and consistent promotion of the missionary enterprise of the church and made possible the concentration of effort upon specific fields and the delivery of the energy and ability of the whole church upon its great task. From this point dates the splendid missionary accomplishments of the American Methodists. The Conference adopted the Tract Society also, an agency closely affiliated with the missionary task, as it became the accredited medium for the dissemination of information respecting the whole undertaking of the Church.

At this Conference William Capers introduced the resolution instituting the District Conference for local preachers who had been licensed for two years or more. This Conference was to be presided over by the presiding elder, or in his absence an elected chairman; and to it was transferred the licensing, recommendation for admission and orders, and regulation of the local preachers. The only right reserved to the Quarterly Conference was that of recommending to the District Conference. Dr. Capers said of that law: "It was my first essay at making rules and regulations for the Church, and was alike successful and unlucky." Dr. Bangs' characterization of it as a "startling innovation," was not altogether fair. The resolution seems to have evoked little discussion and to have passed with little opposition. Dr. Capers said that the agitation on "the Presiding Elder question" around Baltimore and to the north was taken up by certain local preachers and that they "perverted it to purposes of mischief." In other sections of the Church, the District Conference was so neglected that the General Conference of 1824 made provision that the Quarterly Conference should transact the business where the District Conference failed to function, and in 1836 the law was repealed. Since that time the local ministry has been licensed and regulated first by the Quarterly and now by the District Conference, an entirely different body from that composed entirely of local preachers.

On May 13, Joshua Soule, a native of Maine and a member of the New York Annual Conference, was elected Bishop; but just after his election a law was passed requiring the presiding elders to be elected by the Annual Conference, upon the nomination of the bishop. The Bishop-elect promptly notified the Conference that he regarded the action as violative of the constitution, and that he would not consent to ordination except with the understanding that he would not hold himself bound to obey the law just passed. Considering the very decided sentiment in favor of that issue, this was a very bold course, but it threw the Conference into confusion. Soule refused to retreat and declined to accept consecration when the body did not reconsider its action. In the end, the operation of the law was suspended until the next General Conference; it was then pronounced null and void, but continued as unfinished business; and in 1828 it was finally rescinded. An interesting fact in connection with the election of Joshua Soule is that he was elected over Nathan Bangs by a vote of 47 to 38, and Bangs had supported the resolution for an elective presiding eldership. It is rather surprising, too, that, in his History of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Bangs devotes practically sixty pages to this Conference and the only time that the name of Joshua Soule appears is in the roll of the Conference. At the last he says that he has discussed all the acts "worthy of record, except what has been heretofore noticed concerning the election and duties of presiding elders;" and in the last paragraph he mentions incidentally the contest over the presiding eldership. The previous discussion to which he refers is in connection with elective presiding elders at the General Conference of 1812, and is in a previous volume.

By far the most important and forward looking achievement in 1820, was the attention which the Conference gave to the long neglected educational problem of the church. After the disastrous experience with Cokesbury College, the Methodists became thoroughly discouraged. Asbury said, "Its enemies may rejoice, and its friends need not mourn;" and it has been said that, in his attitude towards education, he became "too indifferent to this subject, especially in the ministry." He enterprised a series of academies; but practically all of them failed; and the plan was not adequate to meet the needs of the church. The educational delinquency was beginning to be a hindrance to Methodist progress. In the beginning, the illiteracy of the pioneer preacher was accepted as part of the misfortune belonging to a new and undeveloped country; but in a day of larger things, it became a badge of reproach. In 1818 the New England Conference established Wesleyan Academy at New Market, New Hampshire; the same year Elizabeth Female Academy was established at Washington, Mississippi; and in 1819 Wesleyan Seminary was established in New York City, under the patronage of the New York Conference. The constitutions and plans of the institutions in New Hampshire and New York were submitted to the General Conference of 1820 with a petition that the bishops be permitted to appoint principals from among the preachers for a longer period than two years. The General Conference acceded to the request; and the report of the Committee on Education, after reciting the

Mississippi and Louisiana

The baccalaureate sermon for Centenary College will be delivered by Bishop Warren A. Candler, at First Methodist Church, Shreveport, May 26.

Rev. R. F. Harrell, of Pineville, La., called at the Advocate office one day last week, but we were out of the city. We hope that he may give us another chance to visit with him.

Rev. W. M. Newman, Dean of Grenada College, was the preacher at First Church, Tupelo, on Mothers' Day, and the Rotarians were the honor guests. Dr. H. F. Brooks is the pastor.

Dr. J. T. Leggett, than whom the Advocate has no better friend, says that he hopes to send in a good list of subscribers soon. He is out for his quota and we believe that he will win.

Mrs. A. P. Holt, of Colorado Springs, Colo., renews her subscription to the Advocate and adds to her note the very pleasing assurance that "the week would not be complete without the Advocate."

The Methodist Church at West Point, under the leadership of Rev. S. H. Caffey, is launching a move to liquidate the debt upon their church building, under the new terms recently arranged with their creditors.

The New Orleans District contributed almost as much to the Memorial Home, as did the other six districts of the Louisiana Conference; and it contributed more than both the Mississippi Conferences, as reported to date.

Rev. L. L. Cowen, pastor of Noel Memorial, Shreveport, added 30 new members to his church on Mothers' Day. This brings his total for the year up to 255. His Church School will hold a vacation school June 17 to 30.

A very gracious note from our good friend, Dr. T. W. Lewis of Memphis, says, "I can never forget our delightful association in old North Mississippi."

Brother Lewis is to us, one of the princes of the Church.

Bishop Dobbs is back at his desk in Shreveport, after three weeks of strenuous work in Mississippi and at the meeting of the Boards in Nashville. As usual, he is giving attention to every detail of the work of his field.

Dr. Henry T. Carley, pastor at Ruston, La., says that the weather is getting warm up his way and that his reaction to the change is a desire to go fishing. Wish we could accept his invitation for a holiday on the creek, but we can't.

Our good friend, Dr. J. M. Rowland of The Richmond, is out with an artistic and attractive issue commemorating the achievements of Randolph-Macon College. It is a College Day Special, but features in particular Randolph-Macon College for men.

The editor paid a short visit to the Monroe District Conference at Oak Ridge, La., where he had a delightful fellowship with friends of that section. He had to leave unceremoniously, for which he apologizes to Brother Johns and to the Conference.

Rev. J. O. Hanes, General Evangelist, has just completed his fifteenth annual revival with the Tatum Lumber Company at Hattiesburg. This is his ninth meeting since Christmas. "Aggressive Evangelism" is the title of his book which has just come from Cokesbury Press.

Paul Ramsey, son of Rev. J. W. Ramsey of Porterville, Miss., is a senior at Millsaps College and has been unusually honored. He was awarded a scholarship at Duke University, and has also been offered a scholarship at Yale—the first to be offered to a Millsaps student, we understand.

We appreciate the good wishes and the interest of our good friend, Mrs. R.

S. Ricketts, whose lamented husband was one of the dearest friends we ever had. We trust that she may continue to find the Advocate a source of help in the years to come, as she has in the years that are gone.

Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, the wide-awake and aggressive presiding elder of the Ruston District has already announced his third round of conferences and he includes with it an invitation to the editor to be present at the District Conference, May 29, and 30. Thank you, Mr. Elder, and we will do so if it is at all possible.

We regret to learn that Bishop Darlington has not been well of late. We do not know that his condition is alarming, but we esteem the impairment of his health in any degree as a distinct loss to the Church. Certainly the episcopacy can ill afford to spare one of its number from the field at the present time. We hope and pray that a better report may come to us before long.

The editor noted the presence at the dedication ceremonies in Washington, of the following ministers: H. G. Hawkins, E. A. King, P. H. Grice, E. J. Coker, W. M. Sullivan, S. F. Harkey, F. M. Casey, F. J. Jones, T. J. O'Neill, H. L. Norton, G. P. McKeown, L. T. Nelson, L. P. Anders, J. W. Leggett, A. S. Oliver, G. F. Winfield and W. B. Alsworth of the Mississippi Conference. R. G. Moore of the North Mississippi Conference. K. W. Dodson, W. W. Perry, J. C. Rousseaux, W. J. McCoy, and J. D. Fomby of Louisiana Conference.

REVIVAL AT NORTH MAIN ST. CHURCH, WATER VALLEY, MISS.

Readers of the Advocate: We have recently closed a good revival at North Main St. Church, Water Valley, Miss. Rev. A. P. Stephens of Kosciusko, Miss., one of the North Mississippi Conference evangelists, did the preaching, he is good help, works well with the pastor, visualizes the Gospel, makes music on different kinds of instruments and is attractive to all, especially the children and young people.

I take pleasure in recommending him to any preacher who may want to use him, as a sound Gospel preacher and an effective worker.

As a result of the meeting the church was strengthened and eleven members were received, eight on profession of faith.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

Missionary women all over the Conference are looking forward to the adult school for Christian workers which will be held at Centenary College, Shreveport, June 3 to 8.

Miss Mary deBardeleben will be there to teach the Mission Study Course and Dean R. E. Smith will conduct a class in "How to Teach the Bible." It is to be hoped that many auxiliaries will be able to send their superintendents of Bible and Mission Study so that they may be better trained to carry on this work in the local churches.

The following were elected to represent the Conference and to assist in training leaders later in the summer wherever needed: Mrs. S. M. Collins, Mrs. R. B. Knott, and Mrs. J. B. Pollard; alternates, Mrs. L. A. Sims, Mrs. George Dameron and Mrs. E. W. Chaney.

The Monroe District held its annual meeting in Winnsboro May 2, with the district secretary, Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, presiding. Mrs. H. L. Johns of Monroe led the morning worship period using for her meditations the verse "Study to show thyself approved unto God" and stressed the need for preparation in our work.

Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., president of the Conference was the guest speaker and gave a most inspiring message on "Plans for the year and Council proceedings."

Deaconess Sheila Nuttal, Conference rural worker, told of problems confronting women of the rural churches and of the many difficulties and handicaps under which they frequently work.

Mrs. George Purvis of Tallulah gave in a most interesting manner "My Impressions of the DeRidder Conference."

Mrs. S. M. Collins spoke on the work of the Department of Bible and Mission Study.

A memorial service was held remembering those of the district who had passed on and at the close of this service a duet was sung by Rev and Mrs. J. T. Harris of Rayville.

Deaconess Mary Freeman of Jubilee Inn, Shreveport, conducted the noon-day quiet hour. Her message, a deeply spiritual one, was based on the verse, "Be still and know that I am God?"

A special feature of the luncheon hour was the observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the W. M. S. A birthday cake holding twenty-five candles adorned the table.

This meeting set a new high record for attendance as the report showed more than 250 were there. Fourteen pastors headed by the elder, Rev H. L. Johns showed their interest by attending.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Boyle, Cleveland, Shaw, Pace and New Salem met at Shaw for their second zone meeting. Forty-one were in attendance.

From the reports came an interesting item of Shaw's Methodist men's club. This club consists of thirty-five members, meets every two weeks, and is served a fifty cents luncheon by the Missionary Society. From this group have come several new members of the church.

The devotional on Stewardship, led by Mrs. Almond, and the discussion of Spiritual Life Group by Mrs. Brown lifted the worshipful attitude of the meeting.

The instructional side of the program was led by two speakers—Mrs. Mitchel and Mrs. G. A. Brown, the district secretary. Mrs. Mitchel reviewed the business of the district meeting. Mrs. G. A. Brown called to our attention our obligation concerning Life Memberships, Children's Work, Efficiency Aim, Daily Vacation Bible Schools, Zone Chairman as a Delegate to Annual Conference, Rural Work, District Parsonage Finances, Scarritt Scholarship, an Anti-lynching Petition was presented the group, and was signed. Boyle was selected as the next meeting place.

Practically this same program was carried out by Zone Four which met at Duncan the last of April. All auxiliaries were represented. Each came prepared to tell of its outstanding work of the year. The discussions brought the outstanding problem of each, and in many instances also brought solutions for those same problems. Several smaller study groups from the rural settlements were in attendance.

DOES PRAYER CHANGE GOD?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

The answer to the question whether prayer changes God depends upon whether prayer be regarded as subjective, or objective, or both. If prayer is simply and only subjective—that is, its influence and benefits confined to him who prays, and its reflex action limited in its effects to spiritual exaltation—the answer must be negative; but if prayer is objective, or both objective and subjective, the answer must be affirmative.

It must be admitted that experience itself teaches that in a large measure prayer is subjective. It is one of the paths which leads to communion with God, and it brings enrichment of experience to him who prays. It is unquestionably a means of growth in grace; but if it is to be limited to its subjective benefits, it is certainly very much circumscribed in its influence, and the permanency of its beneficial effects are equivocal since all inward experiences have their roots in man's emotional nature, which itself is comparable to the tidal waves of the sea.

All obtainable evidence assures me that aside from its subjective influence, prayer is also objective and, therefore, prayer does change God. I do not mean to affirm that prayer changes the essential nature of God because, in this respect God is immutable. He is the same yesterday, today, and forever—the unchangeable God; but what I mean to say is that prayer does change the mind, the purpose, and the attitude of God toward man under certain circumstances and conditions. Otherwise, why should we pray for anything outside ourselves?

The many examples of answered prayer recorded in the Bible, and the directions and instructions concerning prayer given in the Scriptures, demonstrate my contention that prayer does change God. For instance, when God revealed to Abraham his purpose to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah in answer to Abraham's prayer God expressed his willingness to change his purpose if even ten righteous persons could be found in those wicked cities. Included in God's purpose of destruction was the nearby small town of Zoar which was spared in answer to the prayer of Lot and which became to him a haven of safety.

In the book of Exodus it is recorded that when the children of Israel were discovered dancing around a golden calf, God said to Moses: "Let me alone that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them; and I will make of thee a great nation." But Moses prayed, "And the Lord repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people."

Again, when King Hezekiah was desperately ill, Isaiah said to him, "Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order; for thou shalt surely die, and not live." Turning his face to the wall, the king prayed and before the prophet had gone out of the king's palace God sent him back to tell Hezekiah that in answer to his prayer fifteen years would be added unto his life. If God did not change his mind in this instance he did not mean what he said when, by the mouth of the prophet, he told Hezekiah that he should surely die.

Another example of God's having changed his purpose is that of Jonah, whom God sent to Nineveh, and, as he entered the city, in obedience to the command of God, began to cry, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown;" but Nineveh repented, and the record is: "God repented of the evil that he had said he would do unto them, and he did it not." Did God mean what he said and changed his mind, or did he not mean what he said and did not change his mind—which? The answer is on the face of the record—God did mean what he said, but changed his mind.

The truth is that God's attitude toward man is conditional and determined by man's attitude toward him. It is a matter of cause and effect and as certain and inevitable in the realm of the spiritual as the workings of that same law in any other realm. Accordingly, Azariah said to King Asa: "The Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you." But why multiply instances? Jesus said: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 26.

THE LORD'S SUPPER

The circumstances under which the Lord's Supper was instituted were such as to make it easy for the mystical to become the mysterious; and for the gracious reminder of the sacrificial love of the Saviour to be made a threat of judgment. The Institution emerges as a ray of light from a scene of shadows and as a note of hope from an hour of despair. The disciples had been in unseemly controversy as to which should occupy the posts of importance in the kingdom for which they vainly looked. The enemies of Jesus were a consolidated band and sullenly waited the hour and the opportunity which was even then at hand. The grim outline of the cross, upon which their ruthless purpose was to be achieved, was already a reality to Him. And the traitor sat unrevealed and unsuspected in the little circle at the Passover feast, and when Jesus declared his presence it was as a direct and personal impeachment of the heart and life of even his most devoted and trustworthy friends. The world has not been able to get away from those shadows; the mystical meaning of the communion still raises almost startled inquiries as to personal fitness for its holy implications; and the words of St. Paul regarding the unworthy practices in the Corinthian church still bring fear to timid souls lest they, through their unworthiness, bring upon themselves the traitor's curse.

But the real inwardness of the commemorative feast was vastly different from its setting. It was truly an exposition of the Redeemer's heart, an offer of succor for life's darkest and most needy hour. The Communion table should never be approached just as one of the established conventions of Christianity. Its richest meaning will not be revealed to extempore communicants. Just as there was specific preparation for its institution, there is now an even deeper need for preparation on the part of those who would appropriate its grace and blessing. We need to feel the throb of the Saviour heart in the quest for even the guiltiest soul under the very shadow of the cross. We must come with a prayer of penitence and confession upon our lips, if we are to depart with a "halleluia" in our hearts.

We place great emphasis upon the commemorative feature of the Communion; the words, this do in remembrance of me. But it was prophetic also—a feast of hope. It is a feast with an immortal horizon; for he said, "until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom." Surely those words must mean that the climax of the Institution was not a cross but a crown. Jesus meant for it to be a great dynamic in the life of the church, a means for making real to us the personality, the power and the love of God. It incorporates the martyr spirit of his heart and it enshrines the sacrificial love of his Redeemer soul. For us, it is a sacrament of thanksgiving, the cup of thanks. It should be a memorial of our spiritual deliverance, just as the Passover celebration was a memorial of Israel's deliverance from the bondage of Egypt. Such a thought must inspire gratitude in our hearts; such a faith must inspire the refrain of the Passover hymn, "His mercy endureth forever," and the commemoration which ended with the washing of the feet of the disciples must beget in us a sense of brotherhood in Christ Jesus and earnest desire to become servants of our fellows.

(Note: The material for this lesson failed to reach the office, and it has been necessary to prepare it at the last moment. That will explain the deficiencies. —Editor)

1. Committee on Worship. 2. Committee on Evangelism. 3. Committee on Missions. 4. Committee on Citizenship. 5. Committee on Recreation. 6. Church dramatics. 7. Planning the Department program. 8. Department Leadership. 9. Music in Worship. 10. Administering the Union.

Assembly is five days filled with the best opportunities for fellowship of the highest Christian type that will be found within easy reach of the young people of this Conference—five days of fellowship, recreation and spiritual enrichment with the best leaders that our Conference affords. It is your loss if you do not put forth every effort to attend.

Members of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, and those of the Greensboro District, Alabama Conference, held a joint meeting at York, Ala.—there were 260 persons present, and fourteen departments represented.

After an inspirational musical program with Miss Lucile Outlaw, president of the York Y. P. Division in charge, a short message was given by Rev. D. Y. Register, the pastor. The program consisted of several other beneficial things, among which was a talk by Miss Lily Bec Phillips her subject "Echoes from the Regional Meeting which was held in Jackson."

These young people from the Alabama Conference, have been members of the Meridian Union for nearly two years, and it has been reported that they are really a splendid group. For example they have won the Meridian Union banner for four months in succession now.

The Meridian District, with Miss Lily Bec Phillips as the very able district director, has done beautiful work.

Miss Josephine Lewis, director of the Seashore District, has reported a joint meeting of the young people of her district with those of the Mobile District. The meeting was held at the Moss Point Methodist Church at Moss Point. It was a most successful meeting, and it is hoped that other joint meetings may be planned.

Rev. I. H. Sells, Conference Executive Secretary, visited in the Hattiesburg District at Hattiesburg with the State Teachers' College young people. Miss Singleton Mills, vice-president of the Assembly, is president of the State Teachers' College Methodist Young People's Division at State Teachers' College. Brother Sells gave a most enthusiastic talk and plans were made that night for a bigger and better organization next year.

Grace McCann, director of the Hattiesburg District, has reported that many of the young people in that district are planning to go to Assembly this year.

WIER YOUNG PEOPLE

Dear Dr. Duren: The Weir Epworth League is composed of around twenty-five (25) active members and this is a good membership considering that there is a Y. P. C. (Presbyterian) and a B. Y. P. U. (Baptist) in progress at the same time that the League is going on.

The Weir Epworth League has broadcasted several religious programs over WHEF in Kosciusko. One of the programs was dedicated to Dr. V. C. Curtis, the efficient presiding elder of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference.

The first Sunday in May the Union Epworth League meeting met at Weir with representatives from several Leagues. The Weir Epworth League had charge of the program, the subject being: "Peace and World Friendship." After the program the League took a definite stand for Jesus, the Prince of Peace by passing anti-war resolutions. The next Union meeting will be held at Ethel the first Sunday in July.

CURTIS NABORS.

Pres. of the Weir Epworth League.
Weir, Miss.

RESOLUTION ON TEMPERANCE

WHEREAS, since the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, we have with us the old saloon, which is no surprise to those of us who know the habits of the advocates of the liquor business, and in addition thereto, we have the drug-store saloon, the cafe saloon, and in some of them we have "Bar-Maids" who serve this liquor to the general public. We believe that this is a worse condition than we have had before. In the old saloon days, though bad as they were, Louisiana never tolerated the "Bar-Maids" before; therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we call upon the Board of Christian Education in every pastoral charge to consider seriously the matter of co-operating with the high schools of the State in the enforcement of Senate Bill 118 of the regular session of the Louisiana Legislature in 1934, which bill provides that beginning with the eighth grade on through the remainder of the high school work, the evil effects of alcohol and narcotics should be taught in the public schools of Louisiana; be it further

RESOLVED, that we respectfully request the Parent Teachers' Association of Louisiana and all the local organizations of the Parent Teachers' Association throughout the State, to co-operate with the principals of the high schools and the teachers in carrying out the provision of this law; be it further

RESOLVED, that we call upon the pastors and all churches throughout the District to keep before the general public the attitude of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, toward the liquor traffic as is clearly shown by the Act of the General Conference held at Jackson, Mississippi in 1934. And in order to do this, we request that every pastor, where at all practicable, set aside a time when he, or someone selected by him, will bring this important matter before the people.

Respectfully submitted:

R. F. HARRELL,

C. D. ATKINSON,

W. R. HARVELL,

Committee.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Revelation 22:11. He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

1: "The tie is at hand." The time is approaching when men's characters will be left as they are found. "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still. He that is filthy, let him be filthy still." There is a class of characters fixed and sealed for eternity. "And he that is righteous, let him be righteous still, and he that is holy let him be holy still."

Ezekiel 20:39—As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God: Go ye serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also if you will not hearken unto me." It is a sad thing when Ephriam is joined to his idols and God lets him alone.

Daniel 12:10—O my Lord; what shall be the end of these things, and he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified and made white, and tried, but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand.

No principle of life remains stationary. It unfolds and develops according to its nature, rising to greater heights of good if it be good, sinking to greater depths of evil if it be evil.

2: In our text, each class is distinguished by characteristic epithets. (1) The unholy are spoken of as UNJUST AND FILTHY. God has a claim upon every heart. If God makes a law which is holy, just and good, has He not a right to expect it to be universally obeyed? God does not minimize sin. He calls the sinner "filthy." Paul wrote to the Corinthians, "Let no filthy communication proceed out of your mouth." In his epistle to Timothy he referred to "greed and filthy lucre." Lot in Sodom was in "filthy" conversation with the wicked. Paul wrote, "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit." Sin is an abominable and defiling thing.

(2) God speaks of a second class, the RIGHTEOUS AND HOLY.

Christ fulfilled all righteousness. "Through the obedience of One shall many be made righteous." The Holy Spirit creates men unto holiness, brings them to hate sin—to mortify lust, to separate from the world.

Whom Christ justifies, the Spirit also sanctifies. "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." Whoever is justified through Christ will be righteous.

3. Note the word STILL. He that is unjust will be unjust STILL. He that is filthy will be filthy STILL. He that is holy will be holy STILL. God gives the reward ACCORDING AS HIS WORK SHALL BE. (Verse 23).

We see the principle of the fixity of character developed here. It is more difficult to change the heart, the older a person becomes. So we see how that character becomes finally fixed.

Now is the time for repentance. This is the day of grace.

PRAYER

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for today with its opportunities. We realize that tomorrow grows out of today. Eternal issues hang in our present thoughts, words, and deeds. Help us to build our character that we shall not be afraid of the unending sequence that follows. In Jesus name we offer our prayer.

PINEVILLE, LA.

I would like for the readers of the Advocate to hear something about the work of our Methodist Church here. Under the spiritual leadership of Rev. R. F. Harrell, we can see some great improvement in the church work.

We enjoyed a week of evangelistic preaching as a pre-Easter service, Brother Harrell doing the preaching. Much interest was manifested by the church.

A Wesley Brotherhood has been organized with about forty members. This organization is adding to our church. A banquet was given in honor of the Brotherhood which was very much enjoyed. We had the pleasure of enjoying the presence of Presiding Elder Briscoe Carter and Rev. N. E. Joyner as guests at the banquet.

A mid-week prayer service is being held each Wednesday night. During this month, we are to observe "Golden Cross Week." Also the 4th Sunday is to be Church School Day. Committees are making arrangements to make this a most interesting day to our school.

A Mothers Day program is also being planned for Mother's Day. May is to be a very busy month in our church.

Our church was well represented at the District Conference which met in Alexandria last week.

With many good wishes for the Advocate.

(MISS) LAU LEE.

In Memoriam

MRS. MATILDAY GOFF

Mrs. Matilday Goff was born December 20, 1862 and died March 15, 1935. She was 72 years, 2 months and 23 days old. She was the mother of eight children. Four boys and four girls. Two of these have gone to that home above, six are still living, three boys and three girls, twelve grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She was married to J. B. Goff on January 26, 1882. This union continued for 53 years, 1 month and 17 days. She joined the Methodist Church early in life and lived a consecrated Christian up to the time of her death. Her home was the preacher's home, and a glad welcome always waited them. Many pastors of years in the past who have gone to their reward and the present pastor can testify to her kind hospitality. Two weeks before her death she called her children and her neighbors that were there visiting her to her bedside, holding each one by the hand and told them how she loved each one and wanted them to live a Christian life, knowing she was soon to depart. Her heart's desire was to tell them all while still able to talk. In her departure the husband and children mourn the loss of the dearest friend—a loving mother. The Church a loyal and faithful member and the community a kind and gracious neighbor. Earth's loss is Heaven's gain. We shall know where to find her on the glorious resurrection morn. Her body lies in the tomb near her home by the side of her loved ones who have gone on to that home above while the spirit is with God where some sweet day the meeting can be to part no more through eternity.

Her pastor,

N. S. LOFTUS.

MRS. W. M. McINTOSH

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has translated from the Church militant to the Church triumphant Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, who was a loyal member of Central Church, a faithful member of the board of stewards, a valued member of the Missionary Society, a beloved counselor of our young people, and a devoted follower of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore be it resolved:

First, We bow in humble submission to the will of God and thank him for the privilege of having known Sister McIntosh and being associated with her in the work of the Kingdom.

Second, That we feel keenly our loss in her translation, and offer our sincere sympathy to Brother McIntosh and their loved ones.

Third, That a page be set aside in the records of the Quarterly Conference and the minutes of the Board of Stewards for these resolutions, and that copies be sent to Brother W. M. McIntosh and the daughters, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the Nashville Christian Advocate for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

REV. T. B. THROWER,

MRS. G. W. CARSON,

MR. W. G. VAUGHAN,

MR. GEORGE PULLEN.

ABBEVILLE'S NEW PARSONAGE

The people of the Abbeville charge have done such a splendid thing that I want all of the Methodists of Louisiana to know about it. No longer do they have to apologize for a dilapidated parsonage as many other places have done and are still doing. No sir, they made up their minds that their pastor, the Rev. Ellis Smith and his wife, should have both a beautiful and a comfortable home, one to which they could point with pride and say that's where our minister lives.

Within an incredibly short time the old parsonage was razed and under the capable supervision of G. P. Sledge, a master builder, a beautiful new home was erected, containing a comfortable screened porch, a large reception room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast porch, library, sun parlor or sleeping porch, two bed rooms with bath between, and a drive-in-garage. The entire house is beautifully arranged and artistically finished and furnished. I have never seen a group of people work so enthusiastically upon any project. Dr. Smith quickly won the admiration and support not only of the Methodist people of Abbeville and Kaplan, but of the entire community. His energy, enthusiasm, knowledge, tact and other qualities of leadership have won for him a high place in the hearts of the people whom he serves. Mr. V. L. Caldwell, chairman of the board of stewards and of the building committee, says "that the successful completion of this enterprise without debt, is due more to the pastor than any other human source, he, having made so many friends, not only in the congregation, but in the community at large." This is a high tribute for a layman to pay to his pastor, but we also know that much credit is due to the generosity and loyalty of the people. There is not enough space to name all who deserve to be mentioned, but this beautiful house standing in the midst of beautiful shrubbery and flowers speaks eloquently of a noble and liberal people, for this little congregation, assisted by Kaplan and a number of friends over the state contributed more than $3,000 to erect this parsonage. To indicate the fine spirit and the general interest manifested, every carpenter and brick mason who were employed donated one day's labor. Roman Catholics, and Jews became interested and volunteered contributions.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith are to be congratulated upon having such a lovely home and the pastors who may follow them will have cause to be glad that Ellis Smith passed that way and led the people to do such a noble thing.

Methodism in Abbeville is not very strong in numbers, but it is strong in influence and we may confidently expect that Dr. and Mrs. Smith will be able to command the co-operation of the people in the prosecution of the great spiritual tasks of the church. They are not unmindful of the labors of those who have preceded them in that field, and I am sure that they appreciate, as we all do, the faithful labors of those predecessors. When any reader of the Advocate passes through Abbeville, call by the Methodist parsonage and see one of the best in the state. The Smiths are charming hosts.

THE NEW FEAR is the subject of an address delivered in Washington, D. C., on May 1, by Mr. Wendel L. Wilkie, a representative of the utilities interest of the Country. Mr. Wilkie complains of a Federal bureaucracy regulation which is destroying the wealth represented in utility enterprises, while it builds up a government monopoly of the industries which are vital to recovery and progress. He does not deny that there have been wrongs committed by the utility interests, but he does not think that destruction is either a just or an effective remedy.

A service is to be held in every congregation on June 9, and a united service in all great centers on June 10. From June 9 to 16 a Thank-offering will be received in all churches, and it is earnestly hoped that enough may be realized to materially reduce the missionary deficit and to hold their missionary operations at the present level of operation.

ON MAY 6, KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY celebrated their Silver Jubilee as sovereigns of the British Empire. The crown of England has been largely shorn of prerogative and political power; but no sovereigns have more fully exemplified the common human virtues, have been more democratic in their spirit, or were more beloved by the people of the Empire than are King George and Queen Mary. The accession of King George was at a time of political turmoil, he was not more than established on his throne before the World War broke out, and his reign has witnessed a complete revolution of the life and thought of the world.

OUR AMERICAN DREYFUS CASE is the title of a brochure published by the "Inter-Religious Committee for Justice for Thomas J. Mooney." Mooney was convicted for his part in an explosion during a Preparedness Parade in San Francisco, on July 22, 1916. The case has been bitterly contested and this extra-judicial effort is evidence of public interest in the case. After twenty years have gone by, it is hardly possible to state an opinion that might do justice to all parties; but it is difficult to believe that the courts and commissions which have handled the case were wholly corrupt, or that the effort to try the case before an uninformed public is calculated to prove beneficial or to promote order and stability in the administration of justice.

CHINA WITH ONE-FIFTH OF THE POPULATION of the world has only one dental school, and fewer than one hundred dentists with degrees from recognized institutions, says the North China Herald. Almost all the practitioners are in the cities and towns, and China's population is ninety per cent rural. The dental school is in Chengtu, a city of nearly a million inhabitants, located on the borders of Tibet. It is a part of the famous West China Union University, a co-operative effort of Christian denominations organized in 1910.

THE PRICE OF LEAD advanced three dollars per ton recently, and according to press dispatches, this is a price record for the year. Perhaps the producers surmised that lead might be used for money with which to pay the bonus. The conjecture offered was that it might be an anticipation of paint needs for government financial enterprises and for battery needs occasioned by activity in the motor industry. Such may be the road to recovery but one can imagine that it may be the road to an unhappy discovery for many short-sighted and improvident folk.

THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING COMPANY, in announcing its new policy for Commercial programs promises to prohibit in its children's programs anything that would tend to lionize gangsters, suggest disrespect for parental authority, the exploitation of others, or the making of dishonesty and deceit attractive to a child. ### JANE ADDAMS

Jane Addams, creator of Hull House, president of the International League of Peace, joint winner of the Nobel peace prize, author, lecturer, social reformer and friend of humanity, is dead. Her death followed an operation in a Chicago hospital. It appeared for a time that her useful life might be spared, but toil and time had made such subtractions from her physical vigor that she was unable to withstand the shock of her last ordeal. Quietly, unobtrusively, beautifully she passed into the great beyond to hear from the lips of her Saviour himself: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." The ladder upon which she rose to fame was the social settlement in Chicago known as Hull House. It was established in 1889, she guided its destiny to the day of her death, and from its modest court her body will be borne to the tomb. It is said that a stable in New York City was so transformed by the genius of the late Stanford White that it became a rendezvous for lovers of the beautiful. Jane Addams transformed a junk-shop and a tenement house in the midst of a poverty-stricken population, and made of it an international shrine of social reform. In her passing, the world has lost its greatest practical social architect, World Peace an advocate worthy of the cause, philanthropy a great executive, and humanity a loyal and unselfish friend. She was known and honored around the world, and her name will be inscribed with those of John Howard, Florence Nightingale, and Frances E. Willard, as outstanding benefactors of the race and as leaders whose achievements are not measured by time nor bounded by national horizons. If it be said that her life was given largely to a local enterprise, the answer is that such was but the laboratory in which she perfected her social ideals and the clinic in which she demonstrated the social methods which have so largely influenced that field of endeavor. Her work was no process of rehabilitation, for it looked to the conservation of all the resources of life—the unwasted treasure of the manhood and womanhood of the whole world. Along with the falling tears of a world bereaved, are feelings of gratitude to God for so great and precious a gift as Jane Addams.

LAWRENCE OF ARABIA

In the passing of Lawrence of Arabia, the whole world feels a sense of loss and personal bereavement. Winston Churchill said of his death, "No such blow has befallen the Empire for many years as his untimely death. The personal sorrow of all who knew him is deepened by national impoverishment." But the fascination of Lawrence of Arabia is an entirely different matter from that of the ordinary hero. He was born in Wales; at Oxford University, he was an inconspicuous student of archaeology; and for more than a quarter of a century he was an elusive and even a mysterious personality. It is said that there were zones of silence in his life to which even his closest friends were not admitted. In 1909 he made a walking tour through Syria, which seems to have been the beginning of his strange fondness for the sands of the desert. No man ever had greater opportunity to exploit the public than did he, but he steadfastly refused to turn his fame into a fortune, and he died poor. His sudden emergence from obscurity was as the leader of the famous camel-mounted Arabian raiders who swept over the hills of Palestine and broke the power of the Turk with a smashing victory which completed Allenby's conquest of that age-old field of battle. Strangely enough the British War Office had rejected him for service at the front, and he was left as a second Lieutenant in Cairo. He then secured a transfer to the Arab bureau, and it was from that post that he swept up at the head of those daring sons of the desert and made for himself a place in the affections of the whole world. But when his beloved Arabia was denied independence and Syria was partitioned, his resentment was so deep that he stripped the British decorations from his Arab costume and returned them to King George. Once again he became the mystery man of the burning wastes. His last public service was in the British Air Force where he was enlisted as "T. E. Shaw." Four months ago he retired to a small cottage in England, and from that modest home he rode forth to his death on Monday, May 13. He fell incognito, he never regained consciousness, and the most unique and glamorous figure of modern times went on his last adventure wrapped in the silence characteristic of his strange career.

A LETTER TO MISSISSIPPI PASTORS

My Dear Friends and Brothers: The prompt and united effort of Mississippi Methodism last summer made it possible for us to reduce the debt at the Orphanage by approximately one-half of the total amount. I thank you and through you your people for prompt and decisive action in this important matter.

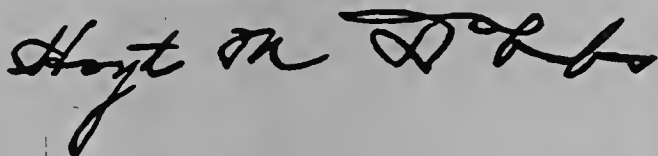

We must now address ourselves to the completion of the task by a method differing somewhat from that of last year.

Judge Watkins and the Board of Directors have drawn a plan which merits the approval and the response of us all. In a very short time we can, by uniting upon this new proposal, again greatly reduce our obligations to our creditors and insure the future of the Home.

I am, therefore, inviting you and your people to join me in this effort to keep faith with "His Little Ones" and also to uphold the honor and credit of the Church in the financial world.

Thanking you, I am,

Faithfully yours,

MARCEL ARMAND, A ROMANCE OF OLD LOUISIANA

This work of fiction, a first extensive literary venture of Mrs. Sallie Lee Bell, will be released by L. C. Page & Co., Boston, on June 3. Mrs. Bell is a long resident of New Orleans, a member of First Methodist Church, and is thoroughly conversant with the tradition and history which she has woven into a fascinating story. The title of the book is a mere name. As the author states, it is not a historical novel. It is an entertaining reproduction of the backgrounds of that quaint old French city and its environs. It is probably as good a recreation of the atmosphere of Louisiana as can be found anywhere. It assembles in a remarkably effective manner the duelling under the Code of Honor, the piracy of the Lafitte organization, the Voodoo worship of the Negroes, and the religious backgrounds of those stirring and romantic times. The scene is laid in the days of the War of 1812 and Pakenham's attack upon New Orleans, when the prisoners were paroled and became the defenders of the city under Andrew Jackson. This book will have a distinct appeal for one interested in the traditions and the quaint customs of the settlements on the lower Mississippi. It is worthwhile as a study of the Louisiana of that period.

RELIGION BY PROXY

There is a small body of Christians who still practice foot-washing as a duty enjoined by the Savior, who washed his disciples' feet. Such used to be an annual custom of the Roman Pontiff, and of many of the sovereigns of Europe. It is said that Queen Elizabeth washed the feet of twelve paupers after her menials had washed them with warm water and sweet herbs. William III turned the job over to his almoner, and for nearly two hundred years gifts of money have been made a substitute for the service. Whatever one may think of such an imitative custom as foot-washing, and we frankly admit that the act itself might mean little, the fact remains that there is no substitute for direct contact with the objects of our spiritual concern. It is not what we give in a detached and an impersonal way, but what we share in sympathetic and understanding service that is truly Christian. We can not achieve by proxy that which sent the Savior to Calvary.

ACCURACY

By Rev. W. R. Lott

No man can be really dependable unless he is accurate. It is valuable whatever it may cost. Because it is costly it is rare. The business man has learned that it is dangerous to employ an inaccurate man or woman. The exact amount must be charged to the particular person. One inch out of line in the foundation of the great building and all other relations of materials are misfits. The lawyer knows that his opponent will grasp his error and reverse the case. The surgeon cannot afford to guess where that artery is located; he must know. The pharmacist may scan his bottles and use this or that, but he must answer to the law for his contaminations. How delightful to the ear is perfect music. The sensitive human receiver gives back its joyous thrills from gentle rhythmic strokes. It was said of a gifted speaker: "He speaks as if he were making a beautiful pattern placing living words in arranged mosaics;" and of another, "His words seem to be selected to portray shades of emotions." However the person who never makes a mistake may become a machine. Really there is something human about one who makes errors and acknowledges them. After all the most delightful character is the person who in most every way strives for accuracy but knows enough about himself that he often forgets where he left his hat and frequently can't think of the name but he is very, very good in remembering faces.

IF I HAD MONEY

By A. W. Bryan

There are many things I would like to do with it, but as I have traveled over Louisiana I have viewed with sadness and considerable concern the large number of unused (in some cases dilapidated) Methodist churches in the small towns and rural districts where a regular pastor can no longer be supported and the conference has not been able to send a pastor to these places. Many of these communities no longer come in contact with the preacher. Many of the people are poor and unable to attend a city church or nearby town church. Consequently the people who need the gospel and the community life and influence of the church become indifferent and the morals of the country community are no longer of the high standard they once were. At one time our preachers and great leaders came from the rural communities.

This is all brought about by a changed order of things that no one has a solution for, as yet, and I would not presume to be able to answer the question. Our preachers are now all grouped in towns and cities and while people in rural communities seem to be willing to go to "town" for everything else in the world they do not go to town in any appreciable number for religious tonic.

If I had money to carry out the idea I would build a cottage near these deserted Methodist Churches and offer it as a home for our superannuate preachers. Many of these preachers need something to do and above all—responsibility. As they were able they could preach to the people, perhaps keep a Sunday school going, do some visiting as they were able, bury the dead and marry the folks who call on them. Such a home, in nearly every case I know of, could be built on a good highway with many of the conveniences of the city. I believe there are many of our preachers who would be glad to occupy such a home and at the same time would encourage the community to keep up their church property and I have no doubt but that these good people would be kind to the preacher in the way of supplementing his payments from the Superannuate Fund. I would not burden such a preacher with any reports or obligation to the Annual Conference. The fact that he lived in these communities doing only such work as he felt like doing would be worth a lot to the church.

As an example of what I have in mind—at Bayou

Chicot, La., we have one of the oldest Methodist churches in Louisiana located on a hard surfaced road. Would be a beautiful place to live. Electric lights (and perhaps gas) are available. Only a short drive to Bunkie or Ville Platte. Many fine old families live around Bayou Chicot. What would be more ideal than a neat little home at such a place for the retired person? The church is sadly neglected here and should be preserved as a landmark. There are many such churches in Louisiana.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT

I wonder whether General Superintendents of the Church School, especially of the larger churches, realize what a wonderful opportunity we have for service, service in the Kingdom of God. Do you know there are few greater opportunities, for in this place one comes directly in contact with several hundred people of all ages, both students and teachers, with one purpose, to learn more of the Bible, of God's plan and will for them, and of the teachings of Jesus as revealing and showing how to live that will.

There should be of course in the modern Church School a persistent effort to carry out God's will and the teachings of His Son by providing projects or spontaneous activities carrying out in daily living the truth developed in the lesson or study. Here perhaps is where we fail most. We have grown to be rather adept in giving our students a fairly good knowledge of the Bible, of the stories and incidents therein and of many of the teachings of Jesus, but do we take the next step, a most important one, of getting these things over into the daily living, into all areas of daily life? The things that are taught must not be taught as facts having happened 1900 years ago or more but as vital truths that must be lived in all their implications today.

Superintendents who are keeping up with modern educational ideas must encourage their teachers constantly to develop through the initiative of the children and young people in the different classes certain projects that will form experiences in living the "Jesus Way." Some of these projects may be for the class alone, some for the Division, some for the whole school. Last Christmas we had a most wonderful experience in West Point in all helping in a definite plan to bring joy to our cotton mill people, the mill having been closed for some time and the people desperate. Is it not wonderful to realize what a devoted band of teachers and officers, young people's officers too, are lined up, working together with the Superintendent to give of their best in helping others to understand and live more of the Kingdom, all giving of their time and talent in service of the Master?

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

By L. P. Brown

I desire nothing that would break me with the ties of the past: yet, I live entirely in the present, and take only occasional excursions into the past. I was made aware, at the recent session of the Meridian District Conference, that there was not present or on its roll, or on that of the Mississippi Annual Conference, a single person who was there when I was first a lay delegate.

Dr. J. A. Smith, the Presiding Elder, gave us a phenomenal session. Dispatch, dignity, spirituality, and a genuine brotherly spirit were in evidence throughout. There was an advance along all lines. The Holy Spirit's continuous presence in illuminating and guiding power.

Have been a reader of "The Advocate" from early childhood days, and a subscriber in my own home for perhaps more than 60 years. Improvement in paper is noted. The goal must be reached.

Meridian, Miss.

WE ARE CROWDED

The Advocate has a volume of material which will require a little time to reach. This is particularly true with reference to District Conference reports and obituaries. Please do not get impatient, as we expect to publish all material which is not so long as to make it impossible, and in the order of its receipt.

NOTICE TO THE PASTORS OF GREENWOOD DISTRICT

Dear Brethren: Our next Preachers' Meeting meets at Glendora, June 4. Every preacher and his wife are cordially invited to attend this meeting. We plan to have a picnic dinner under the shade of the trees for all of you. Do not disappoint us. We are expecting you.

A. R. BEASLEY, Pastor-host.

CAMPAIGN ECHOES

"I may not be the first to report our Advocate quota, but I believe we were the first charge in the territory to secure it. . . . Dr. Countiss' comment on the Sunday school lesson did it here at Kilmichael, Miss., and I feel that we will double our quota. We are expecting a great revival, beginning June 2, with our P. E., Brother McIlwain, doing the preaching."—J. R. Murr, P. C.

* * *

"We are hard at work on the Advocate campaign and expect the Hattiesburg District to go over the top in a few weeks. The subscriptions ought to be pouring in by this time. We have conducted four very enthusiastic meetings in various parts of the district in the interest of the Advocate."—Victor G. Clifford, P. E.

* * *

The first list of subscriptions to reach our office came on the second day of the campaign, May 2, from Hernando, Miss., Sardis-Grenada District, Rev. W. N. Dodds, pastor. The list of 22 was more than double the quota of 9 for this charge.

* * *

The first month of the campaign has already passed. Encouraging reports from nearly every section of Mississippi and Louisiana have been received. We are anticipating a great response before the close of the campaign, July 1. Pastors who have not already done so can secure lists of present subscribers, giving their expiration dates, and sample copies of the Advocate by dropping a card to the Business Manager. You will find these a big help in securing your quota.

WARNING TO OUR PASTORS

Our pastors are hereby warned to be on their guard against "Chief Red Eagle," professing to be a medical missionary to the Esquimax Indians, at Port Barrow, Alaska. He is tall, very dark, coarse hair, weights about 150 pounds, professes to be an Esquimaux Indian, graduate of Cornell University, speaks six languages, a ready speaker, and claims to be trying to locate a site for an Indian college. He jumped his hotel bill, bought and drank whiskey, appeared before my congregation and made a good impression. Claims to be 73 years old, does not look it, but looks the part of an Indian.

H. N. BROWN.

Ponchatoula, La.

The year 1934 saw the new brick station church at Wembo Nyama in the Congo Mission almost completed. Prior to this time the station church had been a large open shed, similar to those in the out-villages. The new brick church with dark gray slate roofing was made possible by the gifts of missionaries and the free labor of many native Christians.

conditions confronting the church, offered a series of five resolutions, recommending to all the Annual Conferences the establishment of literary institutions under their own control as soon as practicable; and making it the special duty of the bishops to use their influence to carry the recommendations into effect in the Annual Conferences. The effect of this action was to renew the interest of the Methodists in the cause of education and to increase the power and reach of the message of its ministry.

The General Conference met again in Baltimore, May 1, 1824. The session was less aggressive than had been that of 1820. For nearly a month, the Conference mulled over the problems and troubles handed forward from other sessions, and did almost nothing toward setting forth the vital interests of the church. The vexing questions growing out of Canadian relations since the war with England were still an issue before the church. John Emory, who was appointed delegate to the British Conference, was given instructions to seek to make an adjustment of the controversy. He reported to the General Conference of 1824 an agreement by which Lower Canada was to be released to the British Wesleyan Conference, and Upper Canada was to be retained as an Annual Conference under the superintendence of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. This partial settlement was adopted, but it only carried the issue forward to succeeding Conferences. In 1828 a resolution was passed in which it was agreed to erect Upper Canada into a separate church, provided that the Upper Canada Annual Conference should express such a desire. This action was carried into effect and the financial claims were finally adjusted by a trade agreement made in 1836. The confusion which resulted from the lack of a tribunal for determining the constitutionality of an elective presiding eldership led to an effort to clothe the bishops with a limited veto power, but such a measure did not become law in the Church, South, until 1870, and four years later in the Church, North.

About this time a group of men, around Baltimore and Philadelphia, became active and aggressive in their opposition to Methodist polity. They designated themselves "Reformers." Among them were such men as Nicholas Snethen, Asa Shinn, Dr. Samuel K. Jennings, William S. Stockton, and Alexander McCaine. Their immediate plea was for equal lay participation in the government of the church, but their attacks were aimed at everything which had the appearance of what they termed "exclusive clerical authority." Their organizations were called "Union Societies," and the movement resulted in the formation of the Methodist Protestant Church which we will discuss later. In 1824 the Reformers presented a number of memorials and petitions to the General Conference. These were referred to a committee of twelve who declined to recommend the enactment of a law for lay representation. The report of the committee recommended a circular answer to the petitioners which, to them, was more evasive than convincing. The Conference reaffirmed the recommendations of 1820 concerning the establishment of institutions of learning, and upon pastors it urged the duty of helping to secure for all schools, teachers who were both competent and religiously sound.

Two bishops were elected, Joshua Soule and Elijah Hedding. Of this election, Dr. James Buckley said: "Soule had demonstrated himself to be the most dominating personality, except Asbury, in the history of American Methodism. Practically the father of the constitution, he declined to pledge himself to comply with an unconstitutional law, resigned, and refused to withdraw his resignation, and yet, after the rancorous discussion of four years, was the first elected." It is probably no exaggeration to say that episcopal Methodism owes more to Joshua Soule than to any other man. He framed the constitution for the representative form of government under which it still operates; he was one of the leading spirits in the organization of the Missionary Society; he defeated the elective presiding eldership which he believed to be unconstitutional and subversive of the episcopacy; although a New Englander, he fearlessly joined fortunes with the Southern Church when it was set up under the action of 1844; and throughout his long career he was a man of bold independence. Bishop Hedding was a good and an able man, but not of the heroic type of Joshua Soule. He gave the Church a worthy administration, but always under the handicap of poor health. Both he and Soule hesitated to accept ordination, but they were finally prevailed upon to yield to the wishes of their brethren.

The discontent of the Reformers on account of the failure of their appeals was soon to bear fruit. While the General Conference of 1824 was in session, the Reformers held a convention in Baltimore, and they resolved to establish a periodical to be called The Mutual Rights of the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This publication was to replace the Methodist Repository which had been established in 1821 by William R. Stockton, a pious layman of Philadelphia. It was to be devoted to the advocacy of a more democratic form of government for the Methodist Church, and particularly the introduction of the laity into its control. The new publication stirred up opposition and bitterness to such an extent that Dennis P. Dorsey and William C. Pool were expelled from the Baltimore Conference and about fifty women withdrew from the Methodist churches of the city. In 1827 another convention was held in Baltimore, at which time a memorial was sent to the approaching General Conference; an address to the public was drawn up; and a committee named to draft a constitution. Failing to accomplish their wish at the General Conference, a third convention was held in Baltimore on November 2, 1830. There were eighty-three delegates present, and the Methodist Protestant Church was organized. At the first General Conference of the new Church, held in Baltimore, May 6, 1834, seventeen preachers and fourteen lay delegates were in attendance. Ten Conferences were represented and the record for the quadrennium showed fourteen Conferences with 26,587 members. It is probable that the membership had been drawn largely from the ranks of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

A development which belongs to this period was the organization of the Methodist Sunday School Society, chartered April 1, 1827. This organization resulted partly from the need for a more direct and authoritative control than could be secured through the American Sunday School Union; but it was in part due, no doubt, to the spirit of denominational controversy developing at that time. The Episcopalians were not affiliated with the Union, and an interdenominational organization could not long adapt itself to the sharp differences of those who were arrayed in doctrinal contests. During this period, Methodism lost two of its most distinguished and useful pioneer preachers. On March 10, 1826, Philip Bruce died in Giles County, Tennessee; and on September 26, 1827, Freeborn Garrettson, the Paul Revere of Methodism, died in New York City. These were practically the last of the pioneers. They lived to see the Church a mighty religious army of nearly four hundred thousand members, covering the entire land from the Atlantic seaboard to the remotest settlement in the far West and from the warm and genial South to far away Canada.

The second General Conference to be held outside the city of Baltimore convened in Pittsburg, May 1, 1828. The session was not notable for its legislative achievements; but was largely occupied with controversies that were ending and the consideration of questions leading to issues for future settlement. As has been said already, the "suspended resolutions" regarding the election of presiding elders were rescinded by this Conference. A motion was made to reenact the same legislation, but it failed to carry. Bishop Hedding made complaint on account of slanderous misrepresentations of an address which he made before the Pittsburg Conference. The article complained of appeared in the Mutual Rights publication of the Reformers, and the complaint was sustained by the report of the Committee on Episcopacy. The convictions of Dennis P. Dorsey, William C. Pool and others, appealed to this Conference, were affirmed; and an agreement was reached which terminated our connectional relation with Canada. The Conference was troubled with agitations and petitions, mostly from the Genesee and New England Conferences, on the subject of "Speculative Freemasonry." The same subject was brought to the attention of the Conference of 1832 in petitions against "secret societies;" but in both instances the Conference declined to take action. One exceptional measure had for its purpose the making stable and continuous the work of Methodism in New Orleans. The frequent scourges of yellow fever made it difficult to maintain an effective ministry under the two-year tenure, and a law was made excepting the City from the operation of the rule. This exception was not removed until the General Conference of the Southern Church in 1870.

The period following the General Conference was one of agitation and controversy. The whole system of Methodist church government was attacked. Charges were made that Mr. Wesley and Adam Clarke had done violence to the Scriptures by a species of Biblical criticism calculated to destroy the authority of the Word of God. All this has a familiar sound to modern ears, but the names of Mr. Wesley and Adam Clarke no longer head the list of critics. At Augusta, Georgia, in January 1827, Bishop Soule preached a "masterly sermon on the Perfect Law of Liberty." In obedience to a resolution of the South Carolina Conference, the sermon was published. "When it appeared in print, it was reviewed in a series of articles written by a Presbyterian ministry of some parts, and published in the Charleston Observer." The charge of heresy which he brought against Bishop Soule was denunciatory, but poorly maintained and it ended as tirades usually do—Bishop Soule was exonerated and his critic forgotten. Despite the spirit of agitation, this was a period of solid growth. Thirty-eight thousand members were ceded to Canada, but there was a gain of more than one hundred and thirty-one thousand members during the four years. Even the agitations of the Reformers and the formation of the Methodist Protestant Church made no serious impact upon Methodist progress.

The General Conference of 1832 met in Philadelphia, May 1. Its great work relates to missions which we discuss in the next chapter. The temperance question was dealt with in a labored but vigorous report by Dr. Bascom. A resolution was passed to change the Restrictive Rule so that a minority in a single Conference might not defeat the will of the entire Church. A Book Depository was established in New Orleans, with

Mississippi and Louisiana

The graduating class of Millsaps College is made up of 83 members, 40 of them are young ladies, and 34 are from the city of Jackson.

Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Lewis, of Charleston, Miss., are at Depoy, Kentucky, where Brother Lewis is to assist their son, Donald, in a ten-day meeting.

Rev. R. C. Mayo, pastor at Sara, Miss., thinks that the Advocate is gaining ground in his charge, and he pledges to give of his best to increase its support.

Rev. E. V. Duplantis was in New Orleans recently looking for furniture for the parsonage secured in Jeanerette, La. We appreciated his call at the Advocate office.

Mrs. W. H. Cheairs, in requesting a change of address for her Advocate, says, "I wouldn't do without it for pay." Such appreciation helps to take the grind out of our task.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman will assist Rev. E. W. Day in a meeting at Vidalia beginning June 2, and at Harrisonburg and Sicily Island at later dates, according to report just received.

Mr. J. W. Hamner, of Water Valley, Miss., is chairman of the Advocate committee for his church and his report of May 17, accounts in detail for the mailing list of his charge.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell is planning for a Home-coming Day at Ocean Springs, Miss., on June 16. The editor regrets his inability to share the day and the hospitality of the pastor.

Bishop Charles L. Mead, of the Kansas City, Mo., area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, on June 2.

Hattiesburg District, of which Rev. Victor G. Clifford is the presiding elder, has divided the field into five groups for the Advocate campaign, and the captains are off to a good start.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Crisler visited their daughter, Miss Harriet Crisler, at Tupelo, Miss., recently; and Dr. Crisler preached on Sunday to the delight of Dr. Brooks and his people.

The eldest son of Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Brown of Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, will receive his Master's degree in history at Southern Methodist University this summer.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College will be held in Shreveport, May 29. Centenary College has had a very successful year, despite financial difficulties.

We are happy to be able to report that Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., whose illness was noted in a recent issue of the Advocate, is much improved. We trust that he may soon be back at his post.

Rev. W. J. Henley, pastor at Inverness and Isola, Miss., is in a revival at Isola this week. He is also planning to have his charge represented in the Standard Training School at Grenada, June 10-15.

Mr. W. H. L. Carruth, district lay leader, reports that his home charge, Sumrall, will send its Advocate quota—plus. That is fine and such a spirit throughout the field will bring our cause to victory.

Dr. H. F. Brooks, pastor at Tupelo, Miss., is assisting Rev. G. H. Boyles in a meeting at Houston, Miss. Dr. Brooks' pulpit was filled by Dr. W. P. Buhrman in the morning and Rev. Travis Filgo at the evening hour.

The Coast Group of the Seashore District pastors met at Bay St. Louis on May 21. Nine pastors were present. W. F. Baggett of Kreole was the preacher, and Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Felts of Grenada, Miss., were visitors.

Rev. W. H. Wallace, Jr., pastor of First Church, New Orleans, is assisting Dr. W. L. Doss in a meeting at Homer, La. No doubt there will be a quickening of the spiritual life of that little city under such leadership and preaching.

Rev. J. D. Wroten, presiding elder, has divided Corinth District into Zones 1, 2, and 3, for the Advocate, and J. V. Bennett, W. C. Mattox and S. E. Ashmore are the captains. Zone three has challenged the others to be first in securing its quota.

Rev. B. H. Andrews, New Iberia, La., sends notice of the death of Mr. S. F. Hale, his Church school superintendent and an official of the Church for nearly fifty years. Brother Andrews says that the church there seems to be growing in every way.

We regret to learn of the death of Carre, son of Rev. John L. Sutton of Jackson, Miss. No particulars have reached us, and we give only the fact that the many friends of Brother Sutton in Mississippi and Louisiana may know of his sorrow.

Marcel Armand is the title of a book of fiction dealing with Old New Orleans, by Mrs. Sallie Lee Bell, wife of Dr. T. P. Bell. Both of them are members of first Church, New Orleans; and the book being brought out by L. C. Page & Co., Boston, will be released for sale on June 3.

Reports to the Hattiesburg District Conference showed 116 received by vows and 203 by certificate. Percentages paid were, salaries 34, benevolences 34.4, District work 22.6, and $6,824.32 raised for churches and parsonages. Shubuta and Kingston Laurel were the two leading charges, on benevolences, and Broad St. Hattiesburg, made the best general report.

Conferences for Methodist Stewards will be held at Mt. Sequoyah July 4-7, and at Lake Junaluska July 21-28. The speakers at Mt. Sequoyah include Dr. R. P. Shuler, Bishop Paul Kern, Dr. Forney Hutchinson and others. At Lake Junaluska Bishops Edwin H. Hughes and Adna W. Leonard will re-enforce the list of speakers from our own church.

According to the Christian Education Advocate edited by Rev. W. C. Newman and Rev. R. G. Lord, North Mississippi Conference activities include a Training School and Pastors' Conference, June 10-15, and a Young People's Assembly, June 17-21—all at Grenada College. Outside speakers include Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, Dr. J. R. Spann, First Church, Baton Rouge; and Dr. Walter Anthony, of Travis Park, San Antonio.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

New ambition fired the members of the Hattiesburg Zone, of the Hattiesburg District, after their first meeting for the year, held April 29, in the Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg. Ten auxiliaries were represented, the attendance being 117. Mrs. R. E. Rollings, zone chairman, presided and the devotionals were given by Rev. T. O. Prewitt and Rev. C. A. Schultz. A report was made on the accomplishments of the zone for 1934 and goals stated for 1935. Mrs. Madelin Foster, superintendent of children's work, in the district, told of the Co-operative Plan. A most inspiring address was given by Mrs. J. T. Wallace, who served as chairman of the zone for five years, retiring to become president of the Main Street auxiliary. At the conclusion of the address Mrs. J. H. Muir sang a solo, "I Gave My Life for Thee" to which the reply came from the back of the balcony, when Mrs. Asa Bryant sang "Ready." Mrs. Rollings urged all to answer the call of the Master by being "Ready." Rev. H. S. Saucier, of New Augusta, dismissed the meeting with prayer, after which a social hour was enjoyed, during which the hostess society served delicious refreshments.

Since publishing the dates and places selected for the district meetings, Lumberton has been designated as the place for the meeting of the Seashore District, on June 4.

Mrs. Eurie M. Weston, our Conference superintendent of Christian Social Relations, calls attention to the Leadership Training School for negroes at Jackson College, Jackson, Miss., June 13-20. Each auxiliary is asked to assist some negro woman to attend. The registration fee is two dollars and room and board seven dollars.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The following letter from Mrs. Lockman presents a real challenge to the auxiliaries of the North Mississippi Conference. "Come up higher," it says, "Second place is not enough."

Corinth, Miss.,
May 20, 1935.

My Dead Co-workers:

It is with great earnestness I appeal to you at this time. We have made some very important changes in our study plan, having adopted "Council's Efficiency Aim" for our "Standard of Efficiency," because we the leaders at Conference and leaders at Council, "felt that we had reached a place in the development of our constituency where external rewards and prizes are not necessary as an incentive for work. Most of our women have a deep spiritual motive for service and will do ALL the "Efficiency Aim" calls for.

Our Conference has adopted this plan for Mission Study:

That if an Auxiliary has reached the "Efficiency Aim" in all other points in the Missionary Society, and takes at least one book for Council Credits, it has attained the Honor Roll.

June 10 to 15 we are to have our Training School at Grenada, with Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, as instructor. We are to study "The Other America," a course on Latin America, and re-study our Council Certificate requirements.

The result of our study will be passed on to other Auxiliaries through Coaching Days and Zone Meetings. The Coaching Days are to follow this school as soon as possible.

It is very necessary for YOUR Mission Study Leader to take this course, and we urge her attendance of the School.

The expense will be transportation and $5.00 for board. Bring towels and bed linens.

Hoping to meet you at Grenada.

Faithfully yours,

MRS. M. T. LOCKMAN,
Conf. Supt., Mission Bible Study.

P. S.—Any Auxiliary having finished "Orientals in America" and wishing to dispose of the book, please notify Mrs. R. P. Neblet, Brooksville, Miss.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETING

The District Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, will meet at Lumberton, Miss., Tuesday, June 4, at 10 a. m.

MRS. L. J. POWER,
District Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA

Monroe District, of the Louisiana Conference, made a report at the District Conference which reflects great credit upon the leadership of Rev. H. L. Johns, the presiding elder. It showed careful organization—of the entire work.

The Northern Group of Seashore District met at Poplarville, May 16. Rev. H. A. Gatlin was the preacher for the occasion. Rev. G. H. Thompson and Rev. W. H. Saunders made addresses on various phases of church work, and Rev. L. J. Power conducted a round table discussion after lunch had been served by the ladies of the church. The next meeting will be at Picayune, September 24.

Rev. J. A. Alford, of Istrouma, La., writes that both Mrs. Alford and Mrs. K. W. Dodson are improving from their accident which occurred some time ago, both of them still carry reminders of the mishap. The Board of Stewards had Brother Alford turn in his car and it was replaced with a new one—a generous remembrance of a faithful and deserving pastor.

The editor acknowledges the invitation of Miss Sue Ellen, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Robt. M. Brown of Shreveport, to be present at her graduation from High School, May 29. Accompanying the invitation is a note from Mrs. Brown which is signed, "The proud and happy mother." To mother and daughter alike, we extend sincere felicitations and all good wishes.

THE ADULT DIVISION OF THE LOCAL CHURCH

The month of May is suggested by the General Board of Christian Education as the time when Adult Classes should emphasize the Home and Foreign Missionary enterprise. It would not be amiss for each adult class to set aside one Sunday during this month to study the "how" and "why" of the Home and Foreign Missionary enterprise. Program material may be found in pamphlet No. 414-H issued by the General Board, "How We Share in the Home and Foreign Enterprise," and a special missionary poster.

Adult classes may participate in this enterprise in either or both of the following two ways: (1) By a monthly missionary offering. The Discipline requires that every class of every Sunday school shall take an offering one Sunday (preferably the fourth), in every month for the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise or for some other jointly sanctioned project of the Boards of Missions and Christian Education. The adult class can therefore direct its offering to the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise by so instructing the general secretary of the Church school. (2) By buying shares in the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. At the beginning of each Church school year each adult class can apply to the General Board of Christian Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for any number of shares in the Home and Foreign Enterprise (in units of $10). The adult class then pays for those shares by the end of the year. This may be done by private subscription, public offering, or directing the monthly fourth Sunday offering to this channel.

The adult class in so participating in the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise helps to make possible the following work:

(1) In the foreign field forty-five per cent of the total amount is spent as follows:

a. It supports training work similar in nature to our Standard and Cokesbury Training Schools.

b. It conducts local, district, and conference-wide institutes for teachers and other workers in Christian education.

c. It helps to provide literature for use in Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues in all foreign fields, translating, producing, and publishing it in the language of the people.

d. It supports field workers in our foreign fields, whose duties are similar to those of the executive secretaries of Christian education in our home conferences.

e. It provides for special workers with young people in Korea, Japan, and Europe.

f. It helps to provide for large numbers of Daily Vacation Bible Schools in many of our foreign mission fields.

g. It provides a full-time worker who as Joint Secretary of Christian Education in Foreign Fields renders full-time service in helping local churches in our foreign mission fields develop a more adequate program of Christian education.

h. In addition to all the above, it supports a large section of our general missionary work in China and Africa.

(2) In the home field forty-five per cent of the offering is spent so as to accomplish the following:

a. It supports extension secretaries in all the Annual Conferences save two. These persons work with presiding elders and pastors in promoting the work of Christian education in the smaller churches and in the neglected areas of the homeland.

b. It organizes Sunday schools in rural, industrial, and other missionary areas. There are now 2,760 Methodist churches that have no Sunday schools, with many unchurched areas which should be occupied.

c. It promotes the work of Christian education among the Indians of our Indian Mission. Two Indian missionaries are employed at the present time.

d. It provides institutes for the workers in hundreds of small churches which have hitherto had no training opportunities for their officers and teachers.

e. It conducts Cokesbury Training Schools in hundreds of smaller churches, giving them training opportunities for their workers. During the year just closed 12,115 Cokesbury units of credit were issued.

f. It shares in the support of Paine College and in other educational work for Negroes.

g. It helps to provide our own Methodist literature for struggling churches unable to provide their own materials.

(3) The remaining ten per cent is used by the General Board of Christian Education in providing a general program of missionary education for the entire Church.

FROM OAKDALE, LA.

Our Easter services this year were preceded by a week of prayer prior to the preaching services held by the pastor during Holy Week.

The sunrise communion service has been held for a number of years and has become almost a tradition with this congregation. The electrically-lighted cross decorated with flowers, up on the back wall facing the audience, with the seven-candlestick electric candelabra on the communion table behind the chancel, the two white candles on the piano and two on the pulpit, furnished the light. Vases of roses were artistically arranged and placed on the altar and elsewhere.

Shortly after 5:15 a. m. the people began quietly to slip into their seats until the crowd had gathered. Everything was still. About 5:30 the pastor announced the hymn, "Take Time to Be Holy," after the singing of which all bowed for prayer. Then a graphic word picture was given of the events following the crucifixion to the ascension, as related in the four Gospels. A solo, "Into the Garden My Master Went," followed, and then the invitation for the sacrament was read and the communion was served. The ten children who were received into full membership on Palm Sunday were invited to take their first communion at the first table. Many communicants brought their blessing boxes containing their Lenten sacrificial offering for missions up to the altar with them. It was a most beautiful and worshipful service, and some said that more than the usual number attended this year.

Our attendance reached a new high-water mark, and the orphanage offering for the day amounted to over $35.

At eleven o'clock the pastor preached, and at the conclusion of the service received two members on profession of faith and four by letter.

At 7:30, instead of the preaching service, the Oakdale Philharmonic Club very beautifully rendered their Easter cantata, "The Song of Triumph," to a large, appreciative audience. It was a most fitting way to close this glorious Easter in songs of Triumph.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 2

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE MEANING OF WORSHIP

Worship begins in our sense of need and aspiration, and is accompanied by faith that our yearnings shall be satisfied. It begins with humility, awe, reverence, and ends with exaltation, adoration, thanksgiving. Though the heart be crushed with sorrow, worship should bring joy and peace. Gloom and confusion have no place in worship. Something is wrong with a religion that does not gladden the heart, that does not stir profoundly the emotions of the worshiper. Our generation has too much emotion in the stadium and too little in the chapel—too much where it meets men and too little where it meets God. Worship is both private and public, individual and corporate. In the closet of secrecy one needs to pour out his soul in confession and adoration, but he needs also to join with the great congregation in congregational worship. With others we have sinned; with them let us confess. With others we have repented; with them let us present ourselves for pardon. There is cheer and encouragement in numbers. A chorus is better than a solo. The solitary worshiper is likely to suppose himself to be the only one left; how inspiring for him to find hundreds or even thousands of others faithful and devout. One can worship God in solitude, but that possibility never yet accounted for an empty pew at church. Public worship is a coveted privilege for the private worshiper, and he will be found mingling his songs and prayers with those of his fellow Christians in blessed fellowship and communion.

The place and the form of worship are not important. Every place where man has met God is Holy, and every form through which God has revealed Himself to man is helpful. However, it is useless to linger on the Mount of Transfiguration after the heavenly visitors have withdrawn, or to continue the use of forms whose content has become only a hallowed memory. Old wineskins do not of themselves assure rich and comforting draughts. To have the assurance of God's presence is better than to be at Mt. Gerezim, at Jerusalem, or at Aldersgate Street. Not the "mourners' bench" but the Spirit of God will bring men into the kingdom. The place of worship should be accessible, and its appointments should be suggestive and inspiring. Certain places make worship almost impossible, while others make it almost inevitable. The act of worship forbids haste and confusion and calls for quiet and order. A clown makes a poor leader, and jazz music a poor vehicle.

The woman at the well was notoriously immoral; but she had enough religion to start an argument about rites and ritual, about right places and forms. Note how quickly Jesus led her to worship there by Jacob's well and sent her as a glad evangel to the people of her village. When she had found God, Gerezim and Jerusalem, forms and ecclesiasticisms seemed of small account. Joy and thanksgiving characterized her and those whom she brought to the Master.

Moderns are not concerned so much to find a place to worship as to find a time to worship. They are crowding the Lord's day off the calendar. Business, pleasure, sports, travel, visiting, feasting, hunting, fishing—was man made for these? Some appear to think so. He was not made for the Sabbath, but it was made for him and he will not long find happiness or health unless he uses it for rest and for worship.

A SUPERANNUATE

Dear Dr. Duren: If you can spare a small space in next week's paper, I shall be delighted to have you put a short note in for me. I am a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference. I have been serving as a supply for two years in Memphis Conference. The lines have indeed fallen to us in pleasant places. I have been assigned to the Lexington Circuit by Bishop Darlington. The Lexington District Conference met May 10. The reports revealed the fact that the Lexington circuit is leading the district in percentage paid on benevolences May 10. We reported 66% paid on these claims, 40% of salary.

We are to begin soon to remodel and repair the parsonage at a cost of between $800.00 and $1,000.00, thereby making it modern and convenient. You are giving us a good paper.

I take this opportunity of saying hello and God bless you to my brethren of the Mississippi Conference. Please say to them that should any of them go to Lake Junaluska this summer, or any where that they can come via Lexington, Tenn., please stop and see me, I will be delighted to see them. A. A. SIMMS.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The recent session of the Greenville District Conference was delightfully entertained in the progressive little city of Leland, with Rev. R. G. Moore as pastor-host. The conference was called to order promptly at nine o'clock, May 7, with Rev. J. R. Countiss, presiding elder, in the chair. Rev. W. P. Bailey was elected secretary and he handled the business with accuracy and dispatch.

All of the pastors were present except Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., who has been confined by illness since April 1, but who is now reported as making good progress toward recovery. The attendance of laymen was good, especially on the second day when they had charge of an excellent program under the direction of Mr. S. V. Wall who had secured Mr. J. G. Houston, lay leader of the North Mississippi Conference, for the principal address. After fourteen years of efficient service. Mr. Wall retired as district lay leader and Mr. E. A. Tanner was elected to succeed him. W. E. Bufkin of Leland and Edmund Taylor of Greenville are his assistants.

The following delegates were elected to the North Mississippi Conference: J. H. Johnson, S. V. Wall, J. H. Sherard, Percy Bell, E. A. Tanner, Mrs. W. C. Galceran, Mrs. R. G. Moore, Mrs. Ernest Moore. Alternates: Mrs. Guy Drew, Asar Wolfe, C. N. Gerald, Mrs. J. W. York. The next conference goes to Shelby.

Reports showed general progress and a fine spirit of harmony throughout the district. With the smallest membership, this district accepts the largest quota for benevolences. Three hundred members have been received during the year, 84 on profession of faith. More than $10,000 has been raised for debts and repairs on churches and parsonages. Sent to Memorial Mercy Home $134; to Lewis Memorial Hospital, $375.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL CLOSES IN TUTWILER

I am handing you a clipping from our county paper: One of the most successful revivals that has been held in many years closed last night, May 15, after ten days service both morning and evening.

A large congregation was in attendance each evening, and several evenings the house was overflowed and visitors were turned away.

Rev. R. E. Simpson of England, Ark., who ably assisted the local pastor, Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, was not only a splendid preacher and speaker, but made many friends in Tutwiler and vicinity who feel that they were not only helped by his messages but feel they have a real friend in his splendid character. We extend Rev. Mr. Simpson a hearty welcome back to Tutwiler.

In addition to the nine who joined the church many other signs of a spiritual awakening were seen. But the question naturally arises "What are we going to do about it." Ans.: "We are going to try to better look after the interest of the Kingdom of God." Our Advocate is among the items of interest.

The church work is going on well here. We love our people and I am bold enough to say, "I believe many of them love us." We have never been happier in the work of the church.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Hattiesburg District Conference met in Sumrall, Miss., May 9-10. The presiding elder, Rev. V. G. Clifford, arranged a program for the conference which aided greatly in having the business move smoothly and systematically from the beginning to the end. The writer was elected secretary and E. A. Kelly was elected assistant secretary.

Among the visitors attending the conference were: C. H. Strait, H. A. Gatlin, W. W. Graves, Ray Walker, J. O. Ware, D. E. Vickers, I. H. Sells, Dr. G. F. Winfield, P. M. Caraway, W. H. Saunders, J. L. Neil, A. M. Broadfoot, J. T. McVey, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Mrs. D. E. Vickers, Mrs. V. G. Clifford, and Mrs. W. H. Saunders.

Two splendid young men were granted license to preach, Eucl Sample, who is attending Millsaps College, and Edward Jordan, who is attending the Junior College at Ellisville. The conference also recommended Ralph Nall to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The following were elected principal delegates to the Annual Conference: W. F. Barksdale, H. V. Waits, A. F. Holcombe, F. M. Tatum, D. W. Heidelberg, P. C. Alexander, J. B. Bridges, W. H. L. Carruth, B. M. Stevens, H. C. Carter, A. C. Lynd, J. F. Ruffin, R. C. Pou, W. T. Aycot. Alternate lay delegates elected were: Mrs. E. J. Barksdale, Mrs. W. M. Williams, Mrs. V. G. Clifford, Mrs. S. E. Shannon.

The sermon for the morning session, first day was brought by the writer; for the evening by T. O. Prewitt, and for the morning session of the second day, by J. F. Campbell.

The conference set up a plan for increasing the circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate in the district. The plan calls for a series of meetings to be held through the district for the purpose of creating interest in this periodical, and also for a definite check-up on every charge for new and renewed subscriptions. It was the belief of the conference that this district would reach its quota at a very early date.

The pastor-host, Rev. L. M. Reeves, had everything in readiness for the conference and the people of his church and of Sumrall taught us how to entertain such a body.

Richton issued an invitation for the district conference of 1936 and the conference accepted this invitation.

CLYDE H. GUNN, Sect'y.

MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Reported by Jack H. Midyett, Sect'y.

The Monroe District Conference met in the Oak Ridge Methodist Church, Oak Ridge, La., on May 15-16, 1935. Rev. J. M. Alford, the pastor-host, and the good people of Oak Ridge very graciously entertained the conference.

FOR RENT—Cottages, Apartments. Address Miss Lessie Rowan, 195 Campground, Biloxi, Miss.

Rev. H. L. Johns, our presiding elder, called the conference to order promptly at 2:30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, thus beginning a great conference which emphasized church work and religious inspiration.

The reports of the pastors, as a whole, were very favorable. These reports revealed that $2,960.00 had been paid on the benevolences, this amount being almost half of the amount assumed by the district. The Easter offering for the Orphanage amounted to $2,285.67. The gifts to the Memorial Mercy Home totaled $327.32. The amount raised on Church School Day was $164.29. It was further brought out that constructive work, touching the whole work of the church, was being done all over the district. A spirit of optimism and consecration prevailed.

On Wednesday night a great district young people's rally was held in the high school auditorium as a special feature of the conference. Lydel Sims, Louisiana Conference young people's president, was present and gave an address. Dr. Wm. H. Wallace, Jr., of New Orleans, gave an address and showed motion pictures of the Highroad, 1934 assembly, and of the church at Columbia.

On Thursday morning the conference sermon was preached by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs. Bishop Dobbs preached on the text: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

The following connectional men and women were present: Dr. R. W. Vaughan, Dr. A. W. Turner, Dr. W. L. Duren, President Pierce Cline, and Mrs. Geo. Sexton, Jr.

The following were elected delegates to the next session of the Louisiana Annual Conference: Mr. S. M. McReynolds, Hon. W. B. Clarke, Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, Rev. T. W. Stodghill, Mr. V. M. Mauser, Mrs. Dan Kelly, Mr. Geo. Thompson, Mr. C. G. Rolfe, and Mr. O. J. Olsen. Alternates elected are: Mr. Jack Tyler, Mr. C. M. Noble, Mrs. J. T. Harris, Mrs. H. L. Johns, and Mr. W. H. Maben.

Hon. W. B. Clarke was elected district lay leader; and Mr. S. E. Poole and Mr. A. W. Warlick were elected associate lay leaders.

A campaign was inaugurated for the purpose of securing the district's quota of subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by July 1.

Mangham was selected as the seat of the next session of the district conference.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. H. Hunt

Psalm 84:5-6: Blessed is the man whose strength is in Thee; in whose heart are the ways of them; who passing through the valley of Baca maketh it a well.

There is a blessed life. That is what the world is seeking. But what strange ideas of how to attain it. Some seek it by worldly indulgences. "Pleasures are like poppies spread. You seize the flower, its bloom is shed." Multitudes believe that accumulation of this world's goods can bring happiness, but how many cares they bring and how easily they are swept away. I visited recently the scene of a tornado where the cherished possessions were swept away without warning. The economic catastrophe of the past years has multiplied illustrations of the folly of seeking happiness in earthly things. The psalmist treats of happiness as something altogether independent of material things.

1. Blessed is the man whose strength is in God.

Some men are strong in business and are like helpless babes in the woods when it comes to finding God. Some women spend all the time in club work or housekeeping and "neglect the better part." Some young people consume all their energies in a whirl of social activities, yet realize the utter shallowness of their lives.

Strength in God brings the blessed life. It is folly to blind our eyes to this fact. What a shame that God is given merely the left-overs by many people.

2. "In whose heart are the ways of them."

The psalmist pictures a pilgrim who revels in the attractiveness of the temple worship. God's ways are in his heart. That is why he would prefer to be a doorkeeper in the house of God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. That is why he is making his journey to Jerusalem.

Abiding peace can come only to those who carry God's ways in the heart. There is an experience of deep security, an inner calm, a serenity of mind that faith brings. This peace the world cannot give. It comes from above.

God's presence transfigures the life. Here is the blessed life

3. "Who passing through the valley of Baca maketh it a well." The pilgrim could quicken his pace and soon pass out of this valley of dry bones. The torrid rays of the sun beat down fiercely upon him. The scorching sands blister the feet. There is no shade in the barren desert. Only little balsam shrubs can grow. But the pilgrim knows others will make this same journey. Aged people need the refreshment of the well. The tender feet of children will be even more fatigued and need a resting place. Women weary will find strength if he provides a watering spot. So he stops to dig this well in this desolate place.

Blessed is the man who serves.

PRAYER

We thank Thee that there is a blessed life. We thank Thee that Thou hast revealed what it is.

Help us to find our strength in God. Help us to carry God's ways in our hearts. Help us to know the joy of service.

May we dig wells where others may refresh their souls on this earthly pilgrimage.

May we set our affections on things above. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

COLUMBIA, LOUISIANA

Dear Dr. Duren: I just recently mailed you a list of new and renewal subscriptions. You may look for an additional list by the end of this month for the special subscription drive period. I am enclosing an account of our recently closed revival and of the splendid general condition of our church here at Columbia.

Easter Sunday marked the close of a series of services conducted by the pastor which resulted in thirty-five additions to the Church and more than fifty reconsecrations. The church had conducted a religious survey of the community and was in touch with "the Methodist responsibility." In addition the Church school teachers had carried on a program of personal evangelism through the Church school for a period of five weeks prior to the opening of the meeting. The pastor met with the children of the Sunday school (those eligible for church membership), each afternoon of the week preceding Palm Sunday. On that day twenty-five united with the church.

Following this service Brother Morris preached each night of Holy Week on the Words of Jesus on the Cross. On Wednesday night of that week a pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross," was presented. Three well attended services, sunrise, morning and evening, were held on Easter Sunday. Ten additional adults united with the church, making a total of forty-nine additions to the church this conference year, thirty-seven of that number on profession of faith.

The Sunday school attendance has increased in the past five months from below one hundred to 140 on Palm Sunday. Attendance on Sunday services has materially increased. The mid-week service of this past week numbered 91 by actual count.

The finances of the church are in excellent shape. The Easter offering for the orphanage was $205.00; Memorial Mercy Home, $46.00; Church School Day offering, $21.74. Over $400.00 has been raised on a proposed new educational building. The entire amount of the benevolences is expected in cash by the meeting of the Monroe District Conference.

And so on and on, but outside of these things we are doing very well and up to now we wouldn't kick much if the bishop sent us the same preacher for another year.

Sincerely,
W. H. WAGGONER,
Lay Leader.

RESOLUTIONS

Passed by the Woman's Missionary Society of Brandon, Miss., M. E. Church, South

Whereas, on April 21, 1935, it pleased the Heavenly Father to call the spirit of Mrs. Jennie Sims to "an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," and

Whereas, she was a faithful member of the Church and Missionary Society, and a loyal friend; therefore be it resolved by the Missionary Society,

First, that we thank God for her long and useful life and her noble example of gentle kindness, patience and Christian living.

Second, that we extend to her sorrowing nieces and nephews our sincere and heartfelt sympathy, commending them to the God who loved and served, that He may comfort their hearts and direct their lives.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her loved ones, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy spread on the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society.

MRS. S. L. McLAURIN.

MRS. J. C. MURRAY,

Committee.

GEORGE STEPHENSON WEEMS

Brother George Stephenson Weems was born at DeSoto, in Clark County, on June 18, 1859. He passed away on May 2, 1935. His membership in our church here in Shubuta is entered as of 1879. This is about the year in which he settled here and began his first business venture. For forty years at least he had taught a class in our Sunday school. He was known for his wonderful Christian spirit and philanthropies. Everything he did in this line was unostentatious, but there are many he has helped along the way, both materially and spiritually. We shall miss him, but his influence for good will never be forgotten by any of us who have known him.

For forty-two years he and his good wife, whom we laid to rest just ninety days before his death, lived a happy, exemplary life, and maintained a home of the most wonderful kind. The reunion of these two devoted lovers in heaven has certainly been a happy one.

His spirit has returned to his Maker whom he knew and loved so well.

MRS. CORA PIGFORD HARMON

Mrs. Cora Pigford Harmon was born at Whynot, Miss., May 21, 1866, and went home to God on March 14, 1935, from a hospital in Meridian, where she had been taken some several days before. Her body was laid to rest in the community cemetery at Vimville Friday morning, March 15, after appropriate funeral services had been held in the Vimville church, conducted by her pastor, Rev. A. J. Beasley, assisted by Rev. R. L. Walton, and Rev. Mr. Sumrall, Baptist pastor.

Mrs. Harmon was born and reared in a Christian home and normally became a member of the Methodist Church at a very early age. At the age of sixteen she became the bride of Dr. Stephen S. Harmon, who preceded her in death several years. The marriage license shows that the two were joined together by Rev. G. Hawkins. Both husband and wife had already given themselves to Christ, and of course the union of these two brought a fellowship which left a lasting influence upon all who knew them. The first paper of any kind which they subscribed to after their marriage was the New Orleans Christian Advocate, which Mrs. Harmon read without interruption up until her death—over fifty years. She leaves to mourn the separation, two sons, Claude Harmon, of Meridian, and Milton Harmon, of Memphis, Tenn., and one daughter, Mrs. Annie Mae Dearman, of Chunky, Miss., with whom and where she had made her home for several years.

The writer of this sketch is unable to give the proper emphasis to her sterling Christian character. She was known over Lauderdale County by countless friends and everywhere these friends witnessed of her good life and what Mrs. Harmon had meant to them. It was the privilege of the writer to know her only a few months but in this short time his life was enriched beyond measure. Her home was situated perhaps on the highest spot in the community around Chunky and her radiant faith and active trust in the living Christ, her loyalty to her church, her unfading love for her God and her fellow man, and the experience of vital Christianity, bringing victory and power in her personal life which she shared with others, made her life a light set on a hill where many in the community went and came away blessed.

Chunky, Miss.

THE LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Lake Charles District Conference found the pastor and people in Crowley most attentive and hospitable hosts. Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Dameron and the Crowley Church are a good combination.

The conference began May 9, at 10 a. m., and adjourned May 10, at 3:30 p.m. The presiding elder, Dr. B. F. Rogers, planned an interesting and instructive program, in addition to the business of the conference. Among the visitors were Dr. K. W. Dodson of the Baton Rouge District, Dr. Briscoe Carter of the Alexandria District, Dr. Louis Hoffpauir of the Ruston District, Dr. R. W. Vaughan, Dr. J. G. Snelling, Dr. A. K. McLellan, "Uncle Van" Carter, and others.

The conference was divided into three discussion groups on Christian Education, adult workers with Rev. G. W. Dameron, young people workers with Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy, and the children's workers with Mrs. J. W. Wynn. This feature was particularly helpful.

The conference sermon was preached by Rev. S. A. Seegers of Rayne.

The lay delegates to Annual Conference were as follows: J. E. Ney, Mrs. J. N. McDonald, E. L. Savoie, S. H. Porter, H. H. Haynes, A. M. Mayo, Mrs. F. C. Collins, Mrs. J. J. Davidson, and V. L. Caldwell.

Rev. J. B. Williams, former presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, touched the hearts and minds of all present with a message on "The Minister and His Message."

The reports of the pastors were encouraging, and they showed active interest in the work of the Church by both pastors and laymen.

The district finds its presiding elder a capable, sympathetic, and energetic leader, who is concerned for all the interests of the Kingdom of God.

HENRY A. RICKEY, Sect'y.

The Matsuyama district of Japan embraces two and a half ken (provinces). One is on the Island of Shikoku and one and a half in Kiushiu. Practically the entire responsibility for the evangelization of the major portion of this territory belongs to the Southern Methodist Church.

Thousands of women testify that Cardui relieved their pains at menstruation time, and that by continued use of it for a reasonable length of time, their strength has been renewed and general health improved. ## CENTENARY COLLEGE, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Centenary College, the oldest college west of the Mississippi River and the oldest belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was founded at Jackson, Louisiana, in 1825, but was moved to its present home, Shreveport, in 1906.

Centenary's history has been colorful and romantic. The early days of the War between the States found practically all of the student body in the Confederate Army, and nearly every member of the senior class was killed in battle.

Centenary ranks high among the colleges of the United States, both in the classroom and in the larger field of student activities. A view of the Administration building is shown in the photograph above.

Shreveport is served by Southern Pacific Lines.

BISHOP FRANCIS ASBURY'S hymn book was recently discovered in the library of De Pauw University, at Greencastle, Ind., according to the New York edition of the Christian Advocate. As a matter of denominational interest, this is one of the most important Methodist finds of recent years; and it is made all the more interesting by the fact that notations on the flyleaf indicate that it was presented to Asbury by Mr. Wesley before the great American leader left England for the field of labor upon which he was destined to achieve immortality.

THE FAMOUS POTSDAM PALACE which once afforded hospitality for the court of the mighty ex-Kaiser, Wilhelm of Germany, is said to include in its spacious appointment, six hundred rooms; but, impossible as it may seem, there are only two bath rooms. No suggestion is made as to supplemental facilities along that line; and it would appear that the magnificent court of the Teutons might be entitled to the epithet: "The great unwashed," with special emphasis upon the unwashed.

ARTHUR KOEHLER, the wood expert who was an important witness at the Lindberg kidnaping trial, in New Jersey, began his study of woods in his father's carpentry shop more than twenty years ago. He has become so expert in wood textures that he is said to be able to determine the kind of wood and where it grew, of any specimen submitted to him for microscopical examination. That which began as a mere hobby has developed into a life work, and the modest carpentry shop has become a scientific laboratory, where each year he analyzes 4,000 specimens of woods of every kind.

THE POWER OF HEREDITY was the subject of an interesting article in The Listener recently. Among other things, it claims that every horse that has won the English Derby in the last fifty years has been descended from one of three Arab horses brought to England over two hundred years ago. The point made in the study is that pedigree counts in the making of men the same as in horses, though the facts are much more complicated in men than in horses. Perhaps they will some day find the Arab who bred the three famous chargers and Jonathan Edwards may have a competitor of international fame.

TURKEY, THE HOME OF THE UNSPEAKABLE TURK, has served notice on the States constituting the Balkan pact that, at the forthcoming conference in Rome, she intends to demand the right to re-fortify the Dardanelles. The notice is accompanied by the polite and diplomatic assurance that it is "purely a measure of international peace and not designed for offensive purposes." But such honeyed words will hardly deceive any intelligent person—certainly no one who had acquaintance with the desperate struggle for the reduction of those fortifications during the World War. But Turkey is only keeping step with the militarists of the world.

A MONUMENT TO JOHN BROWN, of Harper's Ferry fame, was recently erected at Lake Placid, New York. John Brown seized Harper's Ferry in Virginia as a preliminary measure for freeing the slaves, and he lost his life as an insurrectionist against the government. But the years have softened his deed of rebellion, and they have revealed the sacrificial spirit of the man who went to his death as a martyr to the cause of freedom. The same adjustment of estimates is already happening in the case of the small group of "wilful men" whom Woodrow Wilson proposed to leave to "strut their little uneasy day and be forgotten." Time is an important factor in fame, and many times over it has brought about a complete reversal of public estimates of men and measures.

DEVEREAUX JARRATT, though a clergyman of the Church of England, was intimately associated with the rise of Methodism in America and is esteemed to have been one of the saintliest men of that day. But every step in his career represented personal conquest. He was the son of a carpenter, his mother died when he was 13 years of age, he then became the charge of a cock-fighting farmer brother, and he grew up without even the semblance of a religious background. He launched out as a school-teacher, then secured orders in the Church of England. He was blind in his right eye for thirty years, his face was pock-marked, he suffered much from kidney stones, and for seven or eight years he had a tumor on the left side of his face which finally caused his death. He was bitterly persecuted by the clergy and was mistreated by the Methodists; but his name is today affectionately inscribed upon the pages of Episcopal and Methodist histories as a great and constructive spiritual leader.

STUDENT SUBSIDIES

The granting of subsidies to college students has grown to be one of the most vexatious problems of college administration; and it has introduced into home and student life a most unwholesome attitude toward our whole educational program. In a recent issue of a popular magazine is an article which arraigns the practice as being an educational "auction." It is pointed out that the practice which began as a bid for athletes, or to provide a leadership for some new or neglected field, has been adopted into every department of education and is now a policy ridden for every purpose from that of building a football team to swelling enrollment in order to prevent retrenchment in public appropriations. This wide-spread net has been generally accepted by the public, and prospective beneficiaries have not been slow to assess the possibilities for themselves. The sagacious parent or student no longer inquires seriously and earnestly concerning the standing and the standards of the school; but his first interest is as to what monetary considerations are offered. We have heard of instances where the competition has been so keen as to almost relieve the home of all responsibility, except that of furnishing a boy or girl. The practice has become so prevalent that, even in theological education, no school feels assured of its constituency. As a matter of fact, there is no longer any such thing as a fixed constituency for any school—public, private, denominational, professional, technical, or what not. What theological agreements have failed to do toward the removal of religious and doctrinal differences, is being largely achieved by the subtle and the morally-indifferent power of money used in bargain priced education. In some instances congregations are being made the pawns in this policy of student subsidies. As we see it, the tendency is to relieve the home of a sacred duty and privilege; and to create an indifference in the student as to the substantial values in his training for life. We believe, too, that education with a commercial stamp is little better than a dole dispensed by the ERA.

THE NRA

At the moment of our going to press last week, the newsboys were crying the papers which announced the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States regarding the constitutionality of the NRA. It seems to be the opinion that the decision has swept that legislation out of existence. We are not of those who are disposed to exult at the evil days upon which that daring social and industrial venture has fallen; neither are we among the blind worshipers of it as a political creation. We frankly admit that we are not able to offer either illuminating suggestion or constructive criticism; and we believe that we are not much different from those who have undertaken to appraise the situation. In most cases coming under our observation, the wish seems to be father to the thought, no matter which direction the discussion takes. The opposers of the administration say boldly that there is nothing left to salvage, and their assurance has a tone of ecstasy and exulting. The partisans of the new order of business and industry seem to be in the mood of the Negro minister at the funeral who said, "We hopes he's gone where we thinks he aint;" and there is an undertone of deep disappointment. As we see it, it is neither the time nor the place for giving vent to either personal or political attitudes. It is the purpose of the Advocate to do its part toward conserving the achievements of the NRA. We do not believe in many things connected with the NRA, but neither do we think that it would be wise to undertake to retrace our steps at this juncture. The smashing of political prestige is a thing too selfish to be thought of, and any new experiment designed to take the place of that which has fallen would be doomed to failure. We believe that it is a time when every political and industrial interest of the country should join hands to promote the welfare and the prosperity of the country as a whole. We pledge ourselves to promote in every way possible the social and economic recovery by every means consistent with the moral and spiritual life of the people.

THE SEARCH FOR VALUES

The caption of this editorial was the subject of the commencement address which ex-Governor Pat M. Neff of Texas brought to the students of Centenary College last week. There was no artificiality about the style of the speaker and he exhibited the drawl of the typical Southerner. His address abounded in homely figures, graphic and picturesque metaphors, with little of the melodious tones and the bewitching art of the orator. The delivery was sincere and sometimes emphatic, and in the higher ranges one could detect the impairment of his voice by much public speaking. Nevertheless the address was a veritable mine of wisdom and sound instruction. The five particulars under which the search for values was discussed were: The ability to think; The capacity for friendship; The appreciation of the beautiful; The capacity for happiness; and Character—a name for great living. The address reached an effective climax with the lines of Edwin Markham:

"We are blind until we see
That in the humble human plan,
Nothing is worth the making
That does not make the man.

Why build the cities glorious,
If man unbuilt goes?
In vain we build the world,
Unless the builder grows."

THE MILES COVERDALE BIBLE

The four hundredth anniversary of the publication of the Miles Coverdale translation of the Bible will be celebrated on October 4, of this year. This was the first English translation of the complete text of the Bible, and it was issued by an unknown press, probably in Switzerland. Its circulation has surpassed that of any other book in the world, and its profound influence upon the life and character of the English-speaking world is universally acknowledged. Its teachings have been accepted by multiplied millions as their standard of personal living, and its ideals have been stamped upon government and public institutions wherever the English language is spoken. The purpose of the celebration is to re-emphasize its spiritual treasure, to encourage a revival of interest in its study, and to secure a place for it in every American home. We think it eminently fitting that this monumental service of Miles Coverdale should be commemorated. The committee in charge of the celebration in the United States is made up mainly of great educators, religious leaders, and business executives. The program contemplates the holding of at least one general meeting of nation-wide importance, and services for all churches with the theme "Four Centuries of the English Bible."

THE CLUB WOMAN AND RELIGION

By Mrs. B. M. Howorth

Have you ever stopped to think when you hear reports of the activities of Women's Clubs that these activities are largely in service of the Lord, our God? Through club life women are finding another way to express the idea of service to mankind. It is simply some of the teachings of the prophets and of Jesus carried over into everyday living. Think what it means in helping to bring about the Kingdom of God on earth.

There are some 2,000,000 club women in these United States banded together for definite purposes of helpfulness. They comprise "Jew and Greek and Gentile" finding a common expression of service to humanity. They do not call it religion but nevertheless it is the spirit of religion of many creeds together and in action. Of course there is much in club life that is simply pleasure, social, cultural, but there is also much that is definitely religious.

Take the departments of work. In American citizenship club women are constantly striving toward a high type of Christian citizenship, free from selfishness, graft, and political subserviency. They are teaching respect for law. In American homes they are striving besides material blessings, to bring about a high type of Christian home. In education they are studying the new type of learning through experience and creative work, of making education fit the daily living of students, but they are expecting this to be a Christian education where moral restraints hold all to a high type of social living. They are anxious to give all the advantage of good books so they help establish libraries.

In international relations they are teaching that there must be understanding and good will among nations as among men if our civilization is to endure, there must be co-operation instead of ruinous competition. They are standing for continuous peace in the world brought about by mutual good will and arbitration of difficulties. They want to outlaw war. They are trying to get laws passed that will give children their rights and better the living conditions of the masses of the people. I might go on and on but this shows the spirit of religion in club-life.

BEG PARDON!

New England has been humiliated. The name of General Robert E. Lee, highly respected in both the North and the South, has been dragged in the mire in the city of Boston. On April 10 there was presented to the Massachusetts department, Women's Relief Corps, a resolution which protested against the erection of a statue to the great Confederate general in Arlington National Cemetery, linked him with Communism, and designated him as a "traitor." A copy of this resolution, which Miss Mary Elliott, secretary of the Relief Corps, declares was passed without a dissenting vote by the six hundred delegates present at the meeting, was sent to Senator David I. Walsh. The text reads, in part, as follows:

"Whereas, Robert E. Lee fought for four years to destroy this nation; and

"Whereas, Communism and inimical forces are to-day seeking the same ends that Robert E. Lee did, namely, our national destruction; and

"Whereas, it would be against the public good to recognize thus the principle of national destruction as exemplified in the conduct of Lee, and would encourage Communism to emulate Lee; and would be unseemly for our government to honor one whom the Great Emancipator named as a traitor.

"Therefore, we, the Women's Relief Corps of the Department of Massachusetts,

"Resolve, That we are opposed to the erection of this statue to Lee in Arlington Cemetery; and we direct that copies of this resolution be sent to the committee on the library to whom the joint resolution was referred, and also to Representative Fish, and to our senators and representatives in Congress, directing that this resolution be spread upon the pages of the Congressional Record.

"(Miss) SUSAN GLOVER MACOMBER,

"Chairman Legislative Committee,

"BELLE MORTON, President 1934-35."

Accompanying the resolution was a letter from Miss Macomber in which, among other things, she said:

"Through the daily press the public has recently been informed of the fact that the deserter and traitor, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, expects to again enjoy the benefits of this country and its freedom. The man for whom this bill asks that a statue be erected, ranks the same as Grover Cleveland Bergdoll in the eyes of all clear-minded patriotic people who have not fallen under the spell of Southern influence."

Senator Walsh sent the resolution without comment to the Congressional Record.

That such an untempered characterization of General Lee should be made anywhere in these days and particularly in New England seems incredible. During the heat of the Civil War, when epithets were flying thick and fast on both sides, the use of slanderous language even in connection with good men was understandable though inexcusable. But to read of a group of six hundred American women seventy years after the conflict applying the word "traitor" to General Lee, with all the depths of degradation implied in that term, is in a high degree astounding. On behalf of all right-thinking citizens of this section of the country, we desire to repudiate this cruel discourtesy to one of the finest gentlemen in American history, to recognize the wrong that has been done him, and to express deep regret over the hasty and unconsidered action of the Relief Corps. We feel sure that something was "put over" on these women of the G. A. R., for whom we have always had great respect. Zion's Herald through the years has frequently differed radically with the South in its views on slavery and the place of the Negro in our American life, but we do not propose to keep silent in the face of this amazing slur upon the name of a truly great Southern gentleman.

Possibly, however, the whole incident may in the end serve a good purpose in helping to acquaint many American citizens with the true worth of the brilliant leader of the Confederate armies. It is not generally remembered that Lee was at one time offered the command of the Union Army. Within two blocks of the White House in Washington on Pennsylvania Avenue there appears on the wall of an old mansion a bronze tablet with these words:

"The Blair House, Erected 1824. 1836, Home of Montgomery Blair, Attorney for Dred Scott, Postmaster-General in the Cabinet of Abraham Lincoln. Occupied by George Bancroft, Historian. General Robert E. Lee Was Here Offered Command of the Union Army on the Field at the Instance of Abraham Lincoln."

But Lee put aside ambition and followed his conscience.

Josiah Royce of Harvard in his "Philosophy of Loyalty" sets forth General Lee as an example of the loyal man. In his allegiance to his native state of Virginia, Lee reached his decision on the highest ethical grounds and cast in his lot with the state in its withdrawal from the Union. Of him Charles Francis Adams, Jr.—a native of Boston and a Union soldier, who was the first, we believe, to suggest that a statue of Lee be erected in Washington and that it be paid for from funds subscribed by veterans of both the blue and the gray—says:

"As to Robert E. Lee individually, I can only repeat what I have already said. If in all respects similarly circumstanced, I hope I should have been filial and unselfish enough to have done as Lee did."

General Ulysses S. Grant, who ought to be good authority upon his great opponent, in his "Memoirs," says of Lee after the surrender at Appomattox: "I knew there was no use to urge him (Lee) to do anything against his ideas of what was right."

General Robert E. Lee was an upright man—honest, loyal, true to his convictions, chivalrous. We would urge the members of the Women's Relief Corps to get acquainted with him through Douglas Southall Freeman's new life, which only recently won the Pulitzer prize as the outstanding biography of the year, and also through "Robert E. Lee, the Christian," by William J. Johnstone, published two years ago. These volumes will open the eyes of prejudiced critics to the terrible injustice that has been done to the memory of a noble soul.—Editorial, Zion's Herald.

PASTORS' SCHOOL

Dr. Edwin Lewis, Platform Speaker

Dr. Edwin Lewis, a platform speaker for the Biloxi Pastors' School, July 1-6, is professor of Systematic Theology and Philosophy of Religion in Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, New Jersey.

Newbury, Berkshire, England, is his native soil. All of his ancestors were Methodists for four generations. He became a local Methodist preacher at seventeen, and early a missionary in Newfoundland for three years, beginning in 1900. His educational training was carried on in England, Canada, the United States, and Scotland before becoming a graduate student and tutor in Drew Theological Seminary. Subsequent teaching experience has been his in New York State College as instructor in English: Drew, as instructor in Greek and Theology and as associate professor of Systematic Theology, before being made full professor in 1920.

He is one of the three associate editors of the Abingdon Bible Commentary, perhaps one of the most valuable one-volume products of its kind.

GREENWOOD

Dear Dr. Duren: We have divided our District into five Zones for the Advocate campaign, with a captain for each Zone, as follows:

I. Captain Rev. W. H. Mounger—Winona Station, Winona Circuit, Vaiden and West, Kilmichael, Poplar Creek, Duck Hill and Carrollton.

II. Captain Rev. W. J. Cunningham—Greenwood, Black Hawk, Itta Bena, Schlater, Minter City, Swiftown.

III. Captain J. J. Baird—Lexington, Tchula and Cruger, Ebenezer, Acona.

IV. Captain Rev. S. A. Brown—Ruleville, Tutwiler, Drew and Sumner.

V. Captain Rev. T. M. Bradley—Moorhead, Sunflower, Inverness, Belzoni.

The preachers, for the most part, are taking hold, and the campaign to date is encouraging. A few places have already secured their quotas. We have a fighting chance to get that $100, and we are fighting. We shall watch with interest the reports from week to week.

With best wishes for a successful campaign throughout the three Conferences,

Yours fraternally,

A. T. McILWAIN.

Among the more familiar publications of Professor Lewis are "Jesus Christ and the Human Quest," "Great Christian Teachings," and "A Christian Manifesto." The latter, his latest publication, is counted by many competent critics as the most pointing and penetrating challenge that present Christianity has received.

Professor Lewis is not only a great religious thinker and teacher, but a most human and lovable personality. Since his early years on the Drew faculty, he has been one of the student favorites among the many distinguished members there. Few summer schools for pastors in the South will be so fortunate in its choice of platform messengers as the Biloxi Pastors' School.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

William M. Curtis as agent. Last, but not the least important act, James Osgood Andrew and John Emory were elected bishops. They were both elected on the first ballot, Bishop Andrew receiving 140 votes and Bishop Emory 135 votes, the vote determining the order of their election.

An effort was made to establish a branch of the Book Concern in Nashville, Tennessee, but it was unsuccessful. Another interesting proposal was embodied in a resolution offered by certain brethren from Philadelphia "on the subject of our preachers receiving the honorary title of Doctor of Divinity." Mirabile dictu! On motion the resolution was referred to a special committee of five. The Journal gives no intimation whether their report was favorable or unfavorable to the resolution; but it was warmly debated and, after several unsuccessful parliamentary moves to suppress the matter, it was finally tabled. So the liberty of the colleges was not invaded, the pride of the preachers was saved, and they were left to "pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope."

The Church suffered sore bereavement in 1835 in the loss of its venerable and beloved senior Bishop and its faithful and promising junior Bishop. Bishop McKendree had long been in feeble health; he preached his last sermon in Nashville, Tennessee, November 22, 1834; and died March 5, 1835. He had been a bishop since 1808; and with the exception of Joshua Soule, he did more than any other man to shape and steady the Church under its new constitution. Bishop Emory, who lived on a farm near Baltimore, left home in a light carriage on the morning of December 16, 1835. No one knows what happened, but it is supposed that the horse ran away with the vehicle and threw the Bishop out. He was found later in the day in an unconscious condition, and he died that same evening without regaining consciousness. The death of Bishop McKendree meant the removing of another of the landmarks of Methodist progress; but the untimely going of Bishop Emory meant a great subtraction from the effective leadership of the Church.

On February 18, 1836, the Church suffered a great loss in the fire which destroyed the Book Concern in New York. It entailed a property loss of practically a quarter of a million dollars; but the insurance supplemented by the response of the church more than replaced the monetary disaster. The greatest loss was in the burning of documents and manuscript journals of the early preachers. Among these was the manuscript journal of Jesse Lee which was valuable source material of early Methodist history. New machinery was soon installed and a greater Book Concern was reared upon the cinder-smitten ruins; but there could be no recovery from the loss of those recordings of pioneer preachers who had gone to their eternal rest.

When the General Conference met in Cincinnati, May 2, 1836, its attention was given in great measure to the slavery agitations which we shall discuss in the chapter devoted to that subject. There was a flood of memorials on the subject of temperance. Liberia was raised to the status of a mission Conference, and the establishment of a mission in France was considered. Beverly Waugh, Thomas A. Morris, and Wilbur Fisk were elected bishops. Dr. Fisk, who was in England as delegate to the British Conference, declined to accept the office, preferring to remain as president of Wesleyan University; but probably feeling also the pressure of failing health. He died February 22, 1838. The appeal cases brought up from the Annual Conferences were numerous, and a Judiciary Committee was raised to bring them forward in orderly form. An effort was put forth to remove the term "catholic" from the Apostles' Creed as inserted in the Discipline, but it failed to receive the sanction of the Conference.

Following this Conference, the Church at the North passed through a period of great agitation on the subject of slavery, and it made a determined stand against the disrupting tendencies growing out of the discussion. An event of significance to world-wide Methodism was the Centennial celebration of 1839. At this time ecumenical Methodism had 1,171,000 members, and they expressed their gratitude to God in gifts totaling nearly one and three-quarter millions of dollars. In another five years, ten million sons and daughters of Wesley will celebrate the second centennial of Methodist history. In April, 1838, a great conflagration seriously crippled the operations of the Methodists in Charleston, South Carolina. In addition to the property losses of the people, four Methodist churches were destroyed.

When the General Conference assembled in Baltimore, May 1, 1840, the bitterness of the struggle that had been waged in the Annual Conferences was revealed in a flood of petitions from New England, appealing for a Moderate Episcopacy, elective presiding elders, and lay representation in the General and Annual Conferences. Bishop Hedding made complaint against some of his Conferences, but the differences were adjusted and the complaints withdrawn. The petitions addressed to this Conference were made to appear as a spontaneous outburst on the part of the rank and file of the church. A Special Committee on lay delegations, moderate episcopacy, and elective presiding elders made a report which was presented by William Winans of Mississippi. The report held that the petitions were the product of a single mind, and had the appearance of "agitation" rather than "original dissatisfaction," and were, therefore, not entitled to consideration as spontaneous expressions of the memorialists. The report concluded with a resolution to the effect that it was not best to change the Discipline or form of government on any of the matters suggested. The American Anti-Slavery Society had adopted the policy of sending petitions in order to overwhelm Congress on the subject of slavery and they were sent without effort to disguise their common origin. The petitions to the General Conference constituted the Methodist phase of the policy originated by those seeking the emancipation of the slaves.

The next four years were taken up with the slavery controversy, and the church was rapidly moving toward the calamity of 1844. Orange Scott, La Roy Sunderland, Lucius C. Matlack and others were disappointed in the failure of their efforts to capture the General Conference for the abolition cause, and they became bitter in their denunciation and revolutionary in their planning. At a convention held in Utica, New York, May 31, 1843, the dissatisfied group of the Methodist Episcopal Church coalesced with other factions in the formation of the "Wesleyan Methodist Connection of America. The body retained the doctrines of Methodism; but eliminated the episcopacy and adopted the English form of administration. The rule on slavery was so changed as to prohibit unconditionally the purchase, sale or ownership of a slave. Like the Methodist Protestant Church, it introduced lay representation into both the General and Annual Conferences; and the new Church took a very advanced position on the subject of temperance. At the Utica Convention, six thousand members were reported to have adhered, and it is probable that a very large part of them were from the Methodist Episcopal Church. At the first General Conference held eighteen months later, the total membership of the Connection was reported as fifteen thousand. On October 20, 1840, Nelson Reed, who was in his eighty-ninth year, died. He had been twenty years a superannuate, and at the time of his death he was the oldest Methodist preacher in Europe or America.

At this point, we turn back in order that we may make a connected study of some distinct interests and problems of Methodist history. First, we consider the missionary and the educational development, and the origin and progress of the church press. Then we take up the very complicated and difficult story of the slavery issue which began with the church in 1784; grew with an increasing ratio of importance through the years; and ended in the catastrophe of 1844, when two branches of episcopal Methodism with a common history and a common ecclesiastical inheritance; but with irreconcilable social and racial ideals and interests, and a divergent ecclesiastical theory, set up rival camps the one against the other. And all this was but the prelude to a great war and to a breach of ecclesiastical and fraternal relations which one hundred years have not been sufficient to heal.

CHAPTER VI

MISSIONS, EDUCATION, THE PRESS

The study of certain special interests in the making of Methodism has been reserved to this point in order that they might be given connected presentation. To give their development step by step in the history of the church, would fail to convey an adequate idea of their place and contribution as factors of Methodist progress. Although these interests were perfectly coordinated in the building of our denominational life, each has a romance peculiarly its own. In this chapter, notice will be taken of the work and the institutions originating before 1844. Other work belonging to the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be discussed in a later chapter.

As we have already said, the primary thought of the preachers composing the Christmas Conference was to provide a ministry for the Methodist societies; but they determined to undertake mission and education enterprises as well, and they immediately set themselves to the work of carrying out both of those resolves. In both undertakings, however, their spirit was much more impressive than their achievements; for the time had not come, either socially or economically, for the commanding success which those interests ultimately attained. As for the church press, the use of print as a means of furthering the movement in America was not employed for many years, and it received no recognition whatever in the plans of the organization Conference of 1784. It was not adopted until conflict and opposition had become so stubborn and determined as to make publicity a necessary factor in the offensive and defensive warfare of the militant Methodists. With this brief review of general conditions, we pass to the consideration of the factors themselves.

The first missionary object to engage the attention of the Methodists was the American Indian. Some effort on their behalf had been put forth from time to time. As early as the middle of the seventeenth century Thomas Mayhey, Jr., and John Eliot did mission work among the Indians of New England, and about one hundred years later David Brainerd made his contribution to the work; but no effective and consistent work was established for Indian evangelization until after the organization of the great denominational Mis-

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. Floyd Lewis, of Mayersville, Miss., is now enjoying quarters recently built for him, according to the report of Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the presiding elder.

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Meridian, reports that he is in the midst of a great meeting at Wesley Church, with Dr. Joseph A. Smith, the presiding elder, doing the preaching.

Rev. J. R. Murff, of Kilmichael, Miss., is over the top and still going in his Advocate campaign. Beginning June 2, Rev. A. T. McIlwain is with him for a week of evangelistic services.

Rev. R. E. Tucker of Mashulaville charge was the preacher at the May meeting of the Columbus District Ministerial Association. The sermon was followed by a discussion of evangelism.

Rev. C. A. Schultz, Hattiesburg, reports that he has already secured twenty-five of the twenty-eight Advocate quota assigned to his charge. That is our idea of efficiency and doing a task in a business-like way.

Rev. T. R. Holt, of De Soto, Miss., reports that he is in the midst of a great revival at Crandall. Along with his revival he is carrying forward all the details of his work, including the vigorous campaign for the Advocate.

Prof. Candler Lazenby, a son of the editor of the Alabama Advocate is now a member of the faculty of Dickinson College, of Carlisle, Pennsylvania, according to the New York edition of the Christian Advocate. He is instructor in German.

We are sorry to learn of the serious illness of Mrs. R. G. Lord, who underwent an operation at the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, a few days ago. At last report, Brother Lord was able to report her condition as greatly improved, for which we are glad.

Centenary College has just closed a great year. Five hundred and forty-nine students were enrolled during the session, there were fifty graduates, and $17,000 was paid on the indebtedness of the college in addition to caring for the current bills of the session.

Rev. W. H. Giles is in great favor at Bastrop, La. In the six months of his pastorate there, he has raised more than $1600 on the indebtedness of the church, has received twenty members into his church, and all other interests are moving forward in a satisfactory way.

Mr. D. C. Metcalf, chairman of the Board of Stewards at West Monroe, La., suffered an attack of appendicitis, and he was operated upon in a Monroe hospital a few days ago. We hope to hear of his speedy recovery. Mrs. Metcalf is the district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is to be the commencement preacher at Randolph-Macon Woman's College. His daughter is a member of the senior class, and the services of Bishop Dobbs will have, for that reason, a touch of deep personal interest. Mrs. Dobbs is also at Lynchburg for the happy occasion.

Rev. W. L. Doss is in the second week of what promises to be a great revival at Homer. He is being assisted by Rev. W. H. Wallace of First Church, New Orleans. Brother Doss said that they were having great congregations, great preaching, and they looked forward to the culmination with great expectations.

Rev. and Mrs. William Schuhle, of Plaquemine, La., were in the city a few days ago. They were enroute to Lexington, Va., where their son, William Schuhle, Jr., is to be graduated from Washington and Lee. We learn that the young man has made a splendid record and we congratulate the happy parents.

Rev. F. J. McCoy asks that his address be changed to Route 4, Greenwell Springs Road, Baton Rouge. This is the location of the new parsonage which has been purchased for Keener Memorial Church.

A note from Mrs. Stanley Wilson, the faithful and capable editor of the Woman's Page for the Mississippi Conference, offers as an apology for the delay of her material her slight indisposition. The copy is not late, Mrs. Wilson is better, and the matter appears in this issue, as usual.

The Layman's Day at Purvis, Miss., includes an address on War by Hon. J. P. Garaway, mayor of Purvis; and an address on A Sober World, by Hon. B. G. Lowery, of Blue Mountain, Miss., says Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor of the Methodist Church.

The editor acknowledges the invitation of Mr. Samuel Belton Galloway, grandson of Bishop Chas. B. Galloway, to be present at his graduation from Central High School, Jackson. We appreciate the remembrance, and wish that it might have been possible for us to attend, for we feel a personal interest in his future and success.

Mrs. W. L. Doss is in the Tri-State Hospital at Shreveport, where she went for treatment and an operation. At the time we called at the hospital, it was too early to give a very definite report of her condition; but we sincerely hope that she may soon be on the way to regaining her health. Their many friends remember them in prayer.

Mr. T. O. Brown, superintendent of schools in Ouichita Parish, La., and a member of First Church, Monroe, has returned to his home after an operation for an abscess, and a period of considerable anxiety spent at Touro Infirmary, New Orleans. His friends will be glad to know that he is making good progress toward regaining his health.

Dr. E. Nash Broyles was the speaker at the meeting of the Jackson Military Highway Association which met in Columbus, Miss., recently. According to the Columbus Dispatch, he paid eloquent tribute to the character and ability of the great statesman and soldier. Dr. Broyles delivered the address at the seventieth anniversary of the Confederate Memorial Association also.

Mr. B. Turner Clark, a pioneer resident of Tupelo, Miss., died suddenly on May 29. Brother Clark had passed his eighty-sixth milestone, was one of the oldest citizens of the town, a member of the Methodist Church, and his name was associated with the business and progress of Tupelo for nearly forty years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Laura Trice Clark, one son R. C. Clark of Tupelo, and a number of grandchildren.

CLOSING ACTIVITIES AT THE MERIDIAN WESLEY HOUSE

During the week of May 20-25, the clubs and classes of the Meridian Wesley House, Miss Annie Trawick, head resident, observed their closing with a series of parties. On Monday, the 20th, the Mother's Club had a tacky party; on Thursday and Friday the hand work of the sewing and embroidery classes was displayed; and on Saturday eighty children enjoyed the annual picnic at Highland Park. After serving five years as young people's director at the Wesley House, Miss Lucille Ingram has resigned and returned to her home in Opelika, Ala. Miss Mattie Lou Davis of Meridian, has succeeded her.

Women of Soule's Chapel, Meridian District, on May 19 organized an auxiliary with Miss Willie Tinsley as president.

A play, "The Quest," written and directed by Mrs. W. B. Carr, of Meridian, was given at the zone meeting held in DeKalb, Meridian District, on May 23.

During June auxiliaries are to observe anniversary day. A leaflet has been prepared containing valuable anniversary material. It includes the address made on anniversary day at the recent Council meeting held in St. Louis, Mo. It will help auxiliaries in their celebration of the silver anniversary. This leaflet can be secured by writing the literature headquarters, 706 Church St., Nashville, Tenn.

ing on your auxiliary to make our record 100 per cent this year. Let us tell someone in our society we love them and appreciate them by presenting them with a life membership. The money goes directly to our missionaries. So by honoring someone we are laying a gift on God's altar for use on his fields. If you have not started tithing your local money let us begin at once. I hope to hear from you soon."

If you do not belong to the Missionary Society but greatly appreciate the service of some member of that organization a life membership or a contribution toward a life membership offers you an opportunity to express that appreciation.

If you are timid about undertaking item twelve on the efficiency aim read this letter from Mrs. Raper of Paris:

"The ladies of Water Valley, First Church, Missionary Society came to Paris the afternoon of the 4th Sunday in April and gave a very interesting program. I said ladies, but some of the men came and took part too. The society here has been in retirement, but reorganization was effected at this meeting and we are hopeful of better work on our part. We are grateful to our sisters for their interest, and can see where other weak organizations might be helped by stronger ones in the same way. These good women also passed on study courses to us because many of us could not purchase the books."

Rev. Milton, of Trout, who had taught in the MacDonell School for a number of years, gave a most interesting talk and told of some of his personal experiences with the pupils there.

Messages concerning the work of the W. M. S. were brought by Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., Mrs. W. H. Martin, Mrs. H. J. Power and Mrs. O. E. Woodard.

Mrs. L. A. Sims gave a short report of the work of the district and commended the auxiliaries on the high quality of the work accomplished.

Mr. Lydel Sims, Conference President of Young People's Work, and son of the district secretary, spoke on "Summer Assemblies for Young People," and the meeting was closed by a group of young people singing "Are Ye Able. Said the Master."

THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Meridian District Conference convened at East End Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., on May 2 at 9 o'clock a. m., with Dr. Joseph A. Smith, the presiding elder, in the chair. After a brief devotional the roll was called, and most of the pastors and a good number of the laymen answered to their names. The writer was then elected secretary, and R. L. Walton assistant secretary.

Dr. Joseph A. Smith had a well planned program, and in his courteous manner, carried on the business in a smooth fashion, with all interests of the church represented.

The spirit of the conference was fine, and the reports showed that progress is being made in the district. Quite a few of the pastors reported one-half of the benevolences in hand, and I think all felt sure that they would pay in full on the benevolences this year.

The various interests of the church were represented as follows: Millsaps College, by Dr. D. M. Key; Whitworth College, by Dr. G. F. Winfield; Christian Education, by Rev. I. H. Sells; Sanatorium at Magee, by Rev. A. M. Broadfoot; N. O. Christian Advocate, by Rev. L. L. Roberts; Missions, by W. D. Hawkins; and the Orphans home, by Fred McDonald and a group of the children, who gave a splendid program in song.

Two splendid messages were enjoyed Friday morning: one from Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader, on alcohol and science, and the other by Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, on Mississippi Methodism.

The devotional services were conducted by the following: Dr. Joseph A. Smith, Rev. J. A. Moore, H. Mellard, and J. L. Smith, all of which were inspirational.

How Cardui Benefits

Middle Life Troubles;

Strengthens Women

"I was in a weak and run-down condition, passing through the change of life," writes Mrs. Nannie Bunnell, of Waco, Texas. "My appetite was poor and I was restless at night. One day, I decided to try Cardui. After my first bottle, I felt better and stronger. I continued taking it until I had taken six bottles, after which I felt well on the road to recovery." ... During the change of life, a woman should be strengthened against the major changes that are taking place. Take Cardui. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The sermon at the morning hour was preached by Rev. Murray Cox, who brought a helpful message, and the sermon at the evening hour was preached by the writer.

Other visitors not already mentioned were: Rev. V. G. Clifford, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District; C. A. Schultz and T. O. Prewitt of Hattiesburg, J. F. Campbell of Laurel, and Otto Porter of McComb.

Henry Tom Burton, from the Philadelphia circuit and Caswell Loyd Skinner, from Poplar Springs, were licensed to preach, and Norman Udell Boon was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission.

Seventeen principal and five alternate delegates were elected to the Annual Conference. They are as follows: Principal; L. P. Brown, W. D. Hawkins, J. W. Dement, J. B. Holland, S. J. Creekmore, H. M. Ivy, Mrs. D. L. St. John, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, P. L. Blackwell, W. E. Hopkins, T. H. Naylor, G. W. Mars, Miss Lillibec Phillips, C. G. Stokes, S. O. Moore, O. S. Hopkins, and C. M. Davis. Alternate: H. A. Gower, W. A. Davenport, M. G. Matheney, J. H. Minor, and F. B. DeWeese.

Rev. J. L. Neill and the people of East End entertained in their usual manner, and I feel that everyone enjoyed the conference.

With our efficient and brotherly presiding elder leading, we are looking for great things in the district this year.

T. E. NICHOLSON, Sect'y.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Corinth District Conference was in session at New Albany, Miss., May 9 and 10, under the very able and courteous leadership of Rev. J. D. Wroten. The work was dispatched orderly and speedily yet without undue haste, giving ample consideration to every phase of the work of the district and to all visiting representatives of the various causes and institutions of Methodism.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the opening of the Conference. The finest spirit of brotherhood prevailed throughout the session. Optimism rang out in all the reports. One visitor who had attended all the district conferences of North Mississippi reported ours was the best attended of any that he had visited.

Quite a number of the former pastors of New Albany were present. Also among the visitors was to be noted on both days the presence of Rev. W. L. Stormont, the beloved presiding elder of the Sardis-Grenada District. Among other visitors were Rev. C. L. Rogers of Sardis, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, Rev. R. G. Lord, Rev. W. C. Newman, Dr. D. M. Key, Rev. O. H. Scott of Enterprise, Miss., Dr. Hedden, superintendent Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. H. C. Lewis, Rev. G. A. Baker, Rev. Mellville Johnson, Rev. J. D. Edwards of Oklahoma, Rev. W. N. Dodds, and pastors of other denominations from the local churches of New Albany.

One of the outstanding features of the Conference was a series of talks on Training in Worship given at the devotional periods by one of our own pastors, Rev. E. M. Sharp. Brother J. G. Houston, Conference lay leader, arranged a very interesting and helpful program on lay activities, using in connection with himself three other lay speakers: C. H. Curd, W. R. McCormack, and Dr. A. W. Mildren. These brethren made splendid addresses on different phases of the work of the laity.

Two brethren were licensed to preach, W. L. Whitener of Tishomingo and H. E. Bass of Corinth.

The climax was reached in the series of sermons preached by Dr. George Stoves of Memphis. The large auditorium was filled at every service. His messages were plain, sound, and energized with the power of the Spirit, thereby making them a source of inspiration to everyone who heard him.

Our pastor-host, Rev. N. J. Golding, with the co-operation of his good people left nothing undone in the way of providing entertainment in the most gracious manner. The hospitality and congenial spirit could not be excelled. No doubt this conference will hold a cherished place in the memory of those who attended for many years to come.

W. R. CROUCH, Sect'y.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 9.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Methodists are monotheists, but not unitarians; trinitarians, but not tritheists. We believe in the Creator who works for us, the Revealer who works with us, the Interpreter who works in us—in a God who works for us and with us and in us, one God manifesting himself through appropriate activities through the centuries. The glory and orderliness of God are declared by the heavens; his fatherhood and fellowship are manifest in Jesus Christ; his universal presence and co-operation attested by the Holy Spirit.

In order to meet the needs and limitations of the human, it was necessary for God to manifest himself in the flesh. In Jesus, men saw the nearness, the sympathy, the helpfulness of God as never before. However, God in the flesh is God localized and so limited in time and place. More pathos has not been crowded into words than in the cry of Mary: "If thou hadst been here," when her heart was crushed with bereavement. Spiritual reality must succeed and supplant physical presence. It was expedient for the disciples that the Teacher withdraw. Too long dependent upon him, they would suffer in vision and vigor. In him they had found the Father. In his co-operative plan, it is quite as necessary that they find themselves. They must learn to work in the spirit of the Master rather than under his hand and eye. Knowing the shock that would come, he speaks to them the most comforting words known to the human heart: "Let not your heart be troubled—I go—I send a Comforter who will abide." Henceforth, God's great work with men is to be done from the inside.

It is only from within that men may be made to recognize the heinousness of sin. It is the province of the Spirit to convict, to reprove with smiting conscience so as to awaken genuine and thorough repentance. It belongs to him to convince the world that the way of Christ is the way of perfect righteousness. In the contrast between sin and righteousness, clear and definite judgment is pronounced against evil and its author. In the white light of his presence there is no dull, pagan gray, but the sharp clear lines of right and wrong define the way of life and conduct. All Christian goodness is inspired goodness. It is godlikeness, "it is God that worketh in us." Without the indwelling Spirit, our religion is but ancient history, an out-worn creed. We need him for comfort in times of sorrow, depression, defeat. We need his guidance into truth, for "showing us"—helping us to understand—the things of Christ. We need him to help our infirmities, to strengthen us in weakness, to suggest and direct us in our prayers that they may not be sordid and selfish—and who has not felt that Spirit within himself stirring his own spirit with agonized groanings that cannot find utterance in human speech? We need him for courage that we may be delivered from bondage to fear. We need him for guidance—only those can be sons of God "who are led by his Spirit."

To be spiritual is to have the Spirit. One may have spirituality in any useful activity. Plowmen have possessed it and preachers have lacked it. It is not mere emotion, though surely emotions will be deeply stirred when one comes into conscious relation with God and realizes that he is a "joint heir with Christ." Spiritual life must permeate and dominate all other life—physical, intellectual, social, economic. It is the "life abundant," filling and fulfilling all other life. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is not one of his."

"A TRIBUTE TO FATHER"

You were, through the years,
Through the sunshine and tears,
The best Dad a home ever had;
And this I know,
As the days come and go,
I'll love and cherish your memory, Dad.

On April 5th, Friday morning, at 11:30 o'clock, God saw fit to take from our midst our precious father, Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Newton, Miss. There is a vacant place in our home that can never be filled. We shall miss his tender affection and his splendid fatherly advice but we would not, though we could, call him back from his home in Heaven, where many joys awaited him, to this cruel world of sin and strife. He has gone to be with his Lord whom he loved and so faithfully served for forty-two years; and he has left us a record and a name to be proud of. Father's life was beautiful to us and it left an impression that only eternity can erase. His memory shall ever be a guiding star to heaven. I never one time knew him to put self ahead of God and the ones he loved; he constantly denied himself for his family. Not only did his family love him but so did those with whom he came in contact and expressed it in various ways. His sweet disposition and Christian character was beautiful in the home and was a magnet which drew people to him. Father was always a friend to man; he did not seek fortune or fame but moved in his quiet, unassuming manner doing good where he could and always had a word of cheer for those who had fallen by the wayside. He held no dream of fortune vast nor did he seek a place among the famous wise, but he lived his life on earth, contented to the end if but even a few should know his worth and proudly call him a friend. Father's creed was: to live as gently as he could,

A Vegetable Laxative
That Thousands Like

So many men and women have proved their preference for Thedford's Black-Draught, by buying it as needed, that you ought to try it if you are not really enthusiastic about the laxative medicine you have been using. Far and near, for nearly 100 years, Thedford's Black-Draught has been the standby of thousands of families as a laxative for the relief of constipation and many bad feelings due to faulty elimination. Surely it must be very good in its way to have had such long, widespread use. Let Thedford's Black-Draught help to bring you better health when you need a reliable, purely vegetable laxative.

to be, no matter where a man and take what came of good or ill and still hold to faith and honor, to have no secret place within to stoop to sin nor shame but to be the same alone as when every deed was known, to live undaunted, unafraid of any step he made and be without pretense or sham, exactly what man thought he was. There are two kinds of persons, and he was the kind I would like to be. Some preach their virtues and some express their lives by what they do, that kind was he. He wasn't cheap nor shallow but his course ran deep and it was pure and noble; if ever a man was free and independent, it was he. He always fought the fight out in the open and didn't care what others said about his fight as long as he believed he was right. No broken pledges lost him respect; he met all men with head erect. When he passed to his home in heaven I think a soul went to yonder firmament so white, so splendid and so fine, it came according to God's design.

"I am grateful to Heaven
For blessings it's sent,
For peace and good friends,
For success and content,
And for skies bright and blue.
But most grateful of all,
For a father like you."

MILLSAPS MEMORIAL CHURCH
JACKSON, MISS.

At the regular meeting of the board of stewards, Millsaps Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., in May, a resolution was unanimously adopted thanking the pastor, Rev. W. L. McCormick, for the good work he is doing for our Church.

Since coming to us last November Brother McCormick has labored diligently for the good of the church, he has increased the attendance at all services and our collections are in excess of same date of last year. Brother McCormick has not only gained the love of the entire church membership but of the entire community.

Our benevolence claims were paid in full by district conference, May 6. The board of stewards did not believe the money could be raised in full but Brother McCormick believed it could and like everything else he has attempted since coming here he got the money.

Brother McCormick is now having extensive repairs made to Sunday school rooms and when completed we will be splendidly equipped to handle the increasing number of young people attending.

FROM PARCHMAN, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Permit me to have a few words to the brethren! In the first place I desire to thank each individual as well as the different congregations for all past donations of literature. I also desire the continuous co-operation in this matter. We are in need at present of all the old Sunday school literature you have on hand, and any and all religious magazines and books you can let us have. We still have about five hundred boys up here in the Penitentiary and many of them enjoy good reading. Quite a number of these fellows are striving under God to improve themselves, many of them express a desire to return to their homes for the purpose of making good citizens. Will you help me by helping them? Send all material to J. H. Moore, Parchman, Miss. Again, let me thank you from the depths of my heart for your past contributions to these boys. I am speaking for those who cannot speak for themselves. The Lord is blessing me as I seek to lift the burdens here too heavy to be borne. Your Brother in His service,

J. H. MOORE, Chaplain,
Miss. State Penitentiary.

PAUL AT THESSALONICA

Thessalonica was the largest city in Macedonia. It stood on the site of the modern Saloniki. In this free city, the Roman pro-consul made his headquarters. Into this strategic stronghold under the very shadow of Mt. Olympus, the fabled home of the multitude of ancient gods, came Paul. In Acts 17, we read: "They came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews; And Paul as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures, Opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ. And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few." From this passage we see the gospel that Paul preached and the type of men and women that composed the new Church at Thessalonica. Let us study them further.

I The work of Paul as revealed in I Thessalonians 2.

a. His preaching was fearless. I Thessalonians 2:3-5: "For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile; but as we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God, which trieth our hearts. For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloke of covetousness, God is witness." Paul was a faithful preacher.

b. His humility. "Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others," verse 6.

c. His tenderness. "But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children: so being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us." Verses 7 and 8.

d. His sacrificial labor. "For ye remember, brethren, our labor and travail: for laboring night and day, because we would not be chargeable to any of you." Verse 9.

e. His holy life. "Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly, and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe." Verse 10.

II The Thessalonian Christians as revealed in I Thessalonians 1 and 2.

a. Received God's word. "Ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God which effectually worketh also in you that believe." 2:13.

b. Became Christian disciples. "And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction with joy in the Holy Ghost." 1:6.

c. Exercised their faith unto godliness. "Remembering without ceasing your work of faith and labor of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ in the sight of God and our Father." 1:3.

d. Became examples. "So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia." Verse 7. How their light shone!

e. Evangelistic and missionary zeal. "For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything." 1:8.

f. Conversion shown in that "ye turned from idols to serve the living and true God." 1:9.

PRAYER

We thank Thee for the faithful ministers of Thy word who faithfully, fearlessly, yet tenderly proclaim Thy truth. We thank Thee for Thy people that receive Thy Word and apply it in their work of faith, labor of love, and patience of hope. Help us to batter all idols to pieces and serve the living and true God. Help us to sound forth the Word of the Lord everywhere. We ask in Jesus' name.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT PASTORS PLAN REVIVALS

At a meeting of pastors and laymen from the twelve charges of the northern part of the Brookhaven District, held at Center Point on May 16, plans and methods for conducting summer revivals were discussed. The program was centered around the doctrine of Conviction. Enthusiasm marked the discussion of such topics as, "The Need of a Revival," "The Layman's Part," "Conditions to be Met," and "Conserving the Results." Highlights of the meeting were the round table and the sermon on Conviction preached by Rev. J. L. Carter, of Crystal Springs. The ladies of the Center Point church served a bountiful lunch at the noon hour.

The next group meeting in this section of the district will be held at Silver Creek on June 13, and the program will be a continuation of the discussion of the revival theme.

JAMES ALEXANDER BURNS AN APPRECIATION BY A SON

The darkest hours of my life, in some senses, have just passed. Yesterday, 13th, inst., we buried my father, James Alexander Burns, at Saltillo, Miss. He was born July 6, 1853 at Russellville, Ala. His father, Alexander Green Burns, a nephew of Dr. A. L. P. Green, of Nashville, Tenn., and Vanderbilt University of the early days of its history, married Catherine Russell, in the Alabama town which bears her maiden name.

In the early fifties grandfather moved to what is now Prentiss County near Baldwin, Miss., where he reared his family and died in 1902.

Father was married to Elizabeth Hutcheson, niece of Rev. Houston Osburn, of near Corinth, Miss., in 1872. To this union were born four children, two of whom: an infant daughter, died in April, 1880 when mother died, and Margaret Burns Jones of Birmingham, Miss., died in December, 1896. Two sons Rev. John B. Burns, pastor of the Methodist Church of Ethel, Miss., and the writer, who is the pastor of the Poplar Creek charge near Valden, Miss., survive him.

In 1883 he was married to Pamela Jane Kilburn of Gravelly Hill, Ark., to whom were born six boys and seven girls as follows: Dr. Eliam B. Burns, Ecu, Miss.;

Dr. Ellis P. Burns, Biloxi, Miss.; Lee C. Burns, Floyd Ader, Texas; James Wheeler Burns, East St. Louis, Mo.; Leonard A. Burns, and Walter Burns of Saltillo, Miss.; Mrs. H. J. Blissard, Tupelo, Miss.; Mrs. Frank Felker, Saltillo, Miss.; Mrs. Elbert Wilson, Corinth, Miss.; Mrs. C. S. Chittom, Leland, Miss.; Mrs. H. L. Magers, Kossuth, Miss.; Mrs. James Kev, Shiloh National Park, Nashville, Tenn.; and Mrs. Ross Griffin, Columbus, Miss., all of whom began their public life as teachers in the state schools of Mississippi, some of whom are still teaching. Only two of the children were unable to attend the funeral, Mrs. Blissard of Tupelo, Miss., who is very sick with pneumonia, and Lee C. Burns, who is also sick.

The deceased was converted in early manhood under the ministry of the lamented Rev. D. W. Babb of North Mississippi Conference, and joined the Methodist Church. He was an earnest Christian and an unassuming official of his church most of his life. He possessed a great faith and quietly went about his daily tasks, being an active Christian, a devoted husband, a kind father, and a great friend to all who knew him. His children all followed him into the Methodist Church.

In the absence of his pastor, Rev. E. M. Shaw, whom he loved, Dr. H. F. Brooks, a neighboring pastor of Tupelo, Miss., conducted the burial service from the little brick church where he and part of his family held their membership for many years. He was quietly laid to rest in the cemetery there, with appropriate Masonic rites conducted by the local lodge, and visiting Masons from several adjoining counties. The six older sons, who are Master Masons, were the active pallbearers for the occasion.

Father was never a man of wealth but had owned a modest little home for several years, where mother, Leonard and Walter will continue to live. The older of the doctor boys, Eli B. Burns, of Ecu, Miss., and a sister, Mrs. Felker, gave him their constant attention during the six months of serious illness. Others of us who were not so near attended him as much as circumstances would permit. While we will all miss him, especially on our family reunion days, July 6, his birthday, we know where he is sweetly resting, and are hopeful "Some sweet day" to join him, and other loved ones with all saints where "Parting will never more come."

MILLARD ALEXANDER BURNS.

LUCY MIXER

Lucy Mixer was born at the home of her father, Mr. Charles Mixer, in the Parish of St. Landry, La., near Le Moy-en, September 28, 1861, and departed this life Thursday, March 14, 1935. She united with the church in the early years of childhood, at Big Cane, La. She was of a modest, quiet, retiring, disposition, preferring the comfort and peace of her home, rather than the call of the outer social world. Herein she nurtured and developed that faith in her divine Lord and Savior that no doubt mitigated the suffering and pain that she underwent during a protracted siege of illness. The gentle, tender and patient ministries of her devoted sisters, Rosa and May, and the sympathetic, kindly presence from time to time, of relatives and friends attested the deep love and esteem with which she was held.

When the time came for release from the pain and toil of this earthly life she was ready to answer the Master's call.

A large concourse of friends and relatives attended the funeral, which was held in the chapel near the home, at Le Moyen, La., and the beautiful, silent offerings of flowers, enshrining the casket were tokens of affection and tender regard. The hearts of many were sad as her pastor, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, read the service and spoke fitting words of assurance to those present, for God's children sorrow not as those who have no confident hope.

S. J. DAVIES.

JOHN BROWN

(Joseph P. Pollia, Sculptor)

(Published by courtesy New York Bible Society)

Interest in this monument to John Brown, recently erected at Lake Placid, New York, does not center in the insurrection for which he lost his life; but in his utter devotion to the cause of Negro emancipation to which he gave his life. Acknowledgment of the courtesy of Zion's Herald in securing this cut is hereby made.

THE PEOPLE OF TOKYO, according to Kagawa, who fled for their lives during the great earthquake, clung to their possessions so tenaciously that the policemen were continually crying, "Throw away your baggage." And despite the efforts of policemen, thousands perished in the flames when the silks which they were trying to save caught fire. Such are the tragedies for which our belongings are responsible, in all times and countries.

THE CELEBRATION OF the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Cokesbury College was held at Abingdon, Maryland, last week. On May 30, 1785, Asbury says that he and Dr. Coke "took a bond for the conveyance of ground." This was the first actual transaction in the founding of the first Methodist College in America. Before the century had ended, the magnificent dream of the Methodists had been twice reduced to ashes, but the daring and faith of those educational pioneers of the Church still challenges the admiration of the world.

SIR RAMSEY MacDONALD, according to press dispatches of the week, has resigned as Premier of Britain, an office which he has held for practically seven years. Mr. MacDonald is a representative of labor, but for some years he has been the head of a coalition or national government. Mr. Stanley Baldwin, who has been Premier before, will succeed to the post made vacant by the resignation of Mr. MacDonald. Politically Mr. MacDonald is a conservative, and personally he is a man of ability and character. He is in no respect a novice in affairs of government administration. The new cabinet remains "national" in name, but it is Conservative in fact.

DOCTOR W. E. ORCHARD, who left the Church of England and joined the Roman Catholic Church three years ago, is to receive ordination as a priest in that Church according to The Christian World, London. Dr. Orchard was an Anglo-Catholic in the Church of England, and he has had to wait three years after his reception into his new faith before being admitted to ordination. The explanation of The Catholic Times is that the ordination was made conditional "because of the grave doubts concerning the validity of his previous orders derived from Nestorian sources." After three years of investigation, an inerrant Pope sends the case back to the "new Archbishop of Westminster" for his approval.

WILEY COLLEGE, A SCHOOL FOR NEGROES, located at Marshall, Texas, has recently received a gift of $125,000. This sum and other amounts were matched by the General Education Board, and the endowment has been increased by $300,000. The College is sixty-two years old, and is said to be the oldest, the largest and the strongest Negro school west of the Mississippi. It is now rated as an "A" Grade college, by the Southern Association of Colleges; and Matthew W. Dogan has been the president for the past thirty-nine years.

SIR CHARLES MARSTON, a wealthy bicycle manufacturer of England, is devoting himself and his fortune to archaeological research work in the Holy Land, in an effort to establish the historical accuracy of the Bible record. He claims that his excavations in Jericho show that the walls fell flat in the year 1440 B. C., according to the account of the Scriptures. At Lachish, a town twenty-five miles distant from Jerusalem, a water pitcher with script writing upon it was discovered. This he claims proves that the Israelites used the alphabet before the Phoenicians, to whom its invention is commonly credited.

THE DEDICATION OF THE BEAUTIFUL CHAPEL at Duke University occupied the second day of the recent commencement occasion. In the course of his splendid dedicatory address, Dean Lynn Harold Hough said: "You may say that all sanctions of the Christian faith have been given material form, and as you move through the nave, the transept and the choir, as you sense the symbolism of the pulpit and altar, the impact of the Christian faith comes mightily upon the mind. The cathedral on the campus is a summons to men to find the synthesis of all experience in Jesus Christ."

OF JANE ADDAMS, who died a few days ago, it is said that her perfect poise and self-possession remained with her to the end. In one of her last messages to her fellow-workers, she is credited with saying that she had no hope of "changing human nature," but that she did "hope to modify human behavior." And when her doctor told her that within a half hour she must submit to another major operation, her unperturbed reply was: "Very well; that will give me time to finish this book." Having lived all her life for others, she went down into the shadows of death unafraid.

MRS. DOSS DIES

News comes, as we go to press, of the death of Mrs. Doss, wife of Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., of Homer, La., in a Shreveport hospital early Monday morning. Dr. Doss and Dr. Keller Doss and wife were at the bedside when the end came. The funeral was held at Homer, La., where Dr. Doss is pastor of the church, at 4 p.m. Tuesday. This notice is inserted that Dr. Doss' friends may know of the great sorrow which has come to him. A fuller account will be given later.

GENERAL LEE

Last week we carried without comment the editorial of Zion's Herald in defence of the character and moral courage of General Lee. While we regret the incident which called forth the editorial, we no less sincerely appreciate the fine spirit of Dr. Hartman's tribute to our great Southern soldier and hero. The South does not ask to be patronized, it is not so devoid of vanity as to be unaffected by praise, and it is greatly moved by sincere and forthright appreciation of the honor, the conviction and the courage of those who, like General Robert E. Lee, had a large share in the making of our history, both in the War between the States and after. We are grateful for the candid and outspoken words of Dr. Hartman in giving a true and unprejudiced perspective of a man whose very ashes still reflect the splendor of his great soul.

THE CONSTITUTION

In the public and press discussions of the last few days there has been a noticeable reaction against the Constitution. The complaint is that it is too "firmly fixed." According to press reports, Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture is among those contributing to this agitation for an easier and a more popular method of modification. The circumstances under which this agitation arose leave no doubt as to the reason for this sudden dissatisfaction with this impersonal and non-political charter of popular rights. It is the hasty speech of those whose ambitions have been thwarted by the guarantees of that time-honored document. We do not accept the theory that a popular referendum is either a proper or a sane method for making changes in our Constitution. The very conditions which might cause a referendum to be invoked would mean such a warping of popular judgment as to make change dangerous. It would give every demagogue his supreme opportunity, by providing the very atmosphere in which selfishness and cheap politics thrive. It occurs to us that "this emergency" is being worked over time by those who would centralize all power in the national government at Washington. We do not minimize the economic and social problems of the hour, but we can not bring ourselves to believe that it should be made possible to subordinate the Constitution to political feeling and desire. Neither do we think that responsible public officials should use great academic occasions to inveigh against the very document which they are sworn to execute, and particularly before audiences of more or less immature minds. Personally we feel much reassured by the fact that we have such a fixed and immovable document between us and some of the over-night theories now in vogue. We are for the Courts and the Constitution, and we will not support any measure that would take the people at their weakest moment for breaking down their strongest and surest defences.

SOCIAL REGENERATION

The Supreme Council Bulletin (Masonic) carried in the last issue an article which makes earnest plea for a more careful and discriminating rearing and educating of the children of the present generation, in order that the tragic and ignominious end of criminal outlaws during the last few years may not be repeated. The writer insists that boys and girls must be brought to realize that the transgressor treads a thorny path. The responsibility for that instruction, he says, does not rest upon the public school, the courts, nor upon bureaus of police; it is a responsibility which even the Church can not successfully discharge; and it rests, as it has rested from the beginning, at the family fireside. Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, with an academic approach, made this observation recently: "Knowledge is a very devastating thing unless it be put to noble uses. The disciplined mind and the skillful hand may become a menace to mankind unless perpetually used for the service of those values in which life finds its richest meaning. It is of the utmost importance that the students who move about the campus, whatever be their differences as to great religious sanctions, shall commit themselves to permanent loyalty to those values without which society would break apart." We are persuaded that the faith which makes strong in the hour of temptation is no sporadic form of loyalty, the reflection of social or academic culture, or a thing adopted because of an inspiring contact. At its best, it is a seed sown in the tender soul of a child and it grows into power and authority by the processes of spiritual care and cultivation which establish great ideals and build noble character. It is one of the tragedies of civilization that so many homes are willing to abandon the moral and spiritual tuition of their children to hired or benevolent agencies. Yes, boys and girls must be brought to know that the way of the transgressor is hard; but parents need to realize that no hired mourner can bear the shame and the heartache of a home disgraced by those whom proper parental interest and solicitude might have saved.

A GREAT CHURCH

One often hears the thoughtless reference to Methodism as "our great Church." Every earnest soul must sometime wonder how much of such a claim is truth, and how much sheer boasting. Of course, historically and numerically ours is a great Church; but such are largely achievements of the past—water below the mill. The greatness for which we are responsible and about which we should be concerned, relates to the spiritual and social potentiality of the Church today. In this connection, it may humble us, but it will ultimately help us, to inquire: Has our Methodism such a consciousness of God as to give it a prophetic vision of its task? Has it such a sympathetic understanding of human need as to give it a great passion for souls? Has it the courage born of a great call and a great commission? Has it the abiding assurance and backing of the Holy Spirit? No church is greater than its impact upon its generation. The expert artilleryman will tell you that the trajectory of his gun is determined dynamically, not historically. The curve of Methodist greatness will not be more impressive than its affirmations touching these great questions, and the water below the mill is largely fuss and foam.

NOTICE

In order to conserve the highest interests of us all, it becomes both wise and necessary for us to ask the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference to meet in Shreveport on the campus of Centenary College, Tuesday morning, June 18, at 9 o'clock. This instead of the meeting at Alexandria, as originally announced.

SOME COMMON ERRORS EXPOSED

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D.

Many cling to the idea that if they read the Bible often, say prayers and go to church and are baptized members, they are, therefore, Christians and all right. But divine revelation and common human experience prove that one may do this and much more and still be faulty and un-Christlike.

Others fall into the opinion that if observances of such matters as mentioned above do not make them Christians, then they may as well neglect all such forms of worship; that they can become Christian at home and by their own methods. They overlook the fact that while such observances do not constitute them Christians, they are means of grace and are intended to help to fellowship with God and His people, and are among the ways of letting one's light properly shine for God's glory and the good of our fellowmen. We never approach God helpfully in a wrong way. We do not bless others by disobedience and folly on our part. For our own sake and for the sake of others we need to utilize all that is offered through Jesus Christ. The Word and forms of worship are not ends in themselves, but are intended to help us to right condition and relationship and to keep us there.

Perhaps an increasing number contend that proper religious education dispenses with the need of the new birth. Jesus himself declared that "that which is born of flesh is flesh" and that "ye must be born again." It is not true that it is Methodistic to do away the necessity of the new birth, or that it is Christian. Proper Christian education does prevent much evil and may lead the child in tenderest years to accept and yield to Christ. Such early change is the new birth, based on faith.

WHAT I GOT FROM THE SEMINARY

A discussion of this sort must of necessity be individual. It could not be otherwise, depending first upon the student. It is entirely possible and no doubt true in many cases, that a student blunders through an entire course of Theology without grasping anything, while others taking the same courses and having the same contacts grow much. Again, it must be granted that seminaries differ. They are strong in different fields, having their popular professors in different courses, who turn students in those directions. Therefore this paper is useless except as it deals with my own particular case and it determines nothing with reference to anyone else or any other seminary.

Before I actually make observations of what I gained or failed to gain during my three years there, I want to pay tribute to a group of men in whom I found everything that is fine and lovable. I feel that this word of respect and appreciation is due from me, because I went there expecting them to be horned creatures with their talons ready to snatch my childhood faith away. I had been so thoroughly poisoned against them that I was slower getting into my work than was at all necessary. Instead, I found a group of men who were the essence of patience, sympathy, humility, and spirituality. No other group is so poorly represented as seminary professors. Students come from their classes, never giving their professors credit for ideas they have originated. They go to their respective pulpits and pour out those thoughts as though they were their own. Neither are these men invited to fill pulpits for any occasions except it be during a vacation or a slim Sunday service. I find them an unenviable, but a great group.

What I Got From the Seminary

I shall begin the evaluation by saying I got the impetus for some real thinking, free thinking. This came about by simply being asked, "Why?" and taught to ask the same question. It is remarkable how far one is inclined to go in the answer to that one word question, "Why?" I was astounded at the few reasons I had for thinking and believing things I considered indispensable. There is no question about this being the seminary's greatest contribution to me. To be sure it led me into the wilderness and I wandered about in total darkness for some time because I had never had so much as an elementary course in Bible before entering, having graduated from a state institution preparatory to teaching. In bewilderment I once wrote my presiding elder back home, "I am lost in a fog, I do not know what I think or believe, throw me an anchor." Wisely he told me that I would come through it, and also added a few things I should not let slip away. I am coming through, at least to my own satisfaction and happiness.

It placed me in an intellectual atmosphere such as exists nowhere other than around such an institution, therefore I felt more inclined to add to free thinking and loud talking, intensive study. It was the proper thing to do there. An actual premium was placed upon digging into books and periodicals which not only gave the contents of those books, but familiarized the reader with writers in the field, who would write later works on those and other subjects. The campus was hardly ever without the presence of some character of note, either man or woman. To read from those is one thing, but to hear them, to actually meet them and occasionally sit in a smaller circle with them for discussion of questions and problems vital to us all, was indeed a privilege. This too would send one back to the shelves for more information. And here would be a good place to note the presence of adequate library facilities. One is more inclined to study when everything he needs for the task is available. All of the books, magazines, and periodicals are organized so perfectly that the least apt student can find them, and librarians will do even that for the mere asking.

Many other things should no doubt be discussed, if time and space would permit. One more contribution made by the seminary, which would be difficult for any thing else to make, deserves mention. It familiarized me with my world. By that I simply mean it built up friendships with those who will be contemporaries in the ministry. Even at this early date I hear of some man who is doing well in a field perhaps clear across the country, even in a distant land and I recall the time I sat in a class with him. I could never have known him had I not gone to seminary. As time goes on, I look forward to that being a frequent occurrence. I love to know as many as possible of those men and women who are to carry on our church along with me in the various sections of the world.

What I Failed to Get From the Seminary

If this should overbalance the other, it would be tragic indeed. In honesty to those who did so much for me there, I desire to say they do not, in my own mind, even though I may give that impression as I mention things I failed to get.

I failed to get inspiration. I received more inspiration from my church in a few weeks than I got in three years at the university. Emphasis was not placed upon people. They taught me to love knowledge, books, truth, and it was only after I got out and found a group of people with problems, heartaches, pains, that I was inspired very much. I hope that is a unique reaction, but it is an honest one.

Further, I failed to get a very good connection between the seminary and the outside. When I came out I was inclined to ask, "Well, what do I do now?" Before I left the campus, however, I had personal interviews with my professors, those I was closest to, and they prevented either of two things which would have followed. First, floundering about and not being able to fit into the outside world very well; or, secondly, the junking of everything I had got in the seminary. I would never have allowed myself to be a total misfit. I would have junked all I got in the seminary first. These interviews saved that, but they came as extra. The regular course did not take off those edges which were rough and sharp in spots.

Then the seminary did not connect very well, its material with the church program. Men can come out with relatively no knowledge of the Methodist Church program. There is an impractical nature to much of the knowledge gained. Surely some time should be devoted to actually learning how our Christian education program is organized and functions. For example, I failed to preach one sermon during my three years, and prepared only one which was neither read nor criticized. I merely name two other items. Public speaking was inadequate, but how dreadfully needed. Church music, while required several terms, was wasted time, as it was presented. I need to have some one teach me something about the Methodist hymnal as badly as I need nearly anything. I wish our professors could be sent back into the fields occasionally to freshen up a bit by rubbing elbows with people. They both need and deserve this privilege, I am sure. * * *

REV. E. D. PHILLIPS DIES

Dear Dr. Duren:

Rev. L. J. Power, my presiding elder, requested that I send the notice of the death and burial of one of our superannuates, Rev. E. D. Phillips of McNeill, Mississippi.

Brother Phillips died early Friday morning, May 31, and was buried from the Methodist church in McNeill at three o'clock Sunday afternoon, June 2, 1935.

Brother Phillips was licensed to preach September 9, 1876, in Florida, was admitted on trial and received into full connection in the South Georgia Conference, transferred to the Mississippi Conference in 1903 and labored continuously until his superannuation at the Conference of 1913, in which relation he continued until death.

During the last three years of his life he was confined to his room and bed. His funeral was conducted at the Methodist church in McNeill which was erected during his pastorate there. The following ministers were present and took part: Rev. L. J. Power, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Rev. R. L. Lane, his pastor, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. J. E. Williams, Rev. Mr. Miller of the local Presbyterian church, Rev. G. H. Thompson, who made the principal address, and the writer. The body was laid to rest beside that of his wife who preceded him to the kingdom above by about three years.

W. B. ALSWORTH.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT AND THE ORPHANAGE

Mr. Fred McDonald, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, Miss., will visit the following group quarterly conferences in the Greenwood District, bringing with him a number of the children from the Home, to sing, read, etc.:

Winona, Winona Circuit and Duck Hill, at Bluff Springs (Winona Ct.), Tuesday, June 18.

Greenwood, Itta Bena, Minter City and Schlater, at Schlater, Wednesday, June 19.

Black Hawk, Carrollton and Acona, at Black Hawk, Thursday, June 20.

Each service will begin at 10:30 a.m. with a program by Brother McDonald and his children. This is not a money raising campaign. We are endeavoring to give our people a chance to see our own children and get better acquainted with the fine work that is being done in our Home at Jackson.

A. T. McILWAIN, P. E.

SEASHORE PICNIC

Please announce, if you can find space for it, in next week's issue of the Advocate, the pastors of the Seashore District and their families will have a picnic at the district parsonage, on beach, two miles west of Gulfport, Friday, June 21.

This is to be a get-together meeting of all the pastors and their families—picnic guests of the presiding elder, and his family.

We extend to you and Mrs. Duren a most cordial invitation to be our guests on that day.

sionary Societies, early in the nineteenth century. The Missionary and Bible Society of the Methodist Church was organized in New York in 1819, and it was adopted as a church-wide institution by the General Conference of 1820. Immediately following the adjournment, the newly established Society turned its attention to the work outlined in the Address sent out by the managers the year before. The independent mission which John Stewart, a Negro preacher, established among the Wyandots, had been adopted by the Ohio Conference in 1819, and it was taken over by the Missionary Society in 1820. Missions were established among the Indians of Tennessee and Kentucky in 1821; William Capers was appointed to open missions among the Creeks of Alabama and Georgia in 1822; and stations were opened for the Mohawks and others in 1823. These missions to the Indians were rapidly expanded and soon included the Cherokees, Choctaws, Oneidas, Shawnees, Senecas, and even the Flat Heads in far away Oregon were not overlooked. Jason and Daniel Lee were sent to that region in 1834. In 1844, the year in which the Church was divided, the Indian Mission Conference was organized. This Conference adhered to the Southern Church, and in 1846 the report showed 22 missions, 32 missionaries, 9 churches, and 3,404 members.

Another object listed in the Address of 1813 was the French in Louisiana. The population of this section, which was originally settled by emigrants from France and Spain, was overwhelmingly Roman Catholic; and no field ever offered greater resistance to Protestant approach or made poorer response to the efforts of the missionary. In 1805 Elisha Bowman was sent to Louisiana. The Minutes give his appointment as Opelousas, but in a letter written to William Burke of Kentucky, January 29, 1806, he says that he went first to New Orleans and failing to gain an entrance to the city, he left for Opelousas, on December 17, 1805. New Orleans does not appear in the Minutes as an appointment until 1811, when Miles Harper was sent. His success was not greater than had been that of Bowman six years before, and at the Conference of 1812 Lewis Hobbs was assigned to the city. He was ill unto death, but he made another vain effort to secure a footing for the Methodists. At the Mississippi Conference held in November 1813, William Winans was appointed to New Orleans. The name of the city then disappears from the Minutes until the Conference, October 29, 1818, which sent Mark Moore as "Missionary to New Orleans." He was followed the next year by John Menefee who had been presiding elder of the Louisiana District. Menefee had an attack of yellow fever in 1820 and he located at the Conference of that year. Ebenezer Brown of the New York Conference was then assigned to New Orleans. He came with a supply of Bibles and Testaments in French and Spanish, furnished by the American Bible Society; but after a year of fruitless effort he returned to his home Conference, and New Orleans again disappears from the Minutes. It is said that its abandonment was seriously considered and, but for the earnest pleading of Ashley Hewit, presiding elder of the Louisiana District, it might have been dropped. In December, 1823, the effort in behalf of the city was renewed by the appointment of Daniel Hall as missionary with William Winans, presiding elder. The next year Benjamin M. Drake was sent, and with his administration the first signs of progress appeared. He reported for the first year 23 white and 60 colored members. The mission was not taken into the regular work of the Missionary Society, however, until 1828.

In 1820 there were probably only two Protestant church houses in New Orleans, a city of thirty-five thousand people, and one of them was owned by the Presbyterians. In 1818 Rev. Thomas Griffin, presiding elder of the Mississippi District, circulated in Adams and Franklin Counties of Mississippi, an appeal for help to build a Methodist church in New Orleans. The appeal was signed by John Pray, Alfred Soucier, and James N. Hyde; and on the reverse side was a subscription list containing the names of eighteen planters who pledged the sum of $276. But the first building was not completed for occupancy until 1826. Securing a meeting house was only one of the many obstacles which the Methodists encountered in New Orleans, and the slow growth of the church indicates the difficulty. Only 75 white and 570 colored members were reported to the Conference in December, 1838, and those figures represent a continuous effort over a period of fifteen years. But Methodism had at last secured a foothold in Louisiana and there were no more lapses. The Louisiana Conference was organized in 1846, by authority of the first General Conference of the Southern Church; and in 1860, the field that had so stubbornly resisted Methodist aggression took a place in the front rank for ministerial support and missionary offerings.

The work among the French and Spanish was extended eastward along the coast of Mississippi, Alabama and Florida. In December, 1824, Henry P. Cook was sent to begin work in Mobile and Pensacola, but the following year he fell a victim of yellow fever. He was succeeded by John R. Lambuth, a name destined to become famous in missionary enterprises around the world. He was the father of J. W. Lambuth of Mississippi, whose missionary ministry played so large a part in the Methodist history of China and Japan; and he was the grandfather of that princely leader and bishop of the church—Walter R. Lambuth whose body sleeps on the field consecrated by the labors of his distinguished father. Another interesting focus of French and Spanish missions is St. Augustine, Florida, the oldest town in North America, and one of the most immovable Roman also. Joshua N. Glenn opened a mission there in 1823; but after more than a hundred years of continuous occupation and effort, the Methodist Church has fewer than three hundred members. Such is the story of the heroic toil and sacrifice of the men who helped to win a place for Methodism among a people born and bred to Roman tradition and a hierarchy of priestly dominion.

The next missionary adventure of the Church was directed towards Africa, the Dark Continent, the toil of whose teeming millions has enriched all lands except their own. The social and spiritual destitution of the black-skinned tribes of the vast jungles was known to all Christian lands, but no great enthusiasm had been anywhere developed for their evangelization. Here we come again upon the missionary trail of the immortal Dr. Coke. In 1795 he sent a colony of farmers and mechanics to the region of the "Fulahs" on the Senegal River; but no preacher was sent, and he reported to the British Conference of 1796 that the colony had failed. At that same Conference, Archibald Murdock and William Patton were assigned to Africa, but there is no evidence that they went. Abel Stevens says that there is no other mention of Africa until 1811 when missionaries were sent to Serra Leone. It was contemplated, he thinks, that they would organize work among the natives, but they seem either to have confined their work to the English settlements, or to have had small success in their missionary endeavor.

The General Conference of 1828 recommended the opening of a mission in Liberia on the west coast of Africa. This was a colony founded in 1816, as a haven for Negroes who might not enjoy the privileges of citizenship in the United States. The Bishops were not able to find a suitable man for the perilous and responsible task until the Conference of 1832, when the recommendation was renewed. In a private conversation with Bishop Hedding, Melville B. Cox, of Virginia, offered to go to South America for the mission proposed there; but the Bishop proposed instead the mission to Africa. Cox wrote Bishop Hedding from Norfolk, Virginia, February 22, 1832, giving his consent to the undertaking, should the Bishops be pleased to accept him. Within a month after the adjournment of the General Conference, he received his commission which reads:

"New York, June 22, 1832.

"DEAR BROTHER:—As you have been appointed a Superintendent of the Mission to Liberia, it is your duty to enter upon said mission with all convenient and possible dispatch, to take the oversight of the people within the bounds of your mission, to do your utmost to promote the cause of God, by preaching, visiting from house to house, establishing schools, instructing the children, and doing all the duties peculiar to a Methodist preacher, as the Discipline directs. It is your duty also to make quarterly reports to the managers of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"Wishing you the blessings of God on your labors, we remain affectionately yours,

"R. R. ROBERTS,
"ELIJAH HEDDING."

Melville Cox was a man of tragic experiences, he was appointed to a continent with a tragic history, and his life was made radiant by the pathos of his tragic death. He was born in Hallowell, Maine, November 9, 1799; preached his first sermon at Readfield, December 17, 1820; was licensed to preach by the Kennebeck District in March, 1821; and he joined the Conference at Bath in 1822, when he was assigned to Exeter circuit. In 1825 he broke down with lung trouble; was a superannuate for two years; and located in 1828. He then went to Baltimore where he was married to "Ellen, the daughter of Mrs. Cromwell Lee," February 7, 1828. On December 31, 1829, his wife died, and on June 21, 1830, Martha, his little daughter died also and he was left alone. Cox described the year as a "moonless night" in his life, and such it certainly was, for he lost three brothers-in-law in addition to his wife and child. He was readmitted at the session of the Virginia Conference which met at Newbern, and was assigned to Raleigh, North Carolina. It was a year of severe trial both for the pastor and his people, as he was ill almost the entire year. It is likely that he was appreciated more for his saintliness and suffering than for any service that he was able to render. He sailed for Africa on November 6, 1832; landed in Liberia March 8, 1833; and his time was occupied with incessant activities until he was stricken with African fever, April 12. He died on Sunday, July 21, and his immortal epitaph, "Africa must be redeemed, though thousands perish," has been the missionary inspiration of a hundred years. His faith and resignation are recorded in words which he penned as he looked toward the far away shores of Africa: "If I am hungry, Elijah's God will feed me; if I die—alone—the God of Moses will take care of my body till the resurrection,

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. W. J. Ferguson writes that he is pleased with Biloxi, and that his work is making satisfactory progress in all particulars.

Rev. J. M. Guinn was assisted by Rev. W. R. Lott in a meeting at Eupora, Miss., recently. Twenty-two members were added to the church.

Duck Hill, Miss., and Rev. S. B. Potts are having a good time together. Brother Potts is delighted with the progress which the charge is making.

Rev. W. H. Wallace, of First Church, New Orleans, is taking a breathing spell in Texas, following his two weeks campaign at Homer, La., with Dr. Doss.

Rev. W. L. Atkins, of Fulton, Miss., is making full proof of his ministry there as he has done elsewhere. This is his fourth year, and his work moves with the freshness of the day he began.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, Epworth Church, New Orleans, has not been very well, following the strenuous revival campaign in his church, and he is spending a few days in Texas, for rest and recuperation.

Rev. A. J. Henry, of Sunflower, Miss., is over the top and still going strong in his Advocate campaign. We expect to send a check and a blue ribbon to Greenwood District, of which Sunflower is a part.

Rev. G. H. Boyles, of Houston, Miss., has just closed a fine revival in which he was assisted by Dr. H. F. Brooks of Tupelo. Mr. R. L. Cooper led the singing. There were thirteen accessions to the church.

Rev. M. E. Scott, pastor at Okolona, Miss., underwent an operation for appendicitis recently. The operation was performed in an Okolona hospital, and we are glad to know that he is recovering very satisfactorily.

Rev. C. T. Floyd has engaged one of the Gypsy Smiths to hold a meeting at Amory, Miss., beginning June 16. He is an evangelist living in Canada and is a relative of the Gypsy Smith of the British Wesleyan Church.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, who spent last Thursday in the city, reports a very satisfactory Pastors' School at Centenary College, Shreveport. The enrollment of preachers was not large, but there were many laymen to make up the lack.

A note from Brother W. H. Underwood, Watson, La., says that home-coming for Live Oak church will be on the third Sunday in July this year, and that Rev. A. W. Turner will preach the sermon. All former pastors are invited.

Dr. D. B. Raulins, of Carrollton Avenue Church, and Rev. W. R. Lyons, of Pearl River charge, attended the Pastors' School in Shreveport last week. Misses Mary Lou Swan and Carolyn Gwin, both of New Orleans, were in attendance also.

A co-operative daily vacation Bible school will be held at the Methodist church, Aberdeen, Miss., with Rev. C. G. Hamilton, rector of the Episcopal Church, as superintendent. Rev. W. R. Lott is the pastor of the Methodist Church.

From Brother J. H. Fleming we have the cheering word of a great revival at Crandall, Miss., in which Rev. T. R. Holt, the pastor, did the preaching. Nineteen members were added to the church and much good was done among those already members.

Rev. Paul H. Grice, of Gloster, Miss., reports progress on his work. The church building at Gloster has been re-roofed and otherwise improved; that at Crosby has been painted "inside and out;" and the parsonage has shared in the good will of his people.

A much appreciated card to the office from Rev. R. A. Sibley, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference living at Gulfport, says: "I prize the Christian Advocate next to my Bible." We sincerely hope that its ministry may continue to be a blessing to him.

The business office is in receipt of a much appreciated note from Dr. Serex, captain of the Advocate campaign for the Ruston District. The Advocate has no better or stauncher friend than Dr. Serex.

The Advocate wishes to make acknowledgment of a contribution of $8.50 to be used at our discretion. We use such contributions to carry the joy of the Advocate visits to those who feel that they can not afford to renew it, but to whom it has long been a precious friend.

Rev. A. B. Barry, pastor of Kingston Church, Laurel, Miss., sends us a list of fourteen subscribers and with it the more heartening word, "This list will be followed by one of equal size before the tenth instant." To this we say, "Thank you now, and thank you then."

Rev. S. A. Brown, Captain of the zone including Drew charge, Greenwood District, writes that the pastors have reported their Advocate quotas in full. The zone is composed of Drew, Tutwiler, Webb and Sumner, and Ruleville.

"WHATSOEVER"

A BOOK REVIEW

By J. D. Fomby

A novel by the above title came to my reading table recently as a gift from a friend. The theme of the book is, "And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Matt. 21-22. It is melodramatic story of the influence of sin and crime in the life of a Texas country community. The glamour of the screaming headlines of our daily papers is incomparably mixed with the beauty of Christian character. Faith in a prayer-answering God is pitted against the diabolical schemes of the underworld. That is my reason for considering the book unique and deserving a wide circulation. Its power to hold the interest of the thriller-novel reader and at the same time keeping before him the Christian's SAVING FAITH in the redemptive power of prayer. The ultra-conservative and cynical sceptic will find much that is objectionable. But anyone who will read the book sympathetically will discover a wealth of spiritual, moral and social materials in the hands of a splendid literary craftsman. There are some unforgettable characters.—The Southwest Press, Dallas, Texas.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Lake Charles District held its annual meeting in New Iberia on May 16. Mrs. J. N. McDonald, the district secretary, presided. The theme for the day was "Making Christ More Real." Mrs. A. C. LaSalle, president of the local auxiliary, welcomed the guests in a most gracious way, and Mrs. Ellis Smith responded.

Mrs. Crow Girard, daughter of Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, who was president of the Woman's Home Mission Society twenty-five years ago, gave the morning devotions, using for her subject "Making Christ More Real."

Mrs. J. B. Pollard spoke to the conference, using for her subject "Transmuting Missionary Dollars," and Miss Clara Chalmers, missionary to Cuba, gave a most illuminating talk on "Our Work in Cuba."

The noonday quiet hour was led by Mrs. G. W. Dameron, who is the spiritual life leader of the district.

A most luscious luncheon was served on the lawn between the church building and the parsonage by the ladies of New Iberia.

The afternoon session was opened with a devotional service led by Miss Clara Chalmers, who gave a most helpful message on "Prayer."

"The MacDonell School" was presented by Deaconess Ella Hooper, who took with her five little "scholarship girls." These five little girls are supported by the various auxiliaries of the Lake Charles District. They gave several interesting numbers.

Deaconess Nettie Stroup addressed the conference on "Echoes from the St. Louis Council and the Work of St. Mark's."

Mrs. Joe Wynn spoke on the Co-operative Plan of the Children's Work, and Mrs. G. W. Dameron talked on "Publicity."

Mrs. C. C. Carver, Conference Treasurer, was greatly missed at this meeting, as she was kept at home because of the illness of her husband.

Misses Clara Chalmers and Nettie Stroup, and Mrs. J. B. Pollard were privileged to be the overnight guests of MacDonell School recently and enjoyed the delightful quiet rooms of Keeper Hall.

They attended the mid-week prayer meeting of the Houma church in company with the eighty children of the School. This is a weekly habit of the MacDonell School boys and girls.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Notice that this article stresses the sharing of experiences. Are many of us sharing our larger opportunities?

Upon an invitation from the Woman's Missionary Society of Oak Grove, a rural church on the Oakland charge, a large delegation from the Oakland and Charleston societies spent the day, Wednesday, May 15, with them. It was planned for its social and sharing of experience benefits and in every way it was a great success. The Oak Grove society furnished the morning program and dinner on the grounds.

The main feature of their program was a word picture of one of their all-day meetings in the home of one of their members with its handicaps and babies and children and the routine of farm life.

An hour and a half was given over to social intercourse and enjoyment of the bountiful dinner.

The afternoon program was furnished by representatives from Oakland and Charleston societies in the nature of a school of instruction and information, and closing with a playlet given by members of the Oakland society on Pioneer experiences of a preacher's wife.

About sixty were present and every one seemed to enjoy every feature of the day. One impression made on the visitors was the good, wholesome influence the Oak Grove society is exerting in that community and the good fellowship existing among their members.

FROM PURVIS, MISS.

Our evangelistic services commenced the 5th inst. and continued ten days. The pastor preached morning and evening the first Sunday.

Brother P. M. Caraway of Gulfport, came Monday the 6th inst., and did the preaching to the end of the meeting except the eleven o'clock sermon Mothers' Day. He had to be at home on that day at 11 a. m., to fill his place. Brother M. Lytle, of Gulfport, the young man who was our song leader, delivered the sermon for us at Purvis and the congregation was delighted with his message. Brother Caraway returned for the evening service and remained to Tuesday evening, the closing service.

The meeting grew in interest and attendance from the first service to the close.

Two adults were baptized and received on profession, and two children were baptized. The greater good was accomplished in the membership of the church. Backsliders inspired and reclaimed and vows renewed resulted in a general improvement in the life of the church. Brother Caraway is a real evangelistic, gospel preacher. This, backed up by his fine personality and devotion to the cause, send his messages home to the hearts of the people, and they heard him gladly.

Not a single adverse criticism have I heard on the streets, and he and his messages have been and are still being talked around town.

A higher spiritual level and a more loyal devotion to the cause are evident in the life of the church folk.

Brother M. Lytle, a young local preacher of Gulfport, recently licensed, was our song leader and worker among the young folks.

Any of our pastors and congregations needing a helper in song leadership can find him in this fine young man. It is my understanding that he calculates preparing himself for the regular ministry, and I am sure he will make good in his divine calling. Write him at Gulfport, Miss.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

REVIVAL AT CORINTH

Dear Dr. Duren: We have just closed a great revival meeting here with Dr. Theodore Copeland of Dallas doing the preaching.

Dr. Copeland came April 28 and the evangelistic services continued three full weeks, closing last Sunday, May 19, with glorious victory.

The song services were directed by Rev. O. H. Scott, Enterprise, Miss., and Mr. Ed Marcele of our own choir, each working most happily and successfully with young people and congregation.

Dr. Copeland's one general theme was "love." He won all hearts. The meeting became really a great union meeting as we were joined by pastors and leaders of both First Baptist and First Presbyterian churches, who remained with us throughout the entire meeting.

The evangelistic campaign was city-wide. All churches of Corinth participated in the services and received a blessing therefrom.

Dr. Copeland is an indefatigable worker and visited with the pastor and wife in the homes of our people daily praying and seeking to lead all into a deeper, richer life.

Dr. T. W. Young of First Baptist, Rev. Ira D. Holt, First Presbyterian and Rev. J. D. Wroten, presiding elder, joined heartily with us, as did Revs. W. R. Crouch and G. C. Schwartz, and other ministers of community.

Sixty-two persons were received into the membership of the church during the meeting, the pastor administering baptism to 51 of these the last two Sundays of the meeting. Others will follow.

The offering was naturally easy and satisfactory. Dr. Copeland wields a tremendous influence over people and all for the kingdom.

THE NEW FINANCIAL PLAN

The General Commission on Budget meeting in Nashville, Tenn., May 3, after reviewing reports from all parts of the Church concerning the operation of the New Financial Plan, has reason to believe that the plan has in it great promise for the future of the Church. We are thoroughly committed to the principle of voluntary giving as being in accord with the spirit of the New Testament and in agreement with sound method of Church finances. We are convinced that giving the annual and quarterly conferences authority finally to pass upon the amounts which they are respectively to assume in the general budget has produced a new interest and a finer spirit throughout the Church. We record our genuine appreciation of the work of our bishops, presiding elders and preachers in introducing the new plan to our people. We also record our appreciation of the co-operative spirit manifested by our laymen in this effort to put our finances on a voluntary and effective basis.

The Commission on Budget feels, however, that it is its duty to call the attention of the Church to the fact that the difficulties experienced in financng the interests of our Church have not yet been solved. The total amount accepted by the quarterly conferences of our Church, as the reports have been presented to us, is $1,196,523.00. We feel that a further fact should be called to the attention of the Church: The amount assumed by the quarterly conferences is only $57,372 more than was actually received through the assessments and the Kingdom Extension a year ago. It therefore appears that if the amounts assumed are paid 100 per cent (and surely every church will pay in full the apportionments agreed to) we still will have considerably less than the amount required to maintain the present program of the Church. This means that we must pay the apportionment in full as accepted, or the work of the Church will be seriously crippled.

It is the judgment of your Commission on Budget that the New Financial Plan offers a way out of our difficulties. Cultivation in stewardship and an appeal to voluntary contributions should increase the amount received by the General Fund of the Church from year to year, and we are sanguine to believe that it will so do. We have only begun and it is our conviction that our leadership must take a far view and work to that end. Our plan is a way and, to this time, is not an attainment, and calls for the co-operation and sacrificial devotion of all who love the Church.

H. B. TRIMBLE, Chairman,
COSTEN J. HARRELL.

Christian Education

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, June 16.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

PRACTICING STEWARDSHIP TODAY

God neglected, rejected, forgotten! Those who deny the existence of God do not one-thousandth part so much harm as those who acknowledge him in creed, but forget him in conduct. The solution of life's problem is vitiated in proportion to the factors we forget—and many forget God! The greatest and most successful should be the most humble and grateful but the perils of prosperity seem more dangerous and deadly than the perils of poverty. Full barns, full purses and full stomachs do not guarantee clear thinking, keen memory nor deep gratitude. Comfort often leads to contentment with self and contempt for those who have not achieved and acquired. Increase of goods often calls forth enlargement of the ego and means meant for service are squandered on self. The fact is that riches make not for independence but for dependence. The millionaire must depend upon millions of his fellows—most of them poor—servants, laborers, tenants, borrowers, tax-payers, producers, consumers, politics, panics, the muscle and brain and character of others. Left to himself, perhaps he could not produce a loaf of bread, much less the luxuries in which he riots. Above all others rich men should recognize their obligation to their fellows and "walk humbly with God."

Stewardship has its origin in God's creation and ownership. It applies to personality with all its enrichments—talents, social contacts, influence, and culture; to property of whatsoever nature—its production, use, and distribution. When self is dedicated to the promotion of the kingdom of God, all else goes with it. There will be no quibbling as to the tithe or other mechanical or minimum limit in the use of person or property for that end. Rather will the maximum become the coveted goal. Basic values were all here when we arrived and will remain after our departure, then "whose shall these things be?" A ninety-nine year lease more than spans our period of individual "ownership," with ample need for a nurse in the beginning and a guardian at the end. Actually, most of us are in business less than half such a period, yet we strut and boast our prowess and "possessions." Stewardship is Scriptural and sensible. Pride of possession is an attribute of fools. All owe a debt to the general public, to the makers of society, the warp and woof of civilization, especially to the unfortunate and underprivileged groups. That debt is not paid merely by the discharge of "church dues" nor by a contribution to the community chest.

Usually, emphasis is placed on the stewardship of money, whereas the giving of money is the cheapest, easiest, and most universal method of showing "charity." A donation, given personally or through an organization, costs us neither time, thought, effort, nor care! At the year's end it is not missed, and "duty" is done! The ratio of personal to economic misers is probably 100 to 1, so greedy are we with self. The church is not a collecting agency and Christian stewardship is not fulfilled by making an annual contribution. We should have the same abandon, the same enthusiasm for giving as for getting—nay, more. A "cork-screwed" gift is no credit to character. Christian giving is cheerful giving. It is Godlike giving. It is not waste but investment, as sowing is saving. A gift to the poor is a loan to the Lord. Some have many talents, some have few, but God rewards each according to his faithfulness. The practice of Christian stewardship would have prevented the depression; nothing less can prevent a worse thing coming upon us. All that we have and all that we are belongs to God, and "we must give an account of our stewardship."

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Looking back at the 1935 session of the Brookhaven District Conference after a month has intervened several points stand out as most important.

First of these is the general atmosphere of brotherliness and harmony that prevailed throughout the session. It was a spiritual meeting in which business and worship were blended.

Second, the splendid hospitality of the church and citizens of the beautiful little city of Magnolia. The pastor-host, Rev. W. B. Jones, the people of the Methodist Church and of the other churches in town were untiring in their kindness. The organist and choir of the host-church contributed much to the pleasure and spiritual enrichment of the conference.

Next, the richness of the program in the preaching of sermons. E. B. Emerich, C. W. Wesley, G. F. Allan, and J. W. Leggett, Jr., were the preachers. These brethren preached with power and under their leadership the conference became a spiritual feast.

Then there was the optimistic note in the reports of the pastors of the district. These indicated an upward trend spiritually and financially. The word revival was much used. The financial report of the district was considerably ahead of that of the 1934 session of the district conference.
